Geo. B. Utter

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, JUNE 13, 1844. NO. 1.

Biographical.

It has long been wished, that those facts illustrative of the lives and spirit of early Sabbath-keepers, which are now scattered over the pages of history, might be collected together, and presented in such a form as to interest and profit the general reader. In order to gratify this wish, it is proposed to publish a series of biographical articles, in which shall be found sketches of many of those whose memorials ought to be held in everlasting remembrance among us. These sketches will commence with such persons as appear in England soon after the Reformation, and will be extended from that time and country to other times and other lands. It is hoped, that good will in several ways result from such a course. By becoming familiar with their trials and labors, our sympathy with them, and interest in them, may be deepened. By comparing their doctrines and practices with our own, a way may be opened to more comprehensive views and thorough instruction. By having our eyes fixed upon them as a common object of interest, we may come to see things differently, perhaps alike, among ourselves. And by meditating upon the example of those who loved not their lives unto the death, our regard for the truth which distinguished them, and our consistency in maintaining it, may be increased. Should either of these advantages which we have promised to ourselves be realized, we shall be amply repaid for all the labor which the preparation of such articles may require. But should neither of them be realized, we shall at least have the consoling reflection, that we have done what we could to embalm the memories of those faithful ones who had this claim upon us.

The first name which deserves notice—not so much for his actual sufferings in defence of the truth, as for his clear exposition of it—is that of

THEOPHILUS BRABOURNE.

In order that we may fully appreciate the words and spirit of Theophilus Brabourne, it is necessary to premise, that soon after the commencement of the Reformation, among other practical questions which were discussed anew, we find the claims of the Sabbath introduced and thoroughly examined. There was one class of the Reformers, who, dwelling alone on the sufficiency of faith and the freeness of the Gospel, declared that the law of the Sabbath was abolished; that Sunday was no Sabbath, only a festival of the Church, which had been appointed and might be altered at her pleasure. A second class contended, that an institution given in Paradise, and enforced by one of the precepts of the Decalogue, could not have been abolished; yet finding themselves in the dilemma of observing another day than that which was originally appointed, supposed the change had been made so early as to warrant us in allowing it. A third class contended that an institution so early given and so often enforced, could not have been changed without explicit authority; that this explicit authority had never been given; that, therefore, the seventh day of the week was still to be observed. The first theory here mentioned was adopted and defended by leading members of the established church, and by them called "the orthodoxal doctrine of the Church of England." The second was confined mostly to the Puritans, and was sometimes called a "Sabbatarian novelty." The last view was not confined to any existing body, but embraced those who had belonged to almost all.

THEOPHILUS BRABOURNE was a minister of the Gospel in the established church, and was stationed at Northfolk. At what time he became convinced of the claims of the seventh day, it is not easy to determine. It is probable, however, that this took place soon after the subject began to be discussed in England. The first English book which appeared, advocating the Puritan view of the morality of the Sabbath, and the change of the day, was written by Dr. Bound, of Portsmouth, and published in the year 1595.—Theophilus Brabourne's first book was "printed the 23d of Dec. Anno Dom. 1628." From his entire familiarity with the subject, and his clear and forcible manner of exhibiting it, we judge that he must have been for some time interested in it. The title of his book shows its scope sufficiently. It is as follows:

A

DISCOURSE UPON THE SABBATH DAY,

Wherein are handled these particulars following:

1. That the Lord's Day is not Sabbath Day by Divine institution.
2. An exposition of the fourth commandment so far forth as may give light unto the ensuing discourse; and particularly here it is shown, at what time the Sabbath Day should begin and end, for the satisfaction of those who are doubtful in this point.
3. That the Seventh-day Sabbath is not abolished.
4. That the Seventh-day Sabbath is now in force.
5. The author's exhortations and reasons, that nevertheless there be no rents from our church as touching practice.

WRITTEN BY THEOPHILUS BRABOURNE.

"Remember the Sabbath day"—"The Seventh day is the Sabbath."

"Whatsoever thing I command you, take heed you do it; thou shalt put nothing thereto, nor take ought therefrom."

"Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things that are written in the book of the law to do them."

Printed the 23d of Dec. Anno Dom. 1628.

This book seems to have attracted considerable attention, and to have called forth some reviews. Indeed, it could hardly have failed to attract attention, [illegible] as it was in a bold and candid spirit, with [illegible] clearness and strength of argument, and at a time when the subject was agitating the public mind. That it was reviewed, is indicated by a book which Brabourne published less than four years afterwards, in 1632, with the following title:

A DEFENCE

OF

That most ancient and sacred ordinance of God's, the Sabbath Day.

In this last book, as we are told by a Bishop of the English Church, (Dr. Francis White, Lord Bishop of Ely,) "proceeding after the rule of Presbyterian principles, among which this was principal, That all religious observations and actions, and among the rest the ordaining and keeping of holy-days, must have a special warrant and command in holy Scripture, otherwise the same is superstitious; he concluded from thence, by necessary inference, that the seventh day of every week, to wit, Saturday, having an express command in the Decalogue, by a precept simply and perpetually moral, and the Sunday, or Lord's Day, being not commanded in the Law or in the Gospel; the Saturday must be the Christian weekly Sabbath, and the Sunday ought to be a working day."

We here subjoin the three positions which it was the main design of the book to establish. From them it is easy to judge of the character of the work. It ought to be further said, however, that in the illustration and proof of his positions, Brabourne was singularly happy. These are his positions: "1. The fourth commandment of the Decalogue is a Divine precept, simply and entirely moral, containing nothing legally ceremonial, in whole or in part, and therefore the weekly observation thereof ought to be perpetual, and to continue in full force and virtue to the world's end. 2. The Saturday, or seventh day of the week, ought to be an everlasting holy-day in the Christian Church, and the religious observation of this day obligeth Christians under the Gospel, as it did the Jews before the coming of Christ. 3. The Sunday, or Lord's day, is an ordinary working day; and it is superstition and will-worship to make the same the Sabbath of the fourth commandment."

Such were the doctrines which he advanced, with the fearlessness and confidence of one who believes himself to speak according to "the law and the testimony." Indeed, so confident was he, as we are told by an English writer of that time, that he "defied his Puritan adversaries, and loaded them with contempt." In this defiance, (he tells us in his preface to the "Defence,") he has reference to ten of their ministers, who were his "professed enemies in this point." He cannot, therefore, be regarded as wanting in the Christian spirit, because he uses strong language. In explaining the reasons of his deep feeling, he says, that they, yielding and maintaining his principles, and yet denying his conclusions scarcely deserve to be answered with reason.

Nor did he confine his attention to his opponents. He dedicated his book to the King himself, imploring his aid to set up the Sabbath again; and admonishing the Reverend Bishops of the kingdom, and the temporal state likewise, to restore the fourth commandment of the Decalogue to its ancient possession. His zeal in the work of reformation to which he had put his hand was so great, that he professed himself ready to suffer martyrdom, rather than betray such a worthy cause. His own language is:—"I am tied in conscience rather to depart with my life than with this truth; so captivated is my conscience, and enthralled to the law of my God."

But Theophilus Brabourne was not to be allowed to go on unmolested in the proclamation of such views. He was convented and called to account before the Lord Arch-Bishop of Canterbury and the Court of High Commission. A considerable number of persons were present at his examination, "of which number there were some honorable Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council, and many other persons of quality." Here a deliberate, patient, and full hearing, is said to have been given him, after which an attempt was made to answer his main objections. Whether from being overawed by the character of that assembly, or fearing the consequences which must result from rejecting its overtures, or desiring the favor which might be connected with gratifying its wishes, or really losing confidence in the soundness of his positions, Theophilus Brabourne was so much affected as to consent to a private conference, which so far prevailed with him, as we are told, "that he became a convert, and freely submitted himself to the orthodoxal doctrine of the Church of England, both concerning the Sabbath day and likewise concerning the Lord's day." What that orthodoxal doctrine was, we have already stated.

In justice to the man, however, and to the doctrines which he held, the ground upon which he rests his recantation ought to be stated. To the last, and in his recantation itself, he declares, that if the Sabbath be moral and perpetually binding, then his conclusion, that the seventh day ought to be observed, is necessary and irresistible. "The time of keeping the fourth commandment," he says, "is limited by God to the seventh day; and how can this day be separated from the commandment, it being an inseparable circumstance of the substance of the fourth commandment." But by denying the morality and perpetuity of the institution, a way was opened for the introduction of a new day upon the authority of the Church. Brabourne was not the first man, nor was he the last man, to see the inconclusiveness of the reasoning by which the observance of the first day is maintained, and therefore to deny the perpetuity of the Sabbatic institution. The number is very great of those who, in consequence of the refusal of its friends to carry out their principles to their natural consequences, have been driven both theoretically and practically to disregard all sacred time.

Before dismissing the name of Theophilus Brabourne, it may be said, that most important results are connected with what he wrote and spoke. Though his books were called in and destroyed as far as possible, and a learned work published by royal authority to counteract their influence, the seed which was about that time sown, by whatever hand, sprung up, and has brought forth fruit, which is now seen in the existing churches of Sabbath-keepers, and in the modified views of that church to the bosom of which he returned.

Religious.

FRIENDSHIP WHICH NEVER SHALL FADE.

In the tempest of life, when the wave and the gale,
Are around and above, if thy footing should fail,
If thine eye should grow dim, and thy caution depart,
Look aloft and be firm and be fearless of heart.

If the friend who embraced in prosperity's glow,
With a smile for each joy and a tear for each wo,
Should betray thee; when sorrow like clouds are arrayed,
Look aloft to that friendship which never shall fade.

Should they who are dearest—the son of thy heart,
The wife of thy bosom, in sorrow depart,
Look aloft from the darkness and dust of the tomb,
To the soil where affection is ever in bloom.

And O! when death comes in terrors to cast,
His fears o'er the future, his pall o'er the past,
In that moment of darkness, with hope in thy heart,
And a smile in thine eye, look aloft and depart.

ANECDOTE OF LUTHER.

At a certain time Dr. Luther received an express, stating that his bosom friend and co-worker in the Reformation, Philip Melancthon, was lying at the point of death; upon which information he immediately set out upon the journey of some 150 miles, to visit him, and upon his arrival he actually found all the distinctive forms of death: such as the glazed eye, the cold clammy sweat, and insensible lethargy upon him. Upon witnessing these sure indications of a speedy dissolution, as he mournfully bent over him, he exclaimed with great emotion, "Oh, how awful is the change wrought upon the visage of my dear brother!" On hearing this voice, to the astonishment of all present, Melancton opened his eyes, and looking up into Luther's face, remarked, "Oh, Luther, is this you? Why don't you let me depart in peace?" Upon which Luther replied, "O no, Philip, we cannot spare you yet." Luther then turned away from the bed, and fell upon his knees, with his face towards the window, and began to wrestle with God in prayer, and to plead with great fervency, for more than an hour, the many proofs recorded in Scripture of his being a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God; and also how much he stood in need of the services of Melancthon, in furthering the cause, in which the honor and glory of God's great name, and the eternal welfare of unnumbered millions of immortal souls, were so deeply interested; and that God should not deny him this one request, to restore to him the aid of his well-tried brother, Melancthon. He then rose up from prayer, and went to the bedside again, and took Melancthon by the hand. Upon which Melancthon again remarked, "Oh, dear Luther, why don't you let me depart in peace?" To which Luther again answered, "No, no, Philip, we cannot possibly spare you from the field of labor yet." Luther then requested the nurse to go and make him a dish of soup, according to his instructions. Which being prepared, was brought to Luther, who requested his friend Melancthon to eat of it.—Melancthon again asked him, "Oh, Luther, why will you not let me go home, and be at rest?" To which Luther replied as before, "Philip, we cannot spare you yet." Melancthon then exhibited a disinclination to partake of the nourishment prepared for him. Upon which, Luther remarked, "Philip, eat, or I will excommunicate you." Melancthon then partook of the food prepared, and immediately grew better, and was speedily restored to wonted health and strength again, and labored for years afterwards with his coadjutors in the blessed cause of the Reformation.

Upon Luther's arrival at home, he narrated to his beloved wife, Catherine, the above circumstances, and added, "God gave me my brother Melancthon back in direct answer to prayer;" and added farther, with patriarchal simplicity, "God on a former occasion, gave me also you back Kata, in answer to my prayer."

THE LORD WILL PROVIDE.—Who were the founders and fathers of the Baptist Missionary Society in England? In the breast of Carey, a young shoe-maker, the work originated. When a secretary was needed, Fuller was brought from the plough. A little boy brought his copy book to a venerable minister. The old man stroked his head, saying, "John, you write a fair hand; perhaps you will one day be a secretary of the Missionary Society." That boy became John Dyer. Afterwards a treasurer was needed. A little boy was a copyist in his father's office; that lad became R. W. Gurley.—Dr. Belcher.

THE BIBLE.

The Holy Scriptures are designed to promote the glory of God BY THE SALVATION OF MAN. The peculiar purpose of the whole is, to turn men from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God: to raise them from the ruins of the fall, and to put them in possession of the blessing of redemption; to lead them from sin to holiness; to conduct them through a state of conflict and trial on earth, to a state of rest and felicity in heaven; and so to assist and direct them in all possible conditions in life, that they may not fail of these great ends except by their own wilful rejection of the counsel of God against themselves. The salvation of his own soul should therefore be the grand concern of every reader of the Scripture. Here the immortality of the soul is brought to light, and sustained by unquestionable evidence. Here man's defection from original purity is clearly demonstrated; the means of his restoration are set forth, and his future destiny is declared. It is an awful responsibility which they incur, who wilfully neglect this holy book, and devote all their time and the powers of their minds to terrestrial and subordinate objects. They slight the pearl of greatest price, which is nowhere else to be found; and seem as if they were determined to frustrate, as far as respects themselves, all that Divine wisdom and goodness have done to rescue the immortal mind of man from spiritual ignorance, error, vanity, vice, and ruin. Those, however, who are seeking to enjoy the blessings which the gospel reveals, will, as they are able, search the Scriptures; and such persons will receive great help from having references at hand to assist their inquiries. "It were to be wished," says Bishop Horsley, "that no Bibles were printed without references. Particular diligence should be used in comparing the parallel texts of the Old and New Testaments. It is incredible," he adds, "to any one who has not made the experiment, what a proficiency may be made in that knowledge which maketh wise unto salvation, by studying the Scriptures in this manner WITHOUT ANY OTHER COMMENTARY, OR EXPOSITION, THAN WHAT THE DIFFERENT PARTS OF THE SACRED VOLUME MUTUALLY FURNISH FOR EACH OTHER. Let the most illiterate Christian study them in this manner, and let him never cease to pray for the illumination of that Spirit by which these books were dictated; and the whole compass of abstruse philosophy and recondite history, shall furnish no argument with which the perverse will of man shall be able to shake this learned Christian's faith." So great and perfect is the coincidence of every part of the Word of God in the grand and merciful design of the whole!—Preface to the Polyglott Bible.

ANECDOTE.

"In a certain place last winter, they engaged a professed infidel to instruct a reading school. The school, when they came together one afternoon, were not able to read. The teacher, after several vain attempts to have them proceed as usual, sent one of his scholars to the neighboring house of a Christian professor, to request him to come into the school. It so came to pass, that the minister of the place was also at this house, and also went with the other to the school. As an awakening had begun in the town, the minister had little doubt what was the matter. When he came in, and saw the solemn appearance, he first said to the teacher, 'Sir, what is the matter with your school?' He replied, 'I do not know.' Said the minister, 'Have you not been correcting them?' The master answered, 'No, we have had no disturbance.' 'Well, said the minister, 'what then can be the matter?' 'I cannot tell,' replied the master. 'But you must have some opinion about it: tell me what you think it is.' Not able to endure any longer, the poor Deist burst out into tears, and said, 'I believe it is the Spirit of God,' and in a short time, the teacher and fifteen of the scholars became apparent believers. I had this, the other evening, from the mouth of a worthy Christian brother, who was knowing to the fact."—Life of Rev. Jeremiah Hallock.

MAXIMS OF BISHOP MIDDLETON.

Maintain dignity without the appearance of pride.

Persevere against discouragements.

Keep your temper.

Be punctual and methodical in business, and never procrastinate.

Preserve self-possession, and do not be talked out of conviction.

Never be in a hurry.

Rather set, than follow example.

Rise early, and be an economist of time.

Practice strict temperance.

Manner is something with every body, and every thing with some.

Be guarded in discourse, attentive, and slow to speak.

Never acquiesce in immoral or pernicious opinions.

Be not forward to assign reasons to those who have no right to ask.

Think nothing in conduct, unimportant and indifferent.

In all your transactions, remember the final account.

CHRISTIANITY.—It is not vulgarizing Christianity to bring it down to the very humblest occupations of human life. It is, in fact, dignifying human life, by bringing it up to the level of Christianity. It may look to some a degradation of the pulpit, when the household servant is told to make her firm stand against the temptation of open doors, and secret opportunities; or when the confidential agent is told to resist the slightest inclination to any unseen freedom with the property of his employers, or to any undiscoverable excess in the charges of his management. This is not robbing religion of its sacredness, but spreading its sacredness over the face of society. It is evangelizing human life, by impregnating its minutest transactions with the spirit of the Gospel.—Chalmers.

WALKING WITH GOD.

I must walk with God. In some way or other, whatever be my character or profession, I must acquire the holy habit of connecting everything that passes in my house and affairs, with God. If sickness or health visit my family, my eye must see and my heart must acknowledge the hand of God therein. Whether my affairs move on smoothly or ruggedly, God must be acknowledged in them. If I go out of my house or come into it, I must go out and come in as under the eye of God. If I am occupied in business all day long, I must still have the glory of God in my view. If I have any affair to transact with another, I must pray that God would be with us in that affair, lest we should blunder, and injure and ruin each other.

This is the language of a real Christian.—But instead of such a spirit as this among the great body of tradesmen professing themselves religious —what do we see but a driving, impetuous pursuit of the world!—and, in this pursuit, not seldom—low, suspicious, yea, immoral practices!

Yet I once went to a friend for the express purpose of calling him out into the world. I said to him—"It is your duty to accept the loan of ten thousand pounds, and to push yourself forward into an ample sphere." But he was a rare character: and his case was rare. His employers had said, "We are ashamed you should remain so long a servant in our house, with the whole weight of affairs on you. We wish you to enter as a principal with us, and will advance you ten thousand pounds. It is the custom of the city—it is your due—we are dissatisfied to see you in your present sphere." I assured him that it appeared to me to be his duty to accede to the proposal. But I did not prevail. He said—"Sir, I have often heard from you that it is no easy thing to get to heaven. I have often heard from you that it is no easy thing to master the world. I have everything I wish. More would encumber me—increase my difficulties—and endanger me."—Cecil.

THE HARVEST.

From the Religious Herald.

"Say not ye, there are four months, and then cometh the harvest."

"Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

Say not, four months must intervene,
Before the golden sheaf is seen;
But cast your eyes around.—
The early and the latter rain
Have well matured the fields of grain,
That clothe our Maste[illegible]ound.

E'en when the reapers have [illegible]gun,
How much remains, that should have done;
How many foes their arts employ,
This precious harvest to [illegible]y,
Then let the reapers [illegible]

How many fields of ripened grain,
That even yet untouched remain,
Demand our speedy care.
The fields are great—the reapers few;
The work is more than man can do;
Then let us breathe this prayer:

Thou mighty Owner of the soil,
Behold thy servants at their toil,
And let more lab'rers come.
O may I glean, if nothing more,
Until my day for work is o'er,
And thou shalt call me home.

Suffield, May 16th, 1844.

CONVERSION TO ISLAMISM.—The Augsburg Gazette, in a letter from Constantinople, of the 24th ult., states that a whole Prussian family, which has lately arrived at Constantinople, has declared its intention to adopt Islamism. It appears that one of the daughters of the family fell in love with a young Turkish officer, who was for some time in Berlin; that she and her family followed him to Constantinople, where the young lady is to be married to the object of her choice; and the consequence is, that not only she, but all her family, are to become Mahomedans. The Prussian Minister has taken some steps to prevent the affair, but apparently without effect.

CAR OF JUGGERNAUT.—Hear yon deafening shout, that seems to roll over the peopled plain like the growling thunder! What is it? Ah! it marks the progress of the great idol car. Infuriated men catch the long ropes, and drag its ponderous weight through the deep sand. On it rolls, like a fiend-drawn chariot. The robed brahmins sit perched in its high tiers, and jeweled gods are hung with garlands. The clang of harsh instruments, the sound of the tomtom, and the deep monotonous roar of the swarthy throng, that swarm around its unwieldy course, all mingle in one terrific chorus. The blood of the self-sacrificed spirts up on the massive wheels, and from the mangled carcasses in its deep ruts is heard the death wail of souls. Behind, in the dust, men and women roll themselves, piercing their bodies, and uttering wild shrieks—a proper dirge over the dead. A just emblem of idolatry is that car of heathen state.—Rev. H. M. Scudder.

THE FATHERS.—When God's word is by the fathers expounded, construed and glossed, then, in my judgment, it is even like unto one that straineth milk through a coal sack, which must needs spoil the milk and make it black; even so likewise God's word of itself is sufficiently pure, clean, bright and clear, but through the doctrines, books and writings of the fathers, it is very surely darkened, falsified and spoiled.—Luther.

He that never examines his own heart is like a captain of a vessel who never examines his ship to see if there is a leak; and without reformation, all such will finally shipwreck their souls, and all will be lost. Alas! what multitudes, who once shone as burning lights, have perished for lack of self-examination. Reader! art thou secure?

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, JUNE 13, 1844.

☞ The publication office of this paper is at No. 9 Spruce Street, first door below the Tribune Buildings, and five doors from Nassau Street. Our friends will find there the publications of the New York Sabbath Tract Society, the Address of the General Conference to the Baptists, the Minutes, etc.

INTRODUCTORY.

In presenting to the public the first number of a paper, a statement may justly be expected of the reasons for its publication, and of the course it is intended to pursue.

A wish has for some time past been expressed, for the removal of the publishing interest of the Seventh-day Baptist Register from the village of De Ruyter to the city of New York. This wish has led to negociations which have resulted in an amicable arrangement for securing such a transfer. We now propose to issue from this city a weekly sheet, in the place of the Register, devoted to an exposition and vindication of the peculiar views of the Seventh-day Baptist denomination, in connection with the circulation of religious and secular intelligence. In the prosecution of our labors, we shall endeavor to speak consistently with that grand maxim, "the Bible only is the religion of Protestants." To this standard would we adjust our own belief and practice, and by this standard we shall endeavor to estimate the professions and labors of others; being fully convinced, that "the Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation, so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, is not to be required of any man."

Two objects, connected with the people for whose especial benefit our paper has been established, will be constantly before us. Our first object will be, to promote vital piety, in connection with united and vigorous benevolent action, among the people themselves. It is a well known fact, that it is much easier to contend with earnestness for any peculiar truth, than to illustrate and enforce that truth by a course of consistent Christian action. And it is equally well known, that such contention for a faith, unless united with a praiseworthy example, is comparatively useless. It shall be our aim, then, to exert an influence in favor of joining the two, and leading men, while they "keep the commandments of God," to honor also "the faith of Jesus." In order to accomplish this, we shall present such intelligence respecting religious enterprises among ourselves and others, as seems likely to awaken a spirit of Christian emulation, and stimulate to activity in the work of spreading the Gospel. If by such means an interest shall be excited in the exertions now making to advance the kingdom of Christ, and an increased anxiety to maintain all Scripture truth, we shall feel that an important object has been gained.—Our second object will be to show the reasons why the Seventh-day Baptists occupy their present position in regard to other denominations, and the bearing of the common view respecting the change of the Sabbath upon the influence of that institution. With a full conviction, that by forsaking the day originally set apart by God for the Sabbath, men have been led lightly to estimate the privileges and to neglect the duties of the institution, we shall from time to time speak freely of our reasons for believing that a return to the observation of the seventh day of the week is the only means of securing fully the designs of the Sabbath. We cannot think that this is a question of words merely, but must think that it is a question vital to the best interests of an institution which has exerted, and must continue to exert, a most important influence upon the destinies of man. And we shall endeavor, by presenting the history of the Sabbath, the different discussions which it has undergone, the results of those discussions, and the persecutions to which its observers have been exposed, to show, that the change of the day has withdrawn from the institution the sanction of God's authority, has given occasion for men to deny the soundness of Protestant principles, has strengthened the hands of papacy by allowing the authority of tradition, has laid a heavy burden upon the Jew and prejudiced his mind against the reception of Christianity, and has done injustice to all those who adhere strictly and conscientiously to the fourth commandment. It is not from a love of controversy, or from a light estimation of the Sabbatic institution, that we take this position and commence this work. It is from a deep sense of duty, and a sincere desire to see the Sabbath made a delight, and its hallowed influences extended to all men. At the same time that we shall endeavor to state our views with distinctness, and defend them with becoming zeal, we are determined that those who differ from us shall have no occasion to complain of unkindness or unfairness. Our columns shall be open to articles upon the subject from other pens, if written with the spirit of honest inquiry and Christian candor.

In addition to articles of an argumentative character on the subject of the Sabbath, it is our design to present frequent notices of some of the leading Sabbath-keepers who have exerted an influence in this country and other countries, and by exhibiting their characters and sufferings to show some of the causes which have appeared to operate against them and the truth.

The benevolent and reformatory movements of the day will receive a full share of attention. We shall not fail to look with deep interest upon any efforts which seem likely to improve the condition of the masses of society, to diffuse knowledge, to reclaim the inebriate, to enfranchise the enslaved, and to make known those Gospel truths which are the foundation of every thing valuable to individuals or communities. Nevertheless, we must express our fear, that many of those movements are based upon principles not sufficiently broad to ensure the desired result. A reform is needed—and an entire and radical one it would be—which shall bring us to the Word of God as the sufficient directory in all matters, and exalt that above any of the inventions of men. Such a reform would strike at the root of our difficulties. It would remove all those evils, in the church, in society, in the world at large, over which good men now mourn. Believing the Scriptures to be sufficient for this work, it shall be our constant aim to explain and enforce them consistently with this belief. To our brethren engaged in these enterprises with such views, we promise that the Recorder shall be a faithful ally.

A portion of our paper will be devoted to Religious, Literary, and Scientific subjects. Efforts will be made to render these departments as interesting as possible for the general reader, by care in the preparation or selection of such articles as they may contain. It is hoped that something may be found here, instructive to the Christian, interesting to the scholar, profitable to the business man, and, in short, adapted to the wants and taste of every class of readers.

In the Intelligence Department we design to present the most important items of foreign and domestic intelligence. Care will be taken to insert as little as possible of what is altogether sectional, while such full accounts will be given as are necessary to a thorough acquaintance with the movements of the day. A Price Current and Bank Note List will be published for the benefit of those who do not have access to other periodicals.

Such is the course we have marked out for ourselves. By pursuing this course, we hope to make the Recorder such a sheet, both for matter and style, as to render it a welcome visitor to all the families where light and religion are loved. For this end we ask the assistance of all friends of the object, and their prayer that the blessing of a gracious God, in whose name the effort has been commenced, may crown it with abundant success.

"SANCTIFICATION OF THE SABBATH."

A number of articles under this title have appeared in the religious and secular papers of New York within a few weeks past. They have reference mainly to the efforts which the city authorities are now making to compel men to desist from labor on the first day of the week, or Sunday. In addition to these efforts, our readers are aware, that much has been said within a few months past, in regard to the sin of transporting mails, and the duty of closing public thoroughfares on that day; that a society has been organized for the purpose of carrying forward this discussion; and that Sabbath Documents have been issued, and somewhat extensively circulated, laboring to prove that to rest from labor one day in seven is a very good and economical practice. In these circumstances, it is important that we understand why we are called upon to refrain from labor one day in each week. Is it because God commands? or because the church recommends? or because to do so is good economy? Erroneous opinions or unsound principles respecting this, might lead to the most disastrous consequences. An error seldom stands alone. Once adopted and maintained, it often attracts "others more wicked than itself." Thus has it been in regard to the Sabbath. Abandoning the only safe ground upon which its claims can be vindicated, the command of God and the sanction of his word, the friends of the Sabbath have exposed it to neglect, and themselves to disappointment. A multitude of theories have been adopted, conflicting with each other, and at war with the interests of the institution. While one class of men enforce the observance of the Sabbath by the fourth commandment, yet change the day from the seventh to the first day of the week; and another class rests its claims alone on the authority of the church; and a third class upon the ground of mere expediency—nothing else could be expected, than that its hold upon the hearts and confidence of men would be lost.

But the persons engaged in these efforts apprehend no difficulty from such a source. With them the chief consideration is to obtain such legislative enactments as shall compel a nominal and apparent regard for the day which is now called Sabbath. To enshrine the day with its duties in the hearts of those for whose benefit it was given, by connecting it with the authority of God, seems no part of the design. Hence, in pleading for the object, either in public meetings or through the press, before the leaders of the church or the state, the bearing of this subject upon an acknowledgment of divine authority is almost wholly overlooked. And why? It needs but little penetration to see, that in bringing up this, they would be exposed to the charge of inconsistency in not observing the day sanctioned by divine authority. How many, alas! by the consciousness of their exposure to this charge, have had their mouths closed and their influence destroyed. Only the agreement of theory and practice—and the agreement of both these with the standard of truth—can give one confidence and efficiency in his labors. If the necessity for this be overlooked, failure and confusion will be the result.

Now what must be the consequence of resting the claims of the Sabbath mainly upon arguments from expediency, and legislative action? This is a question deserving the candid and prayerful consideration of every friend of religion. Such must know, that with the Sabbath, whatever is valuable and desirable in society is most intimately connected. God has given us the institution for the protection and development of these desirable things; and they must stand or fall together. It is not, then, a question of minor importance, like many about which theologians wrangle, but a practical and vital one. In answer to it, let us be permitted to express our opinion, that the result will be extremely disastrous. The standard of regard for the day will be lowered. The paramount authority of God, which alone can awe men into a solemn respect for it, will be, in their estimation, removed. The whole matter, thus left to stand upon the authority of men, will become insipid and burdensome, and the object which was sought will be lost. We should suppose, that the experiments at governing men in religious duties by advice, and pledges, and legislative enactments, had been sufficiently numerous already.—And after having seen, that every effort to promote such objects by such means, has injured rather than benefitted the cause it was designed to promote, it is surprising that men should continue to turn their eyes in this direction.

But aside from the consequences which must flow from seeking legislative aid, it ought to be considered, that government has no right to pass laws favoring one religious opinion or practice at the expense of another. If the law has heretofore been such as to infringe upon the freedom of religious opinion or action, it should be abolished. Or, if it has been such as to compel any one to occupy a place which his sense of duty forbids him to occupy, it should be modified. But in the case under consideration, neither of these difficulties is supposed to exist. No man is compelled to occupy a place where he cannot freely follow the dictates of his conscience. On the other hand, the action proposed would operate seriously against the interests and religious feelings of some. There are those who feel it to be their duty to labor six days as well as to rest on the seventh. Their feelings and rights, though they are a minority, ought to be regarded. By this it is not meant to indicate, that those who urge this movement design to infringe upon the rights or feelings of any. It is easy to see, however, that such must have been the result of the success of their efforts.

Nor are these the worst consequences of a measure like that of which we speak. A question naturally arises, when a petition is made, if the thing asked is really needed. Who will allow that legislative action is necessary to give efficiency to the institutions of the Bible? No Protestant, it is to be hoped. It is an easy thing to say, "the Bible, that is the only rule of faith—the religion of Protestants." But when men ask the aid of the state to enable them to enforce their own interpretation of this, it is not surprising that some doubt the infallibility of the standard. Suppose that temperance men were to ask for laws against the use of intoxicating drinks. All would say, it is a matter in which they had no right to take such action. They have a right to ask, that the state give it no sanction, either by licensing or otherwise. But to use or not to use rests with each man for himself. So in regard to the Sabbath. If by the use of moral means, by showing the authority which requires it, and the consequences of neglecting it, men cannot be restrained from trampling upon the institution, it is of little use to enact laws respecting it.

In this connection it should be said, that human legislation never did help to enforce a religious institution. The eyes of men have often been directed to the strong arm of law for help in such matters. At one time its aid has been asked to silence those who were promulgating unwelcome or unsound doctrines; at another time to support the arrangements of the church by endowments and privileges. But it has ever been with them, as it was with the Israelites of old when they looked to Egypt for help; disappointment has always followed this course. His glory will he not give to another; and it requires but little acquaintance with God's Providence to know, that the best way to ensure success in this department, is to keep as near as possible to the rules which Divine Wisdom has given to us. Respecting this matter of sacred time, how many efforts have been made to secure regard for it by legal enactments. Upon the statute-books of almost every state in the Union may be found laws to promote the observance of what is called the Sabbath.—There they have remained inoperative, and will continue to remain until the sentiment of the people secures what they were designed to promote. It is well that such is the case; for if they were enforced they could do nothing towards accomplishing the objects of the Sabbath. It is not in the power of human laws to make men worshipers indeed of a spiritual God. They may compel them to put on the appearances of regard, nothing more. We cannot fail, therefore, to look upon this experiment of enforcing the claims of so sacred an institution by arguments drawn mainly from expediency, though sustained by legislative action, as a most dangerous experiment.—Its failure, which past observation warrants us in saying is certain, will serve to lower it in the estimation of those who might have been affected by an appeal based on the authority of God, and sustained by "Thus saith the Lord." If we would save this institution, rendered sacred by the early example of God's resting upon it and the rich blessings which were in former times conveyed through it, from the destruction with which it is threatened, we must look beyond human authority and help, to the authority and help of the Lord of the Sabbath. Taking such a position as to honor him, and secure his blessing, we need not fear.

METHODIST GENERAL CONFERENCE ON THE SABBATH.

Some of our readers are aware, that the Methodist General Conference has been in session in this city for more than a month past. Much of its time has been occupied in discussing the question of slavery. This question arose from the relation to slavery sustained by Bishop Andrew. But the subject of slavery seems to have been laid aside for the present, and the Conference is disposing of the reports of its Committees appointed some time since. The following is the report of a Select Committee on the subject of the Sabbath. It shows the opinion of the Committee respecting the necessity of new efforts on behalf of the institution. We wish that these efforts might be made in such a way as to secure the blessing of God, and to honor his law. In this is our hope. And we are glad to see the growing impression that something ought to be done.

"The Committee appointed on the Sabbath, beg leave to report—

That they have taken into consideration the object of their appointment, and are prepared to say, that they consider that the divine appointment of one day in seven for holy purposes, cannot be questioned by any believer in divine revelation.—They therefore think it unnecessary to enter into any argument to establish this point, it being so plainly revealed and so obviously promotive of the health, comfort, and more particularly of the religious enjoyment of mankind. Hence it is a matter of joy to behold the efforts that are put forth by the various religious denominations in our country, by the formation of associations, the holding of conventions, and the use of various other means, to promote the due observance of the Christian Sabbath.

Had they time the Committee could say much upon this subject; but they must content themselves by observing, that they are glad to find from the documents submitted to their inspection, that the Christian public is waking up to the importance of renewed exertions to put down the desecration of the Holy Sabbath, and thereby induce the people generally to a right observance of its obligations, and also to find that our public men, the owners of steamboats, of railroads, and other public conveyances, are becoming more and more favorable to the promotion of this object.

The committee conclude their report by offering to the consideration of the Conference, the adoption of the following resolutions:—

1st. Resolved, by the Delegates of the several Annual Conferences in General Conference assembled, that it be earnestly recommended to all our preachers and people to use their best exertions to promote the due observance of the Holy Sabbath by co-operating with the various associations that have been formed for this purpose.

2nd. Resolved, That it be the duty of all our preachers to enforce frequently from the pulpit the divine obligation which all are under to keep the Sabbath day holy, being fully convinced that were this precept blotted from the decalogue, and men left without the restraints which it imposes, religion and (of course) morality, would cease to exert their saving and hallowed influences.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) N. BANGS, Chairman.

Since the above was written, the General Conference has adjourned to meet again in Pittsburgh in 1848.

Missionary Intelligence.—We are informed that on the evening of May 30, Dr. T. T. Devan was set apart to the work of the Gospel ministry with especial reference to a mission in China. The services took place in the 1st Baptist Church in this city, and are spoken of as uncommonly interesting. Mr. Devan and his wife are about sailing for the field of their future labors. Dr. Macgowan is already engaged on that field. By his acquaintance with the medical profession, he finds easy access to the confidence of the people. Recent letters state that a Hospital has been opened at Ningpo by Dr. Macgowan, for which purpose a house was freely offered to him.—This is looked upon with favor by the people, who readily avail themselves of the benefits it offers.

By a late letter from Rev. Mr. Perkins, it appears that among the Nestorians an increased attention to religion is manifest. Some have been converted. Mar Yohannan, who visited this country in company with Mr. Perkins, continues to interest himself in the work of the mission, and gives promise of great usefulness among his countrymen.

Rev. Samuel Hutchings, with his wife and three children, have returned to this country on account of the impaired health of Mr. Hutchings. They arrived in New York a few days since, having come by way of London.

By the brig Harbinger, which arrived in Boston on the 5th inst., intelligence has been received of the death of the Rev. E. G. Prescott, who sailed from Boston for India in the ship Radius. He died 64 days out, on the 11th of April.

It is said that Dr. Grant, of the Nestorian Mission, is about to return to the United States, if he is not already on his way. He is expected to come by way of England.

A Protestant missionary meeting was holden in Rome, Italy, on the 20th of March, 1844, at which a collection was taken for the benefit of the London Missionary Society, amounting to about $125. The meeting took place at the residence of an English gentleman, where it has been common to hold religious meetings for some time past. The Pope and his Cardinals seem to have been disturbed by this movement, and to have resolved on putting a stop to the like in future.

Sabbath Tracts.—We are gratified to see that the New York Sabbath Tract Society is adding to the number and variety of its publications on the subject of the Sabbath. During the past month, three new tracts have appeared, each presenting the claims of the Sabbath in a clear and concise manner. The first of these new publications is a "History of the Observance of the Sabbath and Lord's Day in the Christian Church." This is rather a revised and enlarged edition of a former tract, than an entirely new one. It is designed to show, by quotations from history, that the observance of the first day of the week, or Lord's Day, commenced in company with the superstitious observance of Easter, Good Friday, and Holy Thursday; that never until the Reformation was it kept as the Sabbath or called by the name of the Sabbath; that among the Reformers there were some who discarded it entirely, while some others kept the seventh day; and that, in short, the history of the matter, rightly understood, affords no support for the claims of the first day of the week. At a time when so much is made of the authority of the Fathers, it is well to present their views on this subject. And although we claim that the Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice, it is both proper and useful to refer to other sources of information for aid when they do not conflict with the Scriptures. Such a course has been pursued in the tract before us; and we regard it as happily adapted to meet those who resort to sacred or profane history, upon their own ground. While it shows that the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Bible, it likewise proves that history does not make a Sabbath of the first day.

The second tract is entitled, "A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians." It is extracted from a work with this title, written by a member of the English Church, and printed in London in 1653. The main design of the work was to show that "the day of Christ's nativity, and the day of his passion, have equal authority, equal antiquity, and equal right to be observed as the Lord's Day." In refuting the errors about Lord's Day, he fully establishes the claims of the seventh day to be the Sabbath. While so much is said about the claims of the Church, it might be well to inquire if some who dispute those claims in words, do not in reality allow them.

The character of the third tract is sufficiently indicated by its title, "Twenty reasons for keeping holy, in each week, the Seventh Day instead of the First Day." These reasons are drawn partly from the Scriptures, and partly from considering the influence of neglecting the seventh day, upon the regard for the Sabbatic institution, upon the Protestant principle, and upon the character of the Christian.

We hope that these efforts to promote the permanent interests of the Sabbath, by explaining the ground upon which it rests, will be seconded by friends of the institution, and regarded by all who would see the Sabbath honored.

THE SECOND ADVENT AND THE SABBATH.

We learn from several sections, that considerable numbers of those who are looking for the speedy appearance of Christ, have embraced the seventh day, and commenced observing it as the Sabbath. There are several reasons why we are particularly gratified to learn this fact. Our first reason is, that it shows how men understand the Bible when they are once set free from the trammels of sect and early education. It is a very easy thing to convince an intelligent and candid man, who is not connected with any religious system or organization, that the seventh day of the week is the only Sabbath. Indeed, such do not need any convincing at all, in many cases. They are already quite well satisfied. But when the same persons become connected with some church, and feel pledged to maintain its creed, they use quite different language. Now the believers in the speedy Second Advent, standing in a position where they do not feel bound by any creed, and having sufficient self-denial to lead them to practice according to their convictions of duty, are just the persons to understand the requirements of the Word of God in this matter. We are happy, therefore, to have their testimony.—Our second reason for feeling particularly gratified is, that we are glad to see men embracing the truth, and practicing accordingly. We believe that the truth, and the truth only, can make them free. And whenever we see a candid inquirer after this, we must look upon him as in the pathway to freedom. Thanks for the occasional sight of such an one! Now, although we do not feel at liberty to fix any time for the coming of the Lord, we do feel at liberty to suggest, that the best preparation for that event is to be found in a love for the truth, and obedience to it. "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing."

REVIVAL.

We are happy to learn, that the Seventh-day Baptist Church at Independence, N. Y., has enjoyed a precious season of revival within a few months past. It is cheering to hear of such seasons at any time, but especially so at a time of such general declension as the present. They show that the Spirit of God is still influencing the hearts of men, and encourage us to increased efforts for the advancement of Christ's Kingdom. It is to be lamented that the confidence of Christians in the power and sufficiency of the plain preaching of the truth, has been so much impaired. It has led many to rely upon impulses artificially excited, rather than upon the use of the simple and appointed means of grace. It is to be feared that we are now suffering the consequences of our want of confidence in the "word of God," which is "quick and powerful and sharper than any two-edged sword." The following account of the meeting held at Independence by brethren James H. Cochran and Sherman S. Griswold, is taken from a letter of Br. Griswold to the editor of the Seventh-day Baptist Register:—

"Agreeably to the desire of the church, we commenced holding meetings every evening, and visiting from house to house during the day. Not aiming to excite the passions, we enforced the plain truth of the Bible, until it produced its effects. Backsliders cried for mercy, prodigals returned, and those at ease in Zion trembled.—The anxious seat was crowded with sinners inquiring what they must do to be saved. The idea that all will be happy after death, being a prevailing opinion in the community, was tried by "the law and testimony," while those who had founded their hopes of Heaven on Universal Restoration were weighed in the balance of truth and found wanting. Our meetings were characterized by deep solemnity and attention. The whole community thronged to the house of God for the space of three weeks, although the traveling was bad in the extreme. Those who made ridicule of religion, and those who even cursed the meeting and the anxious seat, and declared they would rather die than kneel, have bowed not only the knee, but the heart, before the mercy seat. Man has been abased, and the Lord only exalted. * * * Thirty have connected themselves with the church in this place, many of whom formerly observed the first day, but now acknowledge the seventh day to be the Sabbath. On two first days I administered the ordinance of baptism to twenty candidates, while the banks of the stream were thronged with gazing spectators. On the evening of the last first day of the week, the brethren came together to break bread, and I preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow. The house was filled to overflowing, while the tearful eye betrayed the feelings of the heart. After the sermon, we celebrated the Lord's Supper, and it was a scene of deep solemnity. Most of the converts are adults, and several are heads of families.—One family, consisting of eight members, joined the church simultaneously. Thus we have households baptized even now. Although compelled to leave, it is with regret, as the work seems not diminished. Many are earnestly inquiring. Over this wide section of country the Lord has impressed the minds of the inhabitants with great solemnity.

"Before closing permit me to remark, that I am more than ever impressed with the importance of preaching the truth, addressing the judgment, and adhering closely to the doctrines of the Bible, even in a revival. Although many of the converts were brought up to observe the first day as the Sabbath, yet without any proselyting they abandoned that sentiment about as soon as they were converted. The truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, should be preached during a revival if ever. Although more than half the congregation observed the first day, yet I heard not a word against what all said was plain, Bible truth. If a sinner is converted, knowing that the Word of God is to be his guide, he will stand to the Bible. But let him hold that God's commands are, many of them, non-essential, and he will be carried about by every wind of doctrine. Brethren in the ministry, let us endeavor to convert men from error to truth, rather than to excite their passions, which soon subsides, and leaves them worse than before.

SHERMAN S. GRISWOLD.

Independence, 12th March, 1844.

Bro. J. L. Scott.—By a letter which has been handed us, we learn that Brother Scott is again laboring in the missionary field from which he returned some time ago. His letter, dated May 8, 1844, says:

"By the blessing of God, I with my family, arrived in Fulton Co., Illinois, about two weeks since. I found the friends here in a very discouraged condition—hope had almost fled. . . . The subject of the Sabbath is creating great excitement in this entire vicinity. Two families have just embraced God's holy law in that respect, and many are investigating the subject. They call for tracts and say, O for tracts and Vindicators—must I be deprived of them. The people appoint meetings for discussion to inquire into the propriety of keeping Sunday. Never could there be a more propitious time to engage. The subject has been agitated ever since I was here in 1842."

We are informed that Brother Azor Estee has interested himself to provide for the wants of this enterprise. He will present the matter, as opportunities offer, to the consideration of the friends of a mission in the West. That something ought to be done in that section, and that there is great encouragement to labor there, no one can doubt. It is important that those young and growing communities should be brought under the influence of Gospel truth, and taught to observe all things whatsoever is commanded.

EASTERN SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST ASSOCIATION.

We have received a copy of the Minutes of the Eastern Seventh-day Baptist Association, which met with the 1st Church in Hopkinton, R. I., May 22, and continued its sessions for three days. The meeting was well attended, and uncommonly interesting. By the statistics of the churches, it appears that the number of additions during the year has been small; yet in some places the favor of God has been manifested in the revival of his work, and the conversion of sinners. The letters from the churches speak of a good degree of union existing among them, and a gratifying interest in attendance upon the stated means of grace and the Sabbath schools. A number of items of business of considerable importance were discussed and determined upon. Among these, we might mention the report of a Committee appointed to confer upon the best means of giving efficiency to the action of the Association. This Committee was appointed at an early period in the deliberations of the Association, and after considerable consultation, a report was presented by the Chairman, Alexander Campbell. This report was patiently discussed, and unanimously adopted by section. It is as follows:—

Your committee, appointed to confer in relation to the objects of the Association, and the best means of securing those objects, respectfully report the following as the best plan which they have been able to devise:

1st. We consider the grand objects of this Association, in its annual convocations, to be the promotion of the piety, order, and increase of the churches belonging to the body; and the concerting and furthering of such measures as shall appear to them calculated to promote the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ in the world.

2d. To further these objects, we recommend the annual appointment of an Executive Committee on each of the benevolent objects entered into by our denomination, who shall have the direction of these interests within the bounds of this Association for one year, or until others are appointed; these Committees severally to represent the Association in the Board of Directors of the several general Benevolent Societies to which the Association shall be auxiliary. They shall appoint their own meetings, officers, &c., and report to the Association at its annual meetings; when a full expose of the affairs of each Society shall be given, and opportunity to advocate its claims, and to take up a collection for its benefit.

3d. We would recommend the appointment of one or more delegates from this Association to the annual meetings of the aforesaid Societies, who shall carry a report of the doings of this body in relation thereto, and be instructed to co-operate with those Societies in promoting their general objects.

4th. That this Association recommend to the several Churches composing this body, to take the subject of Missions and other benevolent operations into early consideration, and either by forming distinct Societies in aid of these several objects, or by appointing set times for such purposes, when the churches, as such, shall attend to the interests of the several Societies which they are disposed to favor, and take collections, or by such other means as they may devise, raise moneys for the promotion of their objects; and that they be requested to forward in their annual letter to the Association the results of such efforts.

5th. That a full report of all such sums raised and expended within the Association during the year, be annually presented by the Treasurer, and published in the Annual Minutes of the Association.

6th. They would likewise recommend the annual appointment of an Associational Messenger, who shall visit during the year all the churches in the Association and its immediate vicinity; to preach and confer with them upon the state of religion, and missionary and other benevolent objects; and report to the Association at its next anniversary, the results of his observations and labors; and that each church be requested to contribute on the occasion sufficient to pay his expenses.

Your Committee hope that, by the adoption of this course, worthy objects will be regularly before the Association; opportunities will be given to awaken a deeper interest in the cause of missions; the designs of the general Societies will be promoted, and important objects will be secured by the Annual Meetings of the Association.

Your Committee desire further to report, that they consider taking congregational collections for pious purposes on the Sabbath day perfectly consistent with the Scriptural observance of that holy day, and would, therefore, recommend all our churches to take frequent congregational collections for missionary and like purposes on that day.

The officers spoken of in this Report, and necessary to carry it out, were appointed. Brother Samuel Davison was appointed the Associational Messenger for the ensuing year. This office of Messenger is one which has long been maintained in some churches with great advantage. Through its influence, the different members of an Association, though widely scattered, may be brought together; by becoming acquainted with the labors which are put forth in other sections, their interest in them may be increased; and by looking upon these movements with the same explanations, they may come to see eye to eye.

A full report was made of the labors connected with the mission to England during the past year, undertaken by request of the Association at its last anniversary.

A request having been made by the 1st Hopkinton Church, that the Association would consider the propriety of ordaining Brother Alfred B. Burdick, he was examined in public as to his experience and doctrinal views, on sixth day morning; and, by a vote of the Association, he was on the first day of the week set apart to the work of the Gospel ministry by the laying on of hands and prayer.

The afternoon of the first day was occupied in listening to a missionary discourse by brother Samuel Davison. A collection for missionary purposes was taken up, amounting to about $50, after which the assembly dispersed.

The Central Association met at De Ruyter last week. We shall give some account of its doings soon.

TO OUR AGENTS AND FRIENDS.

We send the first number of our paper to all the former subscribers for the Seventh-day Baptist Register, and some who were not subscribers for that paper, in hope that they will give us their patronage. The publication of the second number will be delayed for about two weeks, or until the 3d day of July, in order to allow time for our agents and friends to make returns. We have now three requests to make, which we hope will receive the prompt attention of those to whom they are directed:—

1. We request that those persons who receive this number of the paper, and do not wish to take it, will write their name and Post Office address upon the paper, enclose, and return it to us, directed, "Sabbath Recorder, New York."

2. We request that our Local Agents will take immediate measures to increase the number of subscribers in their respective sections if possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. By a reference to the terms, it will be seen that advance payments are best for subscribers, and we are sure they are best for all concerned. Nevertheless, we would not exclude any who wish to have the papers from that privilege, and for this reason we have made the provision which will be found in the terms. Very much depends upon the efficiency of the Local Agents. By devoting two or three days to the work, they may in most cases do it up effectually, and send on their report. We hope they will do so, and we promise that for this they shall be compensated.

3. We request that those living remote from our societies, and ministering brethren generally, will act as agents for the paper, to extend its circulation and its usefulness.

☞ Post Masters are authorized by law to forward, free of postage, all orders and money for papers, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

Communications, orders, and remittances should be directed to "Geo. B. Utter, No 9 Spruce Street, New York."

Bro. Nathan V. Hull writes from Clarence, N. Y., that some additional and valuable accessions to the ranks of Sabbath-keepers have been made in that section. In conclusion, he says, "I am still laboring in the cause of Sabbath reform, with the best prospects to cheer me that I have ever enjoyed. I feel my whole soul engaged in the work."

Thomas B. Brown and the Church at Hayfield.—The following preamble and resolutions were sent us some time ago, in expectation of the earlier publication of the paper. As they serve to show the feeling of the Church in Hayfield towards Brother Brown, we insert them at this late period. We are sorry to learn, that in consequence of ill health, Brother B. was detained for a considerable time at Milton, Pa. He has contemplated making that a place of residence and labor for a season.

At a meeting of the Seventh Day Baptist Church in Hayfield, Crawford Co., Pa., the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:—

Whereas Brother Thomas B. Brown has concluded to withdraw from his connection with this Society, and locate himself with the Church in Plainfield, N. J., and the occasion seems to be one suitable for the expression of our feelings towards him, our estimate of his character, and the universal approval of his services and labors of love amongst us; therefore,

Resolved, That in bidding adieu to one who has for four years past officiated as our pastoral guide, we are affected by sentiments of the most heartfelt sorrow and regret; that his highly exemplary character, ennobling talents, pure Christianity, and true benevolence, entitle him to our sincere esteem, love and admiration; and that the memory of his sojourn with us will ever be cherished as among the most pleasurable and endearing of recollections.

Resolved, That we humbly and devoutly invoke the blessing of Heaven upon our beloved brother and his highly-esteemed family, that in their future life they may be guided and protected by the favor of Divine Providence, and in every vicissitude be buoyed up and strengthened by a lively faith in the glorious gospel of our Divine Redeemer; that our brother may enjoy the blessing of health, and be enabled to continue his labors in the ministry as a good steward of the manifold grace of God; and when he shall have finished his course here on earth, may be rewarded with a crown of righteousness.

A Permanent Minister.—It is gratifying, at a time when ministerial changes are so frequent, to look at the instances in which permanent settlements and faithful labor have brought forth their abundant fruit. By the Hartford Courant, we are informed that the Rev. Chapin preached his fiftieth anniversary sermon at Rocky Hill, Conn, not long since. In that sermon, he stated that the church had been formed 122 years—the number of members, at the period of organization, was 8—when he was ordained, 27—since which time 591 have been admitted. The present number is 398. He has baptized 939 persons, married 435 couples, attended 818 funerals, and administered the sacrament between 550 and 600 times. There are but three persons now living who belonged to the church when he was ordained—at which time there were 90 married couples living in the village, every one of whom have been divided by death. Dr. Chapin is now upwards of 80 years old.

Convention to Promote the Observance of Sunday.—In another column we have spoken of the efforts now making to promote this object, and given our views of those effors to some extent. We learn that a Convention was held at the State House in Harrisburg, Pa., on the 30th ult., which was presided over by the President of the board of canal commissioners, and attended by a large number of delegates. Dr. Edwards of Boston, Secretary of "the Sabbath Union," and Dr. Bethune of Philadelphia, were present and addressed both the Convention and the citizens of Harrisburg on the subject.—Several resolutions were adopted, and also an address to the inhabitants of Pennsylvania.

A meeting for the same object was likewise held in Philadelphia on the 11th inst.

Defection of a Minister.—We are pained to have occasion to notice the fall of one who has been considerably connected with religious movements for a time past. Faithfulness, however, will not permit us to neglect this duty. The following official statement of the action of the Newark (N. J.) Presbytery in the case, will explain the whole matter. However much occasion for grief to those who love the cause of religion this may afford, they will rejoice that when the facts were known, decided steps were taken to prevent further evil by withdrawing at once from him who had been the occasion of scandal to the cause which he was bound to honor and defend. Here is the official statement:—

THE CASE OF NATHANIEL E. JOHNSON.

At a meeting of the Presbytery of Newark, held on the 10th instant, charges were preferred against Nathaniel E. Johnson, of unministerial and unchristian conduct:

1st. In the use of intoxicating drinks to the extent of drunkenness.

2d, In attending the theatre, in the city of New York at several times, under circumstances of peculiar aggravation.

3d. Of gross licentiousness.

Mr. Johnson having expressed his desire to forego the formalities of a regular process of trial, and having pleaded guilty of each of the charges above specified, the Presbytery resolved unanimously, that he be deposed from the office of the gospel ministry, and excommunicated from the communion of the Christian church.

E. Seymour, Stated Clerk.

General Intelligence.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

The Senate having concurred in a vote of the House to adjourn sine die on the 17th inst., most of last week was taken up in disposing of such matters as needed attention before the close of the Session.

In the Senate, memorials were presented for annulling the treaty for the joint occupation of Oregon; for and against the annexation of Texas to the Union; a bill reported for holding the presidential election on one day throughout the Union; a bill passed for the settlement of the difficulty about Pea Patch Island; a bill was introduced to purchase and construct Morse's Electro-Magnetic Telegraph between Baltimore and New York; and the bill for the remission of duties on railroad iron was taken up.

In the House, in Committee of the Whole on the General Appropriation Bill, after considerable debate, the bill was finally passed, an amendment having been made, directing the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House to supply the two bodies with articles of American manufacture, when of equal quality and price; the Naval Appropriation bill was passed, containing a provision for the abolition of corporeal punishment in the Navy; and a bill to repair the Pennsylvania Avenue was laid on the table.

On Saturday the Senate was engaged in discussing the Annexation of Texas treaty. Speeches were made in favor of and against the ratification of the Treaty. About nine o'clock that evening the Texas treaty was rejected in a full Senate by a vote of 16 for it, and 35 against it.

As soon as the vote upon the treaty was announced, and the injunction of secrecy removed, Mr. Benton gave notice that on Monday he would introduce a bill to annex Texas to the Union.

The following account of the doings on Monday, we copy from "the Republic" of Wednesday morning:—

In the Senate on Monday, immediately after the reading of the journal, Mr. Benton, in accordance with previous notice, introduced his bill to provide for the annexation of Texas to the United States, which was read. The bill authorizes the President to negotiate with Mexico and Texas a treaty for the annexation of Texas on the following basis, viz.: The boundaries of Texas to be the boundaries of the original province of Texas, embracing the lands bordering on streams flowing into the Mississippi, and comprehends 200,000 square miles—enough for four States. 2d. The assent of the people of Texas. 3d. The "State of Texas," embracing the well-settled part of Texas, and with a territory not exceeding that of the largest State in the Union, to be admitted into the Union on a footing of equality with the original States, immediately upon the completion of this act of annexation. 4th. The remainder of the territory to be constituted a territorial government, to be called the South-Western Territory. 5th. The whole territory annexed to be equally divided into two parts, in the northern part of which slavery shall never be tolerated, and in the southern part of which it shall be tolerated. 6th. The assent of Mexico to be first obtained to the annexation, or to be dispensed with only when Congress shall deem that assent unnecessary. 7th. Other details to be adjusted by treaty so far as they come within the scope of the treaty making power. The bill was ordered to a second reading, and to be printed. Mr. Allen gave notice that he should call for its second reading to-morrow.

A message was received from the House, announcing the death of the Hon. Almon H. Read, late a representative from the State of Pennsylvania: whereupon Mr. Sturgeon rose and delivered an appropriate eulogy on the character of the deceased, and moved the usual resolutions to testify the respect of that body for his memory; which were unanimonsly adopted, and the Senate forthwith adjourned.

No business of any importance was transacted in the House to-day. At an early hour, Mr. Bidlack announced the death of his colleague, the Hon. A. H. Read, one of the representatives from the State of Pennsylvania. After a neat and appropriate eulogy on the character and services of the deceased, Mr. Bidlack concluded by offering the usual testimonials of respect for his memory, which were unanimously adopted. The House then adjourned.

In the Senate, on Tuesday, several petitions relating to the annexation of Texas were presented, and considerable debate was had upon the subject. The bill to remit duties on railroad iron was rejected.

In the House, a Message was received from the President, urging the annexation of Texas. The Eastern Harbor bill which appropriates about $350,000 was returned with the objections of the President.

The great Robbery at Albany.—Mr. Wm. H. McKee, of Salem, Washington Co. was robbed of ten thousand dollars at the City Hotel in Albany, Friday morning last, under the following circumstances. Mr. McKee arrived in Albany from this city in the morning boat, stopped at the City Hotel, and seeing no one in the bar-room, hung up his carpet bag, containing the money, and went directly into the dining-room, where breakfast had just been served, and when he came out from his breakfast, in about fifteen minutes, discovered his loss and immediately offered a reward of $500 for the recovery of his money. This reward was afterwards increased to $2,000. The police officers have been on the alert to secure the thieves and the reward; and on Tuesday officers Stuart and Walker arrested John Daily, and a female named Elizabeth Hanson, and recovered the bag and $9199 of the money. They were about to depart in the afternoon boat for Providence;—but the boat had left a quarter of an hour before they arrived at the place of starting.

Since the confinement of Daily in prison, he has attempted to commit suicide. On Wednesday morning, between five and six o'clock, he was found in his cell covered with blood, and completely exhausted. It appeared that he had concealed a lancet in the lining of his hat, with which, when left alone, he had cut his throat partly round, and had opened the veins of his arms, his wrist, ankles and thighs, so as to occasion the flow of a large quantity of blood. A physician having staunched the blood, and bound up the wounds, it is thought he will recover. It is said that Daily is not his real name, and that he has been arrested before on a similar charge. The fact that in his room a dark-lantern and some burglars tools were found, indicates that this is not new business to him.

SUMMARY.

Mr. John Hepburn Clark, a gentleman who resides at 82 William street, on Monday received a watch of which he was formerly owner, but which was stolen from him fourteen years ago, when he was a boy at school. With the watch he received a note, calling to his recollection the time and manner of the theft, which was effected by one of his school-mates. The writer says that the watch had become "a source of great affliction to his guilty conscience," so much so that he had resolved to return it without delay.—Republic.

One of the iron guns, belonging to Capt. Kidd's vessel, sunk in the North River, near Caldwell's, in 1699, has been raised and was brought into Wall-street, New York, this morning, and is now in the office of A. C. Thompson, Esq. No. 50 Wall street. It is expected that all of Capt. Kidd's money will be found in this vessel, and that it will be got up in the course of a few days. Specie will fall in price, of course.

[Brooklyn Star.

The Affghan war cost fifteen million pounds sterling, and thirteen thousand lives, and produced a harvest of two old wooden gates.

The amount of toll taken on all the canals of the State of New-York to the close of the third week in May, being a period of 45 days, is $501,000. Last year to the close of the first week in June, a period of 38 days, the amount was $418 000; and to the close of the 3d week of May, about $300,000.

Quick Traveling.—A gentleman left Rochester, N. Y. on Sunday evening at 5 o'clock, and arrived in Boston last evening at 7 o'clock—a distance of 450 miles in 26 hours. So much for railroads.—Boston Transcript.

Gov. Fitzpatrick, of Alabama, has issued a Proclamation recommending the third Friday in June to be observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer throughout the State.

The bill repealing the laws of 1838 and 1839, in relation to fugitive slaves, and which is intended to prevent any officers of the State from arresting slaves, has passed the Connecticut House of Representatives without a division. The provision of the bill, making it a penalty of $500 to voilate the law, was stricken out.

The increase of Mormons during the past year amounts to six or eight hundred from foreign countries, and three or four hundred from the United States, (principally from Pennsylvania, Connecticut and Massachusetts.) Fifty or sixty missionaries arrived at St. Louis, on the 26th ult., on their way to preach Mormonism in different parts of the country.

The steamboats Rhode Island and New Jersey, are now running in competition between this city and Providence, by which means the fare has been reduced to $1.

Dr. Cox, of Brooklyn, laid the corner stone of a new Presbyterian Church at Plainfield, N. J. Thursday afternoon, and preached on the occasion.

England and the Slave Trade.—The number of vessels of war employed by the British government for the suppression of the slave trade in 1842 was fifty-eight; the sum total of the guns carried by them was 945. The whole expense of this armament was £575,466.

Jews in Poland.—A late number of the Universal German Gazette says that several wealthy Polish Jews, having ascertained the impossibility of avoiding the conscription, had determined to embrace the Roman Catholic religion.

Jews in Hungary.—The General Diet of Hungary has adopted, by a vote of forty-one to eight, a resolution to emancipate the Jews.

A London correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says, "The Post Office, under the Penny system, and against which the metropolis have been wailing, increased thirty thousand pounds on the last quarter."

The Rev. S. Wollard, of South Carolina, has purchased the Limestone Springs property, in Spartansburg district, from the State Bank, for the sum of $20,000, and has presented it to the South Carolina Methodist Conference, provided they will establish in a certain time, a college with two professorships, one of Divinity, and the other of Law; also, a house lot for a parsonage.

Progress of Temperance.—Edward C. Delevan, Esq., the Temperance Reformer, is building a new Temperance Hotel at Albany, expected to cost $100,000. The Croton Hotel of this city, has been enlarged by its enterprising proprietor.

Of 380 men and boys, comprising the crew of the U. S. frigate Cumberland, now on the Mediterranean station, less than 20 draw the spirit ration.

Father Mathew.—We see it stated that a letter has been received in this country from Father Mathew, in which he declines visiting the United States the present season, according to his previously expressed intention.

Another Hero Gone!—The Salem Register announces the death of the last of Washington's Life Guards, in the person of Capt. Jesse Smith, who died at his residence in Salem on Tuesday, aged eighty-eight. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill, and afterwards was drafted into Washington's Guards. He was present in the battles of Brandywine, Trenton, Germantown and Monmouth. He received his discharge in 1779, from General Washington.

Payment for Books.—Mr. Stephens, author of incidents of travel in Central America, has received from the Harpers, as the profits of the sale of this work, $20,000; the same firm have paid recently to Mr. Prescott, for his work entitled the conquest of Mexico, $7500, and the demand for the work still continues; they have also paid to the learned Dr. Charles Anthon more than $5000 annually, for several years, as copy-right for his various classical and school books.

It is said that in every county in Massachusetts except Franklin, spirit licenses, with the sanction of the people, and under their instructions, are refused altogether.

The Presbyterian Synod of England have established a Theological Seminary in London, and appointed Rev. James Buchanan, D. D., their first professor. It is stated in the London Magazine, that Presbyterian congregations are multiplying in the larger towns of England, while the supply of ministers is very inadequate.

The widow of John C. Colt, the Barre Gazette states, is now in Warren, Worcester co., Mass. qualifying herself as a teacher. It will be recollected that she was married to Colt while in prison, but a few hours before his death. Her original name was Caroline Henshaw.

Bishops in the Methodist Episcopal Church.—The General Conference now in session, proceeded on Saturday to the election of additional Bishops. The Rev. Dr. James, of this city, Financial Secretary of the American Bible Society, and Rev. L. L. Hamlin of Cincinnati, were elected. There are now seven Bishops or Superintendents, who have the oversight of the whole Church included within the bounds of the United States and Texas, numbering over one million of church members. A Bishop in this church has not the oversight of any one section of the country, but conjointly with the others, exercises a general superintendency over the whole church. They are not therefore Bishops of this or that place or State, but Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church.—Republic.

A CARD.

In one of the last numbers of the Seventh-day Baptist Register, a request was made for an explanation of the expression, "for the purpose of opening a correspondence with our brethren in England," which occurs in the Minutes of the Eastern Association respecting the appointment of a person to visit that country, and also in his report. This expression was thought to indicate a low estimation of the former correspondence, and of the labors of the Corresponding Secretary.—As the request was directed to either the Association or the Missionary, I take the liberty to say, that I believe the thought of depreciating the former correspondence did not occur to the Association, and that I am sure it did not to the writer of the report. Perhaps to "extend our acquaintance," would have expressed the design equally well, and this is about the meaning of the expression.

G. B. Utter.

DIED,

At Milton, W. T., December 16th, of a cancer, Susan, wife of Edward Burdick, aged 50 years. Mrs. Burdick embraced religion in early life at Berlin, Rens. Co., N. Y., where she united with the Seventh Day Baptist Church. Subsequently she removed to Alfred, Allegany Co., N.Y., where she held her membership in the 1st Seventh Day Baptist Church until her ransomed soul took its flight to join the church triumphant. She lived a consistent member of the church militant more than thirty years, and was highly esteemed by all her numerous acquaintances. During her last protracted and painful illness, she exhibited that patience, meekness and resignation, which a well-grounded hope in the atoning blood of Christ alone can inspire.

As the tide of life gradually ebbed, and the dark valley yawned fearfully before her, the prospects of immortality seemed to increase in brilliancy, earth to lose its attractions, death its sting, the grave its horrors, and her ransomed soul to swell with triumphant rapture, till she felt asleep upon the bosom of her Saviour, to wake in his likeness and be caught up with him in the air.

S. C.

January 13th, after a short illness, from pulmonary consumption, Mr. Hiram Fenner, in the 22d year of his age. The deceased moved with his father's family, but a short time previous to his death, from Poland, Herk. Co., N. Y., to White Water, Walworth Co., Wisk., where he left them to mourn their irreparable loss. He lived beloved, and died regretted by all who knew him. But while we regret his premature death, and sympathize with his bereaved family, we rejoice that he died in the hope of a triumphant resurrection.

I. D. B. S.

At his residence in Hopkinton, R. I., January 19th, Mr. Christopher Brown, in the 88th year of his age. He was a man of great moral worth, and took an active part with his patriotic countrymen in achieving our national independence. Embracing the Bible Sabbath in 1806, he became a member of the 1st Seventh Day Baptist Church in Hopkinton, where he continued an exemplary member till he departed this life in the full enjoyment of that religion of which he had been an ornament through his long life.

Comm.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath Tract Society publish the following Sabbath Tracts, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.

No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.

No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatrians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.

No. 6—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week, the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

The Society has published, also, in quarto form, [$1,25 per 100, or $10 per 1000,] two numbers of The Sabbath Vindicator.

The Bible says ☞ THE SABBATH ☜ The Church says

The seventh day is … The first day is

WHICH SHALL WE HEAR?

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as instituted in Paradise upon the Seventh or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the first day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith. It is hoped all who love the Sabbath, and reverence God's word, will give this address a prayerful consideration.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, (3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

JUST PUBLISHED,

THE

MEDIATORIAL REIGN OF CHRIST

ON THE EARTH

Revealed, in a series of Essays, compiled from eminent authors; to which is added a letter from Charlotte Elizabeth to the Bishop of Jerusalem, on the perpetuity of Israel's Ordinances.

The following are the subjects discussed in the above work:—

1. The Study of Prophecy, a Question of Degree.
2. Christ's Kingdom on Earth.
3. Reigning on Earth no Degradation to our Lord.
4. The Priesthood of Christ, as it shall be exercised during and after the Millennium.
5. Messiah's Reign on the Earth.
6. The uncertainty of the hour of the coming of the Son of Man.
7. The signs, times, and seasons preceding Christ's Second Coming.
8. War in heaven.
9. The First Resurrection.
10. The changing of the Living Saints at the First Resurrection.
11. The ascension of the Saints to meet the Lord in the air.
12. The ascended Saints preserved from the fiery judgments, exercise power with Christ over their enemies.
13. The restoration of the Jews to their own land.
14. The New Temple to be erected in Jerusalem, with a map explanatory of the same.
15. The New Temple Ceremonial Service.
16. The going up of all nations to worship the Lord at Jerusalem.
17. The New Division of the Holy Land, with 2 maps, the first showing the division of the land among the Twelve Tribes by Joshua, with references to chapter and verse. The second, the division which shall take place after their restoration, as shown by the Prophet Ezekiel, with references also to the prophecy.
18. The New Heavens and New Earth.
19. The Paradisaical felicity and perfection of the animal and vegetable kingdoms generally restored during the Millennium.
20. Longevity restored to the sojourners on Earth.
21. The loosing of Satan and consequent Apostacy subsequent to the Millennium.
22. The Last or General Resurrection and Judgment of the wicked and the Second Death.
23. The delivering of the Kingdom to God the Father and commencement of the Everlasting Age.
24. The Everlasting Kingdom of God perpetuated in the renewed Heavens and Earth.
25. The gathering together of all things in Christ, and the Earth (renewed) the court or centre of unity of the Everlasting Kingdom of all Creation.
26. On Death and Hades, and the period of Satan's dominion over the present evil world.
27. The approaching New Dispensation.
28. Charlotte Elizabeth's letter to the Bishop of Jerusalem.

☞ Any person desiring the above Work, can have it sent to them, in sheets, by mail, by enclosing One Dollar, (post-paid,) addressed to Rev. I. P. Labagh, New York, or by calling at his Office, 130 Fulton street, or at 9 Spruce street, between the hours of 11 and 3 o'clock.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 25 a —
Pearl	4 68½a 4 75
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	23 50a24 00
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	30 a 30½
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow, lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 32
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	6 75 a 8 25
Newcastle	6 50 a 7 50
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	7 a 7½
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8 a 8½
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4 4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	9 a 11
Stripes, fast colors	8 a 10
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3¼a 3½
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16½a 17
Camphor, ref.	70 a 72½
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 15 a 1 25
Copperas	1¼a 1½
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	15 a 40
Gum Shellac	8 a 16½
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 38
Jalap	65 a 70
Madder	12 @ 19
Maguesia, calc	55 @ 75
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil, Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 25
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 50
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4½@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	24 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	27 50 @30 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @[illegible]
Logwood, Cpy	[illegible]
FEATHERS.
Foreign, lb	13 @ [illegible]
American, Live	[illegible]
FISH.
Dry Cod, cwt	2 81 @ 3 00
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	[illegible]
Pickled Salmon	[illegible]
Smoked Salmon lb	[illegible]
Mackerel, 1 bbl	[illegible]
No 2 bbl	[illegible]
No 3 bbl	[illegible]
Shad, Ct h'f bl	[illegible]
Buckep't do	[illegible]
Mass do	[illegible]
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	[illegible]
Do No 1	[illegible]
Do No 2	[illegible]
FLAX.
Russia, lb	[illegible]
American	[illegible]
FRUIT.
Raisins, Sun cak	[illegible]
Do bunch box	[illegible]
Currants, Zante lb	[illegible]
Citron Genoa	[illegible]
Almonds soft shl	[illegible]
Do shelled	[illegible]
Figs Smyrna	[illegible]
Prunes Bordeaux	[illegible]
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	[illegible]
Troy	[illegible]
Ohio, via Canals	[illegible]
Michigan	[illegible]
Philadelphia	[illegible]
Baltimore	[illegible]
Richm'd c mills	[illegible]
Brandywine	[illegible]
Rye flour	[illegible]
Indian Meal	[illegible]
Do per hhd	[illegible]
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	[illegible]
Do South new	[illegible]
Rye, Northern	[illegible]
Corn N & Jersey	[illegible]
Southern	48 @ 49
Barley N R	50 @ 52

Oats, Northern	31 @ 33
Do Southern	28 @ 30
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 185
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	85 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A. & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 00
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do Russ PSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5½a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 40@ 3 50
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft]	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	23 00@26 00
Heading, w o	35 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	30@31
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turp W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 10 @ 5 50
Do prime	3 25 @ 3 50
Pork mess bbl	8 50 @ 8 62
Do prime	6 12½@ 6 25
Butter, prime	11 @ 15
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6¼
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	5 a 8
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	[illegible]
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a 14 00
Flax, rough	[illegible]
Do clean	[illegible]
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	[illegible]
Trieste in boxes	[illegible]
American	[illegible]
Spring	[illegible]
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	[illegible]
New Orleans	[illegible]
Cuba, muscovado	[illegible]
Porto Rico	[illegible]
Havana white	[illegible]
Do Brown	[illegible]
Loaf	[illegible]
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	[illegible]
Liverpool, ground	[illegible]
Do do sack	[illegible]
Do do fine	[illegible]
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	[illegible]
Castile	[illegible]
SPICES.
Cassia lb	[illegible]
Cloves	[illegible]
Ginger, race	[illegible]
Nutmegs No 1	[illegible]
Pepper, Sumatra	[illegible]
Pimento, Jamaica	[illegible]
TALLOW.
American	[illegible]
TEAS.
Imperial lb	[illegible]
Gunpowder	[illegible]
Hyson	[illegible]
Young Hyson	[illegible]
Hyson skin	[illegible]
Souchong	[illegible]
TIN.
Block, E	[illegible]
Do E. India	[illegible]
Plates	[illegible]
WOOL.
Am. Sax. Fleece, lb	[illegible]
Do merino	[illegible]
Pulled superfine	[illegible]
No. 1	[illegible]
No. 2	[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

LINES,

Written by SYLVESTER GRAHAM, on the death of his youngest child, aged four years.

Blow after blow! O thou Almighty God!
Thou holy and benignant Father of us all!
Blow after blow, thy castigating rod
Upon our still rebellious hearts doth fall—
Not as the master scourgeth the poor thrall—
Not as the parent doth his child chastise—
Not in thy wrath to punish nor appall;
But in thy love to chasten—make us wise—
To purify our souls, and fit us for the skies.

Blow after blow! How keen, how deep the smart!
How fierce the anguish, how intense the pain!
Oh how the agony doth wring the heart!
How the dread phrenitis assails the brain!—
Great God, let not these sufferings be in vain!
Nor serve to harden rather than subdue.
But may we through these tribulations gain
That Grace which shall, within us form anew,
The image of Thyself, Thy Holy One and True.

Oh that there were a heart in us to be
All thou requirest—all our good requires:
O that we might become conform'd to Thee!
Filled with that spirit which thy love inspires;
Exalted by Heaven's holiest desires;
Children of God, born to a life divine;
Cleansed by the Spirit's sanctifying fires,
And made in all thy attributes to shine,
With goodness, righteousness, benevolence like Thine.

Yet Heavenly Father, that beloved one—
That darling child of our declining years,
Whose earthly course has been so quickly run—
Whose death has filled our eyes with scalding tears,
Our souls with sorrow, and our life with fears—
So closely to our doting hearts had grown,
That now, when from our sight she disappears,
It seems as if our comforts all had flown,
And over all our joys an endless gloom were thrown.

But, Father, she was thine to give and take!
Thou gav'st in love—in mercy thou hast taken;
And though our wounded, bleeding hearts should break,
Still, still our trust in Thee shall not be shaken;
Nor shall our souls of sweet hope be forsaken.
Though in the grave sleeps our beloved one,
Yet from that sleep shall she again awaken,
And live forever through thy blessed Son,
Where sin and death come not. Father, thy will be done!

Yes, bright and beautiful beyond the skies,
Shall her angelic spirit dwell with thee,
And her loved form again shall greet our eyes,
All radiant in its immortality.
And her sweet voice, in heavenly melody,
Again shall charm our ears; and like a flame,
Her seraph love shall warm our hearts; and we (If thine) in rapture shall our babe reclaim—
Thou gavest—thou hast taken—blessed be thy name!

LEAVES FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTE-BOOK—NO. 1.

We left Whitehall at eleven o'clock, and were soon on board our floating domicil, bound for Old England. The steamer accompanied us to the open sea, when her fastenings were loosed, and she turned to leave us. What a variety of emotions were awakened by this simple and expected event! While she continued with us, friends and home and sympathy were near; it was easy to return, and our feet might soon tread again the firm earth. But when she departed, the last link which connected us with land was broken; to return was impossible, and to proceed on a long and trackless way was our only alternative. To stand in such a position, cut off from all old associations, with no new ones formed to divide the attention, excites feelings altogether peculiar, of mingled loneliness and novelty. We gazed upon that last representative of home, until she receded from our view.

Wednesday.—We found ourselves this morning surrounded by the "great waters" to the extent of our vision. In such circumstances, what apparently trivial things serve to occupy attention and excite interest. The sight of a sail will perhaps draw forth one's sympathies, and lead to a variety of speculations. The presence of the sea-gulls, white and beautiful, hovering over the water and sporting together, as if proud of their ability to overlook the ocean, or of the little birds, chickens as they are called, is sufficient to give life and animation to the scene. O if one could cherish a deeper sympathy with all animate nature, it would make every place cheerful.

Sabbath.—How the duties of this day are interwoven with the remembrance of home and friends! Those friends now engaged in the duties of the Sabbath, how easily brought to mind, how near, how refreshing the thought of them! Could the repetition of those duties, or the sight of those friends, produce a deeper impression than the thoughts about them in a place like this? We are mysteriously connected with our past life and its associations, and it would be an easy thing for the Creator to bring every event of it before us as distinctly as the painter can depict to the natural eye. Such considerations, to which a Sabbath upon the ocean gives rise, attach an awful importance to the acts of every day. Who would not 'wish his days might be bound each to each by filial piety?'

Tuesday—A Storm.—The early part of the day was calm and pleasant. But about one o'clock the sky became dark, the wind increased, and the clouds rushed along as if driven by furies. The sea became rough and angry-looking, and our vessel dashed onward as if excited to boisterous playfulness by the foam and noise. Then came the rain, giving, as blown hither and thither, a tremulous appearance to the whole scene. But the peals of thunder and flashes of lightning crowned the whole with a majesty and awfulness indescribable. The thundering was different from what is heard on land, in that its sound was deeper, and produced a more general trembling. The flashes of lightning were most brilliant. They were at right angles to the horizon, reached near half way to the zenith, and appeared as though the clouds had burst asunder, leaving a jagged edge, and the observer looked directly into a world of dazzling light beyond. The whole scene was new and full of grandeur, and we gazed upon it with amazement and joy. Such a scene can hardly fail to give enlarged and vivid conceptions of the Omnipresent One. There is something in the vastness of the ocean, its unity, and its constant changes, that appropriately speaks of Him. It is surprising that this, when seen in connection with the comparative frailty of human means of traversing it, does not impress the minds of those who live upon its bosom. It would, but for the power of use and wont, which leads men, if they do but see a thing occur twice in the same manner, to lose sight of God's hand in it. To the action of law the whole matter is referred. But what, after all, are those laws which men talk so knowingly about, if there be no all-pervading Spirit to give efficiency to them? Speculate as we please about their power, if God should withdraw himself they would be just as powerful as any other dead thing, and no more. He is the source of all life, and the centre around which every thing must revolve or be dashed in pieces.

Land!—Last evening we saw the mountainous coast of Ireland. But the distance and mist rendered it indistinct. Sufficient was seen, however, to produce a decided change in the appearance of all faces. A cheerfulness was expressed by them, which the promise of land could not at all excite.—This morning we found ourselves passing Holyhead promontory, with a pleasant breeze wafting us along, and a bright sun shining upon us. After the monotony of a sea voyage, it was a rich treat to look upon this immense precipice, hollowed by the ocean into magnificent caverns, affording shelter for falcons and sea-fowls. From vestiges of military works still to be seen here, this place appears to be one of very remote antiquity. It must have been an important Roman station. A religious house, it is said, was erected here in the sixth century. The house for regular canons was founded about 1137. A handsome church was erected in the time of Edward III. This town being the most convenient place of embarkation for Dublin, has been greatly improved, and its business consists principally in the importation of produce from Ireland. Passing Holyhead we were borne along rapidly towards the end of our voyage, in view of the coast of Wales, with its hills and valleys, its clumps of trees and houses, its green pastures and golden grainfields. Before nightfall, that end of our voyage, of which we had dreamed and talked, came, and with it the satisfaction of feeling that we were again upon the bosom of our mother earth.

A REFLECTION AT SEA.

See how beneath the moonbeam's smile
Yon little billow heaves its breast,
And foams and sparkles for awhile,
And murmuring then subsides to rest.

Thus man, the sport of bliss and care,
Rises on time's eventful sea,
And having swelled a moment there,
Thus melts into eternity.

MORSE'S MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.

The perfect success of Professor Morse's Electro-Magnetic Telegraph has excited the astonishment and admiration of the community. The most incredulous have been convinced, and, occurring at the time they have done, the experiments have satisfied the public that the Magnetic Telegraph is not merely a beautiful illustration of a philosophical principle, but an agent that may be made of practical and every day utility in the business transactions of the country. The long list of officers of the Democratic Convention was published in the Capitol at Washington as soon as it was announced in Baltimore, the only time lost being that occupied in the passage of the messenger from the room of the Convention to the office of the Telegraph in the Pratt street Depot. The ballotings were communicated with the same rapidity; and the expectant throng of politicians, who surrounded the Professor's room in the Capitol, were made aware of the result of each as soon as it was known at the door of the Odd Fellows' Hall in Gay street in this city. Then, again, the nomination of Mr. Wright was declined by him within fifteen minutes after it was made, and the reiterated solicitation made known, and again declined; and had Mr. Wright been in New Orleans, instead of Washington, the intervals of intercourse between him and the Convention would have been quite as brief.

All this is calculated to put us upon the inquiry into the future agency of the wonderful contrivance which thus, without metaphor, annihilates both time and space. It has been said that the railroad system has given a perpetuity to our Union, which it would not otherwise possess—and that with iron bonds is our country bound together. But the day of iron bars must now yield to that of copper wires. What difficulty does extent of territory present to permanency of government, but the delay and inconvenience of transmitting intelligence from one portion of it to another—intelligence between men in business, and between the Executive and its officers? Suppose the line of wires to extend to Oregon, and that a squadron lay off the mouth of the Columbia, which it was desired to order home, or to send to Honolulu. The Secretary of the Navy could receive the answer that all hands were piped to weigh anchor before the ink with which he signed his name to the order, if he wrote a heavy hand, had dried upon the paper. If a vessel bound for an Atlantic port had backed her topsail in the midst of the Squadron, the Commodore might ask from the Department, and receive, a permission for an officer to return in her before her yards could be braced round, and her sails sheeted home; for the rate of electricity is 180,000 miles in a second, and at this speed would the correspondence between Washington and Oregon be carried on. Startling as such statements may appear, no one can gainsay them who will see what has been doing daily for a week past at the Pratt street Depot. Instances might be multiplied without end of the availability of the Magnetic Telegraph of Professor MORSE.

Of such an invention as that in question our readers must of course desire to know something, and we believe that the following account of its origin and mode of action will be found correct.

There are few persons who have not seen an electrical machine, and witnessed the spark which passes from it, when in action, to any blunt object which is presented to it. The accumulation of electricity in the machine caused by turning the cylinder or plate, has the same tendency to pass to an object which has less electricity that air has to rush into a vacuum, or water to seek a level—electricity, like air or water, seeking to establish always an equilibrium. Besides the mode of producing electricity by friction, as in the common electrical machine, it is also produced by the action of an acid upon plates of different metals properly attached together—a fact discovered by the person whose name is perpetuated in the term of Galvanism. The mode in common use of producing galvanic action, is to immerse the plates in a trough with separate divisions—at one end of which the supply of electric fluid generated by the action of the acid is in excess. This end of the trough or battery is called the positive, and the other end the negative pole of the battery. Now, if a wire attached to one end is brought near to a wire proceeding from the other end, the electricity passes from the positive to the negative pole, and a spark is seen, like that proceeding from the common electrical machine, which is the electricity seeking to establish an equilibrium. If the two wires are kept in contact, there is a stream of electric fluid passing from one to the other, which is kept up by the action of the acid on the metallic plates already mentioned. The ordinary length of these wires, in a common galvanic battery, is but a few feet; but they may be a thousand, or an hundred thousand miles in length, and the effect of bringing them in contact with each other is still the same—the flow through their entire length of a stream of electricity at the rate already mentioned. If, therefore, the machine or battery is in Washington, and a wire from the positive pole is brought to Baltimore and carried back to Washington, the end of it, brought in contact with the wire at the negative pole, which is but a few feet long, will cause a stream of electricity to flow from Washington to Baltimore and back again along the wire; and it is this wire, coming here and going back, which is to be seen on the posts in Pratt street, the two wires there visible being in fact but the opposite sides of a loop of wire which would be eighty miles in length, were it extended. And this is the first thing to be understood.

Now it is known, that a piece of soft iron bent into the shape of a horse shoe, or the letter U, becomes a magnet so long as a stream of electricity is passing through wire wrapped around it: and the wire, from the positive pole of the battery, after coming to Baltimore is wrapped here round a piece of iron of the proper shape, and then goes back to Washington. To make this iron a magnet, therefore, in Baltimore, it is only necessary to connect the ends of the wires in Washington, when, so long as they are connected, the stream of electricity which passes along them produces the desired effect upon the iron. When the connection is interrupted, the iron ceases to be magnetic, and is like any other piece of soft iron. This magnet, which the Professor has the power to create at pleasure, is his prime mover. Immediately over the magnet, say in Baltimore, is a brass lever, with a piece of iron attached to it, which is brought within a quarter of an inch or less of the horse-shoe. As soon as this last is made a magnet, by uniting the ends of the wire at Washington, it attracts the iron on the lever and draws one end of the lever down, causing at the same time the opposite end to rise. At this opposite end is the pen or stylus, which is of steel about an inch long, and about the size of a knitting needle. Immediately over it is a brass cylinder with a groove around it, into which the stylus strikes when the magnet attracts the other end of the lever. Not far from this roller are two others, revolving in contact, like the rollers used to draw out cotton prior to spinning it in a cotton-mill; motion being given to them by very simple clock-work moved by a weight. The office of these two rollers is to draw from another roller, and under the grooved roller, a strip of paper which is wound round, like a ribbon on its centre block. With these explanations the operation of the machine can be readily and easily understood. When the Professor in Washington wishes to send a letter to Baltimore he spells it with letters composed of dots and lines—for instance, A may be a dot and a line, thus . —; B two dots and a line, thus . . —; C a line and a dot, thus — . By connecting the ends of the wires for an instant only, a dot is made by the pressure of the stylus on the paper which is passing over the grooved cylinder; a line is formed by letting the ends of the wires remain in contact for a longer time, when the stylus is kept pressed on the moving paper. The writing when completed resembles the raised characters used in the instruction of the blind, only instead of the common alphabet, an alphabet of dots and lines in different combinations is made use of.

The mode of connecting the wires as required is very simple. One of them is kept always immersed in a cup of mercury into which the other is dipped, whenever it is desired to send a current of electricity through the entire circuit, the fluid metal forming a conductor between the ends. The operation of writing consists in pressing a button, to which the end of the wires in use is attached, in the manner in which a single key of a piano is struck by the finger, with a succession of rapid or prolonged strokes, as dots or lines are required to be formed. We have spoken of the stylus as a single piece of iron, but it is in fact composed of three, like a three pronged fork, so that each letter is made in triplicate.

As already stated, the paper is drawn over the grooved roller, against which the stylus presses by two rollers, which are set in motion by a simple clock work—which, in its turn, is started by the first stroke of the lever—a detent or catch being withdrawn like the detent of a stop watch; and so long as the writing is going on this detent is kept back, and when the writing is done, the detent falling into its place stops the clock work, and the paper ceases to move. The first stroke of the lever also rings a little bell, which also calls the attention of the attendant to the machine. The whole machinery does not occupy a space of more than one foot by two.

We have described the mode of working the machinery, so to speak, now used, but we understand that there are others, which would enable those who want the experience of Professor Morse and his polite assistant Mr. Vail, who is at the Baltimore end, to write, by striking keys arranged like those of a piano, and marked with the letters of the common alphabet—the effect being produced by the passage of arms over projections on a cylinder, after the manner of a hand organ or musical box.

The only remaining matter to be noticed is the mode in which it is proposed to make the Magnetic Telegraph generally useful for business purposes. Let us suppose, for instance, that it is extended from New York to New Orleans.

The following is the Alphabet used.

(a) . —	(iy) . .	(r) . . .
(b) — . . .	(k) — . —	(sz) . . .
(c) . . .	(l) ——	(t) —
(d) — . .	(m) —— ——	(u) . . —
[e] .	[n] — .	[v] . . . —
[f] . — .	[o] . .	[w] . —— ——
[g] —— —— .	[p]	[x] . — . .
[h]	[q] . . — .

John Smith, in New York, wants to buy from James Brown, in New Orleans, 500 bales of cotton at 8 cents per lb. He writes accordingly the following letter—"James Brown—buy 500 bales cotton at 8 cts. John Smith." He folds it, directs it, and sends it to the Post Office marked "Magnetic Telegraph."

Here it is at once sent to the room of the clerk of the Telegraph, who opens it and writes the contents to New Orleans, where a clerk in attendance at the Post Office at that end of the wires, puts the letter into common writing, seals, and directs it to John Smith, and sends it off instantly by a messenger in waiting. But cotton is ten cents per lb., and so James Brown writes back—"John Smith, cotton ten cents, James Brown." To which Smith answers—"James Brown, buy at 10 cents, John Smith." And all this is done between New Orleans and New York in the space of half an hour, allowing time for the passage of the letters from the offices to the counting houses of Smith and Brown. Or, if it is desired that the correspondence should not be known, Smith and Brown may agree upon a combination of dots and lines, differing from the combination of Professor Morse, and then upon sending the letter in some such shape as this—"John Smith [illegible] James Brown," to the office, the cipher would be copied and sent to New Orleans, when the clerk would send the slip of paper unwound from the machine to the counting house of Smith—and so the letter would give information to no one but the person for whom it was intended. For each letter of the alphabet employed, Government would receive, say one cent, so that the first of the above letters would cost 39 cents, the answer to it 30 cts., and the reply 28 cents.

We cannot close this notice without expressing our conviction that among the most important discoveries and inventions of the present day is the Electro Magnetic Telegraph, and that among the most distinguished public benefactors, Professor Morse, the inventor of it, will be ranked hereafter.—Baltimore American.

TOUCHING INCIDENT.

The following beautiful, delicate, and touching incident is taken from a work on Irish Character, written by Mr. and Mrs. Hall.

Our attention was one day called to a young girl in the town of Galway, who had "come in" for the purpose of selling two lambs. Her sweetheart had gone to sea, bequeathing his mother, a very infirm old woman, to her care. Soon after his departure, Mary left her father's more comfortable dwelling, to reside in the old woman's cabin, so that, as she said herself, "she might watch the craythur day and night, seeing that she had no one to look afther her." Her parents were strongly impressed with the idea, that she had thrown her affections away on a wild sailor, who would forget her; but her faith in him was unbounded. A sheep was her fortune, and she took it with her; it grazed among the crags, and in good time brought her twin lambs. These she hoped to have been able to keep towards the formation of a mountain flock; but the season was so "pinching" that to support her old friend, she brought the lambs into town for sale. The two creatures were coupled together like hounds; and, as she stood with her eyes cast down, yet looking from them, it was impossible not to note the sorrow stamped upon her gentle features. Several asked the price, and after beating her down, turned away without purchasing. This continued for some time, until at last she sat down, and passing her arm around her fleecy charge, she began to cry—

"I'm loath to part them," she said, weeping, "yet I must part them for what they'll bring.—Every one is the same; it's bitter poverty that would make me part anything that has life in it."

"Then why don't you go to your own home, Mary, and take your lammies home?"

"I am at my own home," answered Mary; "and sure it isn't because the woman is poor and friendless that you would have me lave her, is it?"

At last a rough-coated farmer, touched by her distress, offered her the fair value for her lambs. At first she eagerly accepted his proposal; but when she placed the tether in his hand, she raised her eyes imploringly in his face—

"Sure, it isn't going to kill them ye are?"

"No, my dear, no, it is not; I'd be sorry to hurt a curl of their wool; they'll go to my own flock."

"God bless you!" she said, and departed with a smiling countenance.

TO BRING THE DROWNED TO LIFE.

Immediately, as soon as the body is removed from the water, press the chest suddenly and forcibly downward and backward, and instantly discontinue the pressure. Repeat this without interruption, until a pair of common bellows can be procured. When obtained, introduce the nozzle well upon the base of the tongue. Surround the mouth with a towel or handkerchief, and close it. Direct a bystander to press firmly upon the projecting part of the neck, (called Adam's apple,) and use the bellows actively. Then press upon the chest to expel the air from the lungs, to imitate natural breathing. Continue this at least an hour, unless signs of natural breathing come on.

Wrap the body in blankets, place it near a fire, and do every thing to preserve the natural warmth, as well as to impart an artificial heat, if possible. Every thing, however, is secondary to inflating the lungs. Send for a medical man immediately. Avoid all frictions until respiration shall be in some degree restored.

VALENTINE MOTT,
Surg. Gen. of Am. Shipwreck Soc'y.

A POINTED BLOW.—An invalid sent for a physician, the late Dr. Wheelman, and after detaining him for some time with a description of his pains, aches, etc., he thus summed up:—"Now Doctor, you have humbugged me long enough with your good-for-nothing pills and worthless syrups; they don't touch the real difficulty. I wish you to strike the cause of my ailment, if it is in your power to reach it." "It shall be done," said the Doctor, at the same time lifting up his cane, and demolishing a decanter of Gin that stood upon the sideboard!

HORRIBLE MODE OF TORTURE AND EXECUTION AT MONTE VIDEO.—In the various uses to which they apply the hides of bullocks, that of punishment is not left out. It is related of them that they sew up their prisoners in a wet hide, leaving out the head and neck only, and in this condition lay them on the ground, in the sun to dry. In the process of drying, which the hide soon does in the powerful effects of the sun, it becomes contracted, and produces the most excruciating torture on the unfortunate prisoner, by the increase of pressure; but if night arrives before he dies from its effects, the hide relaxes again with the moisture from the air, only to prolong his sufferings on the next day, which generally is the last. So cruel a death is even worse than that which the boa constrictor can inflict, and the invention of it is said to belong to a barbarian named Ramiriz.

WASHINGTON.

Washington was passionately fond of agriculture. Its improvement was ever, with him, an object of paramount regard. Virginia can boast of few sons to whom her agriculture has been more indebted, few who have assisted in promoting its interest to a greater extent, or with the manifestation of a more ardent patronizing zeal. The following account of his farming operations will serve to exhibit the father of his country—the man "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen"—in its true light. The farm of General Washington, at Mt. Vernon, contained 10,000 acres of land in one body—equal to about fifteen square miles. It was divided into farms of convenient size, at the distance of 2, 3, 4, and 5 miles from his mansion-house. These farms he visited every day in pleasant weather, and was constantly engaged in experiments of agriculture.

Some idea of the extent of his farming operations may be formed from the following facts: in 1787 he had 500 acres of grass, sowed 600 bushels of oats, 700 acres of wheat, and prepared as much more for corn, barley, potatoes, beans, peas, &c., and 150 for turnips. His stock consisted of 140 horses, 112 cows, 235 working oxen, heifers, and steers, and 500 sheep. He constantly employed 250 hands, and kept 24 ploughs going during the year, when the earth and the state of the weather would permit. In 1786 he slaughtered 150 hogs, weighing 18,560, for the use of his family, besides provisions for his negroes.—Maine Cultivator.

CULTURE OF MILLET.

JUNE is a good time to sow millet. It will do well sown any time of the month. It makes, when well cured, excellent fodder. One of the general advantages of this crop is, that if the hay crop is likely to come in light, this may be grown as a substitute. Half a bushel of seed, broadcast to the acre, is a proper quantity, though only a peck is sometimes sown on rich ground. It may, if desired, be sown in drills, and if designed for seed, this is the best way. A common turnip drill will sow the seed well. It will yield bountifully; and the seed, when ground into meal, is excellent for fattening animals. Rather light ground is best for it—it will, indeed, do well on land that is too light for grass. In 1841, Mr. G. Jones received a premium from Tompkins County Agricultural Society, for having raised, on two acres, five and a half tons of millet fodder, and sixty-three bushels of seed. It was new land—the wood and timber from which was taken off in the month of April, and twenty quarts of seed sown to the acre the 8th of June succeeding.—Cultiv.

BEES.

To stop bees from fighting and robbing one another, break the comb of the robbers so that the honey will run down among them, and they will go to work at home. I had two hives of bees destroyed this month by being robbed, and should have had another robbed, if I had not received the above information.—Cultivator.

The longest Canal Communication in the world extends from St. Petersburg to the frontiers of China, over a space of 4,472 miles. It was commenced by Peter the Great.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

The following persons are requested to act as agents for this paper in the vicinity where they are located. If any are unable to attend to the business, it is hoped they will secure some one to fill their places. In societies where no one is appointed, it is hoped that our friends will take immediate steps, among themselves, to do what can be done.

NEW YORK
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clarence—Nathan V Hull
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sobeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London — Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville — Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT
Waterford—Lester T Rogers

Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre — Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loufbourro'
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethnel Church

WISKONSAN
Milton, Rock Co—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA
Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS
Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

The Sabbath Recorder,
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT
NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW-YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.
$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.
"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."
PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.
VOL. I.
NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, JULY 4, 1844.
NO. 2.

Biographical.

JOHN TRASK.

Before passing from this early period in the history of Sabbath discussion in England, mention ought to be made of Mr. John Trask, who declared himself for the keeping of the Sabbath somewhat earlier than Theophilus Brabourne, whose history was given in our last. It was in the time of James I. and Archbishop Laud, under whose direction the Book of Sports for Sunday was published in 1618, that Trask began to speak and write on the subject of the Sabbath. This man seems to have connected his views in regard to the Sabbath with some peculiarities respecting the use of meats, and the usurpations of the State in its connection with the Church. He evidently took high ground as to the sufficiency of Scripture to direct in religious services, and the duty of the State to impose nothing contrary to the Word of God. For these views he was called before the Star-Chamber. Considerable discussion respecting the claims of the Sabbath was had at his trial, in the course of which, Dr. Andrews, Bishop of Winchester, delivered a long speech on the subject, which has often been referred to since. From the positions which were taken by this influential divine, we may see in what estimation the institution was held, and what arguments it was thought necessary to use in opposition to the advocates of the Sabbath. Dr. Andrews says—and it is upon this assertion that he mainly relies:—"It hath ever been the church's doctrine, that Christ made an end of all Sabbaths, by his Sabbath in the grave; that Sabbath was the last of them." This assertion seems to have been made without any regard to the Scripture history of the matter, which shows that the Sabbath continued to be observed until the close of the canon, or to the belief of a great body of the church. However, being simply a declaration of the doctrine of the church, which it is always difficult to define with sufficient distinctness to deny, he might not have exposed himself to the charge of misrepresentation.—He further says, "that Sabbath had reference to the old creation, but in Christ we are a new creature, a new creation, and so too have a new Sabbath." In this way the new institution, under the title of Lord's day, was set apart from the original Sabbath, which alone had the support of divine authority. Such were the answers given to the positions taken by Trask at his trial, and by such means was it hoped to turn him from his attachment to the Sabbath. Of course one who had decided that the Scriptures were able to make him wise unto salvation, and that all religious observations must have a special warrant therein, could not be satisfied with such replies. Trask could not. He maintained still what he had at first declared, and received his censure in the Star-Chamber. Pagitt's Heresiography says, he "was sentenced, on account of his being a Sabbatarian, to be set upon the Pillory at Westminster, and from thence to be whipt to the Fleet, there to remain a prisoner for three years. Mrs. Trask, his wife, lay in Maiden Lane and the Gate House Prison fifteen years, where she died for the same crime."

In this place it may be well to mention, that from the appearance of Theophilus Brabourne's first book, until the organization of a Sabbath keeping church—a period of some twenty or thirty years—a large number of books on the subject of the Sabbath were published, each presenting it in some new light, and endeavoring either to oppose the Sabbatarian view, or to modify the strictness of the Puritanic notions, or to sustain the claims of the first day of the week. Among those books, the following were the most important and influential:—Declaration of the Sabbath, by Robert Cleaver, 1630; A learned Treatise of the Sabbath, by Edward Brerewood, 1630; Nicholas Byfield's Reply to Brerewood, and Brerewood's Rejoinder, 1632; Richard Byfield's Doctrine of the Sabbath, 1631; Bishop White's Reply to Theophilus Brabourne's second book, 1635; Dr. Peter Heylyn's History of the Sabbath, 1636; Dr. John Pocklington's "Sunday no Sabbath," 1636; Gilbert Ironside's Seven questions of the Sabbath, 1637; George Abbott's Vindication of the Sabbath, 1641; William Twiss on the Fourth Commandment, 1641; John Ley's "Sunday a Sabbath," and Reply to "Sunday no Sabbath," 1641. To these a large number more might be added. Sufficient, however, are here named, to show the character of the controversy, which was carried on with great earnestness, more than a dozen books having come from the press in a single year. Among the writers were men of considerable distinction, both in the church and in the State. All theological books of a polemical character seem to have been read with avidity; these with the rest. During this period some Sabbath keepers may be found who deserve a particular notice. Among them we can not omit the following:—

PHILIP TANDY.

Philip Tandy was educated in the established church of England, and became a minister of that church. Not being satisfied, however, in his connection with the establishment, he joined the Dissenters, and became a Seventh-day Baptist. He was unquestionably a man of piety and learning, and seems to have been remarkably active in promulgating his own views of the truth. For this reason he was charged with being "a great sectary." The principal field of his labors was in the northern part of England, where he held a number of disputes concerning his sentiments and did much to propagate them. A discussion was carried on by letters between him and a minister in York of considerable reputation. The following extract from one of these letters will serve to show the spirit of the man, and the feelings under which he wrote. No better evidence could be given of his earnestness and piety:—

"Let us lay aside tradition, custom, the reputation of learning, and all selfish respects; and let us speak and write so as knowing that we must shortly give an account to Jesus Christ for all that we build, whether it be hay or stubble, gold or wood. For my part, I am confident that within a few years I shall see him whom my soul loveth, and much will it go to my heart, if I oppose the truth or maintain an error. Sir, let us look about us; the vail is not yet taken off. In something most good men have been blinded. It may be in this for one. It is good to be tenderly jealous. Pardon me that I thus exhort you. I see so many temptations that strongly invite even godly men to contend for pedobaptism, and so far do I see, also, into mystery of Antichrist's sitting in the temple of God as God, that I cannot but give a caution to the godliest man upon earth who undertakes the defence of this practice."

In the letter which followed this, Mr. Tandy went into an explanation and vindication of his own views concerning the ordinance of baptism and the observance of the Sabbath as required by the fourth commandment. It is not known what was the result of this controversy. Mr. Tandy was living in 1646—about the time that a number of works on the subject of the Sabbath appeared, among which was Hezekiah Woodward's "Lord's day the Saint's Holy Day," Chafie's "Brief Tract on the Fourth Commandment," and Fisher's "Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians." At what time he died we do not now know.

Religious.

For the Sabbath Recorder.

PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

INTRODUCTORY LETTER.

Bro. Utter,—I have been requested to publish some account of the manner in which I was led to embrace the seventh day as the Sabbath of the Lord. If it should meet your approbation, I choose to do so through the medium of the Sabbath Recorder.

My parents being of the Baptist denomination, and I having been a member of the same for twenty-five years, and more than half that time an accredited minister among them, all my preferences and prepossessions were with their peculiarities, as churches of the Lord Jesus Christ. If there was one peculiarity that I esteemed above another, it was this, viz., "We believe that the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are the infallible Word of God, and the only and sufficient rule of faith and practice." I never received any confession of faith as authoritative, but only as explanatory. I believed firmly, that if there were a Christian people upon the earth that had kept the faith pure, from the days of the Apostles, and had not symbolized with the errors of the Church of Rome, in her idolatrous and adulterous course, that people was the Baptist denomination. If there was any thing in my religious privileges in which I gloried, it was in having never been deceived by the working of that mystery of iniquity. I was sensible there were errors among them; but regarded them as the errors of fallible human nature, and not as constitutional departures from the doctrine and discipline of the Holy Scriptures; some of them superinduced by too familiar alliance with their more erroneous Pedobaptist neighbors, and hence immediately, though not directly, the effects of that mystery of iniquity which was predicted as to deceive all nations. Holding these sentiments, I have for a number of years supposed they might yet know the way of the Lord more perfectly—and for years I have labored and prayed so to know it, and be able to teach it to others.

I have on several occasions found that it is not always an easy matter to throw off early and strong prepossessions, to follow the truth with godly simplicity. Yet it has been the purpose of my soul so to do. The words of the Lord Jesus to his disciples, saying, "Call no man master;" "Call no man father;" have for years been so deeply impressed upon my heart, that I have scrupulously refused to call myself Calvinist, Arminian, Fullerite, or after any other human name. Yet I have my preferences in reading and choosing the sentiments of those great men.

The first time I was disturbed upon the subject of the Sabbath was about seven years ago, when a tract called the "Investigator," was sent me by Elder William Green, although I had never seen that brother. I read it, and was much disturbed by the arguments it presented for a few days; I wished then that we could have something more explicit upon the change of the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week, than the New Testament afforded. Not doubting, however, but that the change was of divine authority, I satisfied myself with the "abundant apostolic example" supposed to be in the New Testament, and said, if the Pedobaptists could produce as strong examples for infant sprinkling as I could for keeping the first day of the week as a Sabbath, I would admit its validity. I would not dare to say so now. Thus I quieted, rather than satisfied my mind, and had no farther concern on the subject, until August of last year. About that time I bought Neander's History of the Christian Religion and Church during the first three centuries. I read it with much satisfaction, as the work of an able and candid historian, who takes a philosophical view of the events and circumstances of society, which operated to give character to those early ages; and which, like acorns of our sturdy oaks, struck their roots deep enough to raise a forest whose trunks have stood the blasts of fifteen hundred winters, and yet throw their shade over the present day. In the section on Christian worship and festivals, I was greatly surprised to find the following statement, viz., "Opposition to Judaism introduced the particular festival of Sunday very early indeed into the place of the Sabbath. . . . . The festival of Sunday, like all other festivals, was always only a human ordinance, and it was far from the intentions of the Apostles to establish a divine command in this respect, far from them, and from the early Apostolic Church, to transfer the laws of the Sabbath to Sunday. Perhaps at the end of the second century a false application of this kind had begun to take place; for men appear by that time to have considered laboring on Sunday as a sin." I was the more surprised at this statement, as I found Neander was not a Sabbath-keeper. This, said I, is placing the Lord's day on papal, puseyite, and pedobaptist ground. I have never observed it on that ground. I have ever believed that the laws of the Sabbath were, by divine appointment, transferred to the first day of the week! Is it possible that Neander here relates facts? Have I no better foundation for Sunday-keeping than the hierarchists have for their Christmas, and Easter, and Ascension days? I must read further and examine this subject. I read Fuller, Paley, Wilson's two sermons, Buck, Doddridge, Nevins, Archbishop Whateley, and Dr. Humphrey, with a number of anonymous pieces on the same subject, and I was astonished to find every one of these great men taking in substance the same ground, viz., that there is no express command in the New Testament for the change from the seventh to the first day of the week, and supporting the practice from inferences, and analogical reasonings on particular events. Not having veneration large enough to bow to their great names, I was fairly stranded upon a lonely shore, without pilot or compass, and no guide but the truthful chart of Revelation. And the more I examined the New Testament, the more I found it against me, and plainly teaching the perpetuity of the holy Sabbath of the Decalogue. At this time I was not acquainted with a single Seventh-day Christian. But a bookseller in Reading, Pa., (where I resided) sent me a copy of the "Address of the Seventh-day Baptists to the Baptists of the United States." This was in the month of October, and was peculiarly opportune to my state of mind. I read it with avidity; and was fully convinced of the truth of its sentiments; but did not dare instantly to submit my mind to the claims of argument, without a thorough and repeated Bible investigation of the subject; as independently of extrinsic considerations as possible.

I suffered for some time that deep mental anguish which attends a conscientious mind, where enlightened judgment conflicts with all the inclinations, swayed by interests, expectation, and the kindliest associations of life. If ever an anxious mariner sailed tremblingly between Sylla and Charybdis, surely this was my condition at this time. To contend for the observance of Sunday without Bible authority, I could not; to embrace the no-Sabbath theory, I dare not; this was too dark and downward a leap for me to hazard, and the former was too disloyal and dishonest a course for me to pursue in the name of the King of Saints. I did, however, for a time indulge a forlorn hope, that I might find some way of reconciling the matter so as to appear consistent without leaving the denomination.—But accustomed to speak the honest sentiment of my heart, I found it materially influenced my prayers and preaching, and produced an embarrassment and a burden I could not bear. I commenced keeping the Sabbath alone. I then opened my mind to my wife, and happily succeeded in making a convert of her. But who knows how we felt, with a family of eight children, and no earthly resource but my salary for their support! Then it was I felt the preciousness of faith in a promise keeping God. Dark indeed were my prospects; but in keeping his commands, and trusting to his promises, we found great peace. And blessed be his holy name, we have lacked no good thing.

I visited the German Seventh-day Baptists at Ephrata in Lancaster Co., Pa., opened a correspondence with you, and in the month of Feb. 1844, received an invitation from the church in Shiloh, N. J., to visit them, which led to my union with them in church relation. In the month of April, I removed my family there for a temporary residence, while I should itinerate among the churches that keep the Sabbath day.

Instead of giving you in this letter the immatured views I formed of the Sabbath question, while going through the foregoing exercises, I propose to send you a series of letters upon the subject, as it appears to me after more mature reflection.

Yours affectionately,
Samuel Davison.

We commend the following article to the attention of any who may openly deny the sufficiency of God's word, or may have secret misgivings as to the wisdom of relying wholly upon it. The narrative shows by what apparently trivial circumstances Divine Providence sometimes secures the greatest results. Instances of the kind might be more frequently witnessed, if Christians would honor their Bibles by practical illustrations of their faith in them. Dr. Baird, the author of the piece, was for a considerable time laboring in France in connection with a Society organized to promote vital religion in those countries where it once prevailed.

THE CHEVALIER OF THE LEGION OF HONOR AND THE BIBLE.

On a Sunday in the summer of 1835, while attending the French Protestant Chapel in the city of Paris, which with my family I was in the habit of frequenting when not occupied in preaching, a gentleman and his wife came in, and took seats immediately before me. My attention was soon called to the appearance and conduct of these persons. They acted at first, like those who had not been in the habit of attending a place of public worship. Every thing seemed strange to them. But when the service commenced, I remarked that they listened with deep attention. During the sermon, as well as the sweet hymns which were used on this occasion, tears in abundance rolled down their cheeks. The text was, "I have set the Lord always before me." The minister was the excellent pastor, Audebez, one of the best French preachers in Paris. Sunday after Sunday, they came to the chapel, until they could no longer forbear to speak to Mr. Audebez, and ask him to visit them. He went, and they told him the following history of their lives.

Having a little property, they lived with great simplicity in a retired part of the city, devoting much of their time to reading, and seeking such amusements as that great capital so abundantly furnished to prevent men from thinking of their immortal interests. Year after year thus passed away. They frequented no church, for their minds were imbued with the infidelity which prevails among so many of their countrymen.

One day, the Chevalier, as he passed through a street, saw a colporteur selling Bibles. Inquiring the price, he was struck with its being so inconsiderable. He resolved to purchase one. Carrying it home, he told his wife what he had done. "Why did you buy it?" said she. "Are you not aware that no one in France believes the Bible, especially in respectable circles?" "That is true," said he, "but as it was so cheap, I thought I would buy it as a piece of antiquity, comme piece d' antiquite," as he expressed it. With this explanation his wife was satisfied, and they sat down to its perusal. In their progress through the first part of it they were greatly amused with the old stories which they found. But while reading the book of Psalms, they became awakened to a deep sense of their sins; and then they began to read with earnestness. They read it through and through—they prayed to God to have mercy on them. Month after month rolled away. At length they found peace in believing, and immediately commenced the worship of God in their family, for they were wholly ignorant of the religious world.

As soon as they found Christ, they regarded it as their duty to inquire whether there were any in Paris who knew any thing of the wonderful religion which they had found in their Bible. For this purpose they went to a Roman Catholic Church in their neighborhood. It was High Mass. They tarried till the service was about half concluded, when the wife said to her husband, "let us go home; these people do not know the Great God of our Bible." They went home, and for months seemed to have given up all expectation of finding any one who was acquainted with this religion.

At length the woman having occasion to enter a shop to buy some article, endeavored to persuade the person who kept it to purchase a Bible. "Oh," said she, "the Bible is a beautiful thing, la Bible est une belle chose." As she said this a pious lady came in and added, "Yes the Bible is a beautiful thing; but the preaching of the gospel is another beautiful thing." "I can readily believe it," said the wife of the Chevalier, "but where can one find it in Paris?" "Oh," said the other, "if you will go to such a street," giving the name, "and to such a number, and ascend to the third story, you will there find a chapel, and may hear the preaching of the gospel." They went the following Sunday, and there I met them under the circumstances just related.

How strikingly does this narrative illustrate the utility and importance of distributing the Scriptures! Here we find a family made acquainted with the great salvation by the perusal of the Bible. I have known an instance, in which one New Testament was the means under the divine blessing of the conversion of five individuals in a village in the eastern part of France. Who then that loves God's word, would not do all in his power, to place it in the possesion of the millions who are destitute of it in France, and other Roman Catholic countries.

And what a convincing proof of the sufficiency of the sacred Scriptures to enlighten, convert, and sanctify the hearts of men, when attentively read! Here we have an instance in which the reading of God's word without the aid of notes, comments, or "traditions of men," brought two souls to a clear knowledge of eternal life, and instructed them in the duties of a Christian family. What an illustration of the truth of the Psalmist—"The entrance of thy word giveth light, it giveth understanding to the simple."—Chr. Fam. Mag.

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS.

We clip the following from one of Mr. Cheever's lectures on the Pilgrim's Progress. They are instructive paragraphs drawn from the trials to which Bunyan represents the pilgrim as exposed in the Valley of the Shadow of Death.

DISCIPLINE.

Sweet are the uses of adversity! In God's hand indeed they are; when he puts his children into the furnace of affliction, it is that he may thoroughly purge away all their dross. Every pilgrim expects of Christ that by his love's constraining power he will subdue the sins and hidden evils of the heart, and give the soul rest and relief from its corruptions all the way of its pilgrimage. Yet every pilgrim in turn has to go through this Valley, has to learn by himself both the dreadful evils of his heart, and the power of temptation, and the greatness of deliverance by the almighty power and love of the Saviour. He cannot learn this by hearing others tell it to him; God must teach him by the precious costly way of personal discipline. He can no more come to the stature of a perfect man in Christ Jesus without this discipline, than a babe could grow up to manhood without learning at first to creep, then to walk, then to speak, to read, to exercise all its faculties. The great discipline which we need as pilgrims is mostly the experience of our own weakness, and the art of finding our strength in Christ; but it is astonishing what severe treatment is oftentimes necessary to teach this, apparently the simplest and most obvious of all lessons, but yet the deepest and most difficult to be learned.

AN AWFUL PICTURE GALLERY.

When conscience takes a man in hand, and leads him up and down through the gallery of his own remembered sins, and stops at this picture and that, and points out shades and colorings that he never saw before, and sometimes darkens the room, and takes down a vivid transparency of guilt, and holds it before the fire to his vision, so that his past life seems to burn before him, it does not take long in such employment to make the room seem walled with retributive flames, and peopled with condemning fiends. Without the sense of God's forgiving mercy in Christ, such employment makes a man enter the Valley of the Shadow of Death, and there, though he may always have thrown ridicule upon these things among his boon companions, yet there, alone with himself, the sights which he sees, and the sounds which he hears are intolerable.

When the child of God, from whatever cause, wanders into this Valley, and has the face of God hidden from him, then the universe to him is covered with gloom; then the dead weight of anxiety, as the shadow of sepulchral mountains, is on its spirit; he enters into darkness, and is wandering on the borders of despair. God hides his face, and we are troubled. The gloomy, awful solemnity and coldness, that like a twilight pall enshrouded the earth in a deep eclipse of the sun at noonday, making all nature to shudder, and the animals to cry out with terror, do faintly image forth the spiritual coldness and gloom of the soul, when the face of God is hidden from it. That eclipse forebodes to the soul the blackness of darkness for ever. Hence the earnest cry of David, Hide not thy face from me, lest I become like them that go down to the pit.

MARTIN LUTHER'S ACTIVITY.

The following facts, from Prof. Stowe's article in the Biblical Repository on the writings of Luther, show the activity of this wonderful man.

From 1517 to 1526, the first ten years of the Reformation, the number of his publications was three hundred; from 1527 to 1536, the second decade, the number was two hundred and thirty-two; and from 1537 to 1546, the year of his death, the number was one hundred and eighty-three.—His first book was published in November, 1517, and he died in February, 1546—an interval of 29 years and 4 months. In this time he published seven hundred and fifteen volumes—an average of more than twenty-five a year, or once a fortnight of his public life. He did not go through the manual labor of all this writing, it is true, for many of his published works were taken down from his lips by his friends; and it is also true, that several of his volumes were small enough in size to be denominated pamphlets; but many of them, also, are large and elaborate treatises. In the circumstances in which he wrote, his translation of the Bible alone would have been a gigantic task, even if he had had a lifetime to devote to it.—Puritan.

The advantage of living consists not in length of days, but in the right improvement of them.

To be a successful reprover, first convince men by substantial deeds of kindness, that you love them.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, JULY 4, 1844.

☞ The publication office of this paper is at No. 9 Spruce Street, first door below the Tribune Buildings, and five doors from Nassau Street. Our friends will find there all the publications of the New York Sabbath Tract Society, the Address of the General Conference to the Baptists, the Minutes, etc.

☞ Those who may wish to see the Editor will find him at the office between 2 and 5 o'clock P. M.

THE LORD'S DAY NOT THE SABBATH.

It is becoming quite common, among a large class of religionists, to use the term Sabbath in application to the first day of the week, or Lord's day. An illustration of this may be found in an article which is going the rounds in the papers, inviting the "friends of the Christian Sabbath," to meet in Convention at Saratoga "to consult on the best means of promoting the due observance of the Lord's day." Here the terms Sabbath and Lord's day are used synonymously, and an impression is conveyed that they refer to one and the same institution. It is true the expression is 'the Christian Sabbath.' But if by this is meant the day which Christ and the early Christians observed, we defy any one to show that it was another day than the Sabbath of the fourth commandment and of the whole Bible—the seventh day of the week.—Did this form of expression occur only in notices of meetings and newspaper articles, where there would be little danger of misunderstanding, and no false doctrine taught, we should not take the trouble to speak of it. But when in grave treatises on the subject of the Sabbath, and in the set addresses of those who profess to be its firm friends, we find the same unwarrantable and deceptive use of language, we do not feel at liberty to hold our peace. We call it deceptive use of language; and we do so deliberately. For when men talk about a Christian Sabbath and a Jewish Sabbath, a first-day Sabbath and a seventh-day Sabbath, that so they may fix the name Sabbath upon the Lord's day, and then persuade people that all those texts of Scripture which speak of the Sabbath day are meant of the Lord's day, what else is this than deception? It is just as absurd and false to call the Lord's day the Sabbath, as it would be to call Sunday Saturday, or the first day of the week the last day of the week. Throughout the Old and New Testaments, there is no other weekly religious day called the Sabbath than the seventh day; nor is there the least intimation of any other weekly Sabbath than that which was commanded to be kept on the seventh day. One of three things, then, must be true in regard to this matter. Either, 1st. The fourth commandment must be still binding, just as it was given, and must require us to keep holy the seventh day of the week; or, 2d. That commandment must have been abrogated, and we left without any Sabbath; or, 3d. The same authority which at first commanded the observance of the seventh day, must have substituted some other day for the seventh, and transferred to that day the authority by which the seventh was originally enforced. It will not do to throw these three propositions together, and draw out from them the duty of observing the first day. This would be to confound and mislead those who could not analyze or reject the whole. It would be imposing too much upon the credulity of men, to ask of them, because a Sabbath was once enjoined and ought to be kept, therefore to observe the first day, which was not enjoined, and to neglect the seventh day which was enjoined. Such a request might affect some who yield implicitly to the authority of names, but it would certainly disgust others.

But let us examine some of the reasons which are commonly urged for calling Sunday, or Lord's day, the Sabbath.

1. It is said that the Sabbath signifies a rest; therefore the Lord's day, being a day of rest, may be called the Sabbath. In reply to this, we say, that when, by custom and common consent, any term is used to express a particular place or thing, it then becomes a proper name for that thing, and signifies only that thing to which it is applied. For instance, a tabernacle means a place of worship. Yet in New York, where this name is used to express a particular and well-known place of worship, it would be absurd and false to say you were at the Tabernacle, and mean the Church of the Messiah. So with the Sabbath; although the word strictly means a rest, yet after the Scriptures throughout the Old and New Testament have used this term, the Sabbath, to express a particular rest, which occurred on the seventh day, it would be foolish and deceptive to speak of the Sabbath and mean the first day of the week, or Lord's day.

We will further say, that if this argument be good for calling the first day the Sabbath, and if the fact of its being a rest day makes it the Sabbath, then may the Mahommedans properly call the sixth day the Sabbath, and the fact that they rest upon that day makes it the Sabbath. Yes; and those Mexican Indians, whom Cortes found keeping the fourth day, may properly call that day the Sabbath, and directly it is made such. Even those people in Guinea, whom Purchase describes as having a rest day, but which, says he, "they observe not upon our Sunday, nor upon the Jews' Sabbath day, but hold it upon Tuesday, the second working day of the week," may properly call that day the Sabbath, and straightway it becomes such.—Are the observers of the first day ready to rest upon such ground for calling Sunday the Sabbath, or to continue to call it Sabbath when there is no better? We hope not. And we feel bound, as those who respect the Bible, and dare not charge the Author of that Book with folly in calling the seventh day only the Sabbath, to protest against such abuse of the language of Scripture.

2. The second reason frequently offered, is, that the Lord's day comes in the room of the Sabbath, and may therefore properly be called the Sabbath. Aside from the fact that the Scriptures say not one word about a substitution of the one day for the other, it may be said in reply, that if the argument be good, then a pedobaptist should call baptism circumcision, the Lord's Supper should be called the Passover, and King Solomon should be called David.

3. A third reason alledged for calling Lord's day the Sabbath, is, because it has long been the practice of Christians to call it so. In answering to this assertion, it may be worth while to inquire what has been the practice of Christians in this matter. Few will deny, that wherever, in the New Testament, the word Sabbath refers to a weekly religious day, it is to the seventh day. Wherever the first day of the week is spoken of, it is under its appropriate title. For nearly the whole of the first century, then, we have the testimony of Scripture that the name Sabbath belonged exclusively to the seventh day.—During the succeeding four hundred years, there were large numbers, both in the Eastern church, about Constantinople, and in the Western church, about Rome, who kept the Sabbath. And when ecclesiastical councils, in the fourth and fifth centuries, began to enact laws against them, they condemned Sabbath-keeping altogether. From this it is apparent, that the idea of calling Sunday the Sabbath had not then entered their minds.—What day was meant when the term Sabbath was used for five hundred years later still, the learned Dr. Peter Heylyn has told us in the following words:—"Wherever, for a thousand years and upwards, we meet with Sabbatum, in any writer of what name soever, it must be understood of no day but Saturday." Indeed, if we search all the books which have been written on this and kindred subjects up to the time of the Reformation, we shall not find that Sunday was to any considerable extent regarded as the Sabbath or called by that name. Dr. Richard Whately, Archbishop of Dublin, in a late work on the subject of the Sabbath, says, "in fact, the notion against which I am contending, [that the fourth commandment binds Christians to hallow the Lord's day, and that it may be called the Sabbath,] seems, as far as I can collect, to have originated with the Puritans not much more than 200 years ago; and to have been for a considerable time confined to them; though it was subsequently adopted by some members of our church."

So far is it from being true, that the Lord's day has been universally called the Sabbath among Christians, that even now, by the best authorities upon such subjects, it is not called Sabbath at all. The Records of England up to the present time invariably call the seventh day the Sabbath. In the Journals of the House of Lords, whatever is entered as having been done on the seventh day, or Saturday, is under the date, Die Sabbati, upon the Sabbath day. The same is true of the House of Commons. The Rules and Records of the King's Bench, and the Latin Records in the Court of Exchequer and in Chancery, do likewise call the Seventh day the Sabbath. These things may be known by any who will take the trouble to examine; and they show how groundless and erroneous is the supposition to which we are replying. Indeed, in many languages the seventh day is called by a name which indicates its Sabbatic character. In Low Dutch it is called rust daugh, the day of rest. In English, French, Italian Spanish, Portuguese, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, it has its right name, the Sabbath, the day of rest. It would help to understand Scripture and to settle differences, if men would give to the day its proper and Scriptural title. This argument for the propriety of calling Sunday, or Lord's day, the Sabbath, because of the long-established custom, rests upon a real or wilful ignorance of the facts in the case. These facts do not at all support the practice, but give their whole weight against it.

—Now let us look at the consequences of calling the Lord's day by the name of the Sabbath. It has given occasion for Papists to charge Protestants with neglecting the Scriptures to follow their traditions. The Papists claims, that the change of the Sabbath is the work of their own church, and that the Scriptures nowhere warrant the keeping of Sunday, much less the calling it by the name of the Sabbath. Who will deny this latter position?—Again, it has led some earnest and pious men to charge the teachers of religion with "befooling and misleading the people," If proof of this is wanted, it may be found to any extent in books written on the subject in the seventeenth century. The charge is there distinctly and frequently made, of designedly using deceptive arguments.

We will not undertake to say, that those who are accustomed to speak in a manner so likely to deceive, design to do that. But we will say, that such would be the natural effect of their language. It would leave upon the minds of many an impression, that they were not only bound to pay a respect to the first day of the week, which has obtained the name of Lord's day, but that the fourth commandment required of them this respect. For a religious teacher knowingly to make this impression, is to be guilty of directly fostering error. Nay, more—if he should call the Lord's day the Sabbath, and refer to the fourth commandment as inculcating the duty of observing that day,—or should, without direct reference to that law, express himself in such a way as to leave his hearers to suppose—(what most of them would, if not told to the contrary)—that it required the observance of the first day, he would be wanting in faithfulness to the truth, and exposed to the denunciation of those who add to or take from it.—And yet it is not a month since, that we heard an "orthodox" minister, in an assembly composed of the ministers and members of four or five "orthodox" churches, convened for the purpose of promoting the observance of the first day of the week, earnestly exhort his hearers always to use the term Sabbath in speaking of Sunday. And what was his grand reason for this? It was because those who observe the seventh day always use the term Sabbath in application to that day, and make an impression thereby. A grand reason, surely!—because Sabbath-keepers use the term Sabbath to describe that day which all Scripture and ancient history describes by that title, therefore observers of the first day ought arbitrarily to take that name for their holy day. One would think that the "children of light" had become as wise as the "children of this generation." But seriously, if it has come to this, that a religious institution of so much importance as the Sabbath, must be propped up by such means, it is time that the friends of the institution were awake to the subject. A man of wisdom has said, "We cannot think that God will honor the institutions of men, however they may be dignified with the specious names of useful, decent, agreeable, or prudent contrivances; yet if they are an addition to his system, will he not say, who hath required these things at your hands?"

We are aware that many will think that at a time when the prevailing tendency is to disregard all sacred time, it were better not to say these things, but to leave men under an impression that the law of God required the observance of the first day of the week, and sanctions calling that the Sabbath. But this prevailing disregard of the day of rest, is a principal reason with us for urging an examination of the foundation upon which we build. Common prudence, to say nothing of Christian sincerity, would require us, in such circumstances, to place the duty upon its true ground. If it will not stand there, it will stand nowhere. It is a dangerous experiment to encourage or connive at misconceptions in a point like this. And even if we felt assured that it would be right, we are fully convinced that it would be inexpedient. It is exceedingly dangerous to acknowledge an unsound principle, although it may promise to conduct us to desirable results, or, at the worst, to produce no bad effects. It ought to be remembered, that it was in apparently trivial and harmless points that those false principles were allowed, which have infused their poison into the Catholic and other churches—a poison which, commencing with the extremities, has worked its way rapidly towards the vitals, and diffused its effects through the whole system. It is not, then, a matter of small moment. The most important consequences may result from baptizing a day of human invention with a name which the Scriptures apply exclusively to one appointed of God.

A letter has been shown us from Bro. THOMAS B. BROWN, from which it appears that he is delivering a series of lectures on the subject of the Sabbath at Milton, Pa. Four have already been delivered, and others are to succeed in due order. A more appropriate time than now to present this subject to the attention of the Christian public, could hardly occur; and we are glad to see that our brother is availing himself of the present interest to explain the claims of the institution as originally given, and that the people are disposed to listen to a full exhibition of the subject. A fault in all the efforts which have been made in connection with this institution has been an exclusiveness which ill becomes the advocates of a religious institution. We are sorry to see, that in some of the meetings which have been lately held, something of this spirit has been manifested. When there is an unwillingness to examine both sides of the question, it is quite certain that the true spirit of religious reform has not yet been attained. Not until men love the truth better than their own theories about it, will anything lasting be accomplished. We are gratified at the evidence, on the part of the people of Milton, of a desire to know the truth.—One paragraph of Bro. B.'s letter we will quote, because we like the spirit which it breathes. Speaking of the late convention in Harrisburgh, to promote the observance of Sunday, he says:—

> I believe they adjourned without making any arrangements to invoke legislative aid. So long as these conventions confine their efforts to moral suasion, we may let them alone, and content ourselves with diffusing the true light among the people. But when they attempt to call in the aid of the civil law I think we should make a respectful but firm remonstrance to their proceedings. I perceive that a National Convention is to be held at Baltimore in November. What course we as a denomination ought to take in reference to it, I am rather at a loss to say. The Convention will no doubt be called exclusively of those who are friendly to Sunday, and it might therefore be a breach of modesty for us to obtrude ourselves upon it as members. For Sunday keepers have a right to pursue their own operations in their own way, as well as Sabbath keepers. But could not our Conference prepare some memorial to lay before that Convention, which might serve at least to excite attention, and lead to investigation? Can we not, by some pointed appeal, make them sensible of the unreasonableness of calling on community at large to hallow the first day of the week, until the claims of that day to sanctification have been thoroughly discussed, and put beyond all doubt? Let us try.

SUNDAY KEEPING IN NEW YORK.

Since the introduction to office of the new Mayor and Common Council of New York, considerable effort has been made to prevent the open violation of those laws for the observation of Sunday which have long existed upon the statute books. These efforts are mainly in closing porter houses, preventing the hawking of papers, the sale of articles in the street, etc. One or two meetings have been held for the purpose of expressing sympathy with the movement, and encouraging the authorities. While these steps have been taken on one side, counter meetings have been called on the other side, to denounce the whole movement and deliberate upon the best means of putting a stop to it. Of course meetings of the kind, got up without any reference to religious obligation or considerations, as the meetings of both sides seem to have been, exhibit much that is lamentable to behold. There is need enough of reform in regard to this matter, as any one may see who passes through the streets in which grog-shops are located, or who visits any of the places of public resort. But it is to be feared, that the spirit of these movements is such as to defeat the object. When an attempt is made to force men into what they look upon as religious measures, it is very common to see opposition excited, and many things done purposely to show contempt. Is there nothing of the kind in this case? And is it not likely that a re-action will be seen? Perhaps the opposition meetings, and the greater rush to get from the city to the country, which is said to be manifest, may indicate this. All history has shown, that a lasting reformation of morals cannot be secured by other than religious influences. It is to be feared, that in the case under consideration, the necessity of religious influence has been overlooked. While, therefore, we are gratified to see the manifestations of desire for improvement, and cannot but discountenance all attempts to combine in opposing them, we have no hope whatever that they will result in permanent improvement.

LOST CREEK, VA.—By a letter from R. C. Bond, we are informed that the church in Lost Creek "has enjoyed a very prosperous state of religion for some time past." Considerable discussion had been raised in that section respecting the Sabbath, in the course of which an opportunity had been given to present the claims of the seventh day. An anxiety is expressed that some one may be appointed to perform missionary labor in that vicinity.

DEATH OF REV. MR. SHENSTON.—It becomes our painful duty to announce the decease of Rev. JOHN BRITTAIN SHENSTON, who died at his residence in Fulham, near London, on Sunday evening, May 12, at the age of about 70 years. He had been in feeble health for more than a year past, and at one time it was thought doubtful whether he would again be able to discharge his ministerial duties. It was his privilege, however, to continue in the exercise of his office until near the close of his days. His last illness, which confined him to his room for about a month, was very painful; but notwithstanding this, he was in a happy frame of mind, and his end was most peaceful.

Mr. Shenston was for more than forty years a member of the Board of Baptist Ministers in London, and the father of that Board. Soon after the death of Mr. Robert Burnside, in 1826, he was called to the pastoral care of the Cripplegate Seventh-day Baptist Church, gathered by Francis Bampfield. He labored as pastor of that church for nearly eighteen years, until he was called to join the church triumphant. We deeply sympathize with our bereaved friends in this severe affliction. May the Head of the Church protect that little flock, thus deprived of its beloved pastor.

We hope to be able to present a full notice of the life of the deceased hereafter.

"And she threw in two mites."

We have just received a happy commentary upon this text, from a sister in New Jersey, which we will venture to give to our readers in her own language:

> "In reading the Sabbath Recorder I learn that Eld. Scott is again in the field and calling for Sabbath Tracts, &c. I feel anxious to do something in the good cause of spreading light and truth abroad. But I do not feel able to join the tract society, as my only way of obtaining money is by the labor of my hands, and if I mistake not, the Constitution requires five dollars annually. I wish, however, to throw in my 'mite,' and send you three dollars to pay for Sabbath publications to be sent to Eld Scott when there is opportunity."

What better illustration of the passage than this can be given? Our Saviour has said of such an example, "Of a truth I say unto you she hath cast in more than they all." Who will "go and do likewise?"

STATISTICS OF SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.

A friend has sent us the following Table, which, he says, was prepared for his own "benefit and satisfaction." It may gratify and instruct others to see the gradual but steady increase of the "handful" of brethren, whose peculiar views probably present a greater barrier to accessions than do those of any other people.

NUMBER OF COMMUNICANTS in the churches connected with the Seventh Day Baptist General Conference, from year to year since* 1807.

Year.	Com.	Year.	Com.	Year.	Com.	Year.	Com.
1807,	1648	1816,	2056	1825,	2878	1834,	4355
1808,	1744	1817,	2063	1826,	2833	1835,	4584
1809,	1748	1818,	2143	1827,	2832	1836,	4281
1810,	1738	1819,	1922	1828,	3035	1838,	4746
1811,	1675	1820,	2330	1829,	3587	1839,	5005
1812,	1804	1821,	2528	1830,	3462	1840,	5022
1813,	1893	1822,	2605	1831,	3970	1841,	5319
1814,	1953	1823,	2862	1832,	4170	1842,	5360
1815,	2066	1824,	2824	1833,	4364	1843,	6077

* There always have been Sabbath-keeping churches in this country not connected with the Conference.

F.

The Jews in France.—A report has been made by the Minister of Justice and Public Worship in France, on the necessity of regulating the mode of establishing Jewish consistories in France, the election of their rabbies, &c. It is followed by a royal ordonnance of great length, fixing the various points connected with this subject. By this ordonnance a consistory is to be established in each department where the Jewish population amounts to 2,000, and when this is not the case their number is to be made up from the adjoining department or departments. The central consistory is to be in Paris.

ITEMS.

ANTI-SLAVERY MEETING IN LONDON.—A correspondent writing from London under date of May 17, says:—

"We attended this morning, at Exeter Hall, a meeting of the British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society. Such an assemblage I think I never witnessed, and the platform was as well filled as the Hall. . . . . There were clergymen of all denominations. By some of the speakers your country was terribly cut up on account of the existence of slavery there. But you were ably defended by two gentlemen from New York. The famous O'Connell was present, and was received with the most deafening applause. He made a noble speech, and was almost overcome by his enthusiastic reception. In the absence of Lord Brougham, who was expected, Samuel Gurney took the chair."

—

A GOOD RULE WORKS BOTH WAYS.—The editor of the Christian Watchman, referring to the fact that many Millerites have become Sabbath-keepers, thinks it illustrates the truth that errorists and ultraists have a close affinity. Strange that it did not occur to the editor, that Mr. Miller and many of his leading coadjutors are of his own beloved Baptist church, and that if his "truth" be applicable in the case it proves a closer affinity between that church and the errorists than between the errorists and Sabbath-keepers.

—

It is probable that the proceedings of the late Methodist General Conference, in the case of Bishop Andrews, will lead to a separation between the northern and southern portions of the church. The delegates from the slave-holding states have addressed their brethren, speaking of their proscription, and proposing a division.

—

The Baptist Record informs us, that the Baptists in New Orleans are making an effort to build a house of worship in that city.

—

The nett proceeds of a late Sunday School Floral Procession in Philadelphia, amounted to $500, which is to be appropriated to purchasing Sunday School Libraries for the Mississippi Valley.

—

On Wednesday, June 19, Mr. and Mrs. Devan sailed from New York for China, as missionaries under the direction of the Board of Managers of the Baptist General Convention of the United States for Foreign Missions.—On Sabbath, June 22, four young men, Messrs. Culbertson, Loomis, Lloyd, and Harper, sailed for China, to labor as missionaries for the Presbyterian Board of Missions. This Board has already in China one minister, two physicians, and a printing press in operation. By the manner in which this reinforcement is to be stationed, it is said, they will have access to one hundred and forty millions of souls.

—

It is stated that in the six New England states there are 694 Sunday Schools, 59,000 scholars, and 12,000 volumes in libraries. The number of conversions in these schools during the year was 2,174.

—

The money contributed to the London Society for Meliorating the Condition of the Jews, from March 20 to March 30, 1844, a period of ten days, amounted to £9354 5s. 8d., or about $45,000.

—

BAPTIST BOARD OF MISSIONS.—Eighteen Vice Presidents were elected at the late Convention, seven of whom are from the slave holding States; of the remaining eleven, though from the northern and middle States, only one is known to be an abolitionist.

—

It is stated in the London Witness that a woman in the Island of Madeira has beed sentenced to death for denying the worship of the Virgin Mary and the doctrine of transubstantiation. Memorials on the subject had been addressed to Lord Aberdeen by the people of Edinburgh. Madeira is a Portuguese possession.

—

The following is going the rounds in the papers: "The friends of the Christian Sabbath in the State of New York, are hereby respectfully requested to meet in Convention at Saratoga Springs, on Wednesday, the 28th of August, at ten o'clock, A. M., to consult on the best ways and means of promoting by example, by the diffusion of information, and other kind moral influences, the due observance of the Lord's day." We wonder if those who should say, "The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God," would be regarded as friends of the Christian Sabbath. It is hoped that some such will be present to learn.

—

A DEFENCE OF THE PROTESTANT BIBLE, as published by the Bible Societies, against the charge that it does not contain the whole of the word of God, or Sacred Scriptures, by 139 chapters. New York: Leavitt, Trow, & Company.

This pamphlet is, as it purports to be, a collection of the opinions and arguments of the most approved ancient writers respecting the canon of the Old Testament Scriptures. It is written in a clear and forcible style, and cannot fail to be an acceptable offering to those who, though anxious to do so, have not the time or helps necessary to a thorough examination of the history of the canon of Scripture. The work is especially adapted to the present time, when so much is said about the Protestant in distinction from the Catholic Bible.

For the Sabbath Recorder.

PRECEPT vs. PRACTICE.

Solomon concludes his wise sayings by a sentiment most comprehensive, as well as most consistent with sound Christian doctrine: "Fear God, and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." Few will deny that it is the duty of all men to keep the commandments of God; but whether this constitutes the whole duty of men, seems not to be so well understood. There appears to be, at least in the minds of some, a question whether there be not a deficiency, which some inferior authority may supply, yet which mere men may not venture to assume; as though some intermediate dignity should be recognized, not only as an interpreter of the Sacred Canon, but as having power to qualify, or change the laws of God.—This assumption on the part of Papists in favor of the church, though not admitted by Protestants in theory, appears nevertheless to be tacitly complied with in practice. The Roman Psalters and Catechisms, omitting the second commandment, make the third to read thus, Remember to sanctify the holy days. Having decided with grave authority, that the Sabbatical feature of the original precept was essentially Jewish, the Church assumes the power of instituting numerous festivals, especially Sunday, (dies solis,) or Lord's day, as fit inheritors of the spirit of the original Sabbatic Law.

Papists openly advocate the doctrine of the church's supremacy over the Laws of God, and deny that the Scriptures are a rule of faith and practice. They maintain that the church ONLY has power and authority to impose a rule of life; consequently they are under no embarrassment when the laws of God conflict with their practice. The Church, THE CHURCH OF ROME, they say, is the RULE, and "there can be no church without a [Roman] Bishop," echoes her eldest daughter, the church of England, thereby vindicating her exclusive power, and testifying against those who refuse obedience to her mandates.

Papists claim for the church of Rome the right to change "Times and Laws" without express authority from Scripture, and charge Protestants with inconsistency in denying that right, while they religiously observe one of her chief festivals in place of the Sabbath of divine appointment. And why may we not conclude that Protestants are convicted of sin by their own rule of faith, in making that a working day which God has declared to be sacred, and in declaring that to be holy, which God appointed to be one of the six working days wherein man ought to do all his labor? Can Protestants well afford to pay such tribute to Papal supremacy? Can they hope to be relieved from the scourge of the man of sin, while they continue to sustain the assumptions of Roman power by their own practice? What will our political organizations amount to in opposing the inroads of the Roman political power, while we legislate to sustain her own unlawful enactments, and high-handed liberties with the holy law of God? Can we expect to succeed without God's blessing? Can His blessing be secured in this, while we refuse that blessing which He holds out by his promise to those who keep His Sabbath from polluting it? Protestants believe the Scriptures to contain all that is necessary to perfect the man of God in the knowledge of the Divine will; yet where shall we find the law repealing the least one of the ten precepts, or expressly qualifying the sense so as to admit of the desecration of the seventh day, or the substitution of another? The Old Testament says, "The Law of God is perfect." The New Testament says, "I came not to destroy the Law." "Do we then make void the law? God forbid." Man performs not his whole duty when he disregards the Seventh day; nor does he supply his deficiency by the observance of festivals instituted by a corrupt ecclesiastical power, even though consecrated to the memory of our Lord's resurrection. In the last day God will ask, "Who hath required this at your hands?" "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil."

Would to God it could be said, even of Protestants, "Here are they that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus." LUTHER.

LETTER FROM THE MILL YARD CHURCH, LONDON.

MR. EDITOR,—The following letter was received by the Eastern Seventh-day Baptist Association, and ordered to be printed, with its Minutes; but, for reasons deemed satisfactoy to the committee entrusted with their publication, it was omitted. If you will give it a place in your columns, you will doubtless confer a favor upon many who have expressed their desire to hear from that old but now feeble branch of Sabbath-keepers. Respectfully,

P. STILLMAN.

To the Churches of the Lord Jesus Christ, observing the Seventh Day Sabbath, constituting the Eastern Association of Churches of that order in the United States of America, The church of the same order, commonly called the Seventh Day General Baptist Church, or Sabbath-keeping Congregation, in Mill Yard, in Goodman's Fields, London, in Great Britain, sendeth greeting:

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS,

Having been certified under the hand of Brother A. D. Titsworth, the President of your late Assembly, holden at New Market, in New Jersey, in May last, and by your Secretaries, that your Brother George Benjamin Utter was then "appointed to perform a Missionary tour through England and Scotland," and was recommended to our confidence and esteem; and having read the printed Minutes of that Assembly, with much satisfaction; we received him into our fellowship as a Transient Member, accordingly to the ancient practice of our Church, at a Church Meeting holden 20th August; and he partook of the Lord's Supper with us, on the first Sabbath in September.

Our Brother Utter has preached several times, and conducted other parts of the worship, in our congregation, but has been more occupied in assisting our Brother Shenston, whose affliction for a long time past has been great, and who needed his help more than we.

In order to carry out the pious design of our Brother's mission as effectually as might be, we held a Conference with our sister church in London, on 17th September, when Brother Utter was requested to give two public discourses on the Morality and Perpetuity of the Sabbath, and to visit our Sabbath-keeping friends at Natton, in Gloucestershire, being the few remains of the once flourishing Tewkesbury Congregation. Brother Utter wished our Elder to join him in the former expedient, and the latter they have also undertaken together. At that Conference we unanimously requested Brother Utter to prolong his visit until next Spring; but his apprehension of the claims of duty at home prevailed on him to shorten his stay, which we would gladly have enjoyed longer.

Dear Christian friends, we sincerely thank you for your kind remembrance of us, and your sympathy with us in our low estate. Though much reduced in numbers, we are not discouraged, but persevere. To us it belongs to bear witness to God's truth, amidst much opposition and scorn: we have vast disadvantages and difficulties, yet we "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered unto the saints." For God's truth must prevail. Ye have given to us such a token of your Christian love, and of your devotion to the same holy cause, that we thank God continually for it; and trust that, by our glad reception and friendly treatment of your excellent Messenger, ye will understand how much we esteem your good will. Having long prayed for your welfare, we have at length rejoiced that God hath given to us, in the person of our beloved Brother, the happiness of holding fellowship with you; "and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ."

We greet you heartily in the Lord, and pray for your welfare in all things. Peace be with you! Farewell!

In the name and on the behalf of the Church, by order given 17th Oct. 1843,
WILLIAM HENRY BLACK,
Elder and Pastor.

London, England,
3d Nov. 1843.

General Intelligence.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

We intend to keep our readers informed of the leading foreign movements which are of general interest. Since the publication of our first number, an arrival brought one or two items of intelligence of some importance, which we will refer to, notwithstanding considerable time has elapsed.

DANIEL O'CONNELL and his compatriots had received their sentences as follows: Daniel O'Connell to be imprisoned for twelve calendar months, to pay a fine of £2000, and to enter into securities to keep the peace for seven years. These securities amount to £10,000. John O'Connell and five others are to be imprisoned nine calendar months, to pay a fine of £50, and to enter into securities to keep the peace for seven years—securities £2000 each. They were all conveyed to the Richmond Penitentiary, where they are to occupy the Governor's house. An address, prepared in anticipation of the sentence, was published, in which O'Connell exhorted all who loved him or the cause of Repeal, to keep the peace.

THE JEWS OF POLAND.—Advices contained in the Hamburgh papers of the 17th, and dated Polish Frontiers, May 10, state that the lamentation of the Jews in the kingdom of Poland is boundless at this moment, because the Government is seriously engaged in carrying into effect a measure which the Jews have hitherto hoped to avert—namely, to oblige them to do military service. Orders have just been received to levy the recruits in all the Governments, in the course of this month, and no longer to exempt the Jews.

A NEW EPIDEMIC.—Rome, May 5.—We are daily apprehensive here of the breaking out of an epidemic which, during several weeks past, has spread terror over a portion of the States of the Church. Its ravages are not confined to the valleys and other low parts of the country; on the contrary, it rages more especially among the inhabitants of mountainous districts. In the little town of Tivoli, containing about 9000 inhabitants, 90 persons died in the space of a week. The malady is generally supposed to be contagious, but of this fact there is no positive proof. In every case in which post mortem examination took place, there has been found congestion of the brain, as prior to, and in apoplexy.—Frankfort Zeitung.

LATER FROM CHINA.—Arrival of Mr. Cushing.—The brig Argyle, Captain Cooper, of Baltimore, arrived yesterday from Canton, having sailed thence on the 15th of March. The only important intelligence we have from that place, is the arrival of Mr. Cushing, the American Minister, who arrived at Hong Kong on the 5th of March, in good health. He was to proceed to Canton as soon as he could make the necessary arrangements to leave Hong Kong. The American Consul was making preparations to receive him at Canton with due honor. A liberty-pole was to be raised on the occasion.

Large store-houses had been built on the ground of the late fire, and the merchants were carrying on business in them.

There was very little business doing. Teas were scarce and high.—Tribune, June 29.

By a late arrival from St. Domingo, we learn that quiet prevails there. Business was beginning to revive, and the market was glutted with American produce.

From Hayti, intelligence is that although affairs were somewhat settled, it was thought tranquillity would not continue.

DOMESTIC.

The Floods at the West.—By the late dates from the Missouri and Mississippi, it seems that a second flood is upon them, which is still more disastrous than the first.

The St. Louis Republican of the 17th of June, says:

> The water, yesterday, had reached within a few inches of the highest point attained this spring, and nearly to the height attained in the freshets of 1823 and '26. All the rivers above are reported to be rising, but the principal rise is from the Missouri—supposed to be the June freshet from the mountains. It is probable that the present rise will exceed the previous one of this spring, and probably any ever known by the oldest inhabitants. It is impossible to estimate the damage done to individuals residing along the banks of the rivers. Whole farms have been laid desolate, and years of labor destroyed by the sweeping off of fences, the destruction of crops, &c.
>
> Boats from above report the Missouri, the Mississippi, and the Illinois and their tributaries, as all overflowing their banks, and still rising rapidly—spreading destruction and consternation among the inhabitants of the bottoms, whose losses will be great. Many of their farms are completely under water, their crops entirely destroyed, and their stock either carried off by the flood, or scattered over the country, where they will probably never be recovered.

Later advices give still worse pictures of the effects of the floods:

> The steamer West Wind, which left St. Louis on the evening of the 20th instant, brought news to Cincinnati that the Mississippi was four feet higher than at the late flood, being considerably above any other flood since the memory of man, and still rising rapidly; and what is more startling, a farther rise of ten feet was reported as coming out of the Missouri, and forty feet out of the Kansas, a main branch of that stream.
>
> Illinois town was completely under water; the ferry-boat crossing from St. Louis to the bluffs, a distance of ten miles. The loss of property is beyond all computation; buildings were floating down the Mississippi; also the bodies of cattle drowned upon the bottoms. Crops all along the rivers were entirely destroyed; in fact, such a calamity as has fallen upon the inhabitants of the low lands of the western rivers was never dreamed of by mortal man.
>
> The Missouri had risen several feet at St. Joseph in twenty-four hours, on the 13th. The crops, fences, and stock had been swept away, many buildings destroyed, and some lives lost. The Missouri Mail, on her trip down, was compelled to assist the inhabitants, drowning on the banks.
>
> The Illinois river is still rising; the water is up to the houses in Alton.
>
> The low lands below St. Louis are entirely covered with water. Houses in some parts of St. Louis have four feet water on the first floor. At the upper part of the levee, steamboats could discharge freight near about the roofs conveniently.

The St. Louis Reporter of the 20th, says:

> The river is still rising. Last evening it was a foot higher than it has been this season. The first floors of many stores on the levee are covered with water to the depth of two or three feet, and all of them are inundated. The water is now higher than it has ever been within the memory of any of those old citizens with whom we have conversed on the subject.

The St. Louis Republican of the 21st says: The rise in the river is assuming a most fearful aspect. Since Saturday it has been rising, and for the last twenty-four hours has risen at the average rate of half an inch an hour. When it is remembered that the river is now at nearly every point from three to six miles wide, and in many places nine, some idea may be formed of the immense volume of water which is pouring down upon us.

On Tuesday night we had a violent storm of rain and wind, and it continued to rain most of yesterday. The St. Croix, eight miles below Warsaw, during the approach of the storm, landed and made fast to a tree about 16 inches over. The wind twisted the tree off and it fell across the hurricane roof forward of the chimney, breaking in the roof and the boiler deck. The lines parted and the boat drifted into the stream.

St. Louis papers of the 22d, say that the river is still rising, and express the most serious apprehensions. In some places the water is rom four to five feet deep on the pavement. It is feared that New Orleans will be overflowed.

Trouble among the Mormons.—Great excitement has prevailed at Nauvoo for some time past, in consequence of the destruction of the press of the Nauvoo Expositor. It seems that the Expositor was a paper got up by some of the seceders from the regular party; and that when it was found to be telling rather too plain truths about Smith and his followers, the authorities voted it to be a nuisance, and sent their officers to destroy the establishment, which was faithfully done. Soon afterwards writs were issued at Carthage to arrest those who committed the outrage. At the same time an ordinance passed in the Council of Nauvoo, declaring that any who should attempt to arrest those persons should be imprisoned. This so exasperated the people that large meetings were held in different sections, and strong resolutions passed. A determination was expressed, that "if the Prophet and his adherents were not surrendered, a war of extermination should be waged." These meetings have increased the feeling to such an extent, as to create the most serious apprehensions. A St. Louis paper of the 20th June says, that at Nauvoo martial law has been proclaimed, the Mormon legion is under arms, patrolling the city day and night, and that all persons are prohibited leaving the city under a severe penalty. What the result will be, it is impossible to predict.

By later information, June 23, we learn that Smith had 2,300 men under arms, and ready for defensive operations. At Warsaw and Carthage about 3,000 citizens are under arms. Gov. Ford had visited Carthage, approved of present operations, and order out 2,500 more men, before attempting to serve the writs in the hands of the officers.

American Manufactures Abroad—Miracles, they say, will never cease. Time was when the Calcutta ships brought bales of cotton goods, for which we paid 25 cents per yard. It will be seen by the following advertisment in a Calcutta paper that we are returning the compliment:—

> "Two hundred pieces American manufactured shirting, well adapted for sheetings and servants' clothes, in pieces of thirty yards and upwards (both bleached and unbleached), at per yard, 6 annas, cash. The above is a very fine specimen of the rapid progress of civilization in America.
>
> For sale at No. 9 Oliver st, Ghaunt."

Here is something also of a domestic character, which we copy from the London Patriot:—

The American Rocking-chair.—This chair, so much admired by all who have visited America, for the remarkable ease, pleasure and comfort which it affords, is just imported, and for sale at the extensive carpet and upholstery establishment of Luck, Kent & Cumming, No 4 Regent street. It is asserted with confidence, that there is no piece of furniture in use, in civilized society, more sought after, and approved of when known. The price 25s, will be a liberal discount to the trade. Stout persons and invalids will find these chairs invaluable.

We are delighted that we can supply John Bull with some comfort. The aforesaid Rocking-chair now found in the boudoir of the Queen and nobility, is an appendage of every American chamber in which there is a bed—common as chamomile, and almost as cheap. Well, it is some consolation, that after having been indebted to the whole world for manufactures of all kinds, we are begining in return to manufacture everything for the whole world.—Sun.

The energetic and liberal spirit which the Bostonians display when called upon to aid in any enterprise of philantrophy or public benefit, is not surpassed in any other city of this continent or of the world. The Boston Courier was on Thursday shown a subscription for the erection of the proposed additions to the Massachusetts General Hospital, amounting to fifty thousand dollars, the sum which is estimated to cover the whole expense. Among the subscribers were six gentlemen at two thousand dollars each. The other subscriptions where in sums of one thousand, five hundred, two hundred, and one hundred each. Another subscription has been obtained, amounting to sixty thousand dollars, for the erection of the new Atheneum; and another still, of thirty thousand dollars, for the erection of the building for the Female Asylum. This gross sum of one hundred and forty thousand dollars, has been obtained in Boston within the last three weeks. It is gratifying to record such instances of the liberality of those whom enterprise and sucess have enabled to be liberal. It is not always that the rich are willing to make such patriotic use of their wealth.—Republic.

SUMMARY.

Marriage of President Tyler.—President TYLER and Miss JULIA, eldest daughter of the late Hon. David Gardner, of Long Island, were married at the Church of the Ascension in New York, June 26. The ceremony was private, the party consisting of only about a dozen relatives and friends. The lady is said to be about twenty-five, is an heiress, and of great personal beauty. A full national salute from the United States vessels in port announced the completion of the ceremony. The party left for Washington on the following day.

MRS. MARGARET M. DAVIDSON died at Saratoga on the 27th instant, after having been for many years confined to a sick room, and for several months a victim of a most painful disease. She was the wife of Dr. Oliver Davidson, and mother of Lucretia and Margaret Davidson, whose sweet poems have been read with so much pleasure by many.

A disastrous fire occurred at Boston, Mass., on the 25th of June, which destroyed property to the amount of $100,000. The fire originated in a steam planing establishment.

A young man, named Elisha Purdy, living at White Plains, N. Y., in a fit of somnambulism, jumped through a second story window, from the wound received by which he died.

At Newport, R. I., on the 25th ult., Chief Justice Durfee sentenced Thomas W. Dorr to hard labor in the State Prison for life. The Chief Justice spoke with considerable emotion of his former intimate acquaintance with Dorr, and his friendship for him, as making this duty, always painful, doubly so in the present case. But Mr. Dorr seems not to have been similarly affected, for in a brief and bold address which he made, he said that as lamentable as his situation might appear, he would be very sorry to exchange it for that of the Chief Justice. It was thought that the tone and spirit of his speech would lessen his chances for an early pardon.

Disgraceful scenes continue to be witnessed among the Philadelphia firemen. Different companies have been engaged in strife with each other, to the destruction of property and life. June 26, a man was shot, and seriously, though it is hoped not fatally wounded. The city of brotherly love seems likely to secure an unenviable notoriety.

The wheat crop in Onondaga County is reported to be remarkably early and abundant this season.

Daily, the robber of Mr. McKee, committed suicide at Albany, after having been tried and found guilty.

Her Britannic Majesty has extended pardon to 17 American prisoners now in Van Dieman's Land, who were connected with the Canadian Patriot movements.

The Mayor of Charleston believes that he shall succeed in tracing out a mysterious murder which occurred in that city, through information given by a lady in a state of mesmerism.

A Jewish Synagogue, surpassing any thing hitherto attempted in England for splendor, is to be erected soon in the West of London. Sir Moses Montefiore is a contributor of £5,000, on condition that the worship agree with the usages of the Spanish and Portuguese Jews.

Slavery has been abolished in Hong Kong, China. Those who, in the absence of their masters, and on being assured of their privilege to go free, prefer to remain in servitude, excepted.

Fire at Hudson.—About 5 o'clock P. M., June 28, a fire occurred at Hudson, N. Y., which consumed some twenty or thirty buildings, including a number of stores filled with grain, wool, &c. The loss is estimated at near $200,000—A spark from a steamboat, it is thought, occasioned it.

Explosion.—An explosion of a steamboat boiler occurred near Detroit, Mich., June 25, by which four or five persons lost their lives.

Gen. W. Scott, while coming down the North River on the steamer Troy, had his pocket picked of $130. Four persons were arrested for the robbery, and most of the money found.

The Island of Jamaica.—The moral improvement recently brought about in this Island is truly cheering to the philanthropist. In the different congregations, formed by the Scotch missionaries, there are now 2,400 communicants and 1,600 scholars. A due regard to the marriage relation is observed, where a few years since concubinage was almost universal.—Jour. Com.

The Poor of New York.—A contract for the term of three years has been entered into between the Common Council and the Board Surveyors, by which the Alms-house and farm are to be leased to the county for the sum of $2500 per annum; the entire management of the premises to be vested in the Common Council, and the paupers of the county towns are to be maintained by the city, at a weekly allowance of 55 cents each.

There are now connected with the various evangelical foreign missions from the United States, 32,259 native communicants, and 32,915 scholars; and with the foreign missionary stations under the care of European evangelical Christians, 139,974 native communicants, and 99,297 scholars.

An old beggar of Yorkshire, has just succeeded to a fortune of £95,000 by the death of a nephew, who went out some years since to India and recently died intestate.

Mr. Dorr.—A Newport correspondent of the Providence Journal says:

A petition has been presented to the Senate, signed by Sullivan Dorr, praying that the General Assembly would liberate his son, Thomas W. Dorr, or if that could not be done, that the punishment might be commuted to imprisonment in the county jail in the County of Newport, instead of the State Prison. The petition was laid on the table.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

From George Greenman, James Bailey, M. D. Randolph, Walter B. Gillett, E. G. Champlin, William Utter, Isaac D. Titsworth. Wm. P. Langworthy, Andrew Babcock.

From Postmasters—New London, Ct. 2, Hamilton, Scott, Pitcairn, Lippitt, R. I.

RECEIPTS.

The following list includes all the money paid to the office of the Seventh-day Baptist Register which has been reported to this office. The persons credited will be supplied with the Sabbath Recorder.

Waterford, Ct.—David Rogers, Eld. L. T. Rogers. David P. Rogers. Lester T. Rogers 2d. W. B. Haynes, $1 92 each, William Maxson $1; West Edmeston—Enoch K. Crandall, Kenyon Crandall, $1 92 each; Leonardsville—Joseph Batten ,82, Samuel Clark $1 70; Alfred—Josiah Sherman, Samuel N. Stillman, Almond Witter $1 92 each, N. Wordner $2; Maxson Rogers, Brooklyn, $1 92; Rev. E. S. Bailey, Brookfield, $2; Zacheus R. Babcock, Petersburgh, $1 92; Nathan R. Truman, Sacket's Harbor, $1 42; Oliver P. Saunders, Hopkinton, R. I., $2; George P. Burdick, Pitcairn, $2; Henry Wiles, Willett, $1 54; Nathaniel Lock, Cincinnatus, ,56; Barney Crandall, Whitesville, $1 60; John Phelps, West Solon, 1 56; W. V. Hubbard, Pulaski, $2.

The following has been received at this office, for which receipts have been forwarded:

Mystic Bridge, Ct.—Geo. Greenman, Clark Greenman, Thos. S. Greenman, Ethan Lanphear, W. B. Lewis, W. M. Barber, S. C. Lathrop, C. Mallory, I. W. Dennison, Geo. Paine, G. Obin, S. M. Fish, C. Grinnell, J. W. Sisson, H. Moulton, $2 each.

Mystic, Ct.—Thomas Edwards, Benjamin F. Collins, Dudley Dennison, $2 each; Russel Williams, 50.

Westerly, R. I.—Geo. A. Lanphear, Paul M. Barber, Silas Greenman, Jr. Peleg Langworth, William Barber, $2 each; Rev. B. F. Hedden, $2.

New Market, N. J.—J. R. Dunham, I. S. Dunn .R Clawson, M. F. Randolph, A. F. Randolph, $2 each.

Millington, N. J.—Harriet F. Randolph, $2.

Plainfield, N. J.—Edward B. Titsworth, $2.

Hamilton—Luke P. Babcock, $2.

New London, Ct.—D. L. Browning, $1.

Scott, N. Y.—P. S. Cottrell, H. C. Hubbard, Jesse Burdick, Daniel Babcock, Justus H. Kenyon, $2 each.

Pitcairn—Richard S. Geer, $2,00

Little Genesee—Ezekiel Crandall $2,00

Lippitt, R. I.—Thos. P. Lanphear, Thomas R. Green, Edmund D. Randolph, Nathan Babcock, $2 each.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ⅝	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ⅝	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2½
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Hallowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton, Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kilby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co. Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co. 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff. 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson. Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam. Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatars, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10.

Caroline, City, Cohen. Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20

Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches, Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem. Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm, Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac Co.—broken.

TO PRINTERS.

The subscriber having relinquished the business of publishing the S. D. B. Register, wishes to sell his Press, Type, &c. And he takes this method of saying, that he will sell at a very low rate to any one wishing to purchase. The Press is a No. 3, Washington. There is every thing connected with the Office that is necessary for publishing a paper, and also an extensive quantity of Job Type, and a small Book Bindery.

Will Editors with whom we have exchanged, be so kind as to give the above an insertion in their papers, as a parting favor to one of the craft? JAMES BAILEY.

DeRuyter, Madison Co., N. Y. June 18, 1844.

The Bible says ☞ THE SABBATH. ☜ The Church says

The seventh day is ... The first day is

WHICH SHALL WE HEAR?

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith. It is hoped all who love the Sabbath, and reverence God's word, will give this address a prayerful consideration.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, (3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 18 a 4 25
Pearl	4 50 a 4 56
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	23 00a23 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 32
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	7 00 a 8 50
Newcastle	6 50 a 7 50
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¼ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8 a 8¼
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4 4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4 4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	9 a 11
Stripes, fast colors	8 a 10
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 3¾
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16½a 17
Camphor, ref	70 a 72½
Cream of Tartar	14½a 14½
Cochineal	1 15 a 1 25
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12½a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16½
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 38
Jalap	65 a 70
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 75
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 25
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 50
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	24 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @28 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	27 @ 31
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 87 @ 2 91
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	16 00 @
Smoked Salmon Mlb	9 @ 10
ackerel, 1 bbl	9 75 @10 00
No 2 bbl	8 75 @ 9 00
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 25 @ 6 50
Backsp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 25@7 50
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 37 @ 4 43
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 31 @ 4 37
Michigan	4 31 @ 4 37
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 50 @
Richm'd c mills	6 25 @ 6 50
Brandywine	4 75 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	12 00 @12 50
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	90 @ 95
Do South new
Rye, Northern	67 @
Corn N & Jersey	47½@ 48
Southern	45 @47
Barley N R	@

Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	85 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A & RioGrand, lb	12 a 18
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 00
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80.00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5½a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 40@ 3 50
Bar, lb	4@ 4½
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@1500
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	30@31
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	8 37 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 7@ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7½
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6¼a 7
American	5 a
Spring	5¼a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	8¼a 9½
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	6¼a 9½
Do Brown	6¾a 8¾
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10 a
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¾
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17¼a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6¾a 7¾
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 35
Souchong	21 a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
plates I X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 38
No. 1	31 a 33
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

REFORM.

BY REV. THOMAS L. HARRIS.

A VOICE peals o'er life's wildly heaving waters,
More startling than the anthem of the storm;
Sweet as the hymn wherewith Etruria's daughters
Went forth of old to welcome in the morn;
It shakes with fear the Despot stern and hoary,
He totters on his blood-cemented throne—
It breathes into the Warrior's ear the story
Of days when fields of blood will be unknown—
It fills the gray old-fanes, whose altars
Are fitly builded o'er the hollow tomb;
The Priest amid his incantation falters,
And trembles with the prescience of their doom;
Falsehood, with fearful agony dissembles,
Veiled in the darkness of a perished age,
And Vice, within her gilded chamber, trembles,
And Hate grows darker still with idle rage.

But the crushed Bondsman hears it, and upspringeth
To burst his shackles and once more be free,
And shouts aloud until the echo ringeth
O'er the far islands of the Eastern sea.
The faithful Lover of his Race rejoices—
The Champion girds his gleaming armor on—
The Seer saith, "God speaks in those earnest voices:
Earth's fearful battle-field shall yet be won."
Each hallowed Martyr of the ages olden
Leapeth for joy within his darkened grave.
And new-born Poets wake with voices golden
To chant the glorious actions of the Brave;
O'er Earth it rolls like peals of gathering thunder,
And Nations rise from slumber on the sod,
And Angels list, all mute with breathless wonder,
Its echo, in the Living Soul of God!
O'er every radiant island of Creation
The music of that swelling peal is borne,
Land bears to Land, and Nation shouts to Nation
The war-cry of the age—Reform!—REFORM!

List to that mighty music—O, my Brother!
Heed thou those anthem-voices, as they roll,
Like bursting flames that darkness fain would smother,
Through the deep chambers of the inner soul,
Waking the spirit, in its deathless power,
To gird its armor for the daily fight;
And in the Present's dark and fearful hour,
Go forth to battle for the True and Right.
Hearken, and burst the slimy chains of Fashion,
Let the false Worldling scorn thee if he will;
Rise, sun-like, o'er the storms of earthly passion,
And stem with fearless breast the tide of ill.

Success will crown each arduous endeavor,
And from the strife thy soul rise great and free,
And deed give birth to deeds that roll forever,
Wave after wave, o'er Time's grand, azure sea.
A crown of thorns the foe may twine around thee;
Press on, the way is open, heed not them—
The mournful wreath, wherewith their hate hath bound thee,
Shall change unto a starry diadem.
The grand of soul, the true, the noble-hearted,
Will hear thy strokes and rally at thy side,
And round thy brow, through rifted clouds and parted,
Stream down the smile of God. O, glorified!
From life and voice the wakened would inherit
A legacy of Truth and Love sublime,
Whose charm shall echo when thy earnest spirit
Rests with the Mighty of the olden time;
Rests, filled with joy, beyond all human story,
As looking down, with calm and god-like eyes,
It views the Race, in Mind's transcendent glory,
Sealing the star-crowned mountains of the skies!
Minden, N. Y., May, 1844.

Tribune.

LEAVES FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTE BOOK—NO. 2.

LIVERPOOL.

It is impossible to describe the feeling with which I placed my feet for the first time on English ground. That feeling was made up of increased confidence, devout gratitude, and realized expectation. However little one may admire some of the institutions of England, he can hardly fail to feel an interest in her past history and present condition. She has exerted, and continues to exert, a more powerful influence upon the commercial, social, and religious interests of men, than any other nation. And although this influence is not always exerted in the way approved by all, yet it has unquestionably promoted progress among those who were affected by it. In addition to this, England has nursed, supported, and buried great men in every department of human exertion—warriors, statesmen, scholars; and she now embraces within her dominions those whose advantages ought to make them the light of the world. Reflections like these will urge themselves upon one when first his feet press her soil.

The approach to Liverpool impresses unpleasantly one who has been accustomed to the clear atmosphere and bright appearance of an American harbor. The dark color and cheerless look of the boats—the unsightly windmills here and there flying—the columns of smoke rising from the manufactories, and creating a cloud constantly over head—the clay-colored buildings, erected with such plainness as to remind one of prisons, strong without ornament—these give a dismal appearance to the whole scene. It must be acknowledged, however, that such impressions are much modified by an hour's walk through some of the principal streets of the town, where the smooth hard pavements, the substantial buildings, with here and there a specimen of architectural taste, soon make up for these first impressions.

When we stepped on shore, we were surprised to see the number of persons who appeared to be mere idlers. They stood about the wharf where we landed, on the corners of the streets, and indeed almost every where. Idleness is always unpleasant to look upon, and dangerous to a community. But idleness, from inability to find employment, while the rewards of labor are needed, and a willingness to perform is felt, is a most mournful sight, and indicates the worst condition of society. From the appearance of many of these, we judged them to be of the latter class. In this opinion we were confirmed by noticing with what alacrity they offered their services to conduct us to the places we wished to find—how cheerful the prospect of employment made him upon whom we fixed as a guide—how ready he was to impart any information, and yet how free from impertinence. In less than an hour we had become interested in him, and interested in that class who are compelled to depend upon such employments for subsistence.

The number and appearance of the policemen soon attracted our notice. They are to be seen in the street at all hours of the day, and their number is so great that from almost any position one may be seen. The dress of each is uniform—a very neat blue suit, with figures worked in white upon the collar to indicate the office and the number. Add to this a leathern belt which is commonly worn, and a hat, the top of which, and for an inch down the side, is covered with a piece of shining leather, and it is easy to distinguish them. At first, the sight of so many watchmen was unpleasant to me. Farther acquaintance with the character of the men, however, and the results of their protective measures, removed this feeling, and enabled one to look upon them with satisfaction.

A wide difference is seen between the dress and countenances of the different classes. The number of poorly clad people in the street was very great. A plain and cheap mode of dress, which the laboring class wear, is not objectionable. It is only when this becomes shabby and filthy that it is unpleasant. This was too often the case. The countenances of the well-dressed persons who are to be met in the street indicate health, ease and plenty. There is little of that nervous excitability manifest which is so commonly seen in American cities. It is not difficult to explain why this should be the case. In American cities the demands of business are so pressing that mere boys take the responsibilities of men upon them, while young men and old give their thoughts from early morning till late evening to the cares of business. In an old and populous country, the supply of men is equal to the demand; and thousands may be found who pursue the same branch of business, in the same place and manner as did their fathers, their grandfathers, and perhaps their great grandfathers, before them. And if this employment always has procured a supply of the necessaries of life, and promises to continue to do this, why should they trouble themselves about any thing further? The result of this uniform and quiet mode of life is seen in the faces of those who have been allowed to pursue it. If there be any foundation for the old opinion that a healthy mind is generally found connected with a healthy body, this characteristic of many whom we meet in the street is not to be lightly prized.—Almost every thing which passed under our eyes during the first few hours of our observation in Liverpool, was novel and interesting.—Even when we closed those eyes for sleep, the things we had observed continued to be present with us.

Liverpool presents but little that is attractive to the visitor, nor is its history remarkably interesting. A castle is said to have been built here by Roger of Poictiers, which was demolished in 1659. On the site of it a church now stands. The town was taken during the civil wars by Prince Rupert, after having held out for a month, and many of the inhabitants were put to the sword. It was soon afterwards re-taken, however, and continued to be attached to the popular cause. It was formerly engaged deeply in the African slave trade. No longer ago than 1764, more than half of that trade was carried on by the merchants of Liverpool.—Of late years, however, since the increase of cotton manufacture, it has become the chief port for the reception of the raw material, and for the exportation of the manufactured goods. Add to this the great trade which it has with Ireland, and the reasons for its rapid growth are apparent. At present, Liverpool is supposed to possess one-twelfth part of the shipping of England; one-fourth part of the foreign trade; and half as much trade as London. Nearly one half of the tonnage inwards and outwards is connected with the United States trade. Liverpool has been more benefitted by means of canals and railways than any other port in England, if London be excepted. The docks are remarkably commodious, and are the admiration of all who visit the port. It is only about fifty years since Liverpool was made up of narrow streets, and buildings almost devoid of architectural beauty. Since that time, great improvements have been made, until it now has an elegant town hall—commodious exchange buildings, and a stupendous custom-house. The cemetery, (St. James,' as it is called,) is well worth a visit. It was once a quarry of red stone, in which a large number of catacombs have been formed. Near the entrance, on the summit of a rock, is a beautiful chapel.—Monuments have been placed here to the memory of a number of distinguished persons. The site of Liverpool is very low and extremely unhealthy.—The number of inhabitants at present is near 250,000. In every direction from the city may be found family residences of considerable importance and beauty. The cottage where Prince Rupert had his head quarters when he besieged the town in 1644 is at Everton.

LOCUSTS.

Mr. Rochet, in a narrative of his journey along the eastern coasts of the Red Sea, bears irrefragable testimony to the authenticity of the Mosaic record, and other passages in holy Scripture, wherein it is said, that "the land was darkened" by these insects (Exod. x. 15); "all the trees and fruits of the land shall the locust consume" (Deut. xxviii. 42), &c. And again in the prophecy of Joel (ii, 25), in which they are set down as a part of "my great army;" corresponding with Psalm cv. 34, "He spake, and the locusts came, and caterpillars, and that without number." At noon we saw a dark and exceedingly dense cloud arise, about three miles distant; it appeared to me nearly a league (about two or three miles) in length: its density increased every instant, and as it grew thicker and diffused itself more widely, it involved the horizon in total darkness. I imagined the cloud to herald a dreadful tempest, and went up to the king of Shoa, in Abyssinia, for the purpose of stating my apprehensions to him; but he laughed at my alarm, and told me that the cause of it was nothing more than an immense cloud of locusts, and we should readily rid ourselves of them by crushing them under our horses' hoofs by thousands. I am free to confess that I had some difficulty in getting rid of my fears, and did not place much reliance on his majesty Sahle-Salasse's explication; for the low moan and dismal, confused murmur, which are the customary precursors of a storm, were sufficiently audible at the moment.—In another instant, the matchlocks of the troops assailed the mysterious cloud; an innumerable host of locusts fell to the ground on all sides; so dense was the mass that we could not see each other at ten steps' distance. We were beset by this living fog for a whole hour; hence you may form some idea of the millions which had collected together. I recollected having seen locusts in Egypt, and extensive flights of them also at Tujurra; yet, what I had previously observed had but tended to make me more skeptical as to the reports travelers had made of the migration of this insect; now, however, I could doubt no longer; I was, as it were, an eye-witness of the dreadful plague which Moses had called down on the land of Pharaoh.

DIGNITY OF LABOR.

In early life David kept his father's sheep; his was a life of industry; and though foolish men think it degrading to perform any useful labor, yet in the eyes of wise men industry is truly honorable, and the most useful man is the happiest. A life of labor is man's natural condition, and most favorable to mental health and bodily vigor. Bishop Hall says, "Sweet is the destiny of all trades, whether of the brow or of the mind. God never allowed any man to do nothing." From the ranks of industry have the world's greatest men been taken. Rome was more than once saved by a man who was sent from the plough.

Moses had been keeping sheep for forty years before he came forth as the deliverer of Israel.—The Apostles were chosen from among the hardy and laborious fishermen. From whence I infer that, when God has any great work to perform, he selects as his instruments those who, by their previous occupation, had acquired habits of industry, skill and perseverance; and that, in every department of society, they are most honorable who earn their own living by their own labor.

JAMES WADSWORTH.—The following notice of the Hon. James Wadsworth, who died at Geneseo a short time since, is taken from the Albany Evening Journal.

It was our privilege to have enjoyed this great and good man's friendship and confidence for many years. We say great and good, for such was truly and eminently his character. He was emphatically the architect of his own fortune and fame. His fortune was acquired by Agricultural enterprise and industry; and, by devoting all that was needful of that fortune to the diffusion of Knowledge and the encouragement of Science, he established for himself a reputation as enduring as time.

Mr. Wadsworth gave his thoughts as well as his money to the cause of Education, of Political Economy, and of the Practical Sciences. The commonwealth is equally indebted to his wisdom for suggesting and maturing, and to his munificence for carrying out measures of physical, mental and moral improvement. He established and endowed the first Normal School in this State. He originated and assisted in perfecting the system of Common School Libraries, by means of which every School District in the State is in possession of the most precious literary treasures. He has published large editions of valuable works, and caused them to be gratuitously distributed. And he has done much else, of which we hope to have a faithful memoir, and for which his memory will be gratefully cherished by the citizens of the state of New-York.

James Wadsworth, in company with his brother William, who died several years since, were natives of Hartford, Ct. They purchased a large tract of land upon the Genesee River towards the close of the last century. The Indians were for many years their only neighbors. Their industry, enterprise and intelligence soon rendered their possessions immensely valuable. Their vast fortunes show what enlightened men can accomplish even in the too much neglected pursuit of Agriculture.—Gen William Wadsworth lived and died a bachelor, bequeathing his share of the estate to his brother's children. James Wadsworth, next to John Jacob Astor, was the wealthiest man in our State.—His immense fortune descends to two sons, who are heirs also to many of their Father's virtues; and to a daughter, who though in person and mind formed to grace and charm society, has, with all a daughter's devoted affection, been the inseparable companion of her Father during his years of sickness and suffering. Martin Brimmer, Esq. former Mayor of Boston, married the eldest daughter of Mr. Wadsworth, who died many years ago, but we believe left children.

INTERESTING ANECDOTE OF BERNADOTTE, KING OF SWEDEN.—Among the wounded prisoners was a young French sergeant, who so particularly attracted the attention of Colonel Wangenheim, commandant of the Hanoverian troops in the English service, by his interesting appearance and manners, that he ordered the young man to be conveyed to his own tent, where he was treated with attention and kindness until his recovery and release. Many years afterwards, when the French army, under Bernadotte, entered Hanover, Gen. Wangenheim, among others, attended, the levee of the conqueror. "You have served a great deal," said Bernadotte on his being presented, "and, as I understand, in India?" "I have served there."—"M. Cudalor?"—"I was there."—"Have you any recollection of a wounded sergeant whom you took under your protection in the course of that service?" The circumstance was not immediately present to the General's mind; but on recollection, he resumed—"I do, indeed, remember the circumstance, and a very fine young man he was; I have entirely lost sight of him ever since, but it would give me pleasure to hear of his welfare." "That young sergeant," said Bernadotte, "was the person who has now the honor to address you, and who is happy in the public opportunity of acknowledging the obligation, and will omit no means within his power of testifying his gratitude to Gen. Wangenheim."

Wilke's Sketches of the South of India.

HOW TO BE RICH.—Hoard every cent you get or expend it where it will double in a week; never give a farthing to the poor; never lend a dollar to your neighbor; stint yourself in food and clothing; purchase your articles at a very low rate, and then insist on a discount; befriend no one in any way; belong to no society; have no intimate acquaintances, and as sure as there is a sun in the heavens, you will become rich.

Hundreds have thus become wealthy, and died, leaving their property to be disputed by profligates and spendthrifts; proving a curse instead of a blessing. If you have determined to be rich, permit us to say plainly, that you must not expect to be happy. No one will love you—few respect you—and all will rejoice at your death.—Ch. Journal.

HOOKS AND EYES.—Few would suppose that $750,000 per annum are expended for these little articles. Formerly they were $1,25 a gross; now we manufacture them, and the price is reduced to 20 cents. At one establishment in New Britain, Ct., 80,000 to 100,000 pairs per day, are made and plated, by a galvanic battery, or what is called the cold silver process.—Vt. Chronicle.

Man was never intended to be idle. Inactivity frustrates the very design of his creation; whereas an active life is the best guardian of virtue, and the greatest preservative of health of body and mind. Nor can the professor of Christianity expect a rest in eternity, unless he has labored to God's acceptance.

AMERICAN APPLES.—The Northern and Eastern papers are frequently urging farmers to plant their orchards, and among other inducements are holding out the demand for apples and consequent exportation to Europe. The apples from the United States are far superior to those of England, and are retailed in London at 6d a piece. They are considered by the medical faculty as very healthy, and are recommended by them to convalescents. Dr. Dick of Edinburgh, in his late popular and valuable treatise entitled "Derangements primary and reflex of the organs of Digestion," a work which ought to be in the hands of every dyspeptic, says in p. 211, (where he is strongly recommending herbaceous aliment,) "A ripe American apple, well masticated, has been employed by me as an auxiliary and occasionally as a principal, in the treatment of the irritative and hyperœmic forms of gastric derangements." "A ripe American apple, or two or three dozen of grapes, or two or three oranges, or part of a pomegranate, taken at these times, act as valuable reducements of the chalews, douleuo, roguer, temeur of the gastric mucous membrane." These four conditions are, as Broussaes justly remarks, the essential ones of all inflammation.—American Farmer.

THE BLIND SHALL SEE.

One evening, about sun down, I stopped at a city on the Irawaddy. I sat on the boat, a short distance from the bank, and began to read from my tracts. The people sat down on the shore; some, however, went to the town to say that a foreign teacher had come. The crowd increased, and I read on till sundown. At length a tall young man came wading to the boat, and said, "Teacher, have you the Acts of the Apostles?" Imagine my surprise at hearing such a question in that place. I replied, "Yes." He said again, "Teacher, have you the Gospel of John?" He was evidently well educated; I asked, therefore, "How did you learn about these books?" He told me that long ago his grand-father had obtained them from Mr. Judson, but had lost them in a great fire; and, now hearing of the foreign teacher, the old man had sent him in the hope of getting them again. I complied with his request, and he hastened away. A storm soon came upon us, and I removed my boat to the other end of the city, two miles distant.

About eight o'clock in the evening, the young man came again; he had been searching all along the shore for me. On his return to his grand-father, the latter inquired if he had asked the teacher to stay with him; and he had now come to invite me to his house. I went up and found the old man seated in the midst of his family. He put out his hand to feel for me, and I perceived that he was blind. His family had read to him, and he spoke of the comfort he had derived from John and the Acts. "The eyes of my body," he said, "are dark; but the eyes of my mind are opened."—Rev. Mr. Kincaid

A THOUGHT OVER A CRADLE.

BY N. P. WILLIS.

I sadden when thou smilest to my smile,
Child of my love! I tremble to believe
That o'er the mirror of that eye of blue
The shadow of my heart will always pass;—
A heart that, from its struggle with the world,
Comes nightly to thy guarded cradle home,
And, careless of the staining dust it brings,
Asks for its idol! Strange, that flowers of earth
Are visited by every air that stirs,
And drink in sweetness only, while the child
That shuts within its breast a bloom of heaven,
May take a blemish from the breath of love,
And bear the blight forever.
I have wept
With gladness at the gift of this fair child!
My life is bound up in her! But, oh God!
Thou know'st how heavily my heart at times
Bears its sweet burden; and if Thou hast given
To nurture such as mine this spotless flower,
To bring it unpolluted unto thee,
Take Thou its love, I pray thee! Give it light—
Though, following the sun, it turn from me!
But by the chord thus wrung, and by the light
Shining about her, draw me to my child,
And link us close, oh God, when near to heaven!

INDUSTRY IN FEMALES.

Industry in a female, is always an important trait.—There is, indeed, so much uncertainty in the voyage of life, that no young man can be deemed otherwise than criminally imprudent who joins his fate to that of a person whose domestic education and habits of life have been adverse to the practice of this essential virtue. In a career where the utmost prudence is often incompetent to secure success, and where, in nine cases out of ten, the fairest prospects are prematurely blighted, and the brightest expectations nipped in their freshest bloom, to enter the domestic relation, and to assume the several responsibilities of husband, father, and citizen, with one who is wholly inadequate to sustain the shocks of adversity, or to alleviate the burden of misfortune by mutual assistance and support, is not only an evil, but a crime! And yet there are thousands who do so,—thousands who annually lead to the altar, beings with minds as vacant, and hands as unaccustomed to employment, as though they had existed from childhood in a mental and moral vacuum—wholly ignorant of ordinary wants and of the means by which they are honorably supplied. It is, indeed, to be regretted that in our day the entire routine of courtship, and social intercourse between the sexes, is little better than a regularly graduated course of artful and systematized deception! "Who" says Cobbet, in his third letter of "Advice to Young Men," "is to tell whether a girl will make an industrious woman? How is the purblind lover, especially, able to determine whether she whose smiles and dimples, and whose bewitching lips, have almost bereft him of his senses—how is he able to judge from any thing that he can see whether the beloved object will be industrious or lazy? Why is it very difficult? "There are," says Maccin, "certain outward signs, which if attended to with care, will serve as pretty sure guides.—First, if you find the tongue lazy, you may be quite sure the hands and the feet are the same. By laziness of the tongue, I do not mean absence of talk, for that in most cases is very good, but I mean a slow and soft utterance, a sort of singing out of the words, instead of speaking them—a sort of letting the sound fall out as if they were sick at the stomach. The pronunciation of an industrious person is quick and distinct, and the voice if not strong, firm at least. Not masculine, as feminine as possible; not a croak nor a bawl, but a quick, distinct, sound voice.—Look a little at the labors of the teeth, for these correspond with the other members of the body, and see her work on a mutton chop and a bit of bread and cheese, and if she deal quickly with these you have a pretty good security for that industry without which a wife is a burden instead of a help. Another mark of industry is a quick step, and a somewhat haughty tread, showing that the foot comes down with a heavy good will. I do not like, and never did like, your sauntering, soft stepping girls, who move as if they were indifferent to the result."

Maine Cultivator.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.

No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.

No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.

No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week, the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

The Society has published, also, in quarto form, [$1,25 per 100, or $10 per 1000,] two numbers of THE SABBATH VINDICATOR.

JUST PUBLISHED,

THE

MEDIATORIAL REIGN OF CHRIST ON THE EARTH.

REVEALED, in a series of Essays, compiled from eminent authors; to which is added a letter from CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH to the Bishop of Jerusalem, on the perpetuity of Israel's Ordinances.

The following are the subjects discussed in the above work:—

1. The Study of Prophecy, a Question of Degree.
2. Christ's Kingdom on Earth.
3. Reigning on Earth no Degradation to our Lord.
4. The Priesthood of Christ, as it shall be exercised during and after the Millennium.
5. Messiah's Reign on the Earth.
6. The uncertainty of the hour of the coming of the Son of Man.
7. The signs, times, and seasons preceding Christ's Second Coming.
8. War in heaven.
9. The First Resurrection.
10. The changing of the Living Saints at the First Resurrection.
11. The ascension of the Saints to meet the Lord in the air.
12. The ascended Saints preserved from the fiery judgments, exercise power with Christ over their enemies.
13. The restoration of the Jews to their own land.
14. The New Temple to be erected in Jerusalem, with a map explanatory of the same.
15. The New Temple Ceremonial Service.
16. The going up of all nations to worship the Lord at Jerusalem.
17. The New Division of the Holy Land, with 2 maps, the first showing the division of the land among the Twelve Tribes by Joshua, with references to chapter and verse. The second the division which shall take place after their restoration, as shown by the Prophet Ezekiel, with references also to the prophecy.
18. The New Heavens and New Earth.
19. The Paradisaical felicity and perfection of the animal and vegetable kingdoms generally restored during the Millennium.
20. Longevity restored to the sojourners on Earth.
21. The loosing of Satan and consequent Apostacy subsequent to the Millennium.
22. The Last or General Resurrection and Judgment of the wicked and the Second Death.
23. The delivering of the Kingdom to God the Father and commencement of the Everlasting Age.
24. The Everlasting Kingdom of God perpetuated in the renewed Heavens and Earth.
25. The gathering together of all things in Christ, and the Earth (renewed) the court or centre of unity of the Everlasting Kingdom of all Creation.
26. On Death and Hades, and the period of Satan's dominion over the present evil world.
27. The approaching New Dispensation.
28. Charlotte Elizabeth's letter to the Bishop of Jerusalem.

☞ Any person desiring the above Work, can have it sent to them, in sheets, by mail, by enclosing One Dollar, (post-paid,) addressed to Rev. I. P. Labagh, New York, or by calling at his Office, 130 Fulton street, or at 9 Spruce street, between the hours of 11 and 3 o'clock.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

The following persons are requested to act as agents for this paper in the vicinity where they are located. If any are unable to attend to the business, it is hoped they will secure some one to fill their places. In societies where no one is appointed, it is hoped that our friends will take immediate steps, among themselves, to do what can be done.

NEW YORK
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clarence—Nathan V Hull
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT
Waterford—Lester T Rogers

Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN
Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA
Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS
Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS:

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.

"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."

VOL. I. PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, JULY 11, 1844. NO. 3.

The Recorder.

AUTHORITY OF CHRIST TO CHANGE THE SABBATH,

BEING

A Vindication of the Address to the Baptists against the Charge of Heresy.

Some months ago there appeared in one of the daily papers of New York, the True Sun, an article reviewing the Address to the Baptists from the Seventh-day Baptist General Conference. In that article, after speaking of the unusual interest felt in the discussion of the subject, and giving his own reasons for being satisfied with the change of the day, the editor quoted a paragraph from the Address which he regarded as teaching an unscriptural doctrine. A reply to this soon afterwards appeared in the True Sun, and there the whole matter rested. But a member of the Committee that prepared the Address has since furnished a full answer to the objections raised, which, on account of its intrinsic value, and the interest felt in the subject, we publish in connection with the extract from the True Sun to which it is a reply.

From the True Sun.

But we sincerely regret to see the manner in which the argument is in this instance conducted by the Sabbatarians. In reply to the usual assertion that our Saviour and his apostles altered the law of the Sabbath, the Conference says:

"We ask, by what right could Christ or his apostles alter the law of the Sabbath? Do not be startled. We do not question our Saviour's divinity. We recognize him as over all, God blessed for ever. But in all his ministry he acted under the appointment of the Father, and according to such restrictions as were contained in the law and the prophets. By those restrictions, no laws were to be set aside at his coming, except such as were peculiar to the Jewish Economy; such as 'meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed until the time of reformation.' Heb. ix. 10. To set aside these, the law gave the Messiah an express grant. Heb. x. 9. But the very moment he should attempt to go beyond the limits of that grant, he would destroy all the evidence of his being the Messiah promised and appointed.—For it was by his exact conformity to the law, that his claims were established. Hence early in his ministry he declared that he 'came not to destroy the law or the prophets.' Matt. v. 17. The divinity of the Saviour gave him no authority, therefore, to set aside any laws, except those which were 'a shadow of things to come.' Otherwise we should have God denying himself!—God contradicting himself! On this account we say, that neither Christ nor his apostles had any right to alter the Sabbath."

We must confess we are startled at such argument as this. It is of a character to startle.—Those who believe not in the divinity of the Saviour, are of course entitled the benefit of the objections to his want of power to alter the Sabbath. We find no fault with those who cannot see it, but for a Christian sect, avowing full belief in the New Testament and in the Divinity, or in other words, the Godhead in the Saviour, thus to support their doctrines, is somewhat extraordinary. In opposition to this we will briefly state our reasons why, if the Seventh-day worship of God was changed, there was full authority for it, and also humbly vindicate the power of the Saviour to change the observance of this or any other day. In St. John's Gospel we are told that the word (Christ) was in the beginning with God, that it was God, that all things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made. We conceive this a full answer to the extraordinary declaration in the above quotation, that he had no "authority" to set aside this law except it were a shadow of things to come. But in the 12th chapter of St. Matthew it is recorded that the question of the lawfulness of performing certain acts on the Sabbath came up for discussion among the Pharisees, our Saviour vindicated his passing through the corn-field, the eating of the corn by his disciples, declaring of himself, there was one present "greater than the temple," that is, the temple observances.

REPLY.

To the Editor of the True Sun:—

Some person has been pleased to transmit to me your paper containing some strictures upon the Address issued by the General Conference of Seventh-day Baptists, on the subject of the the Sabbath. As a member of the Committee engaged in the preparation of that Address, I feel myself responsible for the sentiments it contains, and am willing to undertake their defence.

As there is no attempt on your part to meet the argument of the Address, your skill being displayed in merely selecting and giving prominence to a paragraph, which you could hold up to the prejudice of unthinking persons, and create the belief that we are covertly helping forward the cause of those who deny the divinity of Christ, it would appear that you feel the weakness of the cause you would fain establish. For you dwell with much emphasis on the fact, that the early Christians met for religious worship on the first day of the week, referring both to the New Testament, and to the writings of the Fathers, for your authority. A fact, which, so far as the argument of the Address is concerned, is not even called in question. Now, as you profess to have "made this address the subject of careful perusal, without bias or prejudice one way or the other," one cannot but wonder how you could overlook what is so expressly and unequivocally stated, that the question at issue between us and our opponents is not, whether the early Christians met together for worship on the first day of the week, but whether they sabbatized; that is, RESTED FROM THEIR LABOR. (See page 7.) Again, it is said, (p. 10,) "should you still be of opinion that some sort of notoriety was attached to the day, and that Christians met for worship, we shall not be very solicitous to dispute the point. * * * * Our concern is not that you keep the first day of the week, but that you keep it in place of the Sabbath, thus making void the commandment of God." These references show conclusively, that the Address regards it as a matter of no importance to the argument, whether primitive Christians assembled for religious worship on the first day of the week, or not. The early Fathers may be quoted, over and over again, in attestation of the fact. And it is usual with the defenders of Sunday keeping, to present us with quite a formidable array of authorities. But what does it all amount to? Why, just nothing at all. For none of these authorities, so far as I have discovered, show that Sunday was consecrated by abstinence from labor. So that the very thing for which they are subpœnaed in evidence, cannot be elicited from them, even though they are put to the rack. The very confident manner, however, in which you appeal to their testimony, might induce the belief with some of your readers, that they pour out a shower of proof, sufficient to wash away our whole fabric. But be pleased to take their testimony again, and see if you can make them say, what the advocates of Sunday keeping are so desirous that they should say. I am confident you cannot review this matter, without feeling that our position is not so "utterly untenable and unscriptural," as you have pretended.

With a true Protestant, one who acts out Protestant principles, it is of little consequence what the ancient fathers say. His inquiry will be, what saith the Scripture? But as the Scripture is utterly silent in regard to the followers of Christ observing the first day of the week by abstinence from labor, it is the invariable custom of our Doctors to fly to the fathers to help them out. Thus they take a path, in which the common people cannot follow them, and profess to come back laden with evidence, that Sunday is beyond all doubt the sacred day. But I put it to these Reverend Doctors in the divine law, that they have no such proof as they pretend. If they have, let them produce it.

But to the heterodox paragraph, which you have culled from the pages of the Address, and given such prominence. I readily shoulder the burden of showing, that it is according to the oracles of God. No sound theologian will deny that the Scriptures of the Old Testament marked out a certain line of conduct, to which the Messiah was to give an undeviating conformity. That by such undeviating conformity his pretensions to the Messiahship were to be tested. Accordingly Christ himself appealed to this very test. John v. 39, 45, 47. And Paul, when witnessing concerning his Lord, did say "NONE OTHER THINGS THAN THOSE WHICH THE PROPHETS AND MOSES DID SAY SHOULD COME." Acts xxvi. 22. Every sound theologian also knows, that the things that were to be 'shaken and removed,' were the laws and institutions which were peculiar to the Mosaic Economy. All others to be left untouched. The whole argument of the Epistle to the Hebrews is managed upon this supposition. In that Epistle the Apostle shows, that the Messiah took away the Mosaic Economy, because the Book of the Law gave him an express grant to do so. Heb. x. 5, 9, and xii. 26, 27. Evidently implying that this was the extent of the grant. Let any man put his finger, if he can, upon a single instance where the Messiah pretended to exercise an authority beyond this grant. I am bold to say that such an instance cannot be found.

But who is the Messiah? The Bible that I read, tells me, he is "God manifest in the flesh." 1 Tim. iii. 16. And as I know of but one God, the Father, 1 Cor. viii. 6, so I believe that the God in Christ is the very same God, that created the world, and speaks to us throughout the Scriptures of the Old Testament. Not ANOTHER God, but the VERY SAME God. Well, we have God in the Old Testament describing accurately what character the Messiah should assume, and what line of conduct he should pursue. Then we have this same God manifesting himself in the flesh, and speaking to us in the New Testament Scriptures; and does he take a different course, from what in the Old Testament he said, he would? Does he act contrary to himself? What he was to do, was to set aside the Mosaic institutions, by introducing the true and proper sacrifice for sin. The law of the priesthood was to be changed, because the priesthood itself was changed. Heb. vii. 12. But no other law was to be changed, or altered at all. Now if God thus foretold, when he spake to the fathers by the prophets, just what he would do, when he should become manifest in the flesh; if he prescribed for himself the very line of conduct, to which he would yield an undeviating conformity; if this line of conduct so prescribed, this grant which he had given, extended not to the removal, or alteration of any thing but the laws and institutions of Judaism; then we say, that the Messiah had no right to alter or set aside the law of the Sabbath. We say it on the same principle that Paul says, "it is IMPOSSIBLE for God to lie;" Heb. vi. 18; and that "he CANNOT deny himself." 2 Tim. ii. 13. And we say it with devout reverence for our Lord, the Redeemer, believing that he is "over all God, blessed for ever." Rom. ix. 5. Yet as we do not believe, that the God in Christ possesses MORE divinity, than the God who is revealed in the Old Testament, being the very same God, so we do not believe that he has a right and an authority over and above what the Father has prescribed. He and the Father are one. John x. 30. Let those who believe the God in Christ to be different from the God of the Old Testament; who believe him to possess more divinity than the Father; who, in their ultraism, yield him a right to go contrary to the appointments and restrictions of prophecy, and in reality degrade him by their attempts to exalt him;—let them believe that the Messiah has a right to sweep away such institutions, as are not of a ceremonial character. But as for us, we hold such a oneness between Christ and the Father, as utterly forbids our believing such doctrine.

Having now tried the orthodoxy of the startling paragraph, I put it to your sober judgment, whether "those who believe not in the divinity of the Saviour, are of course justly entitled to the benefit of the objections, to his want of power to alter the Sabbath." Perhaps upon mature re-consideration of the matter, you will find, that in opening such a raking fire upon us, you have only dealt destruction to yonr friends. For the ablest writers on the Sabbath question, Humphrey, Dwight, Wilson, cum multis aliis, have so felt the necessity of finding in the Book of the Law, an express grant to the Messiah to change the institution, that they have wrested from their obvious meaning, and pressed into their service, some of the simplest passages. What else led them to suppose, that Psalm cxviii. 24, and Isa. xi. 10, had any reference to the subject? But the sacredness of Sunday must be defended; and for this purpose, Old Testament Scriptures, those sworn witnesses of the Eternal, are put to the torture. At the same time those very writers, feeling that the mission of the Messiah was to effect the abrogation of no laws, except such as were of Jewish origin, though their Sabbath creed would not let them express it in so many words, labored hard to make it appear that so far as the particular day of the Sabbath was concerned, it was Jewish. Hence the old Sabbath is called by them the Jewish Sabbath; those who observe it are considered as Judaizing. But why at such pains to make it appear a Jewish institution, if the proof could otherwise be clearly made out, that the Messiah had a right to alter it? Hence, even your friends being judges, it appears that the right of Messiah to alter or abolish the Sabbath, runs parallel with the evidence of its being a ceremonial institution, or with the evidence that its change was foretold. On any other principle their argument falls to the ground.

I admit that the peculiar phraseology of the paragraph in question, is somewhat startling to those who have always been accustomed to take their observations from a single point. It was purposely designed to be so, though not designed to convey any heterodox sentiment, nor can I admit that it does. But our first-day friends have so long harped upon the right of Christ to change the Sabbath, basing such right upon his divine nature, that we wish to wake them up to the fallacy of their position. We believe that no such right exists. It exists not in his divine nature; for that, as we have seen, would be God denying himself. It exists not in his human nature; for that is in most perfect subjection to the divine nature. And if it exist in neither of these separately, certainly nothing but the most distorted mental vision, would discover such right in him as a complex person, i.e. God and man united. The term employed, the RIGHT, &c. may be objected to by a captious critic. But if it will sound any sweeter in his ear, we will alter the phraseology, so as to make it thus, "How was it POSSIBLE for Christ, or his Apostles, to alter the law of the Sabbath? &c." With this alteration, which makes the language precisely like Paul's—it was IMPOSSIBLE for God to lie—let the objector make the most of it.

In defending the right of our Saviour to change law of the Sabbath, much stress is laid upon the affair in the corn-field. Matt. xii. 1—9. The Redeemer in this instance claims to be 'One greater than the temple,' and partly on this account vindicates his disciples from the charge brought against them by the Pharisees. But, strange to say, almost all our modern writers take sides with the Pharisees, in supposing that here was an actual violation of the law of the Sabbath. Nevertheless they would not be so Pharisaic, as to impeach the blessed Saviour, and therefore, to steer clear, they uphold the violation, and plead the divinity of Christ in justification of it. Now I do most solemnly protest against this view of the case, and resolutely maintain, that there was no proper violation of the Sabbatic law on the part of the disciples. I would as soon be found among the fault-finding Pharisees, as among those who make the Saviour a transgressor. So far from his conniving at any real profanation of the Sabbath, his conduct was in happy keeping with the humane design of the institution. The institution, as he taught, was made FOR man; for his benefit; for his good. It was never designed to bear hard, either on the bodies, or on the souls of men; but, on the contrary, to minister gladness and comfort to the human race. Hence when the Lord permitted his disciples to provide themselves food, he did but carry out the original design of the institution. It was true Sabbath-keeping, not Sabbath-breaking.

> "Our Sabbath has its work:
> Love may yet labor on care's day of rest."

And I should consider, that I actually honor, and sanctify, and shed glory on the sacred day, as far as the acts of any poor sinful mortal can shed glory on it, by going about such labor as might be necessary to feed the hungry or clothe the naked. Our modern doctors generally admit, that such labors of love comport well with the Christian Dispensation, but reason upon the passage now under consideration, as if they thought the benevolent feelings were so hampered by the rigors of the Old Dispensation, that they could not have their full development, until there was something like a breaking down of that Economy, which, as they suppose, commenced with the ministry of Christ. Thus they would make out, that the institutions of the Old Testament were a restraint upon piety! 'But wisdom is justified of her children.'

In this matter of the corn-field, our Saviour places the conduct of his disciples on a footing with the service of the priests in the temple. These, on the Sabbath-day, were engaged in cutting up and preparing the sacrifices, and that to twice the quantity of other days of the week. Yet all this labor was not considered as a proper violation of the Sabbatic law. On the contrary it promoted the due sanctification of the Sabbath, because the temple-service was the established mode of worshiping God, and only by a compliance with it could the Israelites have fellowship with Him. The application is easy. The disciples were engaged in the service of 'One greater than the temple.' To perform such service it was necessary that their bodily energies be recruited by a supply of food. Therefore if the sanctity of the temple-service justified the performance of certain kinds of labor on the Sabbath, by the priests, much more does the sanctity of the service of Jesus Christ, justify the disciples in such labor as is necessary to enable them to discharge it: especially when there is also the additional reason, that they are objects of humanity; which would of itself be a sufficient justification of their conduct, even were they not actually engaged in the service of Christ.

Now in all this account where is any thing like a right claimed by Christ to alter, amend, or break down the law of the Sabbath? Indeed we never should have heard of such a thing, only that the conceit about a change of the day must some way or other be justified: and in order to this, two glaring and wicked absurdities must be supported; one, that the Pharisaic notion about the nature of the Sabbath rest was just; the other, that the dignity of the Saviour justified him and his disciples in beginning to break over the restraints of the law. For on no other principle can many of our first-day friends see but what the Pharisees had the best of the argument.

T. B. BROWN.

THE WORLD WITHOUT A BIBLE.

BY F. BUCKINGHAM GRAHAM.

Without a BIBLE!
O'er this fated earth
The sound of wo is heard; each cottage hearth
Unencompass'd with a happy group
Of smiling fav'rites, cheered by love and hope
Divine; for here, when one week's toil
Is past, another must begin—turmoil
Is rife. No Sabbath day of holy rest,
With its reviving influence, greets the opprest.
When Jesus, bleeding hung
Upon the cross, He spake, and nature flung
Her darksome veil o'er the vast universe
Of sinful mortals; but our state is worse
Than theirs, for o'er us hangs the awful night
Of pagan ignorance, without the light
Of e'en a guiding star. No mid-day sun
Of righteousness, with rays serene, doth run
His heavenly course, and man is seeking peace
In pride or passion, or the swift increase
Of affluence.
What of eternity?
Can no one learn the joyful minstrelsy
Of Heaven! There angels chant the praise
Of Him who reigns supreme. Those blissful lays
Which seraphs have for many ages sung,
Are still unlearned by us. Our harps are hung
Upon the willows, toneless and unstrung.
The sweeping river and the gurgling rill,
With solemn voices praise th' Almighty still.
At morning's balmy dawn the little bird
Warbles his song, and then at eve is heard
The matin of the graceful Nightingale
Resounding sweetly through the fragrant vale
While man alone has no desire to sing
His own Protector's praise—no wish to fling
A grateful incense on the ambient air,
Nor bend the knee in fervent, heartfelt prayer.

Without the BIBLE we've no beacon here
To guide to the celestial world above;
But with that book this earth imparts a cheer,
And rest is promised in that blissful sphere
Where sound the lute notes of eternal love.

The only way of securing universal equality to man is to regard every honest employment as honorable, and then for every man to learn, in whatsoever state he may be, therewith to be content, to fulfil with strict fidelity the duties of the station, and to make every condition a post of honor.

MINISTERIAL REPUTATION.

A minister's character is the lock of his strength; and if once this be sacrificed, he is like Samson shorn of his hair; a poor, feeble, faltering creature, the pity of his friends and the derision of his enemies. I would not have bad ministers screened, nor would I have good ones maligned. When a preacher of righteousness has stood in the way of sinners, and walked in the counsel of the ungodly, he should never again open his lips in the great congregation, until his repentance is as notorious as his sin. But while his character is unsullied, his friends should preserve it with as much care against the tongue of the slanderer, as they would his life against the hand of the assassin.

When I consider the restless malignity of the great enemy of God and holiness, and add to this his subtlety and craft: when I consider how much his malice would be gratified, and his schemes promoted by blackening the character of the ministers of the gospel; when I consider what a multitude of creatures there are who are his vassals, and under his influence, creatures so destitute of moral principle, and so filled with venomous spite against religion, as to be prepared to go any lengths in maligning the righteous, and especially their ministers, I can account for it on no other ground, than a special interposition of Providence, that the reputation of Christian pastors is not more frequently attacked by slander, and destroyed by calumny. But probably we see in this as in other cases, that wise arrangement of Providence by which things of delicacy and consequence are preserved, by calling forth greater solicitude for their safety.—Church members should therefore be tremblingly alive to the importance of defending their minister's character. They should neither expect to see him perfect, nor hunt after his imperfections—imperfections which after all may be consistent with not only real, but eminent piety—they should not take pleasure in either magnifying or looking at them, and endeavor to lose sight of his infirmities in his virtues, as they do the spots of the sun amidst the radiance with which they are surrounded. Let them not be the subject of conversation even between yourselves, much less before your children, servants, and the world. If you talk of his faults in derision, who will speak of his excellencies with admiration? Do not look at him with suspicion, but repose an honorable confidence in his character. Do not make him an offender for a word, and refuse to him that charity and candor of judgment, which would be granted to every one else. Do not magnify indiscretions into immoralities, and exact from him that absolute perfection, which in your own case you find to be unattainable. Beware of whispers, inuendoes, significant nods, and that slanderous silence which is more defamatory than the broadest accusation.

Defend him against the groundless attacks of others. Never hear him spoken of with undeserved reproach, without indignantly repelling the shafts of calumny from the witling that would make him ridiculous, the scorner that would render him contemptible, and the defamer that would brand him as immoral.—J. A. James.

JUDGE GASTON'S LAST WORDS.

His last words were in admirable keeping with the purity and piety of his long life. Surrounded by a few chosen friends, who were at his bed-side on the first information of a danger to which he was insensible, he was relating with great playfulness, the particulars of a convivial party at Washington City, many years ago, and spoke of one who on that occasion avowed himself a "Free Thinker," in religion. "From that day," said Judge Gaston, "I always looked on that man with distrust. I do not say that a Free Thinker may not be an honorable man; that he may not from high motives scorn to do a mean act; but I dare not trust him. A belief in an overruling Divinity, who shapes our ends, whose eye is upon us and who will reward us according to our deeds, is necessary. We must believe and feel, that there is a God All-wise—and raising himself and seeming to swell with the thought—"ALMIGHTY!" There was a sudden rush of the blood to the brain. He sank in the arms of his friends—and in five minutes his spirit was gone! Not a struggle betokened its flight. Not a groan pained the ear of his agonized friends. His body has gone to the dust; his spirit, we cannot doubt, rests in the bosom of that God Almighty whose name was last on his lips, and to whom he had long given the homage of a pure and devoted heart.—The Clarion.

THE BIBLE.

A French officer who was prisoner on his parole at Reading, met with a Bible. He read, and was so struck with its contents, that he was convinced as to the truth of Christianity, and resolved to become a Protestant. When his gay associates rallied him for taking so serious a turn, he said in his vindication, "I have done no more than my old school-fellow, Bernadotte, who has become a Lutheran." "Yes, but he became so," said his associates, "to obtain a crown." "My object," said the Christian officer, "is the same. We only differ as to the place. The object of Bernadotte is to obtain one in Sweden; mine, to obtain one in heaven."

Supreme love to God, which is the first great precept of the Divine law, establishes intimate communion between him and the soul, and therefore as there is in him a capacity for eternal developement, and also in the soul for endless acquisition, it secures the chief end of finite intelligence, which is to glorify God, and enjoy him for ever.

"Were I to live again," exclaimed Sir John Mason, (privy counsellor to Henry VIII.) on his death-bed, "were I to live again, I would change the court for the cloister; my privy counsellor's bustle for the retirement of a hermit; the whole time which I have spent in the palace for one hour's communion with God."

Please all men in the truth, but wound not the truth to please any.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, JULY 11, 1844.

☞ The publication office of this paper is at No. 9 Spruce Street, first door below the Tribune Buildings, and five doors from Nassau Street. Our friends will find there all the publications of the New York Sabbath Tract Society, the Address of the General Conference to the Baptists, the Minutes, etc.

☞ Those who may wish to see the Editor will find him at the office between 2 and 5 o'clock P. M.

REPENTANCE.

Definition—Nature—Distinctions—Necessity—Result.

The term repentance is one which expresses a change of mind, and an earnest desire that something which has been done were undone. The Greek word thus translated may perhaps be entitled to a broader signification, since it not only denotes sorrow for what is past and a desire of amendment, but also the train of reflections through which these were produced. Its proper signification, as used among theological writers, is, a reduction of the mind from a rebellious or disaffected state to that of submission to God and thorough separation from sin.

The nature of Repentance can in no way be better explained, than by exhibiting the process through which the sinner is led to it. In doing this, the first thing which would be presented to us, would be the view which he takes of sin, as in itself the greatest possible evil—as the transgression of a just and wholesome law—as contempt shown to the authority of a rightful ruler—as adapted to destroy the government of God, and to debase and ruin the subject of it. Such a view of the nature and effect of sin could hardly fail to awaken in his mind an aversion to it—an aversion which would increase to absolute and unqualified hatred of it for its own intrinsic hatefulness. The necessary consequence of this view of sin and feeling towards it, would be deep and heartfelt sorrow that he should have been guilty of any connection with it. This grief would lead very naturally to confession and a determination to break away from those habits which had been the occasion of so much injury to all concerned—which were evil in themselves, and evil in all their tendencies and effects. And this sorrow for sin and turning away from it, is what is meant by Repentance.

With this explanation before us, we are prepared to appreciate the distinction between evangelical and legal repentance. In the former, the wrongness or sinfulness of the act itself is the occasion of sorrow, and gives rise to an entire change. In the latter, the evil consequence of sin in exposing the transgressor to punishment, is the thought present to his mind; and the fear of punishment is the cause of his sorrow and of his resolutions for amendment. There is nothing implied in this which conflicts with the most entire selfishness. Indeed, it is a selfish fear that he shall receive what he is conscious of deserving, that awakens all his anxiety concerning his sins. The character and claims of God he does not in the least appreciate, and the sinfulness of living in violation of the most sacred obligations, is far from his mind. If he could drive from him the thought of God's Omnipotence, and convince himself that by some means he might escape the arm of justice, his tears would soon be dry, and his heart as merry and careless as ever.—Yet this fear of punishment is not to be condemned as in itself wrong. It results from a law of our being requiring us to dread the infliction of pain, and is to be commended as exhibiting some regard for the eternal interests of self; if for nothing else. Indeed, it is an appeal to these fears which often —we may say generally—arouses the mind of the sinner and leads him to inquire concerning the claims of the Gospel. But while this is true, it must at the same time be borne in mind, that sorrow, however deep and pungent, which springs from such a source, is no part of repentance unto life, but is the sorrow of the world which may exist and still leave the subject of it exposed to death. Through some means, the mind must be brought to take a just view of God's character, and to feel the obligation to a life of holiness, aside from its consequences, before the repentance which the Gospel requires will be produced, and the sinner find peace in believing.

To the question, Whence our obligation to repent?—there can be but one answer. We have all sinned. This fact, however slight may have been our deviations from the path of rectitude, imposes upon us the necessity of repentance towards God. Our obligation depends not for its binding authority upon any particular circumstances in which we may be placed, or any special revelations which may have been made to us. Though no mercy were offered, and no hope of forgiveness held out, the duty of sorrow for sin, and an immediate abandonment of it, would be as truly ours as it now is while pardon and acceptance are offered to those who repent and believe.

One other question remains to be answered. It is in regard to the connection between repentance and salvation. Some have taken the ground that it stood in the relation of cause—and that, therefore, repentance gave the subject of it a title to pardon and eternal life. This view could hardly be taken by one who should regard himself as obligated to devote his highest powers to the cause of God and Truth. Such an one would feel that only constant obedience could entitle him to acceptance, and that for the slightest deviation from this, his efforts, which always must be due to God, could never atone. There must be another foundation for the hope of final salvation. Repentance, then, can be nothing else than the condition on which forgiveness is offered, and is the means of placing us in the way of receiving pardon. When to this repentance is added a belief on Him who has made a propitiatiton for our sins, then may the soul rest confidently for the present, and look forward joyfully to the future.

STATE OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

It is common to hear the decrease of Romanism argued from the increase of general intelligence and religious inquiry. At first view the argument appears plausible, and one might almost think an impassable barrier had been thrown in the way of the progress of that church. An examination of the facts, however, will dispel any such delusive dreams. From these it appears, that notwithstanding the increase of intelligence, the Church of Rome still holds her place, and embraces in her communion a greater number than at any other period since the Reformation. This may be a startling announcement to those who have allowed themselves to suppose that Protestantism was triumphing over every form of superstition. In England and the United States, according to the estimation of the Romish hierarchy, the prospects for Roman dominion were never brighter. And it ought to be remembered by every one, that of those nations that did not become Protestant before the close of the sixteenth century, not one has since become Protestant. It is true that great changes have taken place since that time, by which some of these nations have become infidel and skeptical; but the change has not been in favor of Protestantism. When they have become sick of their infidelity, instead of turning to Protestantism, they have in some cases again put on the form of regard for the Catholic Church; and that church, by the aid of such accessions, has actually advanced during the last two hundred years.

We do not allude to this for the sake of exciting alarm, but to exhibit the true state of things. Knowledge of the facts is necessary to action; and action is necessary to our safety. But how is this action to be put forth? We do not believe that the enacting of laws or the organization of parties for the express purpose of putting down Catholicism, will be of the least use. Such a course would only serve to strengthen it. If we would exert an influence over Catholics, it must be by Christian effort on their behalf. The assistance which has been given to their system by following their traditions, must be withdrawn. Those appendages of Anti-Christ, which so disfigure the Protestant Church, and give occasion for denying the soundness of the Protestant principle, that "the Bible is a sufficient rule of faith," must be lopped off. Protestantism must cast out the beam out of her own eye, and then shall she see clearly to cast out the mote that is in another's. Let this be done, and then let us enter with the spirit of prayer, and in reliance upon the power of truth, into those labors of love for their benefit which are so much demanded, and we need not fear for the result.

PENNY A WEEK.

It is asserted that the Wesleyans in the Old World, notwithstanding their poverty, and the enormous church-rates which they pay in support of the national establishment, do more for the cause of Missions than any other Christian sect on earth. Their great success in raising money depends mainly upon the penny-a-week system which is maintained among them. For this they are indebted to Mr. Wesley, whose practical knowledge of human nature so eminently qualified him for the work which he did. We wish the system might be adopted by all Christian churches, and we are sure that its working would be most successful. In its early history, the church relied mainly on the poor for support and increase. To this class our Saviour preached, and from this class were his disciples mostly taken. The arrangements of the church now ought to be such as to interest and encourage the poor. In what way could this be done better than by adopting such a plan to raise money for religious purposes that they could engage in it? Those whom Providence has enabled to contribute more largely, should not feel themselves released from obligation to do so. But if all could be induced systematically to contribute their mite, the aggregate would be no trifle. In a denomination numbering only six thousand communicants, three thousand dollars might thus be raised annually without its being felt. So much for system. We hope some who read the following from the Baptist Record, will resolve to try the plan.

A penny a week is a small affair, and many persons, who are accustomed to handle large amounts of money, think it too insignificant to claim their attention. It is, after all, however, no trifling matter. Drops make up the ocean—and grains of sand constitute that formidable barrier which confines the mighty deep within the limits fixed by Him who said, "Hitherto shalt thou come and no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed." In like manner the abundant treasuries of our wealthiest men are made up of pennies, and if these be utterly disregarded, their abundance will soon be converted into want.

Our benevolent institutions all need money to sustain them, and the inquiry has arisen often, how can it be realized? Too much dependence has been placed on large donations. These are good when they are made, but they do not secure that permanence to the receipts which is essential to the success of any enterprise. If every Christian can be enlisted in the work, thousands of little springs will be opened, from which the reservoir can always be replenished and kept full. On the penny-a-week plan this object can be accomplished. All can give this, and all who do give it will feel interested in the cause for which they contribute it, and as that interest increases, the amount will be enlarged as the ability is possessed, until the great work of evangelizing the world shall have been accomplished.

Wherever this plan has been tried it has proved efficient, and if it be faithfully pursued, it must always do so.

CHEAP POSTAGE.

Since the late decisions in favor of independent letter-carriers, their number has greatly increased, and they are doing a heavy business upon some of the most important mail-routes. The people seem determined to have a reduction of postage; and if it can not be secured through the Post Office, they will try some other means. The result may be, to drive that department, in self-defence, to grant the wishes of the people. The following account of the Post Office arrangements in England, is from one of Elizur Wright's letters published in the Boston Chronicle. It shows that in that country the finances of the department, to say nothing of the intelligence and satisfaction of the population, have been greatly benefited by the system of cheap postage.

"You may send a letter of no matter how many pieces of paper, or containing no matter what dry substance, if it does not weigh over half an ounce, to any part of the kingdom, for a penny, or two cents; if it weighs less than an ounce, four cents, and so on. This has wonderful consequences. It sets all the people to corresponding, resuscitates old friendships, creates new ones, facilitates all manner of traffic, and pays the Government a clear profit of $3,000,000 per annum! It may be called the grand civilizer and universal educator of the people. The poorest girl that can express her ideas by pothooks, now corresponds with her poor parents while out at service; and if she wishes to remit them a few shillings of her earnings, she has only to pay three pence, or six cents, at the post office for a money order, and enclose it in her letter, and the government then becomes not only the bearer, but the insurer of the money. It cannot be lost, and the party to whom it is sent is as sure to get it, as if it were handed over in silver. The convenience of this arrangement for making little purchases, collecting little debts, &c. must be felt to be understood.

"In connection with the great carriers, whose arrangements for the delivery of parcels, after the manner of Harnden & Co., ramify all over the kingdom, the cheap postage and money order system give the country all the advantages of the city. They give a life-blood circulation, which makes people strong, wise, and happy. I wish I could blow a trumpet on this subject that 'would reach every log-house beyond the mountains.'—Fellow-countrymen, we have the power in the United States to have a system as good and as cheap. For heaven's sake, do not let us pick our own pockets any longer for the benefit of people who will not even thank us. If our Federal Government cannot do this for us, it is not worth having. This postage system is the best thing I have seen in England. For the sake of it, I could almost put up with the monkey tricks and the mean tricks of the aristocracy."

THE FOURTH AT WATERFORD, CONN.

A happy change has come over New England in the mode of commemorating the birth-day of American Independance. Powder and drunkenness have to a great degree given place to order, sobriety and reflection; while, at the same time, the noble enthusiasm and interest inspired by the associations of the day, are still more felt by all. As a casual spectator, the writer was deeply interested and impressed with the Sunday School Celebration at Waterford. Five Sunday Schools, with each a banner, convened at the Old Baptist Church, and were addressed by Elder Blain, E. Larned, Esq., and another gentleman. They then repaired to a grove at a little distance, each school under its banner and marshal, accompanied by teachers, superintendents, clergy and friends, and there partook of a hearty collation prepared for the occasion. Among others present was the venerable Elder Darrow, pastor of the church where they assembled, Elder Rogers, pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, A. M. Frink, Esq., the Mayor of the city of New London, with other friends of S. Schools. The banners were an object of interest. On one was this motto, "In the name of our God will we raise our BANNER;" on another, "His BANNER over us is love." The S. D. B. School had, as the motto of their banner, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy."

The number of children present was near 300, with a deeply interested throng of spectators.—There was no noise, no hurrah, nothing calculated to vitiate the minds of either children or adults. One or two reflections must have occupied every serious mind: 1. The amount of positive evil which was prevented, by this innocent mode of spending the day, especially to children in the vicinity of large towns and cities. 2. The amount of positive happiness which sported on every youthful countenance, and the evident satisfaction of the spectators. 3. The excellence of the instruction imparted, and the attention and delight with which it was received. F.

Connecticut, July 8, 1844.

◆

Annual Meeting of German Jewish Rabbis and Ministers.—We learn from the Occident for July, that Dr. Philipson, author of a number of works connected with the Jews, has proposed an annual meeting of the Rabbis and preachers of Germany, for the purpose of deliberating upon matters of general interest to Judaism. A number of distinguished men among them have assented to the plan, and it will probably be carried out. The projector of the meetings, for himself, intends to submit three important propositions to the first assembly, in regard to the establishment of a Jewish Theological Faculty, the foundation of a Jewish Hospital and School in Jerusalem, and a union in reference to the improvement of public worship. It is hoped that good will result from free discussion and association.

It is said that a considerable number of Jews are engaged in learning mechanical trades. Several societies have been establised in European cities for the encouragement of this object. A society at Frankfort on the Maine assisted, during the past year, 584 persons, most of whom continue in their employ.

◆

A number of communications which were intended for this number are deferred until the next.

☞ Our thanks are due to a number of friends who have exerted themselves to increase the subscription list of the Recorder. One individual, who says he has obtained ten or twelve subscribers and forwarded the pay without the least inconvenience to himself, suggests that it would not be difficult for each of the present list to add another name in this way. Who will try the experiment?

◆

The New York Sabbath Tract Society held its second Anniversary on the evening of July 7. The Report of the Board of Directors gave a full account of the Society's labors during the past year, and presented many interesting illustrations of the power of truth.

ITEMS.

The First Ship.—The ark built by Noah was the first as well as the largest vessel of which we have any account. Her tonnage was nearly ten times greater than that of the largest ship of the line in our Navy, being estimated at 42,400 tons. Her proportions would be considered good even now, after the accumulated experience of ages in ship-building, although her model may not have been the best adapted for speed. Allowing 18 inches to one cubit, her length was 450 feet, 75 feet beam, and 45 feet depth of hold.

From Persia.—By information lately received at the missionary rooms in Boston, from Ooroomiah, Persia, it seems that the French Jesuits have been again ejected from Persia.

Encouraging.—Rev. Dr. Hawes, of Hartford, Ct., has been absent from this country for some months on a visit to the Missions of the American Board, and to the Oriental churches bordering on the Mediterranean. By a letter from him, we learn that at Boosa and at Constantinople, an encouraging state of religious feeling was enjoyed, and many are seriously inquiring. Persecution had broken out at Constantinople; but which, it was thought, would not long continue. Dr. Hawes was to return by the last steamer from Liverpool.

Death of Dr. Grant.—It was stated, some weeks ago, that Dr. Grant was about to return from his Mission among the Nestorians to this country. We since learn that he died at Masul of typhus fever.

Since the above was in type, we are informed that nothing of the kind had been heard by the Board of Foreign Missions. It is hoped the rumor was unfounded.

Persecution in Denmark.—By letters lately received from Denmark, it seems that persecution has not ceased, but is increasing at Copenhagen. Mr. Moenster had been thrown into prison on the charge of having received an appointment as a missionary for a foreign Baptist community, and of exerting himself for the propagation of baptism in that country contrary to law. It is said likewise, that Mrs. Moenster had been threatened with imprisonment, on account of her firmness and decision in advising the congregation.

Sunday in New Orleans.—It is said that two hundred merchants in New Orleans have petitioned the City Council to pass an ordinance prohibiting the opening of stores on Sunday; from which it appears that some who now open their stores on that day are anxious to obtain a law to forbid their doing it, or, that some who close their stores are anxious to save their own business by compelling others to do likewise. Would it not be about as well to enforce the old law, "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work."

Musical Convention.—We are glad to see that the lovers of music are taking pattern from the friends of Temperance, Anti-Slavery, and Common Schools, to hold Conventions. One was held at Wentworth a short time since, which continued two days. Prof. L. Mason, of Boston took the lead, and most of the time was occupied in singing, practical remarks, and interesting instructions. If music has the soothing power attributed to it, there is little occasion to fear that serious contentions would be witnessed in such conventions.

Religious Rulers.—We see it stated that on the tickets of each of the political parties may de found a religious man. This is gratifying, and speaks favorably. But we lament the fact, that out of this some have undertaken to make political capital. It is certainly the duty of every Christian to act under the influence of an enlightened conscience in political matters; but for those who pay no regard to right or conscience, to traffic in the religious preferences of their favorite candidates, is neither justifiable nor profitable.

Missions in China.—A report from the American Baptist Missions in China, is now going about in the Baptist papers, giving an account of the labors there during the past year. China is now open to missionaries, and invites laborers into the harvest. The report closes with an appeal to the privileged disciples of this land, that they would pray and contribute on behalf of China.

Baptist Missionary Society, Eng.—The income of the past year has been $98,332, and the expenditure $102,739. These added to all previous distributions, make a total of $1,038,766.

Rev. Mr. Fairchild.—The case of this gentleman, who was charged with gross immoralities, and who attempted to take his own life, has called forth many remarks. It is now asserted that the charges against him were false, and that the attempt upon himself was made under the influence of temporary derangement. The matter is to be thoroughly investigated, until which time all judgment ought to be suspended.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

The Highlands of Ethiopia Described, during eighteen months' residenee of a British Embassy at the Christian Court of Shoa. By Maj. W. C. Harris. New York: J. Winchester, 30 Ann street.

This is a most interesting and valuable book of travels, written in an animated style, and introducing the reader to the interior of a country hitherto almost unknown. Aside from its interest as a narrative of travel and adventures, its faithful and graphic pictures of the manners and customs of the countries visited, with their history, productions and trade, make it one of the most important works of the kind lately published. The expedition was commenced under the auspices of a liberal government, and conducted with great zeal. Its results are embodied in a form which will entitle Mr. Harris to the thanks of the friends of history and science. It is undoubtedly the best account to be had of a Christian nation in the interior of Abyssinia, claiming to have existed for fifteen centuries. We are gratified to see that the taste for light literature and cheap publications is so diminished as to induce the publisher to issue a work like this.

Our readers may expect some extracts from the work soon.

The Beethoven Collection of Sacred Music. Edited by E. Ives, Jr., W. Alpers, and H. C. Timm. New York: J. Winchester.

Not professing any great skill in the science of Music, we handed this volume over to a friend, in whose judgment we have entire confidence. By him it is pronounced a valuable collection of rare pieces. The accompaniment for the organ he regards as excellent. He suggests, however, that the music is of so high an order, and some of the pieces so difficult to execute, as to render immediate popularity uncertain. In the end it will certainly prove a means of elevating the standard of musical taste. The typographical execution of the work deserves credit.

A Memoir of Mrs. Judith S. Grant, late Missionary to Persia. By William W. Campbell. New York: J. Winchester.

Mrs. Grant was the wife of Rev. Dr. Grant. She went as a Missionary to Persia some years since, where she died at the age of twenty-five. Her history embraced a variety of interesting and instructive incidents, which the biographer has presented in an attractive form. The circulation of the book would exert a beneficial influence, and we are glad to see it.

History of the Oregon Territory, it being a demonstration of the Title of these United States of America to the same, is the title of a pamphlet by Thomas J. Farnham, whose travels in the Western Prairies, the Oregon Territory, and the Californias, have fully established his reputation. The work is accompanied by a map, and contains much valuable information. New York: J. Winchester.

The Saturday Emporium is the title of a large and well printed Weekly Newspaper, just started in New York. It is designed to be a Family Gazette of Literature, Art, Science, Agriculture, and General Intelligence. Edmund B. Green, Editor; Ward & Co. Publishers, 30 Ann street.

The New World.—The first No. of a new volume of this well-known paper was issued last week. It is under the editorial charge of Henry C. Deming and James Mackay; Published at No. 30 Ann street.

The Conservative is the title of a semi-weekly paper lately issued at Watertown, N. Y. The design of the paper is indicated by its name and its motto, "The Church, the Ministry, and the Gospel, the best means for promoting Moral Reformation." Edited and Published by H. Mattison.

General Intelligence.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The steam-ship Britannia reached Boston July 3, bringing Liverpool dates to June 19.

A deep sympathy in favor of O'Connell had been produced by his imprisonment, and the Repeal rent had increased greatly—having amounted to near $15,000 in a single week. Mr. O'Commell was treated courteously, but had been prohibited addressing the people from his prison yard. The writ of error is to be brought before the House of Lords, and July 4th was fixed for the day of opening the case.

The Emperor of Russia, whose unexpected arrival in England was spoken of with so much interest in the papers received by the former steamer, left England on Sunday, the 9th ult., for his own dominions. During his week's stay, he was gazed at, feted, and treated to the extent of aristocracy's ability.

In Parliament a bill in relation to Dissenters' Chapels, which affected materially the disputed question between Unitarians and Presbyterians respecting the right to certain chapels where Socinian doctrines are taught, had been discussed with much warmth and ill-feeling.

Thomas Campbell, the Poet, died at Boulogne, France, on the 15th ult.

It is expected that the accouchement of Her Majesty will take place in the month of July.

His Majesty Louis Phillippe is expected to visit England during the month of September.

The weather throughout England was favorable, and crops very promising.

At Berlin the report is revived that a great congress of sovereigns will shortly take place in Germany, at which the Emperors of Russia and Austria and the King of Prussia will take part. Carlsbad is spoken of as the place of meeting.

Mr. Healey, an American artist, is at present in London, executing a mission for the King of the French.

On the 5th inst., an estate of 12,470 acres, situated in Maryland, U. S., was put up for sale by auction, in London. There was not a single bidder.

France.—It is announced in the French journals that the Emperor of Morocco has proclaimed a holy war against France, and, in conjunction with Abdel-Kader, is making active preparations for invading the territory claimed by the latter country. It appears, from despatches just received from Algiers, that actual hostilities have already commenced on the frontiers of Morocco.

The suspended departure of the Prince de Joinville to take command of the squadron to act against Morocco, had been the occasion of much surprise.

THREE DAYS LATER.

On Sunday morning, 7th inst., the steamship Great Western made her appearance in New York harbor. She brings Liverpool dates to June 22d.

The Cotton market had decidedly improved.

A deputation of the corporation of Dublin, consisting of the Lord Mayor and others, had visited London, and presented a Petition to the Queen and to Parliament setting forth their opinion that the Repeal prisoners had not had a fair trial.

The answer of the Queen to the Repeal Address, gives no ground of hope from that quarter. The sympathy for Ireland is thought to be increasing among the better class of England.

There is an injunction on the monster steamer Great Britain. This of course will keep her in dock for some time yet.

The state bed in which the King of Saxony slept at Knole Park, the seat of Lord Amherst, cost £8,000, and the fittings of his sleeping room £20,000.

The King of Saxony left London on a tour to Scotland and Wales.

There are in Ireland 217 parishes without a single Protestant except the minister.

It is said that a ball is about to be held in St. Petersburgh, for the benefit of the Irish repeal fund.

From St. Domingo City.—By an arrival July 5, in fifteen days from the city of St. Domingo, it appears that the city was then quiet. The inhabitants of that part of the Island were determined to hold their position. General Santa Anna was still on the frontiers with 6,000 men, to repulse any invasion that might be made against them. His brother, who held the office of Receiver-General, died at the city on the 14th ult. His death was greatly lamented. The place was well supplied with American produce. The product of the Island was scarce and high, and but little business doing, as almost every man and boy was a soldier.

From Dominica.—A late arrival announces that on the 5th ult., martial law had been proclaimed in consequence of a rise among the blacks, about 300 being assembled near the town. One of the leading inhabitants had his horse cut down under him, and was himself so severely wounded that his life was despaired of. Several blacks had been shot down, and great excitement and confusion prevailed.—Boston Daily Adv.

From Buenos Ayres and Montevideo.—A brig which sailed from Buenos Ayres 21st May, reports that the war at Montevideo was raging fiercer than ever; the blockade was still on and provisions very scarce. No beef whatever was to be had in the city or its neighborhood. Rivera had had an engagement with Gen. Urquiza and was defeated by him. Gen. Gomez went in pursuit but by rapid marches Rivera eluded his pursuit—in his march he lost many of his men and horses. Rivera made a second attempt to reach Montevideo but had been frustrated by Gen. Urquiza.

It was quiet at Buenos Ayres. Rosas rules with an iron rod, and is making himself more detestable than ever. Business was dull, and a sufficiency of American produce in the market.

There was a number of of American Vessels of War at Montevideo.

From Matanzas.—By an arrival on Monday we learn that on the morning of June 28, eleven of the ringleaders in the late insurrection were shot. An American man-of-war was daily expected, when the American citizens, still in confinement, would be released. Their names are—John Savage and John Hogan of New York, John Thompson of Maine, Samuel Moffit of Delaware and William Bisby of Vermont.

RIOTS IN PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia is again a scene of violence and bloodshed. A variety of causes are assigned for the outbreak, none of which afford the least justification of it. We will give the facts in the case as we gather them from the papers, and leave our readers to judge for themselves.

It seems that in consequence of an assault made by some body upon an encampment where the Native Americans had their fire works on the Fourth, and also by a statement that a quantity of arms had been deposited in the church of St. Philip de Neri, Southwark, considerable feeling was excited and an outbreak threatened. On Saturday evening last thousands began to collect in the vicinity of the church. The Military and Police were called out, and some persons taken into custody and placed in the church. On Sunday about 12 o'clock, near 2000 persons collected in front of the church, forced open the doors, and released Mr. Naylor, who had been confined there, and escorted him home. In the afternoon the Irish Greens, who had charge of the church, were assailed and driven away, after having fired upon the assailants, and shot one or two persons. The thousands assembled beat down the walls fronting the church, and forcibly entered it, when they were addressed by a number of distinguished persons and induced to leave the building. The church was left in the hands of a Committee of the citizens, by whom it was given over to the charge of the Military under Gen. Cadwallader. As this Committee were retiring, some disturbance occurred, which induced an officer to give orders to fire, and some twenty guns were fired, killing six persons and wounding others.

A great gathering assembled about 8 o'clock in the evening at the Market, brought out four cannon and raked Queen street. They were armed, and determined for fight. From that time until 11 o'clock the Natives kept up a constant fire with muskets and field pieces, which was returned by the soldiers. Many were killed and wounded. At 4 o'clock all was quiet.

In the afternoon of Sunday a proclamation was issued by the Sheriff, calling on the citizens to aid in restoring peace, and an express was started to Harrisburgh for the Governor.

On Monday the city presented a dismal appearance, the streets strewed with fragments of broken glass, and large spots of blood being seen here and there. It was under the control of the civil and military power. Expresses were sent to the President of the United States for troops, and to the two forts.

Gen. Cadwallader seems to have been singled out as an object of vengeance. Ten balls passed through his coat, not one of which drew blood.

By an extra at 4 o'clock it seems that the Sheriff had acceded to a request to withdraw the military, and give up the church to the possession of the civil posse of Southwark.—The number reported as killed or mortally wounded was 9; wounded 33; in all 42—which is probably below the truth.

On Monday night about 3000 military were under arms, in addition to the large civil force which had been organized. Troops from the country were stationed in Girard Bank, ready for any emergency. The night passed quietly, only here and there a little disturbance.

Tuesday morning the Natives were in possession of 20 pieces of cannon, and determined to wreak vengeance upon the soldiers. Gov. Porter issued a proclamation authorizing Gen. Patteson to use the most decisive steps in protecting the country from farther violence.—In some streets the trees, fences, windows, signs, doors, &c. are thoroughly riddled and battered.

No outbreak occurred on Tuesday, the city was under the control of the authorities, and it was thought no further trouble would be witnessed.—Total killed 13. Wounded 50.

Two instances have recently occurred in Boston, within the practice of one medical gentleman, of young ladies receiving severe wounds (in one case followed by inflammation, in the other severing a vein) from scissors carried in the fashionable pockets de la Suisse in the dress.

The Missouri at the latest dates was rapidly subsiding. It fell eight feet in one day at Brunswick.

The Mormons—Death of Joe Smith.—We gave some account of the Mormon difficulties last week. After the date at which that account closed, Smith was taken, and imprisoned at Carthage, in company with a number of leading Mormons. A melancholy tragedy was enacted at Carthage, on the 26th ult., which resulted in the death of Joe Smith and his brother Hyrum. From the numerous and conflicting accounts of the affair, we select the following as probably the most accurate. It is from the Louisville Journal of June 27, and was written on board the steamer Boreas:

"Yesterday, the 26th, Governor Ford having prevailed upon Joseph Smith and several other principal Mormons, to resign themselves into the hands of the officers of justice at Carthage to be tried by due process of law, five, and I believe only five, viz.: Joseph and Hyrum Smith, a Dr. Richards, and two others, were incarcerated in the Hancock county jail, and guarded by the Governor's troops, until this morning, when Governor Ford discharged the troops, except sixty already stationed at Nauvoo, and a further reserve of sixty, who, to-day, accompanied him to Nauvoo, to detect and annihilate the bogus factory, leaving the prisoners in the safe and efficient keeping of seven men of the Carthage Greys. Shortly after disbanding the McDonough troops, and the Governor's departure for Nauvoo, a large body of militia, say two hundred, resolved to wait on the prisoners in their room. Here was the beginning of trouble.

The faithful Greys could not consistently admit visitors to prisoners accused of treason and other felonies. The militia took efficient means to convince the guard of their impotence, and the opposing forces joined issue. At the charge of the militia the Greys fired, evincing a valor not surpassed nor even equaled by the renowned heroes of Thermopylæ. Here two hundred men were incompetent to intimidate these valorous seven, who, true to their trust, discharged their pieces with deadly aim. The militia soon ascertained, either by roll-call or particular inspection and inquiry, that none were either killed or wounded, and bethinking themselves that cartridge paper without ball therein, is harmlesss, the militia formed seven parties of seven men each, and thus arranged, each division seized one of the guard, and thus the valorous seven were overcome, and yet a few militia, say one hundred and fifty, were at leisure to enter and pay their respects to the prisoners. The door was forced, and Joe shot the foremost, named Wills, through the wrist. A general melee ensued, in which pistols spoke eloquently and forcibly. Five of the militia were wounded, though slightly. Joe Smith, endeavoring to escape, precipitated himself from the window, receiving, while between heaven and earth, some half dozen shots, and five thereafter. Hyrum, was killed within the prison. This tragedy was enacted between four and five this afternoon, and I heard the announcement of the courier to Warsaw at eight. The men immediately fell in, shouldered arms, right faced, and made divers defensive preparations; while the women with children in their arms, throng the levee, to cross by moonlight to Missouri, or await the return of Boreas from Keokek, to Quincy, that they may not be endandangered should the desperate Danites attempt to revenge the loss of their defunct head. All is confusion, and Warsaw looks as if besieged."

By later intelligence it seems that Nauvoo is quiet, for the present. The Louisville Journal, July 3d, says:

"We have seen a gentleman who was in Nauvoo on Friday, and informs us that all was then quiet there, the prominent Mormons exhorting their followers to offer no insult or molestation to any one, and in no case to offer violence except in strict self-defence. The deepest grief and affliction pervaded the city. There appeared to be no danger of the burning of Warsaw or Carthage."

The New York Tribune, speaking of the question whether this quiet will continue, says:

"We look for farther and bloodier histories from Nauvoo. The conduct of the Mormon chiefs, since the murder of their Prophet, shows plainly enough that there are cool, stern, controlling, powerful minds among them; that they have learned, either from history or their own instincts, to bide their time; and that the cut-throat enthusiasm which thought to exterminate a City and a Creed, will be wretchedly deceived. It may be—it is indeed very likely—that in a formal declared war the Mormons will at last get the worst of it and be destroyed; but what a series of horrors does not this conclusion presuppose!

The Fourth of July.—From the accounts by the papers, we judge that our National Anniversary was celebrated with unusual interest the present year. As usual, a large number of fires and accidents occurred, some of which we will put on record.

The Washington Hall, in New York, which had just undergone a complete renovation, and would have been, when completed, one of the most beautiful edifices in the city, took fire about 10 o'clock, A. M., and was damaged to the amount of about thirty thousand dollars.

Six or eight other fires occurred in New York, some of which were caused by fireworks.

A melancholy accident occurred at Utica, N.Y. by which Mr. James L. Beardsley, son of the Hon. Samuel Beardsley, had the lower part of his right arm torn completely off, and thrown nearly fifty feet, and was also considerably injured in the breast and face by an explosion. Mr. Hugh Roberts had his left arm dreadfully fractured and lacerated, so as to render amputation of nearly the whole of it necessary. Mr. Beardsley's arm was also amputated during the evening, above the elbow.

Mr. Charles Crowell had his arm blown off at Silver Creek, N. Y., while attempting to put a cartridge in a cannon used in celebrating the day.

At Hollister's lower factory, N. Hartford, a man had his eye destroyed by the bursting of a gun.

At Salisbury, Herkimer county, a cannon burst, and tore off an arm and a leg of one of the persons engaged in firing it.

These are but mournful specimens of a large number of articles which we see in our exchanges.

We learn that the inmates of the State Lunatic Asylum at Utica, to the number of about two hundred, celebrated the day in a very quiet and decorous manner. The Declaration of Independence was read by Mr. Sweet, Professor of Elocution after which, an excellent and appropriate oration was delivered by Mr. Maltbie. Both the reader and the orator are inmates of the Asylum, but it is no disparagement to others to say that they exhibited on this occasion much stronger evidence of sanity and of the possession of high intellectual endowments, than are frequently manifested on like occasions out of the confines of a Lunatic Asylum. The exercises were enlivened by instrumental music, and the performance of several pieces by the choir.

After the conclusion of the oration, refreshments and lemonade were provided by the Steward, and volunteer toasts, which had been prepared for the occassion by the inmates of the Asylum, were read for the amusement and gratification of the company.

Milling.—The "Brooklyn City Mills," it is said, are capable of flouring 1300 bushels of wheat in 24 hours, with only two run of stones. The stones, as may be inferred, are very heavy, the "runner" weighing not less than 6000 lbs., making 225 revolutions per minute, and driven by two steam engines of 25 horse power each. 280 mills of this description in constant operation, would convert into flour the entire wheat crop in the United States—a service which now engages not less than 4700 mills.

Naval.—The Mexican steam ships of war Guadaloupe and Montezuma are undergoing thorough repairs, under the direction of Messrs. Brown & Bell, ship-builders, and Stillman, Allen & Co., engineers, of this city. The Guadaloupe is a substantially-built iron vessel, of about 800 tons, with engines of moderate power, constructed after the plan generally used in the English steam-packets, having side lever beams and wrought iron wheels. The Montezuma is 1100 tons, built of wood, engines similar to those of the Gorgon Frigate, the cylinders being 66 inches diameter, 4½ feet stroke, and placed directly under the shafts. Each vessel has about 150 Mexican sailors and marines—and together they present rather a formidable appearance.

SUMMARY.

At Utica, on Friday afternoon a boy fell on the railroad track just before the cars, which passed over his arm and cut it off.

The remains of Governor DE WITT CLINTON, which have for seventeen years reposed in a private vault in Albany, belonging to the Lush and Ray families, have been removed to this city and deposited in the Greenwood Cemetery.

Ex-Governor King of Rhode Island has been arrested on a warrant of embezzling $50,000 of the funds of the R. I. Agricultural Bank.

Fourth of July Frost.—There was frost last Thursday night in the vicinity of New Bedford. Tender vines and vegetables were injured. It was the coldest 4th of July since 1821.

On the afternoon of the fourth of July the new Presbyterian Church in the village of Argyle, Washington Co. was consumed by fire.

The U. S. Treasury.—A Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Mercury says:—"I learned to-day that the receipts of the Treasury Department exhibited a degree of prosperity in the finances of the Government almost beyond parallel. For the last four or five years the weekly receipts rarely exceeded $250,000, whereas they now seldom fall below $900,000, and at times exceed a million!"

The sum taken in the tolls on the N. Y. State canals during the first 74 days of navigation this year exceeds the amount taken in the first 75 days last year, by $158,309.

Appointments by the President and Senate.—John Chambers, to be Governor of the Territory of Iowa, from the 15th instant, when his present commission will expire.

J. Humphrey, to be Marshal of the United States for the District of Michigan.

Richmond Loring, to be Commercial Agent of the United States at Aux Cayes, in the Island of St. Domingo, in the place of William B. Gooch, resigned.

The Great Flood.—St. Louis papers of the 27th state that the flood was on the turn. Millions of dollars will not cover the loss sustained by this inundation, which appears to have extended from the head waters of the Missouri to the mouth of the Mississippi, and nearly to have pervaded all the tributaries of both rivers. Thousands of cattle, horses, &c., have been destroyed, and an amount of property at present incalculable ruined or swept away.

On Saturday night a young lady who had just retired to bed in a dwelling house in the central portion of Hartford, was alarmed by the apparition of a man with a dark lantern. He came from behind a curtain stretched across one corner of the room, and commenced filling his sack coat pockets with spoils; dresses, &c., tying up what he could not thus dispose of, in a bundle. He finally approached the bed, and received a pitcher, taken from a stand at the head of the bed, and its contents, on the side of the head, from the hands of the damsel. He fled forthwith, leaving part of his booty, and dropping the remainder on his way down stairs.

We regret to learn the death of WESTERLO VAN RENSSELAER, Esq., the youngest son of the late Patroon of Albany. He died at the manor house, on Monday morning.

A large number of men are now engaged in breaking up the frigate Hudson, which was sold the other day at public auction for six hundred dollars. Probably at no time during the construction of the vessel was there about her hull a scene of so great activity.

The Pensacola Gazette of the 29th June, complains of the abduction of seven negroes a few days previous. A new England man by the name of Walker is suspected.

Twenty thousand people passed over the Harlem Railroad on the 4th, paying a gross revenue of $1,875.

During the month of June, 27 ships, 5 barks, 1 brig, and 4 schooners, engaged in the whaling trade, arrived at various ports of the United States, bringing 15,488 barrels sperm oil, and 29,533 barrels whale oil.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

John Whitford, Sanford P Stillman, Alfred B Burdick, S Davison, Joseph A Potter. (very well) Wm P Langworthy, W B Gillett.

Postmasters—Stonington, Ct, Mystic Bridge, Ct, Rochester, Factoryville, Broadalbin, Scio.

RECEIPTS.

Westerly, R I—A M Babcock, G S Barber, B F Burdick, D Babcock, Jr. & Co., H S Berry, Paul Babcock, Jr., B P Bentley, P Babcock, W Clark, L Cottrell Jr., C T Champlin B Champlin, G Gavit, A C Green, A Hiscox, Jesse Maxson, Chas. Maxson, J C Nash, N Nash, G W Noyes, P Potter, F W & J Potter, Wm Stillman, J P Stillman W H Stillman, A Stillman, W Stillman, O P Saunders, J T Thurston, W D Wells, J H Burdick, $2,00 each; D B Irish $1,25.

Hopkinton, R I—J D Babcock, J D Kenyon, N Clark, D Lewis, C C Lewis, E Saunders, M Burdick, N Langworthy, B Potter, C Kenyon, S Wells, G Irish, J Chapman, R Green, G H Perry, A Langworthy, T Clark, M S Kenyon, J T Edwards, J Spicer J W Langwurthy L G F Randolph, $2,00 each.

Mystic Bridge, Ct.—John Crocker, John Crandall, $2 each.

Stonington, Ct.—B F Langworthy, John Green, Geo. Babcock, $2 each.

Durhamville—J A Potter, $2.

Berlin—Rowland Lanphire, Nathan Vars, Chas. Saunders, W Green, $2 each.

Plainfield, N J.—Alexander Dunham, $2.

Petersburgh—Daniel Maxson, $2.

DeRuyter—A B Babcock ,50.

Crossingville, Pa.—B Stelle, $2.

Broadalbin—Mrs M & E Hawley $2.

Scio—Joseph Flint, $2.

Little Genesse—Henry P Green, H C Crandall, $2 each.

New Market, N J—David Dunn, Isace H Dunn, Isaac Clawson, James C Ayres, $2 each; Mr Potter, Cornelius Blackford, $1 each.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most River bks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ⅝	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ⅝	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2½
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton, Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38. West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatars, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10.

Caroline, City, Cohen. Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co. Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches, Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manuf ac Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 98.

TO PRINTERS.

The subscriber having relinquished the business of publishing the S. D. B. Register, wishes to sell his Press, Type, &c. And he takes this method of saying, that he will sell at a very low rate to any one wishing to purchase. The Press is a No. 3, Washington. There is every thing connected with the Office that is necessary for publishing a paper, and also an extensive quantity of Job Type, and a small Book Bindery.

Will Editors with whom we have exchanged, be so kind as to give the above an insertion in their papers, as a parting favor to one of the craft? JAMES BAILEY.

DeRuyter, Madison Co., N. Y. June 18, 1844.

The Bible says ☞ THE SABBATH. ☜ The Church says

The seventh day is — The first day is

WHICH SHALL WE HEAR?

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith. It is hoped all who love the Sabbath, and reverence God's word, will give this address a prayerful consideration.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, (3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 06 a 4 12
Pearl	4 50 a 4 56
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	23 00a23 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 32
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	7 00 a 8 50
Newcastle	6 50 a 7 50
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	– a —
Stripes, fast colors	– a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16½
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS.
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @28 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	27 @ 31
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 87 @ 2 91
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	16 00 @
Smoked Salmon Mlb	9 @ 10
ackerel, 1 bbl	9 75 @10 00
No 2 bbl	8 75 @ 9 00
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 25 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 25@7 50
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 37 @ 4 43
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 31 @ 4 37
Michigan	4 31 @ 4 37
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 50 @
Richm'd c mills	6 25 @ 6 50
Brandywine	4 75 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	12 00 @12 50
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N.Y	90 @ 95
Do South new
Rye, Northern	67 @
Corn N & Jersey	47½@ 48
Southern	45 @ 47
Barley, N R	@
Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	85 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A. & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 00
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 40@ 3 50
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piec	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	30@31
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES:
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer.	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	8 37 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 7@ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10¼ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6½a 7
American	5 a
Spring	5¾a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	8¼a 9½
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	6¼a 9½
Do Brown	6⅝a 8¾
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack 1 10	a
Do do fine 1 35	a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¾
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17⅜a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6⅜
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¾
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 37
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
I Do E. India	16 a 17
n plates I X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 38
No. 1	31 a 33
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

THE SAILOR'S WIFE.

A Song, written for Mr. Henry Russell.

The night is dark—the wind is high—
And storm-clouds gather in the sky;
The billows roll upon the shore,
With tireless rage, and deaf'ning roar!
The Sailor's Wife in terror wild,
Clasps to her breast her slumbering child—
With hurried steps—and form half clad,
She seeks the watch-tower—lone and sad!

"Hark! 'tis the Tempest's stifling breath—
It warns of danger—stranding—death—
Ha! see!—the Lightning's blinding flash!
And hark! Oh, God! the Thunder's crash!
Awake, my child—for it may be
Thy father perishes at sea!
Oh, wake—nor leave me lone and sad,
Lest these dark thoughts should drive me mad!

"Awake!—yet hark!—that sound again!
And yet again!—my brain! my brain!
Yes! 'tis the minute gun!—once more
Its note comes booming to the shore!
And now—the Lightning's flash so fast
I see a ship with shattered mast!
And now!—Awake!—I'm dark and sad—
My child!—My child!—I'm going mad!—

"He heeds me not!—but slumbers on;
And leaves me with my fears alone!
Alone!—Ha! see! they crowd the deck—
And—God of Heaven!—she strikes!—a wreck!
Oh, save him!—save him!—on the gale
Is borne that long and piercing wail,
As forth she rushes—pale—half clad—
Still shrieking—"Save him!—I am mad!"

Above the storm's tumultuous din
That cry resounds along the shore—
Its wild appeal may mercy win
When hope's last glimmering spark is o'er—
Tossed by the billows to and fro
Now lost to sight—now high in air
A speck is seen!—A Boat!—and, oh!
The crew are saved!—and he is there!

LEAVES FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTE BOOK—NO. 3.

LIVERPOOL—AGAIN.

Our first day in Liverpool was a Sunday. In the afternoon of that day we visited the Blue Coat Hospital, an institution established and endowed for the purpose of supporting and educating orphan, half-orphan, and indigent children. It is the oldest charitable institution in the city, having been established in 1708, when the population did not much exceed 5000. After enlarging its designs and endowments at several times, it now accommodates and supports about 350 boys and girls. It was to attend the chapel service that we went; but having entered the building before the time of service, we were politely shown through the different apartments. Cleanliness and order were apparent every where. The sleeping rooms were large and airy, with rows of beds neatly ranged on either side, while a broad aisle separated them. One room, perhaps 75 feet long, would accommodate near 200. The School-rooms, Committee-rooms, wash-rooms, (for faces and clothes,) dining-rooms, etc., were in perfect order and admirably adapted to the purposes to which they were devoted. The service in the chapel consists of singing, prayers, rehearsing a Catechism and portions of Scripture, which is done by the children, and is open to the admission of spectators, who generally attend in considerable numbers.—The children marched into the chapel in procession to the music of the organ, and were ranged in order upon seats occupying one side of the room. After this came the regular exercises, which were performed with great distinctness and deliberation, and closed with a prayer in which the best things were asked for the Queen and her consort with all the royal family. The services, as a whole, were exceedingly interesting; and however little sympathy we felt with public prayer reading by those who claimed not to have the spirit of prayer, yet we could not envy the heart of him who would prefer, that such exercises among the children themselves should be dispensed with.

In the evening we attended at the chapel of Rev. Mr. Raffles. The spirit of Christian courtesy and kindness with which we were invited to seats and provided with such books as were convenient for reference, contrasted strangely with the customs which prevail in some fashionable churches, and made us feel perfectly at home. The sermon was a direct and powerful one. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." It was a funeral occasion. After stating in the most simple manner the religious history and character of the deceased, he came to the exhortation and the promise, which was contained in the text. "Be faithful" to what? To truth and duty, was the reply, in which the sacredness and value of truth, and the extent of human obligation, were feelingly and clearly illustrated. The excellency of that "crown of life" was portrayed, and a fervent exhortation to seek it, closed the discourse. It did not seem to be a studied effort, yet it was so simple and fervid as to reach the heart of every hearer. Dr. Raffles is a man of some fifty years, who appears perfectly at ease, yet solemn, in the pulpit. If this be an ordinary sermon, his popularity is not surprising.

One thing connected with the religious services upon which we have attended to-day, was pleasing. Nearly every prayer which was offered, contained a petition, that a gracious Father, in whose hands were all things, would be pleased to continue such weather as is necessary to mature and ripen the fruits of the earth, now almost ready for the harvest. A remarkably rainy season had brought these fruits along to the critical point. A few days of beautiful weather had done much towards maturing them, and the continuance of these days was felt to be essential to the well-being of all classes. Hence from almost every church and chapel in the land, a voice is sent up to Him who controlleth the seasons, and who alone can order that which is best. There is something in this wide-spread and simultaneous acknowledgment of dependence, which it is delightful to behold. It is so like the feelings of an intelligent and well-disciplined family towards its head. When will men constantly recognize the presence of the Universal Father, and practically acknowledge their dependence upon Him?

Monday morning came, and with it the necessity of having our baggage examined at the Custom-house. It would be telling no news to speak of the annoyances and vexations connected with this operation. Scarcely a person has passed that ordeal of late years, without leaving his anathemas for those who officiate there, and who care much less for his anathemas than for his fines. One would suppose that protection against smugglers might be secured without the annoyance of having his wardrobe tumbled about and overhauled to the extent which is practiced here. At any rate, one who is conscious of having no designs to defraud, will make such a supposition. But this seems not to be the design, to protect against smuggling. It is rather to see what can be added to the receipts of the house. Happy is he who escapes without taxation or confiscation. I was not so lucky, and was compelled to leave a favorite author, whose pages I had marked for my own gratification, in the hands of these watchful guardians of authors' rights. Aside from the vexation attendant upon such an examination, I like not the principle of reckoning every man a rogue, who can not prove his innocence—especially when you will not let him prove it; but must prove it yourself. However, there is a satisfaction in feeling that you are through it—increased, perhaps, by the strictness of the trial.

Towards evening, we found leisure to wander through the upper part of the town, and to admire some specimens of architecture which are to be found. Further observation shows considerable that is attractive in Liverpool. The lower part of the city, where business mostly is transacted, and to which the stranger is first introduced, differs widely from that part which is occupied for the residences of the business men. A sight of either one of these divisions without the other would leave a false impression as to the character of the town—In the course of our walk we entered the cemetery—a deep valley, hollowed out from the rock, like an irregular basin. From the noise and hurry of a fashionable street, we passed by a few steps into the quiet, beautifully-green and fresh resting place of the dead. The hum of traffic and fashion had ceased, and though but a little removed from these scenes, we were alone with the monuments of the departed and the forms of mourners before us, the catacombs cut into the rocks and covered over with ivy and flowers around us, and only the blue sky to be seen above us. It was soothing, after the anxieties and vexations of the day to wander amid these monuments, look upon the foliage, and enjoy the fragrance of the flowers with which this place was filled. And when, after half an hour's ramblings, we emerged from this scene of quietness and solemnity, it was with calmed spirits and grateful hearts.

STATISTICS AND PROSPECTS OF THE JEWS.

The statistics of the Jewish population have always exhibited most singular facts. That a nation without a King or a country, should have continued to maintain its distinct existence for so many centuries; and that its numbers should not have diminished, but rather increased during that time, is a fact without a parallel in history, and one which can only be explained by allowing a divine interposition on their behalf. We can not doubt, in the light of these facts—much less, in the light of promises of Scripture—that they are destined hereafter to exert an important influence upon the condition of the world. The following letter contains some suggestions, which will be new to many and interesting to all. It was written by Judge Noah of New York, himself a Jew, and published in the Boston Journal.

NEW YORK, June 18, 1844.

Mr. Editor:—A late number of your paper contained the following paragraph:

JEWS.—It is said that the total number of Jews throughout the world is estimated at 3,163,700, and it is said that this number has never materially varied from the time of David downwards.

It has always been a subject of interest, although not of general inquiry, to ascertain as nearly as possible the numerical force of the Jewish people in every part of the world, and looking forward to the speedy fulfillment of all the promises made to that peculiar and favored race in their restoration to the land of their ancestors, I have been at considerable pains to obtain a census, accurate as far as every country in Europe is referred to, but depending upon estimates, always below the actual number, of those residing in Asia and Africa, from which it appears that the Jewish Nation number full six millions of people, divided and located as follows:

In all parts of ancient Poland before the partition of 1772	1,000,000
In Russia, comprehending Woldavia and Wallachia	200,000
In the different states of Germany	750,000
In Holland and Belgium	80,000
Sweden and Denmark	6,000
France	75,000
England	60,000
Italian States	200,000
All North and South America and the West Indies	100,000
In the Mahomedan States of Europe, Asia and Africa	3,000,000
Persia, China and Hindostan	1,000,000
	6,471,000

The above includes all who are actually known as professing and following the religion of their forefathers. It is impossible to ascertain the number of those residing in Catholic countries and concealing their religion from motives of policy. The number in Spain who preferred outwardly embracing the Catholic faith to avoid banishment under Ferdinand and Isabella, is several hundred thousand, and are at this day connected with the first families in Spain and Portugal. In Asia and the Turkish dominions, I have made an estimate rather below their actual number. They are powerful in China, and on the borders of Tartary; likewise in Persia, and the countries bordering on the Indian Ocean. In Abysenia and Ethiopia there are many communities of black Jews, and they have a separate congregation at Calcutta.

The number of the Jewish people dispersed in every part of the world will surprise no one who takes into consideration that for four hundred years they have been in a measure exempt from those persecutions, which they suffered prior to the reformation; nor have they been included in the various wars which have for several hundred years desolated Europe and Asia. Naturally a pacific people, adhering at a very early age to their international marriages, exceedingly temperate in living, and constitutionally active and energetic, their self-augmenting population from these causes must greatly have increased their numbers, and warrant the belief that they are at this time as numerous as they were in the palmy days of David and Solomon.

There is another error in your paragraph, which it may be as well to notice at this time. You state that the number of Jews has never materially varied from three millions, from the time of David downwards. Very nearly that number has been exterminated by wars and violence; from what may be considered the commencement of their national troubles.

According to Josephus and cotemporary writers, there were slaughtered in Cæsaria, the Syrians	20,000
In Jerusalem, occasioned by the insolence of a Roman soldier, under the reign of Claudius	20,000
At Scitopolis	13,000
At Alexandria, in consequence of the rivalry of the Greeks and Egyptians	50,000
At Ascalon from the same cause	2,500
At Ptolemais	2,000
At Silucia, by the Syrians and Greeks	50,000
At the siege of Jerusalem by Pompey	12,000
By an earthquake in Judea, 42 or 43 years before Christ	30,000
In consequence of a revolt, occasioned by breaking a Roman eagle, placed in the portico of the Temple, in the reign of Augustus	13,000
In a sedition suppressed by Varus, Governor of Syria	2,000
In an ambuscade before Ascalon, in the beginning of the war against the Romans	18,000
At the Capture of Jaffa by Titus	15,000
At the Seige of Jotaput, the 13th of Nero	40,000
Taking of Tariche, and at the naval battle on the Lake Gensarette	6,500
After this victory, Verspasian being in the tribunal at Tariche, sent 6000 to Nero, to work at the Isthmus of the Morea—30,400 were sold at public vendue, and 12,000 old men, unable to bear arms, were put to death	12,000
At the capture of Glama by Titus	9,000
In a battle against Placidus, Lt. of Vespasian, near the village of Galara	15,000
At the Seige of Jerusalem and destruction of the Temple of Titus	1,100,000
In the revolt of the false Messiah Barchechobas and in the several revolts under Adrian, Trojan, and Justinian	600,000
Add to this, that from the time of the adoration of the Golden Calf, to the return of the ark, which had been captured by the Philistines, there were destroyed	239,000
Making	2,248,000

This amount does not include either the losses they met with in the wars anterior to the Captivity, or the persecutions and revolts in the time of the German Emperors and the middle ages, or the proscriptions en masse, which were so frequently renewed in different parts of the world, in the times of the invasions by the barbarians, and since their establishment in the Roman provinces. Under all these calamities and oppression, the Jews like those vivacious plants which can resist the intemperance of all seasons, have been by divine interposition, enabled to sustain themselves amidst so many appalling obstacles, and have found in the strength of their laws, new principles of existence.

In pursuing the inquiry as to their numerical force, much interesting information has been obtained as to their various pursuits; and it is gratifying to learn that agriculture, their original occupation, claims a great portion of their attention. The plains of Ninevah, Greece, Persia, Egypt, Lithunia, Ukraine and Moldavia, are full of Jewish agriculturists; they are, it is said, the best cultivators of the grape in Turkey; in all parts of the East they are dyers, workers in silk, weavers and blacksmiths; in Poland they are farmers, curiers, lace weavers, potters and silversmiths; and although the great body of the nation are still engaged in trade and commerce in every quarter of the world, with undiminished success, they are nevertheless receiving a more liberal education, are cultivating a taste for the arts, many are pursuing the more enlightened and scientific professions with reputation, and are instituting reforms in the ceremonial parts of their religion, without invading any of its cardinal principles.

Wealth is not generally or equally diffused among the Jews, but the aggregate of their possessions constitutes them by far the most wealthy people on earth, and the enormous proportions are so located as to secure a very decided influence in the movements of every nation, making them, in a measure, the arbitrators of very important movements.

Although the Jewish people are entirely passive in relation to the restoration, and waiting the great advent with the same patience and humility which they have evinced for the last eighteen hundred years, relying with unabated confidence on the promises and protection of that divine power which has ever been near them and with them, nevertheless, there has been no period in their history in which Christians generally have taken more interest in their temporal and religious welfare, than they evince at the present time. This is the providential prelude to great events—they know too little of each other; and a closer approximation, a mutual surrender of prejudices, and a greater reliance of Christians upon what constituted primitive Christianity, will at once show how slender is the line that divides us. I cannot avoid believing that the great triumph reserved for Christianity will be in their agency and co-operation in restoring the Jews to their ancient heritage, for it cannot be politically accomplished without their aid; and if the second advent, so called, and so ardently desired by pious Christians, is ever to come to pass, it cannot, I hardly conceive, take place until after the restoration is accomplished; and there is a throne to be occupied, a nation to be governed, and the prophecies fulfilled.

To chide some children harshly is like striking a harpsichord with your fist; while with others, soft words seem like beating a church bell with a feather.

AGRICULTURE.

The following items are taken from the Report of the Commissioner of Patents, presented to Congress during its last Session. Mr. ELLSWORTH, the Commissioner, seems to have bestowed much attention upon the "collection of agricultural statistics," and reliance may be placed upon the accuracy of any statements which the Report contains. A deep interest is felt in the collection of these statistics; and it is hoped that the interest will be increased by their publication. The appropriations which have been made for the object, and the plans of the Commissioner for making the most of them, are a pledge that the importance of the agricultural interest is beginning to be understood. We shall make occasional extracts from the Report, for the benefit of those who may not have access to it. The following suggestions are taken from the article on WHEAT.

The amount of seed to be sown is a question which is still under discussion; and some of our best writers incline to the opinion that commonly there is not enough seed used. It is important that enough be sown to supply a sufficiency of wheat plants to occupy the ground and keep down the weeds; for if this be not done, they spring up and rob the earth of fertility, and lessen the product. One good writer, after mature consideration of the question, fixes on two bushels to the acre as about the right quantity. The English practice is two and a quarter to three and a half bushels broad cast; two or three bushels drill; one and a half o ttwo bushels when dibbled. The same mount is stated by Europe n writers to be the average in Germany.

The selection of proper seed is also a subject of much importance. It is said in an English journal, that seed wheat should be picked by hand, in order to secure it in the best order. The suggestion deserves consideration. The following method is recommended in the selection of seed wheat: To take six bushels of good quality, and use a large sieve, that five bushels of the six can pass through it. The bushel that remains will be the largest kernals and should be retained for seed. This experiment has been tried with good success in some parts of our country. In one case, sunning the wheat fifteen days before sowing, and the passing it through a sieve, as above mentioned, is said to have been used effectually against the Hessian fly during fifteen yeers' trial.

An experiment of cutting the grain ten days earlier than usual was tried by a farmer in Michigan, on sixty acres—the berry being soft and in the milk; and the result was, that it yielded more flour and less bran than usual. Another advantage of early reaping is stated, on good authority, to be security from rust. A farmer is said to have tried an experiment on this subject. Finding one of his fields of wheat, in a very raw or green state, was badly struck with rust, he determined at once to cut it; and did so, amid the laugh of his neighbors, who thought him crazy. The field adjoining suffered little from rust, and stood till fully ripe; yet, at threshing, that which was first cut gave the finest and the best yield.

The question as to the best methods of preventing the diseases and attacks to which the wheat crop is exposed is one of deep interest to the agricultural community; and some suggestions on this subject may not be inappropriately subjoined to the account of this crop. The time when the field is struck with rust seems to be just at the time of ripening. A remarkable fact on this subject is stated in a report to the New Jersey Agricultural Society. An extraordinary field of wheat, supposed to be out of danger, on a hot day became drenched by a sudden shower, which came on between one and three o'clock P. M. All was still; and on the passing away of the shower, the sun came out intensely hot. The owner went into his field to examine his wheat, which he found much pressed down by the shower; he immediately perceived a continued ticking or snapping noise in every direction. The straw was fine and bright; but, on examining he found it bursting in short slits one quarter of an inch long, and the sap exuding from it. A day or two after, the whole field was darkened with rust, and the wheat nearly ruined. Another instance of the same kind is also related. The conclusion stated is—that the loss of the sap, running out and becoming dried on the straw, occasioned the rust. The ancient Greeks and Romans attributed rust to the effect of the weather on the grain, as has been mentioned above, and had a prayer to the supposed Rubigo, or rust, for the purpose of warding off the disease, which ran thus:

'O, blighting Rubigo, spare the corn plants, and let the ear gently wave o'er the surface of the earth; suffer the crops, which have been nourished by the propitious stars of Heaven, to grow until they become fit for the sickle. Thine is no small power; the crops thou hast marked, the dispirited cultivator reckons as lost—neither winds nor showers so much injure the corn; neither when bitten by frost does it acquire so pallid a hue, as if the sun fervently heats the moist stalks.'

A variety of expedients are mentioned, to protect wheat from smut; and it may be well to mention some of these, as they are well recommended. One directs the wheat, after being thoroughly washed, to be soaked ten or twelve hours in salt water, as strong as it can be made. It is further said that no injury will result if it lie in the brine for several days provided it be kept in a cool place. After thus soaking it, let it be limed. Another person recommends that the seeds, when placed in the brine, be stirred up thoroughly, so that the lighter seeds may rise to the surface, and be skimmed off; afterwards, that the brine be drained into a tub, and the seed thinly spread on the floor, and sifted with quicklime, at rate of one gallon to a bushel; and, after carefully stirring the lime through the seed a few times, it is allowed to remain a few hours, and then sown. The seed which underwent the perfect cleaning gave a return of pure wheat; and that which was sown in its natural state was infected with smut, and had a mixture also of chess.

The Avisador, of Malaga, informs us that two men were recently punished there, on the public square, for intoxication. The punishment consisted in their being compelled to swallow a large quantity of cold water. This was one of the most cruel tortures of the inquisition.

Nature's Nobleman.—The New-Orleans Herald relates an anecdote of one of their wealthy citizens: "A gentleman informed us yesterday, that after he was burned out on Saturday, he went to John Hagan, Esq. and asked him to rent him a house. The reply was, 'No, sir, I have no houses to rent for the sufferers; but go to my agent and ask him for the key of any house I have vacant, and take possession of it.'"

Encourage the natural curiosity of your children. This will, at a very early age, develope the peculiar traits of their character.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.

No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.

No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.

No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week, the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

The Society has published, also, in quarto form, [$1,25 per 100, or $10 per 1000,] two numbers of THE SABBATH VINDICATOR.

JUST PUBLISHED,

THE

MEDIATORIAL REIGN OF CHRIST ON THE EARTH.

REVEALED, in a series of Essays, compiled from eminent authors; to which is added a letter from CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH to the Bishop of Jerusalem, on the perpetuity of Israel's Ordinances.

The following are the subjects discussed in the above work:—

1. The Study of Prophecy, a Question of Degree.
2. Christ's Kingdom on Earth.
3. Reigning on Earth no Degradation to our Lord.
4. The Priesthood of Christ, as it shall be exercised during and after the Millennium.
5. Messiah's Reign on the Earth.
6. The uncertainty of the hour of the coming of the Son of Man.
7. The signs, times, and seasons preceding Christ's Second Coming.
8. War in heaven.
9. The First Resurrection.
10. The changing of the Living Saints at the First Resurrection.
11. The ascension of the Saints to meet the Lord in the air.
12. The ascended Saints preserved from the fiery judgments, exercise power with Christ over their enemies.
13. The restoration of the Jews to their own land.
14. The New Temple to be erected in Jerusalem, with a map explanatory of the same.
15. The New Temple Ceremonial Service.
16. The going up of all nations to worship the Lord at Jerusalem.
17. The New Division of the Holy Land, with 2 maps, the first showing the division of the land among the Twelve Tribes by Joshua, with references to chapter and verse. The second the division which shall take place after their restoration, as shown by the Prophet Ezekiel, with references also to the prophecy.
18. The New Heavens and New Earth.
19. The Paradisaical felicity and perfection of the animal and vegetable kingdoms generally restored during the Millennium.
20. Longevity restored to the sojourners on Earth.
21. The loosing of Satan and consequent Apostacy subsequent to the Millennium.
22. The Last or General Resurrection and Judgment of the wicked and the Second Death.
23. The delivering of the Kingdom to God the Father and commencement of the Everlasting Age.
24. The Everlasting Kingdom of God perpetuated in the renewed Heavens and Earth.
25. The gathering together of all things in Christ, and the Earth (renewed) the court or centre of unity of the Everlasting Kingdom of all Creation.
26. On Death and Hades, and the period of Satan's dominion over the present evil world.
27. The approaching New Dispensation.
28. Charlotte Elizabeth's letter to the Bishop of Jerusalem.

☞ Any person desiring the above Work, can have it sent to them, in sheets, by mail, by enclosing One Dollar, (post-paid,) addressed to Rev. I. P. Labagh, New York, or by calling at his Office, 130 Fulton street, or at 9 Spruce street, between the hours of 11 and 3 o'clock.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

The following persons are requested to act as agents for this paper in the vicinity where they are located. If any are unable to attend to the business, it is hoped they will secure some one to fill their places. In societies where no one is appointed, it is hoped that our friends will take immediate steps, among themselves, to do what can be done.

NEW YORK
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel. Saunders
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London — Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville — Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT
Waterford—Lester T. Rogers
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre — Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN
Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA
Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS
Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, JULY 18, 1844. NO. 4.

Biographical.

JOHN JAMES.

JOHN JAMES was the pastor of a Seventh-day Baptist Society which met for worship in Bull-steak Alley, White-chapel, in the eastern part of London.* On the afternoon of October 19, 1661, while he was preaching to his little congregation, a justice of the peace accompanied by a constable entered the place of worship, and commanded him to come down and deliver himself up to them. This he refused to do; whereupon the constable pulled him down from the pulpit, and led him away to the police under a strong guard. About thirty members of the congregation were taken, in companies of seven, before a bench of justices then sitting at a tavern in the vicinity, where the oath of allegiance was tendered to each of them. Those who refused it were committed to Newgate.

Having thus disposed of the auditors, the Magistrates adjourned to the meeting-house, took their seats at the table, and called for John James. When he was brought before justice Robinson, he was asked if he had not been there before and been civilly treated; to which he replied, "Yes, and I thank you for your civility." "Was you not counseled to take heed in future?" inquired one of the justices. "Yes, and I have taken heed so far as a good conscience would allow me." Upon being told, "You shall stretch for this," he answered, "I am not careful in that matter." He was charged with being in favor of the fifth monarchy, and with having learned to sound a trumpet for the purpose of assisting in Venner's insurrection. That he believed in a fifth kingdom to come he allowed; but he denied any acquaintance with the Venner disturbance.† Another charge against him was, that he had used seditious words in his sermon. Although this was contradicted in the most solemn and explicit manner by many who were present and heard the discourse, yet he was on the testimony of several profligate witnesses fully committed to Newgate. Between his commitment and trial one of these witnesses, struck with remorse of conscience for what he had said, went to sea to prevent being called upon at the trial. He was brought back, however by a magistrate's warrant, and kept in custody until the trial.

November 14th, John James was brought before the Chief Justice at the King's Bench. The indictment charged him with compasssing the death of the King, endeavoring to levy war against him, and to change the government. To this indictment he pleaded not guilty, and was remanded to prison to remain until the 19th.

On the day previous to his final trial he received a letter from a person of distinction, stating that a strong effort would be made to convict him, that a picked jury of favorites of the crown had been selected, and that his life depended upon looking closely into the character of the jury that would be called.

November 19th, he was brought up for trial. The witnesses who appeared against him were of a character adapted to the work for which they had been called. They declared that they had heard him speak treasonable words against the King, such as that the King was "a bloody tyrant, a blood-sucker, a blood-thirsty man, and his nobles were the same, and that they had shed the blood of the saints, innocent blood, at Charing Cross." But James brought witnesses to prove that the persons who had given evidence against him, had acknowledged to them that they had sworn to they knew not what; that they had been persuaded and frightened to say what they had. He also brought those who knew their characters, and who offered to make oath that they were not to be credited. Four persons who were present at the meeting when it was said the treasonable words were spoken, testified that no such language was used by the prisoner. But it was all to no purpose. The result which had been determined upon before his trial was secured by the verdict of guilty which was given.

On the following Friday he was brought to the bar to receive his sentence. When asked what he had to say, why sentence of death should not be passed upon him, he replied, "I have not much to say, only shall leave two or three Scriptures with you. One is, 'As for me, do as seemeth good unto you; but know ye for certain, that if you put me to death, you shall surely bring innocent blood upon this city and upon the inhabitants thereof.' Another is, 'Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.' And the last is, 'He that toucheth the Lord's people toucheth the apple of his eye.' And now I have no more to say for myself; only a word for the Lord, and I have done. Jesus Christ is king of nations as well as king of saints. The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of the Lord and of his Christ. The Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is King of England, Scotland and Ireland, and of all the kingdoms of the world."—— Here he was interrupted by the Court, and condemned to be "hanged, drawn, and quartered." This sentence, though awful beyond description, did not in the least dismay him. He calmly said, "Blessed be God; whom man condemneth God justifieth."

A number of incidents occurred between the time of his sentence and execution, which show how remarkably he was supported. On the Sabbath which intervened, several of his friends called to see him and to express their sympathy. He proposed to finish the discourse which he had commenced when he was apprehended by the officers; and having read the text, he recapitulated what had been said, and then went on to the conclusion of the subject, with the most entire composure and self-possession. He spoke with cheerfulness of his own condition, expressed his readiness to witness for his Saviour in this way if it was His will, and his surprise that God should thus see fit to honor one so unworthy. While those around him were bathed in tears, he seemed to be filled with joy.

While he lay in prison under sentence of death, a number of persons of distinction of both sexes visited him, conversed with him, and were much affected by his piety and resignation. For their generous efforts to secure his pardon, he always expressed to them his thankfulness. He seems, however, to have had no hope of pardon—the charter of him who had the pardoning power being too well understood by him to warrant any such expectation. Mrs. James, by the advice of her friends, twice presented a petition to King Charles, stating her husband's innocency, the character of the witnesses against him, and entreating his majesty to answer her request, and pardon her husband. In the first case, she was repulsed with scoffs and ridicule. In the last, the King, deaf to her cries, replied, "He is a rogue, and shall be hanged!"

November 26th was the day for the execution. When his friends came to visit him in the prison, he said "Here come my bridesmen." Seeing how much they were affected, he said, "Must not the sacrifice be bound? Yea, it must be bound with cords." As the keeper entered his room, referring to the noise without, Mr. James said, "There will be by-and-by as many hallelujahs as shoutings of the people."

At the scaffold he addressed the spectators. In this address he assured them that he was no Jesuit, as had been slanderously reported, but an Englishman of a poor and pious family, his aged mother being still living; that he was a baptized believer, holding the principles of Christ's doctrine mentioned in Hebrews 6: 1, 2, "of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment;" that he endeavored to keep all the ten commandments, but especially the fourth; that though he believed that Christ must govern the world by his saints when the time appointed was come, yet he was innocent of treason, and had never by word or by deed endeavored to disturb government. He concluded his address by exhorting the people of God not to be discouraged by his sufferings; to remember the advice of the apostle (Heb. 10: 25,) "Not forgetting the assembling of ourselves together;" and to obey the Scriptures (1 Chron. 28: 8,) "Keep and seek all the commandments of the Lord thy God."

Having finished his address, and kneeling down, he thanked God for covenant mercies, and for conscious innocence; he prayed for the witnesses against him, for the executioner, for the people of God, for the removal of divisions, for the coming of Christ, for the spectators, and for himself, that he might enjoy a sense of God's favor and presence, and an entrance into glory.

When he had finished, the executioner said, "The Lord receive your soul," to which Mr. James replied, "I thank thee." A friend observing to him, "This is a happy day," he answered, "I bless God it is." Then, having thanked the Sheriff for his courtesy, he said, "Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit;" and was immediately launched into eternity.

After he was dead, his heart was taken out and burned, his quarters were affixed to the gate of the city, and his head was set up in Whitechapel on a pole opposite to the Alley in which his meeting house stood.

---

* In company with Mr. BLACK, the present pastor of the church which probably was either organized by John James or composed at first of the members of his congregation, the writer visited the place where this meeting was held. The "Alley" leads off from an open space in Whitechapel between Red Lion street and Church Lane. The changes which have come over that part of the city since 1661, have made it a place for miserable residences and stables.

† The Fifth-Monarchy-Men were a class that arose in the 17th century and derived their name from maintaining that a fifth universal monarchy should be established under the reign of Jesus Christ. Their sentiments were much like those of Origen and the Millenarians. Thomas Venner, a wine-cooper and a preacher, was their leader, under whom a disturbance arose, January 6, 1661, when they fought with desperate valor, and killed several persons. They were subdued, however, after two or three days skirmishing, and Venner with about twenty others was taken. Most of them were executed.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER TW

This holy institution was one of the first given to man, to the first man, and hence designed for all the human family. No believer in divine revelation doubts whether marriage was instituted when God made woman and brought her unto the man, and said, "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh." But this is not more plain than the institution of the Sabbath. "And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it, because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." The inspired account of the six days' creation contained in the first and second chapters of Genesis, is not given to satisfy the speculative philosopher, but to acquaint man with the holy works and righteous ways of his Creator. The successive six days' creation, and the rest of the seventh, is purposely narrated to show that God designed so to make the world suited for the habitation and religious government of man. The beautiful order of creation manifests the design of infinite wisdom and goodness. The world is first formed, then fitted for vegetation; vegetation is brought forth, it is fitted for animal life; living beings, fish, fowl, and animals are brought forth; last of all, man, for whose good all these are designed, is made and placed in a paradise every way fitted for his nature, and his Creator gives him possession of it all. Every person can see the design and goodness of God in this arrangement. Why cannot they see the religious design of the division of time into days extending from evening to evening, and into weeks of seven days, counting in the order of creation, and ending on that day which the Lord blessed and sanctified? There appears to me design in this order of creation for the institution of the Sabbath; and in the making of man first, then woman, and their union by their Creator, for the institution of marriage. So long as the nature of man shall remain what it is, the institution of marriage must remain. So long as the order of time shall continue what it is, so long the observance of the Sabbath is obligatory.

It is easy to see from the account of the creation, what methods God took to instruct man at the beginning. He was made endowed with intellectual faculties, but he needed knowledge. How was it imparted? The account says, "And God blessed them." How much is comprehended in that expression? This is certain.—God made known his own being and character to them; he approved their nature, and made provision for its exercise. He gave them dominion over every living thing that moveth upon the earth, and brought every fowl of the air, and every beast of the field, to Adam, that he might name them. Here was the origin of language. Next he teaches them to distinguish the herbs and fruits fit for food, and gives permission for their use; prohibiting the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. In this we see the origin of laws for subjugating man's appetites and will to the revealed will of his Maker. "And God saw every thing that he had made, and behold it was very good." Here is a review of creation, and then follows the sanctification of the seventh day. In all this, Adam was like a little child, a learner, without theory or prepossession. When the Maker had numbered the days of creation, and blessed and sanctified the seventh, "because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made," could man understand more or less by this, than that this was to remain the division of time, and the seventh day of creation, a day sacred to the honor of God? It appears to me, that divine law is coincident with the order of creation and providence, and every successive revelation of God's will to after ages, a confirmation and an amplification of those primitive laws. All the instruction given in Paradise was designed for man and all his posterity. Those primitive institutions comprehended all the law afterwards expressed. All the law is comprehended in this, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart and soul, mind, will and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself."

That the Sabbath continued to be observed in the family of Adam seems to be intimated in Gen. iv. 3. "And in process of time." What process? What time? The margin reads, "At the end of days," it came to pass, that Cain brought of the fruit of the ground an offering unto the Lord. And Abel he also brought of the firstlings of his flock, and of the fat thereof. They had a divinely appointed division of time, and at the end of the week, the last of the seven days, was the sanctified day, the Sabbath. Was not this the day on which they offered their sacrifices? Does it not thus appear that they continued to hallow God's holy Sabbath? That mankind continued under law to God, is manifest from the anger of God against the antediluvians. They lived in violation of all laws, and their ways were corrupt. That it was revealed law, is manifest from the preaching of Enoch and Noah, both being preachers of righteousness and prophets of God. Adam and Methuselah being cotemporaries, and Methuselah not dying until the year before the deluge, the knowledge of divine institutions could not be lost or unknown to the family of Noah. God has never relinquished his government of the world, nor abandoned the enforcement of his laws.

S. D.

For the Recorder.

IS DANIEL'S PROPHECY OF GOD?

Infidel writers say that the Prophecies are false predictions; and as this sentiment is quite prevalent, it may not be improper to examine them more minutely. We will, therefore, at the present notice some particulars found in the book of Daniel, (chap. 8: 3, 4,) where this man of God, fourteen years before the establishment of the Medo-Persian dominion by the taking of Babylon, describes completely that dominion with its conquests, as recorded by profane historians, under the figure of a ram, and the superiority of the influence of the Persian power to that of the Median. And this is fully explained in v. 20: "The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia."

This prophet at the same time, two hundred and twenty three years before the event, predicted the overthrow of this Medo-Persian dominion, by the Greeks, under the command of Alexander the Great, and described the government that he should establish, under the symbol of a he-goat, with a horn between his eyes, Dan. 8: 5, 7: "An he-goat came from the west," &c. "And I saw him come," &c.

This same Daniel predicted the death of Alexander, and the division of the empire that he had unjustly obtained, between four of his Generals or commanders, each of whom had an extensive dominion, (8: 8.) "The he-goat waxed very great," &c. This is fully explained in 22d verse, "Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power."

This same prophet foretold the wicked reign, cruel acts, and sudden death of ANTIOCHUS, King of Syria, three hundred and eighty years before it took place; that by flattery and treachery he should accomplish his end. And as an affliction, and a chastisement to the Jews for their wickedness, he should be permitted for a season to ravish their country, interrupt their ordinary modes of worship, profane God's sacred house, (the temple,) and to heap persecution even unto death upon all those who would not submit to his brutish practices; but that in the midst of his career, some sudden visitation from God should seize him. This is fully explained from the 9th to the 27th verses: "And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great," &c.

In the eleventh chapter this prophet also tells us of the wars that have taken place between the King of Syria, and the King of Egypt, and likewise the interposition of the Romans—how that their embassadors would come over from Chittim in ships, and finally compel him to desist, and that, being thus disappointed in Egypt, he would return and wreak his wrath and indignation upon the helpless Jews, although they have done nothing at which he should take offence.

It has been proved by many historians of those times, that these predictions have all been fulfil'ed to the letter. This same man of God, in the seventh chapter, has foretold the establishment of the Roman Government. This he represents as exceeding all the rest, that had gone before it; and declares that at the time of its dissolution it should be divived into ten kingdoms, and those are signified by the ten horns of the fourth beast. Infidels cannot, with any kind of propriety, say that this event was written by some Jew after the event took place, for we have an abundance of testimony to the contrary. But this is not all. This same prophet has told us, in this chapter, that there should arise a power, among these ten kingdoms, diverse from all the rest, under the figure of a little horn that should "speak great words against the Most High," Dan. 7: 8. For the truth of this prediction, let me ask you to take a survey of the last twelve hundred years. And if a part of those prophecies, with other divine predictions, have been fulfilled so exactly in the establishment of kingdoms, empires and governments, and in their overthrow, what reason have we to doubt the truth of the rest? And in inquiring for other evidence of the truth of prophecy, we refer you to a certain Jewish writer, who says: "look at us, a people who have been for eighteen hundred years a persecuted and scattered people—persecuted by and scattered among all nations, and yet a distinct people, preserved for the praise and the glory of God."

And in the fulfillment of prophecy is our hope for a kingdom to be established that will be universal, without the use of carnal weapons or the shedding of blood, and this shall be the final termination of wars; their weapons shall be turned into implements of industry, and there shall be but one king, who will be Christ the Lord. The accomplishment of this object should be our aim, that with him we may dwell forever and ever.

TAMERLANE.

New Market, N. J. June 23d, 1844.

LITTLE ESTHER THE MISSIONARY.

The following story was written for the benefit of children. It contains thoughts, however, worthy of the attention of those who are grown up. The number is not small, of those who look so exclusively upon a distant field of labor, as entirely to neglect the field at home. "He that is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much."

"Mother, may I take a little walk down the hill?" asked Esther, as she stood before her mother, her hair neatly combed and parted, holding in her hand her blue crape bonnet.

"Is it not rather warm, my dear?" asked her mother.

"O no, mother, and I will come back when the great clock strikes six, at supper time; do let me go." And little Esther looked so earnestly, so beseechingly, that her mother could not refuse her; so she told Esther that she might go. Then Esther looked very happy, and away she flew to the nursery, and took her little bag, already filled with something that was very heavy, and trudged down the green hill upon which her father's house was situated. She neither looked to the right hand nor the left. Of the yellow butterflies lighting here and there upon the flowers, or the birds skipping from branch to branch upon the trees, Esther took no notice, as if bird or butterfly never lived; and yet little girls love to watch them sporting among the green things of the earth. She crossed the street at the foot of the hill, and then she disappeared down a very disagreeable lane, filled with huts of various sizes, where very slovenly, ugly looking people lived, some black, some white.—What had the good and gentle little Esther to do down there? What would her careful mother say to find her in such company? How surprised would her father be, to see his tenderly educated little daughter playing with the children of the lane!

Precisely at six o'clock, was Esther seen returning up the hill, ready to sit down with her parents and brothers at the evening meal. Her face was certainly flushed, and she looked weary; but she bore a serious expression, as if she had not been in any naughty frolic; and something so calm and placid, too, on her countenance, it would seem as if she could not have been in any mischief, if she did go down among the boys and girls in the lane.

So this did all happen, not only one day, but two and three days and a whole week together. Precisely at a certain time did Esther leave the garden, or play-house, or book, or whatever part of the house she happened to be in, and asked her mother to take her little walk down the hill; and precisely at six did the front gate open to admit the little girl. She was such an obedient, excellent child, that her mother felt that she could trust her any where; neither did she ever wish to refuse her a simple request like this. At last her mother began to wonder about little Esther's ever-returning walk down the hill.

"Where do you go, my dear?" asked her mother, looking at her earnestly.

"Only a little way from the bottom of the hill," replied Esther, blushing deeply.

"I hope you do not go any where, where I should disapprove of your going, Esther," said her mother, soberly.

"Mother, I do not do any thing that you or father would disapprove of," answered the child, and a very small teardrop glistened in her mild blue eye.

Mrs. Lovel felt that she would not, and yet there was surely something peculiar in Esther's walks, which, she began to think, perhaps, ought to be attended to. And it happened in this wise. One afternoon Mr. Lovel came in to take his little daughter to walk with him.

"Where is Esther?" asked he. His wife told him Esther had just gone down the hill, and told him how she went daily. He went out, and as he stood at the front door, he caught a glimpse of her, turning down the lane. Very quickly then did Mr. Lovel pursue his little Esther, and he thought he should reprove her very sharply for going among the children who lived there. He saw her enter a low, ill-looking house, and then disappear from his sight. To that house did he direct his hasty and anxious steps.

There was an untidy woman washing near the door.

"Is little Esther Lovel here?" asked the father, looking in at the window.—The woman started at the sound of the gentleman's voice, and drew her hands from the suds. "To be sure she is, she's learning the children to read."

Mr. Lovel inquired a little farther into the matter, and then the woman took him to the back door; and what did Mr. Lovel see? There sat his daughter on a bench, with a small negro boy beside her, to whom she was pointing out the letters and the words of her Testament. Three other children, one white and two colored girls, were seated on the stone step, not far off, attentively bending over their books—books which Mr. Lovel immediately recognized as belonging to Esther's library. What was Esther's surprise, too, when she looked up and beheld her father?

"Esther, how came you here, my child?" asked the parent, affected by the sight.

"Why, father, I am a missionary!" answered the child with great earnestness.

"A missionary! how so, my dear?"

"Why, father, Peleg here and none of them know how to read, and have got no Bibles. I am sure they are the people the minister told us were heathen. So I pitied them and thought I would be a missionary,"—and the young child's face glowed with animation at the task she had undertaken.

"But, my child, why did you not tell us about it? you know we should be happy to help you," said the parent—and he wanted to fold the little girl to his bosom.

"Father," answered Esther seriously, "don't you know the Bible says, let not your right hand know what the left hand does? and my sabbath school teacher says it means you must not go and tell every body when you want to do good. God knows it, father, because he sees me; and I told Him of it too, in my prayer."

Then Mr. Lovel sat down on the stone step, and while he attempted to teach the little negro girls beside him, he felt he had been taught a lesson in "well-doing," that he should not soon forget or disregard.

Thus has this child Esther, of scarce six years, rebuked the lukewarm piety of her father, opening his heart and his purse to the heathen wants of his own as well as of other lands; and now the good and great missionary cause numbers no two warmer friends, than are Esther and her father. Cannot other children look about them, and become missionaries too?

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, JULY 18, 1844.

THE NAME "LORD'S DAY."

It is common to hear the expression "Lord's day" used as if it were a scriptural title for the first day of the week; and the impression that it is a scriptural title for that day, has done much to give it influence. This fact may make it worth while to inquire into the origin and authority of the expression. It occurs but once in the Scriptures, and that is in Revelations 1: 10—"I was in the spirit on the Lord's day." The general opinion is, that reference is here made to the first day of the week, or Sunday. We have several reasons for doubting the correctness of this opinion.

Our first reason is, that the expression "first day of the week" occurs several times in the New Testament without even the slightest hint that it ever had been or ought to be called the Lord's day. According to our translation, it is used by the evangelists in the account of the resurrection. St. John himself, the author of the passage in question, when giving an account of the events which followed the resurrection, in his Gospel, (which was written some time after the Revelations,) describes them as having occurred on the "first day of the week." In the account of St. Paul's visit to Troas, and in his direction to the Corinthians about a collection for the poor saints at Jerusalem, we find the same expression "the first day of the week." Now we ask, if the name "Lord's day" was designed to be applied to the "first day of the week," is it reasonable to suppose that St. John, and St. Paul, and the other sacred writers, would have used the expression first day of the week again and again without ever referring to the Lord's day as another name for it? We think it is not reasonable to suppose any such thing, and we dare not charge the sacred writers with using language in a manner so loose and liable to mislead.

Our second reason for doubting the correctness of the opinion that "Lord's day" in this passage means Sunday, is, that if any day of the week is peculiarly the "Lord's," it is the seventh or Sabbath day. Jehovah speaks of the seventh day as being "my holy day," and "the holy of the Lord." Our Saviour likewise says, "The Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath day." These expressions correspond so nearly with that in Revelations, as to justify us in saying, that if the expression "Lord's day" refers to an ordinary day of twenty-four hours, and if Scripture is to be interpreted by Scripture, then the Lord's day can be no other than the Sabbath day or seventh day of the week. By this we do not expect or wish to obtain any help for the seventh day. Our design is simply to show that the assumption that the first day of the week is the Lord's day, is unfounded.

Our third reason for doubting the correctness of the opinion under consideration, is, that it is quite questionable, to say the least, whether the expression Lord's day refers to an ordinary day. A large class of interpreters refer it to the day of Christ's mediatorial reign, and suppose John meant to declare that in spirit he had a vision of the scenes of that period. This use of the word day is sanctioned by our Lord's declaration—"Abraham rejoiced to see my day," as well as by a number of other passages. We know that great stress is sometimes laid upon the use of the article, "the Lord's day." A distinguished Episcopal writer in 1701, speaking of this, says, "The very emphasis which some lay so great stress upon in the article, speaks louder for the anniversary of Christ's resurrection at Easter, which is always a double festival, than it doth for Sunday. There are those who apply it to the day of the Nativity, Ascension, and Pentecost, as days not inferior to the Resurrection in mystery, value and benefit to man. But many assert that the "Lord's day" and the "day of Christ" mean the same day, and that is the day of judgment, which St. Paul calls the Lord's day, and which St. John, in an ecstasy is supposed to see as already come." This is sufficient to show that the positive assertions sometimes made about the Lord's day being the first day of the week, are not supported by Scripture.

Now if we examine into the history of this subject we shall find that only one writer uses the expression "Lord's day" until near the close of the second century, and he uses it in such a connection as to render his meaning doubtful. Justin Martyr calls the first day of the week "Sunday," and does not intimate that it had any other name. Indeed, none of the advocates for the first day, in quoting Rev. 1: 10, can refer to a writer who used the passage earlier than the fourth century. Morer candidly acknowledges that the solemn and public use of the words did not become common until the time of Constantine, when an injunction requiring it was made. We find, then, that the common use of the term and general notice of the day is not earlier than the observation of Christmas, Good-Friday, and Holy-Thursday. Hence saith one of the early writers on this subject, an Episcopalian, "The day of Christ's Nativity, the day of his Passion, and the like, have equal authority, equal antiquity, equal right to be observed as the Lord's day; and to work on those days is equally sinful." Those days were enjoined by the same authority, enforced by the same means, placed in the same catalogue by early writers, and spoken of as equally sacred; and for one to affirm that the use of the term Lord's day for the first day has any higher authority than the use of Holy-Thursday for the fifth day, or Good-Friday for the sixth, is no other than a bare assertion without proof.

PROTESTANTS REBUKED.

At the Catholic Cathedral in this city, on Sunday last, a discourse was delivered from the fourth commandment, in which the preacher took occasion to explain the ground upon which the keeping of Sunday was vindicated, and to administer some severe rebukes to his Protestant neighbors. He cautioned his hearers against supposing that the day now observed was that enjoined in the fourth commandment, and claimed that the change from the seventh day to the first had been made by the church. In conclusion, he suggested that it was a thing altogether inexplicable to him, that Protestants should deny the authority of the church, and yet observe a day of her appointing to the neglect of one which the Scriptures pointed out. If, said he, the church's authority to make such changes be not allowed, they ought surely to observe the seventh day.

Thus does the contradiction between the Protestant principle, that the Scriptures are a sufficient rule of life, and Protestant practice, become the occasion of triumph to the Papist, and of stumbling to the Jew. In this day, when such loud cries are raised about the inroads of Papacy, can Protestants afford to take a course which merits such a rebuke?

A CONVERTED JEW AND HIS BIBLE.

We have been interested and pleased, in our intercourse with a converted Jew, to see his familiarity with the Scriptures, his readiness in turning to any passages which may be desired, and his implicit confidence in every word which is there found. There is an earnestness and interest in his manner of reading the promises and threatenings of the Bible, which shows that they are felt to be directed to him. Indeed, this is a characteristic of all really thoughtful Jews—a class frequently to be met with. The message is read with feelings akin to those with which an inquiring child would read the last written advice of a departed father. Perhaps there is something in the fact that this message was first sent to them, and that they have always been accustomed to regard themselves as the peculiar people, which produces this result. Be that as it may, there are few Christians who would not feel reproved for want of acquaintance with Scripture truth, if they had occasion frequently to converse with such persons. It would be well if these reproofs were more frequently administered, and were allowed to work their proper and lasting effects. Christian character, which a study of the Scriptures was designed to develop and perfect, would thus be strengthened, and formed after the model of the apostles and prophets. A remarkable people are the Jews, whether we consider their attachment to each other in their dispersion, or their attachment to the words and worship of their fathers while exposed to every influence adapted to weaken that attachment, or their estimation of the Gospel when once they have embraced it, or their readiness to proclaim salvation through a crucified Redeemer, when once they have experienced its power upon their own hearts. The following language of one who has lately found peace in believing upon Jesus Christ, will show the condition and feelings of an awakened Israelite:—

"I had for a long time felt dissatisfied with the services of the synagogue, and with the formality and carelessness of my people. At length I began to feel dissatisfied with myself. I saw that I was a sinner, and living far away from God, and was troubled. I read the Bible, but could find no peace. The Psalms were my meditation, and I felt like the Psalmist when he said, 'Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me?' I felt cast down, and asked myself why, but could not tell. Those words, 'hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him who is the health of my countenance and my God,' I thought of again and again. But how should I hope in God? I was a poor sinner, and what right had I to hope in him? In this condition I continued, anxious and troubled and almost despairing, until those words were fixed upon my mind, 'He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; he was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed; all we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.' I read these words and thought about them. I saw that they were spoken of Messiah. Then I read his life, how he was cast off and despised, and how he was crucified by my people. I wondered; for it never had appeared to me so before. I thought what love to suffer for those who reviled him; how undeserving were those who neglected him; and how wicked was this unbelief. I said I will believe; it is the Messiah I gave myself up to him, and I found rest and joy My peace has become greater and greater. I find communion with my Redeemer every where, and I love to serve him. When I speak to my friends about Christ they do not wish to hear; they say I am no Jew, and they will mourn for me as dead. But I tell them that I have just begun to live, and if they knew the joy of beliving in Him they would not think me dead. God has been good to me, in making me to know his name. I do now hope in him, and praise his name."

Such is the language of a Jew who has been converted, and brought to hope in the mercy of God. He sees that his condition was lost, and when he thinks of the pit from which he was taken he is excited to thankfulness and faithfulness. He knows in whom he has believed, because he has examined closely the reasons for believing in him. The word of God, by which he has been brought from darkness into light is precious to him. By his early habits he is prepared to study it and has studied it; by his present experience he is enabled to understand it. He is in the best manner possible prepared to be useful to his fellows in making known the truth. What may we not expect when the whole nation shall receive Christ and follow him! "If the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fulness." "If the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead." Surely, in the day of their fulness, "the Gentiles shall come to their light, and Kings to the brightness of their rising."

THE COST OF RELIGION.

It is not uncommon to hear professors of religion complain of the burdens which that profession lays upon them. They seem in some cases almost anxious that the Christian efforts which are now being made should either cease or be greatly reduced. What use they expect to make of the money saved by such reduction, it is difficult to say—probably they have never gone far enough to decide. We fear they would find, that withholding here would tend only to poverty. It may be useful for those who are troubled with wishes of this kind, to compare themselves with the professors of other and false systems of religion. The following comparison is made by Dr. Hawes in a letter giving some of the impressions made upon his mind by visiting the missionary stations in the east, and the Oriental churches bordering on the Mediterranean. We copy from the Evangelist.

"I am thoroughly impressed with the fact, that in no part of the world does religion cost so little as in my own dear country. I include in this remark, not only what is raised for the support of the stated ministry, but all that is contributed to benevolent societies of every name, for the spread of the gospel. All is less, much less, than is expended for the support of the various corrupt forms of religion that prevail in these lands. Many of the pilgrims around me live beyond the Black and Caspian Seas, and have come perhaps fifteen hundred miles, to perform a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. Great sums of money are contributed to ornament their churches, to sustain superstitious rites and ceremonies, and to support an indolent and corrupt priesthood. Convents and nunneries exist here in great numbers, and more than twenty are in Jerusalem. These, many of them, have rich endowments, and are supported at a great annual expense. Put these items together, and many more like them which might be named, and you will be convinced that what is given, in all ways, in our happy country, for the support of the gospel, is but a moiety of what is expended in these dark lands for the support of forms of religion, which only operate to depress and deceive the people. This should rebuke murmurs, and make all in our highly favored land thankful for the happier lot that has fallen to them, and ready to meet with a cheerful heart and a liberal hand, whatever is demanded of them, to spread the knowledge of the great salvation through the world."

DIFFICULTIES.

The following extract from the same letter, shows in a clear light one of the leading obstacles to the spread of the pure Gospel in the East. If it be so difficult to correct religious impressions once made, how careful ought they to be who are giving instruction to the benighted. There is no place which involves greater responsibility, and ought to be filled with greater watchfulness and closer examination of the truth, than that of the missionary of the cross. In teaching the truth in its simplicity, as drawn from the Scriptures, is his only safety.

"I have a deeper impression than ever of the great difficulty of introducing the gospel in its purity and power among the people of these lands. They are shielded by many corrupt forms of Christianity. They are held under the power of superstition and ignorance by a corrupt and selfish priesthood; are ground down to the earth by oppressive governments; are disheartened, broken-spirited, and to a deplorable extent are led captive by the devil, who as a strong man armed holds them in quiet subjection to his will.

The people are furnished with numerous substitutes for the pure gospel; are rivited to dead forms; believe themselves to belong to the only true church, and heirs of salvation, because they are baptized, or have been on a pilgramage, or have done some work of supposed merit. At the recent celebration of Easter in Jerusalem, it is supposed there were 5000 pilgrims present, from different and distant parts of the world. All are seeking salvation in a way in which it is not to be found, and resting perfectly satisfied with their state and prospects; often having gone through the prescribed forms and ceremonies, washed in the Jordan, and visited the various holy places around Jerusalem.

There are now on the deck of the boat where I am writing, some 300 of these pilgrims, men, women and children, returning to their homes, satisfied with some charm or relic to quiet conscience; each having a mark on the arm and hand, as a sign of having been on a pilgrimage to the Holy City. All this, and many other things of like nature, opperate with terrible power to keep back the pure gospel, and hold the people under the dominion of sin. It is quite as difficult to convert a people from a false Christianity, as it is from heathenism."

DEATH OF DR. GRANT.

It seems that the rumors respecting the death of Rev. Dr. Grant at Mosul, to which we referred last week, and which it was hoped were unfounded, have proved to be too true. The Observer, after announcing the death of this devoted Missionary, says of him:—

"Dr. Grant was well known as one of the most able, heroic, and useful missionaries in the service of the American board. His self-denial and devotedness to the work of his Master, his courage in the midst of enemies, his reliance on God in hours of imminent exposure, and his manifest willingness to suffer at all times and in all circumstances, have long attracted the attention of the Christian world.

"Dr. Asahel Grant was born at Marshall, Oneida county, N. Y., August 17, 1807, and was consequently 37 years of age when he died. Having received a theological and medical education, he embarked at Boston, May 11, 1835, and arrived at Ooroomiah, Oct. 24, 1835, where he devoted himself with great zeal and fidelity to the propagation of the gospel among the Nestorians. In 1839, he visited Mesopotamia, and penetrated the mountains of Persia, encountering perils among the heathen, the recital of which thrilled the hearts of multitudes who heard his narrative during the visit which he made to this country in 1840–1."

ENCOURAGING.

A brother in Western New York writes to a friend in this city as follows:—

"I have lately attended our Association, and it certainly was one of the best that I ever attended. The Missionary spirit is increasing among us, and a deep interest is felt in the Tract cause. Indeed, brother, whichever way I look, the fields to me seem to be white already for the harvest; and in order to do our duty in this matter, it is my settled conviction that we must have one or more efficient agents in the field, whose whole business it shall be to attend to this subject, and who must be well supplied with Sabbath publications for gratuitous distribution. This measure, I think, is loudly called for."

For the Recorder.

YE ARE MY WITNESSES.

Having the curiosity some time since to visit, with a friend from the country, one of the popular Synagogues of this city, and becoming seated before the required number to form a quorum were present, a conversation was soon commenced with us by an intelligent-looking Israelite, which turning upon Christianity, we were asked where Christians found scriptural authority for disregarding the Sabbath which God had instituted and which the Jews every where kept? Not being able to give him the chapter and verse, he continued his remarks, insisting that the Messiah could not annul the Seventh-day Sabbath without sin, and that the change having been made by Christ was evidence that he was not the Messiah. I replied that from the Scriptures Christ could not be convicted of this act; that it was imputed to him or his apostles by tradition only, which was but uncertain evidence. After a momentary pause, an attentive listener to the conversation, which by this time had drawn around us the few who had come in, with an inquisitive air and with considerable emphasis, inquired of me how many sects there were among Christians; and, continued he, with sarcasm and an air of triumph, "should I become a convert to Christianity, what sect should I join—can you tell me that?" I did not choose to give him an answer, which I foresaw would avail me nothing in the controversy; but confessed there appeared to me, as well as to him, an inconsistency in the practice of Christians, but that Christianity ought not to be judged by the conduct of Christians, but by the Scriptures. True, said he, but you are all governed by the Bible, and if you insist that we should become Christians, you are bound to show us the right way; and if you cannot agree among yourselves, how should your testimony condemn us for rejecting your hundred sects as having no settled principles? A quorum having by this time arrived, they proceeded with the reading of their service, leaving me with my friend to reflect upon the anomalous picture so seriously urged upon our attention.

And must it always be thus? thought I—must the witnesses for the truth always continue their contradictory testimony? Who are the true witnesses for God? Who will declare "the TRUTH, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?"

What advocate in the courts of our country could gain his cause with such conflicting testimony as that borne by the professed witnesses of Jesus Christ? O my God, shall our Advocate on high lose his cause and the world perish through the false testimony of his own witnesses? Christian, what testimony do you bear for the truth before the world? Are you not making the commandments of God of none effect through your traditions? Remember, the world are spectators of your example; they may believe upon your testimony. LET IT BE THE TRUTH.

LUTHER.

☞ To the numerous inquirers for back numbers, we wish to say, that we are prepared to supply them to any extent. Send in your orders, therefore.

THE GRANITE FREEMAN is the title of an Anti-Slavery weekly paper just started at Concord, N. H., by J. E. HOOD. It is neatly printed, and edited with spirit. Among its contributors we see the names of Profs. Chase and Sanborn, L. Mason, J. G. Whittier, J. Curtis, S. Dana, M. A. Cortland, and L. D. Barrows.

"SABBATICAL MOVEMENTS."

Under this head, Wm. Lloyd Garrison, in his Liberator of July 12, has a long article about the movements now going on, in which the Agent of the "Sabbath Union," so called, is rather roughly handled. Although we have no confidence that the expectations of the anti-sabbatarians will ever be realized, yet we would not willingly see them misrepresented. Some of their objections can never be answered by those who refuse to take the Scriptures as they read and observe the day which they require. A reform which disregards these objections will be superficial and short-lived. Speaking of Mr. Edwards' mode of arguing the question, the Liberator says:—

"Apparently conscious that his side of the question will not bear a very rigid investigation, so far as scriptural evidence is concerned, we are told that he sagaciously assumes, as a settled point, (the very point, in fact, to be proved,) that the first day of the week is the Sabbath."

Having referred to the method of proving the necessity and importance of the Sabbath by testimonies of physicians, &c., he uses the following language:—

"There is not only folly, but positive dishonesty, in such a presentation of the question; for it imposes on ignorant and unreflecting minds the erroneous impresssion, that the anti-sabbatarians object to the Sabbath, because it admits of bodily rest from long protracted toil, and not because its observance, as a matter of scriptural authority and religious duty, is not binding under the Christian dispensation! This is wholly to beg the question, to make a false issue, to gain a victory through misrepresentation. To assert that those who reject the irrational and unscriptural dogma, that the first day of the week is the Sabbath, are for increasing the burdens of the toil-worn laborers, and taking away their one day of rest in seven, is false and ridiculous."

After speaking of the notice which is going the rounds requesting a meeting of the friends of the Christian Sabbath at Saratoga, the editor says:—

"A Seventh-day Baptist very pertinently inquires—'We wonder if those who should say, "The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God," would be regarded as friends of the Christian Sabbath'—and adds, 'It is hoped that some such will be present to learn.' We venture to predict that neither he, nor any of his brethren, will be allowed to vindicate the fourth commandment on that occasion; and that he will be gagged by the very persons who profess to receive the whole decalogue as perpetually obligatory, and who are always ready to quote the fourth commandment against those who do not hold to sabbatizing on any day of the week."

In conclusion, the Liberator proposes a Convention "during the month of October, either in Boston or Worcester or some other place, to discuss the Sabbath question, pro and con, and to adopt some efficient plan for agitating the nation."

ITEMS.

METHODISM.—The Providence Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, after a session of seven days, adjourned July 9th. The condition of the Wesleyan University at Middletown seems to have awakened considerable interest, and nearly $5,000 was raised among the members of the Conference in aid of it. An animated discussion arose during the session on the subject of preaching with notes—a practice which seems to have been adopted by some members. Bishop Hedding, in the course of his remarks on the subject, said, that if under certain circumstances crutches had been used, he hoped they would be dispensed with hereafter.

NUMBER OF MINISTERS.—An impression prevails in some sections that the number of preachers of the Gospel is already greater than is demanded. Unquestionably the number is sufficiently large of those who take the name without the spirit of ministers. But if those who take the office upon them should become truly ministers, and seek to be great by being the servants of all, there would be little danger from their multiplication. For the facts in the case, read the following, which we collect from the Missionary Herald: There are 17,093 evangelical ministers in the United States, or about one minister to every 1,093 souls. The whole number of missionaries is about 1,100, or one to every 600,000 heathens. In the Western States there is one minister to about 1,318 souls. Is there not occasion, in the light of these facts, to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into the harvest?

ANOTHER SLAVEHOLDING BISHOP.—It has been currently reported in the papers that since the decision of the case of Bishop Andrews, another Bishop of the Methodist Church had married a widow in Kentucky who possessed slaves. It was said, however, in palliation of his case, that before his marriage, by special contract, he declined any proprietory title to the slave property, relinquishing his prospective claim in favor of the children of his lady by a former marriage. It is now denied by a writer in one of the Baltimore papers that the lady stood in any such relation to slavery as has been represented. We may hope to know the truth when the subject comes up for adjudication among the church casuists.

A BOLD STEP.—It is said that a plan is on foot among the evangelical churches in New York to publish an edition of D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation for circulation in Italy. An able report on the subject has been drawn up, and the interest is such as will be likely to accomplish the object. A great effort has been made, and is now being made, to check the progress of Popery in this country. Is this another way of accomplishing the same object, by giving it work at home?

THE OTHER SIDE.—The American Messenger informs us that of the $528,000 expended in one year by the Association for propagating the Papal Faith, established at Lyons, in France, $43,000 was expended for missions in Europe, $195,000 for missions in Asia; $27,000 for missions in Africa; $50,000 for missions in Oceanica, embracing the islands of the Pacific and Indian Oceans; and $164,000 for missions in America. Of their periodical, entitled the Annals, about 120,000 copies, published six times a year, are now printed in seven languages, viz: French, 63,000; German, 17,000; English, 16,000; Spanish, 11,000; Flemish, 4,000; Italian, 18,000; Portuguese, 2,000.

RELIGION IN THE WEST.—An interesting convention of delegates from the Presbyterian and Congregational churches was recently held in Cleveland, Ohio. It was stated that in Wisconsin there were 75,000 inhabitants, and 60 churches; and that by means of revivals 500 were converted in one year. The churches are represented as being in a flourishing condition. The most important colleges and seminaries of learning in the west have resulted from missionary labor in that section.

A VOICE FROM ROME.—A curious article has lately been published in New York, called a "Circular Letter from His Holiness the Pope to all Patriarchs, Primates, Archbishops and Bishops." His Holiness implores the faithful to aid him in putting down certain Bible Societies, and anathematizes a Christian League recently formed in New York for the purpose of propagating "among Italians, and especially Romans, the principles of Christian liberty, or rather an insane indifference to all religion." After enumerating the evils attendant upon a general circulation of the Bible, the efforts which have been made in former times to prevent these evils, and the necessity of watchfulness, the letter closes as follows:—

"But, above all, venerable brothers, let us lift up our hands to heaven, and commit to God, with all humility the cause of the whole flock of Jesus Christ, and of his Church. Let us, at the same time, recur to the intercession of St. Peter, the prince of the Apostles, as also to that of the other saints, especially to the blessed Virgin Mary, to whom it has been given to destroy all the heresies of the universe."

General Intelligence.

Mexico.—By the latest news from Mexico, it seems that Santa Anna is determined to undertake the campaign against Texas, and to subdue it. He has written a letter, in which he says hard things about the President of the U. S., on account of his course in relation to Texas.

Four millions of dollars and 30,000 men have been asked of the Mexican Congress to undertake the reconquest of Texas. All the militia are ordered out and every thing in Mexico seems to breath out a determination to accomplish the subjugation of the little Republic.

The Mexican Congress have refused to grant Santa Anna the additional 30,000 men and $4,000,000 which he required for the invasion of Texas. Mexico, it is stated, has now a force of 36,000 men.

The Mexican Government had not paid the May instalment of the indemnity due the United States. It amounts to $140,000.

From Maracaibo.—Sad, very sad, is the intelligence just received from the province of Zulia. The overflow is much greater than the famous one of the year 1839, and proved the most destructive ever known. Lands that were then dry are now under water, and the only means of getting what little crop is left is by boats. In fact all communication is now made in this way, as the whole country is but a lake whose centre is the river. At least two-thirds of all the crop is lost in that province. The prospect for an abundant crop of Cacao in St. Juan, which was so cheering in the Spring, is now entirely blasted; and coffee, cocoa, corn, plantains, &c. have shared the same fate.

To all this destruction of the hopes of the planters in Zulia, is added another calamity even more to be lamented. The fever which succeeded the inundations of the years 1802, 1816, and 1830, has already broken out in this of 1844, and fearful effects are anticipated. Preparations are making by the local authorities to ameliorate, as far as possible, the suffering inhabitants of the province. Medicines and Medical attendance have been provided at the public expense, for all those that need them.

Extracts from the papers published at the capital of Venezuela:

"There is a wretched state of things in the capital. Business, and industry of all kinds, have been displaced by inaction and entire loss of confidence. Capitalists, in the anticipation of a political crisis, have refused to be engaged in any transactions whatever. The proposed changes in the rates of interest in the National Bank, and the duties on articles of export and import, are the causes of this bad state of things.—[U. S. Gaz.

The Mormons.—A good deal of excitement has been manifested in some of the towns near Nauvoo, since the death of the Smiths. Some seemed not to be satisfied with this, but were anxious to carry matters farther, and compel the Mormons to leave the country. It is thought, however, that the excitement is now nearly ended.

Gov. Ford has issued a Proclamation in which he laments that after security was pledged to the Smiths, that pledge should have been so wantonly broken. The Proclamation is said to have given general satisfaction to the Mormons.

It is now asserted in some places that the Smiths were murdered by the disaffected Mormons. The story appears plausible. Whoever may have been the persons concerned, the deed must be denounced by every one. The ferocity which has been manifested towards the Mormons, and is now felt by some, indicates that persons fit for the deed would not be wanting.

It seems that the Mormons themselves have no fear that the cause will die with the Smiths. They say it would be a mournful thing if there were only one prophet among them. Sidney Rigdon is spoken of as the successor of Smith. The St. Louis New Era of the 3d inst. says:

Elder Adams came down to-day from Nauvoo, on board the Osprey. We learn that his object is to visit several of the Elders of the Mormon Church who are residing in the Eastern States, for the purpose of consulting them as to a re-organization of the Church. He will call, we presume, upon Sidney Rigdon first, who is now in the vicinity of Pittsburg, and then proceed to New York and Massachusetts, where the largest portion of the twelve are said to be located.

Affairs in Philadelphia.—We last week gave an account of the Riots in Philadelphia up to Tuesday evening, at which time peace had been restored. Since then there has been no serious outbreak. The Natives fortified themselves and continued to occupy their quarters for some time, threatening to make terrible work if the military should be ordered into the district. It was not thought advisable to give such an order, however, so that no actual conflict occurred, although the city was thronged with soldiers and presented a warlike appearance. It is doubtful whether the mobocratic spirit has been yet subdued, and the consequences of it may hereafter be seen.

By the following from the Philadelphia Gazette, it will be seen that judicial proceedings against the rioters have commenced in earnest.

Important Investigation.—The Court of Quarter Sessions have commenced a full and thorough investigation into the causes and consequences of the late terrible riots in Southwark. The aldermen, constables and commissioners of the district have been subpœnaed, and a number of them were examined in the course of the morning.—The Court are determined to leave nothing undone to ferret out the guilty, and to astertain the true state of affairs at present existing in Southwark. Every effort will be made to find out whether there are concealed any cannon, or other firearms, or ammunition, intended to be used by the insurgents.—Philadelphia Gazette.

The charge of Judge Jones relative to the late riots was given in the Court of Sessions on Monday the 15th.

The Washington Monument Association is in a bad way. Upwards of $30,000 have been collected, and but two or three persons can be found who will admit they have any of the funds.

Death of an Ex-Governor.—Isaac H. Williamson, Ex-Governor of New Jersey and President of her late Constitutional Convention, died at his residence in Elizabethtown, on Wednesday, July 10, aged 76 years. The following account of the deceased, is from the New York American, whose editor has long been his neighbor:—

By the death of this eminent and excellent citizen, the State loses one of its worthiest sons—the profession which he adorned its oldest, its most learned, and perhaps its ablest member; while the circle of neighbors, friends and family, sustains an irreparable wound.

Governor Williamson was appointed Governor of the State of New Jersey about 1817, and was annually re-elected till 1829. The Governor of New Jersey is, by virtue of his office, Chancellor of the State; and it was in that capacity that the legal learning, the acute discrimination, the well balanced faculties of Governor Williamson conferred equal benefits upon the community, and credit upon himself. He made the Court of Chancery of New Jersey an honor to his native State, and an example to others.

Since 1829, Gov. Williamson has confined himself to the practice of his profession—avoiding all political stations, until recently, he was persuaded to suffer himself to be elected a member of the Convention to form a Constitution for the State. He was chosen President of the Convention by a unanimous vote, and up to the last ten days of the session, he discharged the duties of that honorable post.

Recurring indisposition induced him then to resign, and he returned home—there to die, amid kindred, and neighbors, and children, who knew and could best appreciate his virtues—who will be the first and longest to deplore his loss.

Gov. Williamson's intercourse with the world was marked by singular simplicity and cheerfulness; with his family, by the greatest tenderness and affection: toward all he was without guile; and it may be said of him with truth—what can rarely be said of a man so distinguished—that he has not left an enemy behind.

German Emigrants to Texas.—A friend has translated for us from the Deutche Schnellpost of this city, the following paragraph, from which it appears that a large number of Germans, each possessing some property, are about emigrating to Western Texas:

"Frankfort-on-the-Maine, May 31.

An explanatory Circular of the much-talked of Association for the Protection of German Emigrants to Texas, has at last been published. It is dated from Mayence, April 9, and signed by the prince of Leimtgen, and the count of Isenburgh, Meerhaiz—the latter jointly with count Charles of Rassell. It appears that the Association has acquired, in the Western part of Texas, an undivided territory of considerable extent, as yet uncultivated. To each emigrant a lot of good land is guaranteed, whose productions shall belong to him at once, which he shall possess as a freehold, after being settled on it for three years. The Association promise to furnish good vessels, and wholesome and cheap provisions, at a low rate of passage. Agents will assist the emigrants by their aid and advice; the emigrants will be transported after arrival free of charge to the place of settlement, where they will find log houses, barns, implements, seeds and plants, cattle, and other necessaries, at moderate prices. Churches and schools, physicians and apothecaries, and a hospital, shall be provided for them. A municipality and laws shall be established on the English plan. The transport will leave in September. An emigrant with a moderate family must have 600 guilders, unmarried persons about 300; but the Association will apply 3 per cent. of its receipts for the purpose of facilitating the passage and settling of the indigent emigrants, to which end they are going to open a subscription list for voluntary contributions."—Jour. of Com.

An Immense Stone—The Quincy Granite Railway Company quarried yesterday one of the largest stones ever moved at Quincy, or probably at any other quarry. Average dimension 50 feet long, 28 feet wide, 25 deep, making 35,000 cubic feet. Weight of the stone 3181 tons, allowing 11 feet to the ton. This huge mass was moved on its bed by gunpowder. The blast hole was 20 feet deep, and 4¼ inches in diameter. The hole was to have been 25 feet deep, but a piece of the drill broke, and prevented going to the proposed depth. Four casks of powder were used in the operation. For the first blast one cask was used, which did not crack the stone. The second, one and a half casks, which cracked the rock the whole length, opening a seam an eighth of an inch wide. The third blast, one and a half casks were put in, which opened the seam a full half inch, sufficient to cut the stone into dimensions. This operation was conducted under the superintendence of Mr. S. R. Johnson. This is unquestionably the best and most valuable stone ever quarried or moved by gunpowder.—Boston Transcript.

Affray and Loss of Life at Clyde.—There was a fight between two canal boats at Clyde, Wayne county, on Tuesday evening, in which one person was killed, and two or three dangerously wounded. A canal boat from Whitehall shoved aside a scow loaded with staves, just as she was entering the lock. A quarrel ensued between the hands of the two boats. The men on the line boat assaulted those on the scow, and the latter defended themselves with staves. One man, whose name we understand is Shaw, had his skull broken in several places, and survived but a few hours. A number of others were seriously injured, of whom two are not expected to recover. Seven of those engaged in the affray have been arrested and committed to prison at Lyons.—Rochester Democrat.

The Destruction of the City of Kaskaskia, Town of Chester, &c.—We regret to learn by late Western papers, that the the city of Kaskaskia, has been swept away by the flood, a few buildings only being left to mark the spot where, but a few days ago, stood a flourishing city. Chester is also ruined. Millions of dollars' worth of property have been swept from the shores of the Missouri and the Upper Mississippi Rivers and their tributaries. The business of Missouri and Illinois is sadly deranged. Farmers, mechanics, gardeners, all have suffered; and brick-yards, wood-yards, and the necessaries of life along the rivers, have been destroyed. We are happy to see that human life has not been sacrificed, so far as heard from. The Convent at Kaskaskia has been abandoned by the Sisters of Charity, who fled to St. Louis.

Between the 3d and 11th of July, there were 1480 arrivals at Saratoga.

A Noble Dog.—Two small boys were amusing themselves by wading from a sand bank into the Frog Pond yesterday afternoon, when one of them losing his footing fell into the water beyond his depth and sunk. The attraction of a large and intelligent Newfoundland dog, called Turk, the property of Mr. Alvin Adams, of the firm of Adams & Co., Express Office, 9 Court street, was called to the boy, when he plunged in, swam to the bottom, seized the boy by his clothes, and brought him safe to the shore. We trust this case of preservation of life by a dog may attract the notice of the Humane Society—though a medal would not keep the fact before the public so well as a handsome collar with an inscription.—Boston paper of 11th inst.

Lost Children.—The following touching instances of suffering speak most thrillingly of the destitution and sorrow caused by the late floods in Illinois and Missouri. It is copied from the St. Louis Republican of the 29th.

Mr. Henry Bucksath, No. 17 Locust street, took up in the street on Thursday a little girl about two years old, very poorly dressed, no shoes or bonnet on. The little thing was unable to give her name, or where she is from.

Another, a boy, about three years old, light hair, with striped clothes, speaking very little—all he says is that his mother is in the water—came to the house of Mr. U. Rasin, on Second, between Pine and Olive streets, on Friday evening, a few hours before sundown.

A Resolute Woman—The New Haven Register states that one Mrs. McCarty, a widow, in Norwich, Conn. has been fined one dollar and costs, for beating the town functionary, who was driving her geese "to pound," for violating the town statute. It seems she came up, collared him, planted her pretty fist two or three times in the region of his eyes, and then held him until one of the juvenile McCartys rescued the geese! She defended her own case, and came near giving the Court another illustration of the beauties of 'the science.'

A Thrilling Incident.—The Amherst Cabinet contains a letter describing the melancholy event lately mentioned in this paper, of the blowing up of a powder mill at Dunby, (Va.) causing the death of three boys—and adds:—"Mr. Smith was the first to rush to the scene of ruin; he caught up the first boy he came to, whose features were so disfigured as not to be readily recognized, yet alive and possessing his senses; as he was bearing him away from the scene of calamity, he said to him, 'Whose boy are you?' The little sufferer looking him in the face, with tender emotion, said, 'I am your boy, Pa!' And the poor lad died in a few hours after."

Death by Injuries.—On the 10th inst. the Coronor held an inquest at 546 Grand street, on the body of Charles Champlin, aged 16 years, a native of Connecticut, a hand on board the fishing smack Herald of New-London, which was run against last night in the East River about 9 o'clock by the steam Ferry boat Newtown, plying between New York and Williamsburg, and the bow of the steamer crushing him against the mast of the smack caused his instant death. Verdict, death by injuries received by the collision of the Ferry boat Newtown with the fishing smack Herald on the night of the 9th, which collision might have been avoided by Thomas Rockwell who had charge of said Ferry boat.

SUMMARY.

The Western Rivers.—On the 3d instant, the Mississippi at St. Louis continued to fall slowly. The Missouri had fallen about six feet, and the other streams in that region were rapidly shrinking to their usual dimensions.

The Philadelphia Gazette proposes, as the most appropriate monument to the memory of De Witt Clinton, that his name be inscribed on every lock on the Erie Canal.

Whales.—The Providence Journal states that a shoal of whales was seen off Newport harbor a few days since.

A letter-writer in Paris says: The Poles are all embracing a new religious doctrine brought from Lithuania about three years since by a M. Towianzki, and recently endorsed by M. Michieniez, one of the professors of the college of France. It appears to be a compound of Mormonism, transcendentalism, and animal magnetism—and will, undoubtedly become popular on the other side of the water.

The priest who has charge of the Catholic Church of Columbus, Ga., has been tried at the last session of the Muscogee Superior Court, and convicted of the crime of seduction The judge fined him $700, with the privilege of paying that amount or going to jail for three months. The priest chose the latter punishment, and is now in jail at Columbus, faithfully serving out his time.—Evening Post.

The suit brought by the U. States against Pomeroy & Co., for carrying mail matter by private express, terminated at Utica, on Thursday, in favor of the defendants. The Judge charged, as the jury found, that Messrs. Pomeroy had not committed any breach of law.

Thomas W. Dorr is employed in making fans in his new state quarters. He may raise a breeze yet—who knows?

Size of London.—London is now, beyond all doubt, the largest and most populous city in the world. It may somewhat assist the imagination in forming a conception of its immensity, when we reflect that its present population is equal to that of the six New England States, viz., Massachusetts, Maine, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hapshire and Vermont.

Between one and two hundred German emigrants arrived at Philadelphia from Bremen the other day.

Colored Lawyer.—We noticed some time ago the unsuccessful application of Macon B. Allen, of Portland, for admission to the Bar, on the ground that he was not a citizen of Maine. That difficulty overcome, Mr. Allen has been admitted as Attorney and Counsellor at law in the Courts of that State. The Bar being now open to colored lawyers, the Bench may follow.

Sheep Killed.—The Northampton Courier says that fourteen sheep belonging to Mr. Alex. Day, of West Springfield, which had taken shelter under a tree, were struck by lightning on Saturday afternoon last.

In Season.—Gov Steele, of New-Hampshire, has selected the 14th day of November next to be Thanksgiving Day in that State.

Babe the Pirate.—The President has farther respited the pirate Babe, now under sentence of death in this city, till the first Monday in June, 1845. The prisoner, we are told, manifested no signs of emotion when he was informed of this farther act of grace in his favor.

Common Schools of Boston.—Of 19,000 children between 4 and 16 years of age, 15,000 are educated at the public expense.

Anti-Rent Difficulties.—We understand, says the Albany Evening Journal, that the Sheriff of Rensselaer County and one or two of his deputies, while attempt to serve a process upon some of the Manor tenants in Stephentown last week, met with forcible resistance from a party of men disguised as Indians, and were compelled to forego their purpose.

Harvard.—Thirty-seven professors and tutors are employed at Harvard University. The available funds of the college are $680,000. A new telescope is to cost $17,000.

Iowa.—By the census of Iowa Territory, just completed, the population is 82,254—an increase of 40,000 since 1840. Through a Convention, Iowa has already claimed admission as a State, to which her present population entitles her. At the recent session of Congress the bill passed the House, but was not acted on in the Senate.—Albany Argus.

DIED,

Near Shiloh, N. J., on the 1st inst., Mr. David Davis, in his 84th year. He had been many years a professor of religion and a member of the Seventh-day Baptist Church at Shiloh. Unassuming in his manners, affectionate in his disposition, and uniform in his deportment, he gained the lasting esteem of those with whom he associated; and like Abraham, in "a good old age" descended to the tomb in the hope of a blessed immortality beyond the grave. He has left an aged companion, and children even to the third and fourth generation, to mourn their loss.

On the 2d inst., suddenly, Mrs. Mary, consort of Elder John Davis, in the 66th year of her age. For a few years past she had been subject to paroxysms of determination to the brain, resembling appoplexy, resulting in palsy more or less complete: a more severe attack of which terminated her earthly existence. For more than a year past she had been able to go out but little, but did a few times visit her children, and attend meeting on the Sabbath. Even the Sabbath previous to her death, she attended the sanctuary. She was a number of years a member of the Seventh-day Baptist Church at Shiloh, and exemplified the Christian character, by a firm confidence in the Saviour, and attachment to his cause and people. She looked forward to the period of her dissolution, which she supposed not far distant, with tranquility of mind, and resignation to the Divine will, and we trust now realizes the blessing promised to those who are found watching for the coming of their Lord.

In Waterford, Ct., June 3d, Cynthia A., infant daughter of David P. and Mary A. Rogers.

In New York, July 9th, Charles J. Champlin, son of Elias B. and Hester D. Champlin, of Waterford, Ct., in the 16th year of his age. His death was caused by the collision of the Williamsburgh ferry boat with the vessel upon which he was engaged, killing him instantly. He was a member of the Seventh-day Baptist Church in Waterford, and while his friends are thus suddenly bereaved, they mourn not as those without hope.

LETTERS RECEIVED.

W M Fahnestock, M D, W H Potter, S P Stillman, Lucius Crandall, Wm B Maxson, Ephraim Maxson, George Tomlinson, Sebeus M Burdick, B G Stillman, L H Bond, (all right,) Isaac Titsworth, (forwarded from Plainfield.) J P Livermore, S U Berrian, E Goodrich, E G Champlin, C A Osgood, T W Saunders, I D Titsworth.

Postmasters,—Leonardsville, West Edmeston, Scott, Hamilton, Pennsboro, Va, New Lebanon Springs, Fairfield, O, Waterford Centre, Mich., Cincinnatus, Mystic Bridge, Ct., De Ruyter, Almond, Marshall, Mich.

RECEIPTS.

Westerly, R I—W B Babcock, S Wilcox, J Maxson, Jr., J W Bliven, Truman Lanphear, $2 each.

New Lebanon Springs—Philander Carpenter, $2; G P Maxson, $1.

Pennsboro, Va—Lewis Bond, $2.

West Edmeston—John Maxson, Ichabod Burdick, David Maxson, $2 each.

Georgetown—Eld. Wood $1.

Leonardsville—B K Platts, Asa West, Alfred Maxson, C M Whitford, Mrs. Lucy Davis, $2 each.

Providence, R. I.—Charles Saunders, Stephen Browning, Warwick; Gideon Hoxsey, North Scituate, $2 each.

Scott—James Hubbard $2.

Lost Creek, Va.—E Van Horn, W Batten, R C Bond, L H Bond, Abel Bond, sen., $2 each.

De Ruyter—C W Church, Lorenzo Burdick, Albert Muncy, $1 each; W D Wilcox $2.

Independence—Edmund Livermore $2.

Fairfield, O—Joel Babcock $2.

Mystic Bridge, Ct.—J S Williams, T M Wilcox, Wm Meeker, James Manwaring, $2 each; A G Wolf $1.

Newport—A Stillman, D Truman, Ezra Stillman, $2 each.

Durhamville—F W Saunders $1.

Marshall, Mich.—Robert Church, $2.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the Seventh-day Baptist General Conference will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in Verona, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference. Paul Stillman, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having already reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year. F. W. Stillman, Rec. Sec'y.

The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Association will meet at the same place on sixth day pt. 13, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Society will meet on fifth day, Sept. 14, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Evangelical Board of Directors for Disseminating Religious Truth among the Jews, will meet on first day, Sept. 15, at the call of the President.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath Tract Society publish the following Sabbath Tracts, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.

No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.

No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.

No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week, the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

The Society has published, also, in quarto form, [$1,25 per 100, or $10 per 1000,] two numbers of The Sabbath Vindicator.

TO PRINTERS.

The subscriber having relinquished the business of publishing the S. D. B. Register, wishes to sell his Press, Type, &c. And he takes this method of saying, that he will sell at a very low rate to any one wishing to purchase. The Press is a No. 3, Washington. There is every thing connected with the Office that is necessary for publishing a paper, and also an extensive quantity of Job Type, and a small Book Bindery.

Will Editors with whom we have exchanged, be so kind as to give the above an insertion in their papers, as a parting favor to one of the craft? JAMES BAILEY.

DeRuyter, Madison Co., N. Y. June 18, 1844.

The Bible says ☞ THE SABBATH. ☜ The Church says

The seventh day is — The first day is

WHICH SHALL WE HEAR?

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as instituted in Paradise upon the Seventh or last-day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the first day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith. It is hoped all who love the Sabbath, and reverence God's word, will give this address a prayerful consideration.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, (3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES,
Pot, first sort	4 06 a 4 12
Pearl	4 50 a 4 56
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	23 00a23 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 32
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	7 00 a 8 50
Newcastle	6 50 a 7 50
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¼a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4 4	7 a 12
Do do. 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	– a —
Stripes, fast colors	– a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16½
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood.Cpy	26 00 @28 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	27 @ 31
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 87 @ 2 91
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
ickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	16 00 @
moked Salmon Mlb	9 @ 10
ackerel, 1 bbl	9 75 @10 00
No 2 bbl	8 75 @ 9 00
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 25 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 25@7 50
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 37 @ 4 43
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 31 @ 4 37
Michigan	4 31 @ 4 37
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 50 @
Richm'd c mills	6 25 @ 6 50
Brandywine	4 75 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	12 00 @12 50
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	90 @ 95
Do South new
Rye, Northern	67 @
Corn N & Jersey	47½@ 48
Southern	45 @ 47
Barley N R	@

Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew-rot	85 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 00
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 40@ 3 50
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.]
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@1500
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	30@31
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	8 37 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 7 @ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10¼ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6½a 7
American	5 a
Spring	5¼a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	8¼a 9½
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	6¼a 9½
Do Brown	6¾a 8¼
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack 1 10	a
Do do fine 1 35	a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¼
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17¼a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¼
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 67
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E India	16 a 17
n plates I X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	[illegible]
No. 1	[illegible]
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

SABBATH EVENING.

Is there a time when moments flow,
More peacefully than all beside?
It is of all the times below,
A Sabbath eve in summer tide.
O then the setting sun smiles fair,
And all below, and all above,
The different forms of nature wear
One universal garb of love.
And then the peace that Jesus beams,
The life of grace, and death of sin,
With nature's placid woods and streams,
Is peace without, and peace within.
Delightful scene! a world at rest,
A God-all love, nor grief nor fear;
A heavenly hope, a peaceful breast,
A smile unsullied by a tear.
If heaven be ever felt below,
A scene so heavenly sure as this
May cause a heart on earth to know
Some foretaste of celestial bliss.
Delightful hour! how soon will night
Spread her dark mantle o'er thy reign;
And morrow's quick returning light
Must call us to the world again.
Yet will there dawn at last a day,
A sun that never sets shall rise;
Night will not veil his ceaseless ray
The heavenly Sabbath never dies!

For the Recorder.

THE OLD HERBARIUM.

He cannot be said to live who exists only in the present. The past and future, too, enter into and form a part of true life. The future! How many hearts leap quicker at the thought of what the future may have in store for them! How many eyes dimmed with grief grow bright as the bow of promise paints the blackened cloud that conceals from us the future! Deceitful, treacherous future! The traveler who climbs a mountain and has almost gained its top, stops by the wayside to view the perils he has passed. In the extended prospect before him, how much he sees to instruct and amuse. So, as we go on in our life journey and approach our final goal, how vast a field lies behind us, and who is not way-weary enough to step aside from the toil and dust to some memorial, as to a cooling fountain, and turn his eyes from the future back upon the past? To a well spent life it is an Elysium, blooming in eternal spring. The truthful past! Happy is the man who can gather from its ruin of broken hopes some fragments of glorious memorials to carry with him to the close.

How inestimable to its possessor must have been this old volume, bearing witness of long and frequent wanderings amid the solitudes of nature—the wild wood—the lonely mountain—the slow silvery river, and the tangled morass. It is Flora's album, where flowers that bloomed to fade unseen were embalmed with a thousand grateful memories to charm the vigils of age. Flowers!—Wild-wood-flowers! What magic is in their dry old leaves! The moth that has crept through them has not broken it, and the last fragrance has taken nought from its potency to reinvoke the pleasures of childhood and the scenes of the homestead. We open to the *Harebell! Beautiful cerulean goblet, formed of frailest stuff for fairy fingers. Only a wreck of its former beauty remains. Time has stripped the color from its petals, yet, like virtues lingering where beauty has disappeared, the leaves retain their viridity. Now close the volume and we will go where Niagara pours its deep-toned thunder. Standing at the foot of the wall of rock that beats back the falling water, let your eye range the height above you. There where the foot of man or beast or bird has never trod, and where the roving honey bee does not venture nor the sunbeams fall, in a crevice too small for ought else, the Harebell has found root and nods to the falling spray. You will not find it on the plains above; you will search for it in vain among the haunts of men. Wild as the winds that stir it, or the rocks on which it grows, it ever has and ever will remain.

The associations of this flower are none of the beautiful, though it is of all our wild flowers the most so; they are rather of the wild, the sublime. It reminds us of perils and roaring waters.—Yet now I bethink me of the pic nic in the old hemlock grove, and a something of the beautiful is there mid the laugh and song that mocked the solemn cadence of the cataract. Then the pantomime oration from the top of the rock by cousin Ben, concluded with uproarous laughter by the whole company! The harvest apple tree was placed under tribute for the benefit of our guests, and with hands and faces bearing evidence of our sanguinary conflict with the briars, we all returned home weary.—But the Harebell—the Harebell! In fancy we tread the hallowed ground again. The hemlock grove, the rock, the spring are here, and the mire where one of our fair attendants lost her shoe—or at least it was lost to our ken. Here are the black-berry briars where we mingled our blood with that of the berries, and here—hold fast to these knarled roots while we look down the dizzy height upon the troubled foamy water. The spider has woven his web among them, and the Phœbe-bird starts from her nest under the mossy ledge, and finds refuge in the top of the dry birch that stretches half fallen over the precipice. Down where the swallow darts like the lightning in its quick and crooked way is the fairy bell, bowing as if depressed by grief for its loneliness—blue as the sky when the first blush of aurora had chased away the stars, ere the sun had turned it all to brass. Below is the rock where we used to sit with our angle, and wait through the long, sunny hours for "bites." On the other side is the old sawmill. I sometimes wonder if the logs are not all sawed up and its clack at length still as the voices that echoed around it long ago.

Years have fled since I saw that scene last, yet how vividly the picture remains. It was at the close of a sultry day in July. Not a cloud could be seen, and the setting sun was slowly bidding the world "good night" from the top of the far off mountain. The thrush was singing her evening song from the thicket, which a wag of a cat bird was turning into ridicule. The breeze came up cool from the watery gulf below, fluttering the leaves and falling upon and infusing new life into the withering grass. My ear listened in vain for the hum of the bee among the wild rose and eglantine. Before the next setting sun, and I should leave this familiar scene to see it no more; and I gazed on it with the eagerness of a "last time," until the shade of the twilight had obscured the outlines of the distant landscape, bathing the flowers and foliage in the same undistinguishable hue, and there remained only the dull roar of the waterfall, and the consciousness that when again I returned to the haunts of my childhood the breath of the world would have blasted the poesy of life's young morning, and the "singing of waters be vainly heard."

LENOX.

New York, July 10th.

A WONDERFUL CLOCK.

The following account of a wonderful work of art, was written by Rev. Mr. Turnbull of Boston, while on a tour in Europe. It was directed to the members of the Sunday School connected with his congregation, and will be read with interest by others.

There is no subject that I can think of which will be so likely to interest you, as the great astronomical clock, which I saw the other day in the Cathedral at Strasburgh. This Cathedral, by the way, is one of the finest and oldest in Europe. It is very large, and its tower or steeple is the highest in the world. It is twenty-four feet higher than the great Pyramid in Egypt, one hundred and forty feet higher than St. Paul's in London, and three or four times higher than the old South Church in Boston. The astronomical clock stands in the inside, in one corner of it, and is a most imposing and beautiful edifice. Five or six hundred people visit it every day at 12 o'clock—when it performs some extraordinary feats, which I shall mention presently—and several millions in the course of a year. There have been two or three clocks in the same place, upon the model of which the present one is formed; but this is almost a new one, and was constructed by a mechanic whose name was Schwilgue, in 1838, to whom a nocturnal fete or festival was given by his fellow citizens on the occasion of its completion.

To give you some idea of the size of this clock, I will compare it with some other things with which you are familiar, instead of saying that it is so many feet high, and so many feet wide, &c. Well, then, you remember the size of the Post Office in Washington street. It is as high as that, and about as wide, or at least nearly so. Its top would reach to the very summit of our meeting-house, and its front would go about half way across the front of the meeting-house. On the top of it is the figure of the prophet Isaiah, about as large as life; on its two sides are a couple of stairs to go up into it. Its front is beautifully painted, and has places upon which the hours of the day, the days of the week, the revolution of the stars, the motions of the sun in the ecliptic, the days of the month, the seasons of the year, the phases of the sun and moon, and a great many other things, are indicated. Here, also, in niches prepared for them, are movable images of the Saviour and his twelve apostles; Death, and Time with his scythe; the four ages of human life, and several other forms which I cannot mention.

To give you a little further idea of its magnitude, let me say that there are means of going inside of it, and that some ten or fifteen people, perhaps more, might stand together in its very heart, and examine the machinery. Mr. Neale, two other gentlemen, and myself, with the conductor, went into it and spent about an hour there. We went first into a lower, then into a higher, and then still higher apartment of it, and saw the various parts of the machinery, consisting, I should think, of more than a thousand pieces splendidly polished, and all dependent for the harmonious action upon the short, thick brass pendulum which swings in the centre.

But I must tell you what this clock does. It not only points out the hours and the days, the times and the seasons, but the revolutions of the stars, the solar and lunar equations, the conjunctions and the eclipses of the heavenly bodies, their positions at any given time, and various changes through which they pass for thousands of years. It points out apparent time, mean, or real time, and ecclesiastical time. On its face you see the motion of the stars, of the sun and planets, of the moon and her satellites. Two little cherubs who sit, one on one side, the other on the other, strike the quarters of the hour—Death strikes the hour with a mace—while four figures pass and repass before him—representing the various stages of human life.

At 12 o'clock every day, when Death strikes 12, the apostles, who are represented each with the badge of his martyrdom, come out from the clock and pass before the image of our Saviour, bowing as they pass, and receiving his benediction, which he gives with a movement of the hand. When the apostle Peter makes his appearance, a gilded cock, which is perched on one side of the clock, flaps his wings, raises his head, and crows so long and loud as to make the whole Cathedral ring again. This he repeats three times, in memorial of the cock that crowed three times before the fall of Peter, during the crucifixion of our Saviour. Of course the cock makes no farther noise or motion till the next day at 12 o'clock, when he repeats the same loud and startling crow, flapping his wings and raising his head.

OUR COUNTRY'S BIBLE.

The American Messenger says: Three of the speakers at the late Bible anniversary, alluded in terms of deep toned veneration and gratitude to those noble patriots who composed the American Congress of 1782,—who superintended a large edition of the Bible, and formally recommended it to the inhabitants of the United States,—thus publicly declaring to the nation and the world, that our free institutions are based upon the oracles of the living God. The Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen said, "That Congress was a Bible Congress, Washington was a Bible General, the army of the revolution was, to a great extent, a Bible soldiery; let us all resolve, in the spirit and power of its divine Author, that we will live by the Bible, and that we will, if need be, die for the Bible."

THE EGG HATCHER.

A curious machine for hatching eggs, has been exhibiting in New York for some months past, and has been visited by large numbers. Mrs. Childs has given an account of it in one of her letters to the Boston Courier, which we copy as an illustration of the spirit of the age. Here is her description of the "Eccaleobion."

Its imposing name is derived from two Greek words, "I bring forth life." It is about as large as a bureau, consisting of a series of small ovens, warmed by pipes conveying steam. The uniformity of temperature prevents the possibility of addled eggs, which are produced by variations from heat to cold, occasioned by the hen's unsteady performance of her domestic duties. I felt some resistance to this substitution of machinery for mothers; and if I were a hen, I would get up a protest against being thus thrust aside from the use of creation. This is an ultimate form of the mechanical spirit of the age, wherein men construct artificial memories, and teach grammar by a machine, in which the active verb is a little hammer pounding on the objective case.

But what is the use of quarreling with it? Does not the Eccaleobion hatch with perfect certainty every egg that is not stale or imperfect? Does it not turn out fifty chickens a day, or twenty thousand a year? And will not this reduce the price of poultry to the heart's content of the epicure?

These machines are sold for $120, and $75 is charged for one of half the capacity of production above described. Some of the farmers in New Jersey and Long Island are investing capital in this way, with the expectation of profit.

The chickens thus hatched almost invariably live, and seem healthy and lively. When cold, they run into little holes under the ovens. The hard, silent box seemed to me a poor substitute for a mother's heart-warmth, and the friendly, clucking voice which gathers them under her brooding wings. But the little things seem well contented with their lot, never having known anything better. Those a few weeks old, though plump and thriving, have rather a loaferish look, as if their mothers didn't know they were out, and consequently had not washed their faces, or combed their feathers. The older ones sometimes take to brooding the newly-hatched, who run after them with great eagerness, and strive with each other to obtain their caresses. There is something quite affecting in this relation between the bereaved orphans and their elder sisters.

The exhibition of the Eccaleobion is principally interesting from the opportunity it affords to watch the progressive development of animal life, from the first little white speck in which floats the embryo chicken, to the final projection of the beak through the shell, which it has broken by vigorous pecking at its prison walls. The only thing in which I took real pleasure, however, was in watching the first pulsation of the heart, which becomes observable on the third day. Though no bigger than a pin's head, it works with the vigor and precision of a steam engine.

THE FARMER'S LIFE.

I love the farmer's quiet life—
His peaceful home devoid of strife,
With gay contentment bless'd.
I love the virtues of his heart,
Which peace and joy and love impart
Around his tranquil rest.

I love the bloomy hills and dales,
Their healthful winds, their odorous gales,
Untainted with disease:
I love the tales and legends old,
By white-haired sires at twilight told,
'Mid scenes of shadowy ease.

I love the labor and the toil,
Which clothe with beauty Freedom's soil
Where tyrant never trod!
And when each task from turmoil free,
Great God, is santified by thee,
And consecrates the sod.

I love the labor and the toil,
Which brighten round his evening hearth,
With joy unmix'd replete;
Where friendship's smile, and love's sly leer,
Are seen thro' joy's transparent tear,
And true friends only meet.

I love whate'er the season brings—
The flowers that blush—the birds that sing—
Eve's low Eolian breeze.—
The vernal smiles—the summer's charms,—
The autumn's fruit—and winter's storms,
All charm in their degree.

WHAT ONE ACRE CAN DO.

The following article may instruct some of those who think half a township necessary to their support, and who sacrifice every other consideration in order to obtain it. It would be well if some of the croakers about over-population, who are surrounded by their large domains, would lay to heart the fact here stated. Their own comfort, and that of their neighbors, might be promoted thereby.

"Mr. Drew, the editor of the Maine Farmer, cultivates but a single acre of land, the produce of which suffices in chief for the support of a large family. One-third of which he devotes to corn, which he selects from the most profitable species, and raises after the most approved modern plan. He manures the land well, and plants by measurement. This third of an acre has yielded for several years 30 bushels of corn for grinding, besides a small quantity for fattening swine. The same piece of ground yields two or three loads of pumpkins for the table, and for the cow and swine, besides a sufficient quantity of dry white beans for family use. So much for one-third acre. On a small portion of land about a dozen rods square, he raises on the average 50 bushels of onions, which bring in the market a sufficient sum for the purchase of wheat and rye flour. Thus the corn and onion patch supplies Mr. Drew's family with their bread.

"Two other beds are devoted to mangel-wurtzel and carrots, of which about twenty bushels are raised for the cow's winter provender, which is more than returned in milk and butter. A potatoe patch yields all that are needed for the table, and a surplus for the live stock. So far the pork and poultry, bread, milk and chief vegetables are supplied, leaving sufficient space for the cultivation of turnips, cabbage, beans, peas, cucumbers, melons, &c., and a few choice apple, pear, and other fruit trees. All this is the produce of a single acre, worked mostly by a single pair of hands!"—American Farmer.

EARLY RISING.—The difference between rising every morning at six and eight, in the course of forty years, amounts to 202,000 hours or eight years 121 days and 16 hours, which will afford 8 hours a day for exactly 10 years; so that it is the same as if 10 years of this life were added, in which we could command 8 hours every day for the cultivation of our minds.

What color is the grass when covered with snow? Invisible green.

HAND-WRITING OF EMINENT MEN.

It is generally believed that men of genius write in very obscure, infirm, and eccentric characters. Washington and Franklin wrote a fair, manly, straightforward line, every letter legible and distinct; Jefferson's hand writing was bold and masculine: Bonaparte wrote a most unreasonable scrawl; Burke's was uneven and hurried; Hamilton wrote a running hand, sparing of ink; Canning's penmanship has a chaste and classical appearance; Brougham writes a hasty hand, but with a good pen, and full of ink; Peel writes with a stiff pen, but with considerable taste and firmness; Dr. Chalmers writes as if he used the feather end dipped in ink—a real scrawl; W. Irving writes a perfect lawyer's hand, as though he wished no one to read it but himself.

LUTHER'S LETTER TO HIS INFANT SON.

A proof how compatible are the domestic affections and gentlest charities of life (as well as the most touching simplicity of character) with the utmost zeal for, and most courageous assertion of great public principles, the following letter from Luther to his little son John, then four years old, was penned by the same hand which, at that very time, was shaking to its very foundations the Vatican, and defying the power of the empire:

"Grace and peace to my dearly beloved little son. I am glad to know that you are learning well, and that you say your prayers. So do, my little son, and persevere; and when I come home I will bring with me a present from the annual fair. I know of a pleasant and beautiful garden, into which many children go, where they have golden little coats, and gather pretty apples under the trees, and pears, and cherries, and plums; where they sing, leap, and are merry; where they have beautiful little horses, with golden bridles and silver saddles. When I asked the man that owned the garden, 'Who are these children?' he said, "They are the children that love to pray and to learn, and are pious."

Then I said, 'Dear sir, I also have a son; he is called Johnny Luther (Hansichen Luther;) may he not come into the garden, that he may eat such beautiful apples and pears, and may ride such a little horse. and play with these children?' The man said, "If he loves to learn, and to pray, and is pious, he shall come also into the garden: Philip, too, and little James; and if they all come together, they may have likewise whistles, kettle-drums, lutes and harps; they may dance also, and shoot with cross-bows." Then he showed me a beautiful green grass-plat in the garden prepared for dancing, where hung nothing but golden fifes, drums, and elegant silver cross-bows. But it was now early, and the children had not yet eaten; therefore I could not wait for the dancing, and said to the man, 'Ah, dear sir, I will go instantly away, and write about all this to my little son, that he may pray earnestly, and learn well, and be pious, so that he may come into this garden. But he has an aunt Magdalene; may he bring her with him?' Then said the man, "So shall it be—go and write to him with confidence." Therefore, dear little John learn to pray with delight, and tell Philip and James that they must learn to pray; so you shall come with one another into the garden.

With this I commend you to Almighty God; and give my love to Aunt Magdalene; give her a kiss for me. Your affectionate father,

MARTIN LUTHER."

In the year 1530.

LIBERALITY.—A dirty little urchin came running up to a gentleman in Broadway yesterday, and asked him if he had dropped his pocket-book, saying that he (the aforesaid urchin) had picked one up. The gentleman, thinking it was some roguish pank, or that he wanted a penny, said, "oh run away, boy, don't annoy me." The little fellow, however, persisted, and at last the idea entered the mind of the gentleman that he might have lost his pocket-book, and feeling in his pocket he discovered that he had; and knowing that it contained about one hundred dollars, he apprized the boy of the fact. The little fellow, however, seemed to imagine the conduct of the gentlemen as singular, inasmuch as he did not answer him before, and asked him to describe it. After his request had been complied with, he asked him to hold on till he looked, and ran into a shop to examine. Finding that the person was the real owner, he handed it to him, and was running off, when the gentleman stopped him, inquired his name and residence, opened his pocket-book and gave the boy a ten dollar bill. The boy seemed to receive it rather reluctantly, and said in a sort of reproachful tone, "Thank you, sir, but I didn't do it, for that, though." That boy, ragged as he looks, is destined to prosper.—Alb. Eve. Journal.

POWER OF BAD THOUGHTS.

In Pearl street, New York, a young clerk, the son of pious and doating parents in Connecticut, entering upon business with bright hopes and no fears, was accustomed to dwell in secret upon the indulgence of which he had heard as congenial to the tastes of youth, and, although, among his companions he found no difficulty in denouncing vice, and commending virtue, so that he was looked upon as one above suspicion, yet in the secret of his own unrenewed heart, there was a constant longing after sin, a longing that at last gained the victory, drove him upon the outer verge of a vortex that caught him in its mighty whirl, and swallowed him, body and soul, in its remorseless and returnless depths. Before his friends dreamed that he was in danger his own heart had made a covenant with hell, and heaven had yielded him to his chosen doom.

He is not safe then who harbors a bad thought. Out of the heart comes death. Think of it, ye, who love to be esteemed as models by the admiring world, and applauded for excellence that ye do not possess, think that in your own bosom may be a fountain of pollution whose streams would make the earth a desert. Purify that fountain and have the blessed consciousness of being what you seem to be, of being loved in heaven as well as here.

Great is the power of thought over one's-self, great when from his mind it escapes in the form of words. It goes with the image of its author to stamp the same image on the minds perhaps of millions—of millions yet to live, and yet to die. Somebody has spoken of thought moving around the earth unceasingly from mind to mind, wielding its circle daily, moving thousands and thousands whom its first projector never embraced within the sphere of his imaginings, until the whole race of civilized men are brought under its influence and impressed with its power. I would not ask that this shall be the actual result of a spoken word, in order to convince me that spoken words have power that no finite mind can estimate. Follow in the foul train of one of the obscene thoughts of the latest imported novel of the French school. See its effects in the snow-white breast of her whose hands trembled as her heart, never tainted with the thought before, now heaves with emotion as the thrilling passage comes beneath her languid eye! The poison is at work; sweet it was to taste, and to be desired like the fruit that was first forbidden, but there is agony yet to come when the poison works, as it will, and the fair victim writhes under its power. Follow the same thought on and on from one heart to another, one family to another, for oceans are no barriers, till millions of just such bosoms have been pierced, and the same virus has been planted, and the same winding-sheet has been woven around the deathless spirit.

Thought, the image of its author! There is something in this worth looking at a moment. A bad man, like Bulwer or Sue, perpetuates himself, by sending out his thoughts, the world over; they are like him, and those who adopt them become like him; the image is in the soul, and the likeness speaks not to the outward eye, but is vivid to him who sees within. And when the guilty author of these thoughts meets in the world of spirits those whom he has ruined by his licentious pen, may it not be one of the keenest tortures of that just doom that he meets his own image haunting him, like ghosts of murdered friends, whichever way he turns his eye in that dungeon of despair! And if each lost spirit thus destroyed were armed with scorpions, and long eternity employed in scourging him who brought it there, justice would never suffer, though every stroke were laid in blood and fire.—Nor would justice be reproached if those who aid in this work of ruin were doomed to bear a part of this fearful penalty.

* Harebell is found in the vicinity of all the remarkable waterfalls in the Northern States which the writer has visited.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ⅝	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ⅝	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1½
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2½
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton, Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co. 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38. West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do, Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatara, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10.

Caroline, City, Cohen. Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co. Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20.

Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches, Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac Co.—broken.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time, all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.

"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."

PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, JULY 25, 1844. NO. 5.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER THREE.

Its observance by the Patriarchs.

The Scriptures plainly teach, that from Adam to Moses mankind were under laws to God; and the distinction of all holy men was, that they observed and kept them. Noah was alone, a righteous man in an unrighteous generation. But these terms can have no relevancy except as applied to law. We are told that the spirit of God, in the days of Noah, while the ark was preparing, reproved the disobedient sinners. (Peter 3: 20.) That righteous man Lot dwelling among the inhabitants of Sodom, in seeing and hearing vexed his righteous soul from day to day with their unlawful deeds. (2 Peter 2: 8.) All this could not have been if there were no revealed laws, which mankind were bound to observe and keep.

The testimony of Jehovah respecting Abraham is still more explicitly to our purpose. "I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, that they shall keep the way of the Lord to do justice and judgment." (Gen. 18: 19.) And his character is given by God, after his death, as follows: Abraham obeyed my voice and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes, and my laws. (Gen. 26: 5.) The 105th Psalm, 18 to 20, says of Joseph, "Who was sold for a servant; whose feet they hurt with fetters, he was laid on iron, until the the time that his word came; the word of the Lord tried him." A strong proof this. that what God had said of Abraham's teaching his children to keep the way of the Lord, was fulfilled to the third generation after him.

That this piety was not confined to the seed of Jacob is manifest by the testimony of the book of Job, which is generally allowed to date as early as the time of Jacob. Eliphaz having supposed that Job had been wicked, says, "Receive, I pray thee, the law from his mouth, and lay up his words in thine heart." (Job 22: 22.) To this Job replies, "He knoweth the way that I take . . . his ways have I kept and not declined. Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips, I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food." (Job 23: 12.) In these passages there is plainly a reference to a known revealed law, which the pious of those times received in common, as the standard of the divine will, and this law was Jehovah's law, the law of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—the word of the Almighty God, to whom those righteous men made their prayer. I regard this as important testimony in favor of the perpetuity and universality of God's holy law, revealed to holy men of old.

To the perpetually obligatory nature of those laws, and the fourth commandment in particular, Jehovah plainly refers, when (Exod 16: 28,) he says, unto Moses, "how long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws?" This was in the wilderness of sin, in the second month of their departure from Egypt, before they came to Rephidim; before they fought with Amalek; one month before they came to the wilderness of Sinai; a month before the national covenant with Israel was made; a month before the decalogue was pronounced from mount Sinai. Yes, there in the wilderness of Sin, a month before the commandments written on the two tables of stone by the finger of God, when some of the congregation of Israel went out of the camp to gather manna on the seventh-day, they are accused of breaking God's holy Sabbath law!

It is a stumbling block to some, however, that they do not find more said about it from Gen. 2d chap. to Exod. 16th chap. Did the holy men who then kept the commandments of God keep the weekly Sabbath? That they did, we infer from their division of time. The division of time into days, extending from evening to evening, and of weeks of seven days, is of divine appointment; and we learn from the books of Genesis, Job and Exodus, that this division continued through all the patriarchal times. So sacredly was this division of time regarded that the number seven early acquired regard as a sacred number, and has ever been so used by Jehovah and his prophets in all the holy writings. Indeed, in all his ways with men there seems to have been a constant provision made for the perpetuation of the seven day week. Thus (Gen. 6: 4,) when Noah had finished the ark, another week, another Sabbath, was allowed that wicked generation ere the Lord poured out his indignation upon them. In the directions for clean beasts and fowls to be taken into the ark, the sacred number seven is used. At the subsiding of the waters, (Gen. 8: 10, 12,) Noah still divides his time by sevens. So likewise, (Gen. 29: 27 and 28,) Jacob and the house of Laban his uncle, divide their time by the sacred seven. So likewise when Jacob was carried up to Canaan to be buried, when they came to the holy land, the threshing-floor of Atad, beyond Jordan, they made a mourning for him seven days. (Gen. 50: 10.) And Job and his three pious friends observed the same sacred division of time. (Job 2: 13.)—Who can say that all this was accidental? Has any other number been so accidentally honored? And considering the origin and design of this division of time, was it possible that the Sabbath institution could be forgotten or by holy men disregarded?

But it is sometimes objected, that the Israelites could not have kept the Sabbath while slaves to the Egyptians, and it was therefore probably forgotten while they were in Egypt. If that were so, the book of Job, and the references to Moses' father-in-law, would lead us to suppose that piety was not extirpated from other parts of the earth. But with respect to the Israelites, their slavery did not commence until a king arose that had not known Joseph, and they had grown so numerous, that, with their separate manners and institutions, the Egyptians became alarmed, lest they should subvert their kingdom and religion. It appears probable to me, that their servitude was imposed as much for religious persecution, as from a mercenary desire for their labor! Be that as it may they could not, by forced labor, make them forget their native Hebrew tongue, their division of time, nor the pious among them the religion of their fathers. And though they could compel their tasks on that day, they could not prevent the pious among them from cherishing a devout regard to those sacred days, which in their weekly return brought the remembrance of their forefathers' prayers and Jehovah's promises. It is gross injustice to that people, who so piously preserved the bones of Joseph for more than three hundred years, to suppose that all had ever forgotten the prophecy or the religion of the pious patriarch, who with his dying lips enjoined this service upon them, and assured them that the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, would surely visit them, and bring them again to the land that he had sworn to their fathers. We are assured that the midwives of the Israelites feared God, and would not obey Pharoah, king of Egypt, in his cruel order to destroy their small children. Moses' choosing affliction with the people of God, rather than the pleasures of sin for a season, shows that he had received pious instruction, and loved the people who feared the Lord and thought on his ways. And thus it is easy to account for the enforcement of the Sabbath upon all the people so soon as they were come out of Egypt, and before the transaction at Sinai, by the influence of the godly men among them. (Exod. 16: 25.)

For the above reasons I believe neither the Decalogue as a whole, nor the fourth commandment in particular, was unknown or unobserved by holy men of old time; nor are they peculiar to natural Israel.

It is a remarkable circumstance, that amidst the revolutions of nations and the apostacies of men, the seven days division of time has never been wholly abandoned. It is a standing proof of the truth of divine revelation. The infidels of the French Republic felt this, and attempted by ordering a tenth day division of time to reverse it. But like all attempts of man against the ordinances of God, the measure and its authors perished together, and so must all similar attempts, for the "Lord has a covenant with day and night, and has appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth." Jeremiah 33: 25.

The advocates for the Sabbath have sometimes trembled for its perpetuity in the earth, like Eli for the ark of God among the Philistines; and like him have died without seeing it recovered. But faith looks forward and sees servants of God rising up, and with the vindications of Divine Providence, and his Holy Spirit, saying, "Stand in the ways and see, and ask, for the old paths where is the good way and walk therein." S. D.

CIRCULAR LETTER OF THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

[Published by request of the Association.]

Dear Brethren.—

Comparing the present state of the church with its original purity, and seeing her sad degeneracy, her conformity to the customs and fashions of the world, her wide departure from the precepts of the Bible, and the spotless robe of righteousness so shamefully polluted, we feel that it is high time to awake out of sleep. And since it is the pleasure of God to execute his plans by the use of means, and Christians are authorized to officiate as stewards in carrying on the great work of redemption, and bringing back a revolted world to the observance of God's laws, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?

Duty speaks in thunder tones, calling upon us to arise and trim our lamps, and reflect a light that shall portray the strong-holds of the enemy, and expose the many Achans who lurk within the camp, that Israel may be cleansed. What lover of Christ can look upon the languishing condition of his cause, bleeding at every pore, being crucified afresh and trampled under foot even by those who have solemnly sworn to be his friends, without feeling emotions of the most deep and thrilling character? The walls of the spiritual Jerusalem are torn down, her gates are burned with fire; the rude shout comes up from the enemy's camp, Victory! Victory! Zion is vanquished. Notwithstanding the great importance of the work of rearing those sacred walls, many seem inclined to yield to the entreaties of the Sanballets of the present day, and compromise with the world, by joining hands with the enemy. Thus the highway cast up by the King of Zion for his servants to walk in is forsaken, in order to shake hands with the world and unite both in one common brotherhood. Instead of following the rugged path of obedience, a sort of celestial railroad has been constructed, its cars propelled by sectarian pride, with gilded banners waved by the blasting winds of public applause. The statute book of God's government seems to be looked upon by many almost as a collection of fables for the amusement of the reader, its sacred truth to be twisted and modified in any shape to secure a conformity to their peculiar tenets. Brethren, what shall be done? Is God's ear heavy that he cannot hear, or his arm shortened that he cannot save?

We are informed that when the people had a mind to work, the walls of Jerusalem were built. Though the enemy like prowling wolves were lurking around seeking their overthrow, yet bearing their weapons of defence in one hand, and laboring with the other, they accomplished the work. The signal blessings of God have ever attended the efforts of reform in all ages of the world, however feeble the means, if they were made with a firm reliance upon his word. The magic rod wielded by the hand of Moses in the name of his God, rolled back the mighty floods of the Red Sea, and Israel was delivered from a devouring enemy. And the sound of their ram's horns shook down the massy walls of Jericho. God is yet the sovereign of his own kingdom. His character and purposes never change. Let us then rally around his standard as our only resort, and engage with one accord in rearing the walls of his spiritual Jerusalem, being armed with "weapons not carnal but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds," and he may yet appear to cast out the buyers and sellers from his spiritual temple and purge the lifeless stones from its sacred walls. Then shall the church once more reflect her glorious light, clad in the robe of Apostolic purity.

Christ has informed us that "every plant which his Heavenly Father has not planted shall be rooted up." The burden of his prayer seemed to be that his people might be one as he and his Father are one. Hence we conclude, that he is ever grieved, and his name brought to reproach, whenever there are divisions and factions among his followers.

As he is the only foundation upon which his church is to be reared, we cannot reasonably expect his people to be one unless his Word alone is taken as the rule of their conduct. It is truth alone that can cement the hearts of Christians, or bring about any moral reform. But its success depends much upon the course pursued by its promulgators, and the character which they exhibit. It is by these, in a great measure, that men judge of the truth or consistency of their doctrine. To this may be attributed the astonishing success of the gospel in the days of the Apostles. How insignificant did the vain philosophy of the heathens appear, compared with the overwhelming power attending the preaching of the gospel.

But at the present day, how changed the picture! The church, bewildered in the dark mazes of human philosophy, instead of holding up the immutable laws of Jehovah, is teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. As the Apostle instructed the church to withdraw from every brother that walked disorderly, and not according to the traditions which they had received, so we feel in duty bound to withdraw from our brethren and take a decided stand for the truth. Though few in number, and crippled in means, yet let us not despair, knowing that the battle is not always to the strong. God has chosen the weak things of this world to bring to nought the wisdom of the wise. And as long as we lean upon his arm, and labor for the promotion of his cause, he will not leave us to fight the battle alone. His power alone can turn the current of mind, and incline the hearts of his people to seek after the truth.

Since it is his prerogative to work by means, let us no longer fold our hands in sleep and refuse to labor in this glorious enterprize. Then shall we have hope of seeing the object accomplished which we so ardently desire. Having to contend against the storms of popularity and prejudice, we can but expect our progress will be slow: but it should be unceasing. As our enterprise brings us into contact with mind, it is necessary that we study its nature, in order to find the most successful avenue to the hearts and consciences of men.

We are confident that the majority of professed Christians would willingly investigate the truth, were it presented to them in a proper manner. But before we assail our neighbor, let us see that the wall is first reared over against our own house, and manifest as much regard for truth in our daily deportment as we do in theory; that we may be consistent with ourselves, and the world may be forced to acknowledge that we are sincere in what we profess. An inconsistent deportment is one of the most fruitful sources of prejudice among those who dissent from us. With what perfect triumph do many evade the force of truth, when they can with propriety turn upon us and say, physician, heal thyself.

Again, we should strive to present the claims of God's Word in the spirit of its author. The voice of affection will seldom fail to win the attention of the most obdurate. A stern rebuke excites the will; but "Soft words turn away wrath." Charity should have the predominance, and ever incline us to attribute to others the best possible motives. It not only gives us confidence in our own efforts, but begets its own likeness in those with whom we labor, and thus undermines the walls of prejudice and gains free access to the heart. The apostle Paul seems to base his hope of success in this world, and of enjoying God's presence in the next, upon the possession of this principle. See 1st Cor. 13th, more particularly the 3, 4, 5, and 6 verses, "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh not evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in truth." Thus he sums up nearly all the Christian graces in this one word.

We are not, however, to understand by this, that we are in any way to countenance wrong, or withhold truth from fear of offending; but faithfully to reprove and expose sin in all its forms. Charity is a friend of truth. "Open rebuke is better than secret love."

Again, we should manifest such a spirit as will evince to the investigator, that by embracing the truth he is not to be excluded from all friendly association, but that he can here find a people whose feelings, efforts, and sentiments are all concentrated upon one point. Few, without the experience, can imagine the feelings of a person when duty of this kind stares him in the face. To tear away from the entreaties of parents, the tender embraces of brothers and sisters, and above all, to break the tie of covenant connection, firmly bound by the strong chord of the new birth, connections, too, most renowned for popularity, to subject himself to the slander and reproaches of less sympathizing minds, and submit to the inconveniences of life, all crowding upon the mind, appear like insurmountable barriers in the way, and cause the more delicate feelings of nature to recoil. And when imploring God's direction in the path of duty, to witness the frowns of an angry judge, and feel the blighting mildews of heaven gathering upon his soul, in consequence of his unwillingness to yield to the convictions of duty, certainly, is not a condition to be envied. It is then that sympathizing friends are dear, and consolation is needed.

We must also expect to meet with violent opposition, even from those who profess to be the friends of truth. Many hard censures will be heaped upon us, and the finger of scorn pointed, our principles and statements misrepresented and set forth in false light to the world, in order to prejudice the public mind against us, and prevent our success. Yet we should endeavor always to manifest in return that lamb-like spirit which characterized the Captain of our salvation, that "when reviled" we "revile not again," and in the midst of persecutions and trials, remember that God will order all things right, and for the benefit of his children. "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and speak all manner of evil against you for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." He has gone to prepare them a mansion, and he will soon return to take his weary servants home.

Finally, brethren, be watchful, be diligent, knowing that your stay on earth is short. The last crumbling verge of time is yielding beneath your feet. A few more rolling suns at the longest, and that faithful messenger will let fly the fatal dart, and you will go to receive the reward of your doings. Therefore we would say in the language of our master, "What your hands find to do, do it with all your might."

INNOCENT EARTHLY PLEASURES.

Few rightly estimate the worth,
Of joys that spring and fade on earth;
They are not weeds we should despise,
They are not fruits of Paradise;
But wild flowers in the pilgrim's way
That cheer yet not protract his stay;
Which he dare not too fondly clasp,
Lest they should perish in his grasp;
And yet may view, and wisely love,
As proofs and types of joys above.

A WAY TO DO GOOD.

Many Christians would like to do good if they had the talents and means necessary to do it on a large scale. But deeming themselves to be destitute of these, they feel relieved from all obligation. Probably no generation has been better provided with the means of good-doing than the present. If there was a diligence proportioned to the demand and facilities for labor, it is impossible to estimate the results. God condescends to do good in the most quiet and unostentatious manner, by causing his rains to descend upon the just and the unjust, and by distilling the gentle dew to refresh and fertilize the earth. Why should not his children imitate his example?—The following anecdote illustrates the power of one means now in common use, and shows what blessed results are sometimes developed:—

A lady, feeling a deep interest in seamen, put into the hands of the captain, a few days before leaving port, a package of tracts and magazines for the crew. "I took them," said the captain, "and according to her wish distributed them among the hands, until the whole had gone the rounds among them. In a very few days after leaving sight of the highlands of Scotland for New York, the second mate, a well bred and intelligent young Scotchman, came to me and said, "Sir, I hardly know what's the matter with our men! but your tracts have produced a feeling among them that I have never seen before. If you have any doubt on the subject, just go and look into the forecastle and see for yourself." I stepped down, and sure enough every man was reading with an eagerness as though his very life and soul depended on it.

On returning to the cabin the mate continued, "Sir, they wish the Bible read to them, and to-morrow (meaning Sunday) they wish to obtain your permission to hold a religious service among themselves in the forecastle." "I can have no objection to that, I am sure," said I. "But who will lead them, mate, seeing none of us make any profession that way?" "I shall make my best endeavor," was the reply; "and I suppose the others will do the same." "Very well," said I, "there is a prospect now of fine weather, make all snug, I will take the helm, and let every one that wishes attend to the service."—The arrangements were made; Sunday came, and a meeting among themselves was held, morning and afternoon. A privilege for a prayer meeting was again asked for the evening. I objected. "But," said the mate, "you have made no objection all day, why object now?" "My wish is," I replied, "that you do not hold the meeting in the forecastle, but in the cabin, where I may have a spice of privilege with you myself, since I have accommodated you all day by standing at the helm."

Accordingly in the evening every man came down to the cabin. I took the Bible and read a chapter, and called on the mate to pray. In a moment all were on their knees. The mate proceeded a little way, but soon choked with tears and could proceed no further. The cook then attempted to pray but failed in the same manner. I then said to one of the apprentice boys, "Billy, can you pray for us?" The little fellow began and made an excellent sweet little prayer, and seemed to get along the best of any of us.—"The fact is," continued the captain, "we were all overwhelmed with a sense of our sins; and as there was not one of us that had made any profession of a religious experience, we made rather lame work of it at first; but I do hope that God in his mercy has heard our poor petitions and converted every man on board."

ROBERT HALL.

No man ever had more solemn views than Mr. Rowland Hill, of the true nature of the ministerial work, and of the necessity of an humble dependence on the Lord's assistance, for a blessing in it. One of his remarks was—"If favored at any time with what is called a good opportunity, I am too apt to catch myself saying—'Well done I, when I should lie in the dust, and give God all the glory.'" Another was—"Lord, make me distrustful of myself, that I may confide in thee alone—self-dependence is the pharisee's high-road to destruction."

A minister having observed to him, that notwithstanding the fault found with his dry sermons, there were hopes of their usefulness, for Sampson had slain the Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass—"True he did," replied Mr. Hill, "but it was a moist jaw-bone." He used to like Dr. Ryland's advice to his young academicians—"Mind, no sermons is of any value, or likely to be useful, which has not the three R's in it—Ruin by the Fall—Redemption by Christ—Regeneration by the Holy Spirit." Of himself he remarked, "My aim, in every sermon, is a stout and lusty call to sinners, to quicken the saints, and to be made a universal blessing to all." It was a favorite saying with him—"The nearer we live to God, the better we are enabled to serve him. O how I hate my own noise, when I have nothing to make a noise about. Heavenly wisdom creates heavenly utterance." In a letter to Mr. Jones he observes—"There is something in preaching the gospel, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, I long to get at. At times, I think I feel somewhat like it, and I bawl almost as bad as the Welshman. If we deal with divine realities, we ought to feel them such, and then the people will in general feel with us, and acknowledge the power that does wonders on the heart."

THE JEWS.

Whatever throws light upon the condition of this people, is a matter of interest to every Christian. The following account of a schism among the Jews at Frankfort, Germany, appeared in a late Paris journal. The steps which it proposes are of the most decided character.

"For some time past a violent schism has existed in the Jewish commune of our city. Nearly two-thirds of the commune have separated themselves in a marked manner from the ordinary ritual of the synagogue, and are about to form a sect apart. They recognize neither the religious ceremonies nor the fundamental laws of the Talmud. In their profession of faith, they declare that they will not any longer have their children circumcised, and deny their belief in the Messiah. M. Anselme de Rothschild, the head of the banking house, has declared an unrelenting war on this sect, and refuses bills signed by any member. The matter has been carried before the Germanic Diet, and the new sect is accused of fomenting and concealing under their religious tenets, political tendencies pernicious to the state. Notwithstanding those accusations, our Senate has declared itself in favor of the new sect, and several eminent Jews throughout Germany have joined it. At present, it is proposed to form a committee, for the purpose of founding Jewish colonies in the North of America. Several petitions have been signed for this purpose, by a great number of Jews and Christians. In these petitions the parties demand permission from the Emperor Nicholas, to have the Jewish population of Russia directed towards the North of America, to make colonists of them. There is, however, but little hope that the Emperor will consent to the request."

From the Morning Star.

OFF HORSE.

I very well remember a certain horse my father owned, when I was a lad; he was accustomed to work in the team upon the off side. But sometimes we had occasion to use him elsewhere, and then he exhibited the influence habit had over him. If he was attached to a carraige. he would travel upon the off side of the way, if the carriage and loading went into the gutter, or elsewhere, it mattered not to him, provided he could pursue his accustomed track.

The horse is not the only offish animal the world knows. We have some biped animals, who bear a striking resemblance to the old horse in this respect. Some professors of religion there are, who exhibit the appearance of having been habituated to walking on the off side, if they did not originally possess a large share of offishness. Such exhibit the effect of this habit or originality, by opposing every projected movement of their brethren, unless such movement should perfectly coincide with their off-side selfish views. For instance, the church is in want of a minister to labor with them; measures are taken to obtain one; but if they should not concur in every particular with the notions of these one sided people, why they are at arms length at once, will do nothing about the business, neither counsel, advise nor assist in any manner whatever. The church is thus thrown into a straight place; they must either proceed without unity, which is bad, or do nothing, which is worse.

If the body should wait for the action of these off-side travelers, they might wait until dooms day, and then be found waiting in vain, for any other action than fault-finding. Or the brethren wishing to walk according to godliness, observing the order of God's house, and to aid them in so doing, may wish to adopt a Covenant, when these few immediately raise the cry of "new measures," "innovation," "Babylon," &c. "I want nothing to do with such stuff," and away they move to the off-side. Thus some of our churches are cramped in their efforts to do good, impeded by these one-sided persons, who hang as a mighty incubus to prevent their progressive action.

If this should meet the eye of any offending, may they comply with the injunction, "up out of this place."

FARMER.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, JULY 25, 1844.

REASONS FOR KEEPING SUNDAY.

The New York Evangelist of last week contains an article under the head "Battles on the Sabbath," which deserves to be put on record as a specimen of the manner in which the observance of the Sabbath is enforced at the present time by a certain class of reformers. After referring to the entertainment given by the Duke of Wellington, on the anniversary day of the battle of Waterloo, to the officers who fought with him on that occasion, the writer says:—

"This great battle, which threw half of Britain into mourning, was fought on the Sabbath. Napoleon, who began the terrible conflict with the armies of the allied powers, might have been defeated if the battle had been commenced and fought on another day. But he was defeated on the Sabbath. It was Sabbath-breaking on a great scale, but none the more justifiable because nations and armies were engaged in it. Great men and military men, of whom it has been said of the latter, "they know no Sabbath," are no more justified in violating the Sabbath on a large scale than on a small one, no more than the most humble in the land.

The battle of Waterloo was fought on the Sabbath, and Napoleon who began it was defeated. The battle of New-Orleans was also fought on the Sabbath, in which the British army who began the battle were defeated, although composed of veteran soldiers—and were defeated with terrible slaughter. The naval battle fought by Commodore McDonough with the British fleet on lake Champlain, took place on the Sabbath. The British began the attack and were defeated, although their force was greatly superior to that of the American. The difference was so great, that it was a matter of wonder that a small American force should have been able to capture a force so greatly its superior. Here then are three battles, not to name more, which were fought on the Sabbath, and in each case the force which began the attack were defeated. The coincidence is striking, however it be accounted for."

A "striking coincidence" truly! But did it never occur to the editor of the Evangelist, that battles have been fought on every day of the week in which the assailants were defeated? Now if the facts to which he refers prove anything for the first day of the week, similar ones prove just as much for any other day of the week, including the rest day of the Mahommedan or the Jew. Indeed, the Jews have some facts altogether more to the point than those furnished by the Evangelist. For instance—Josephus tells us that in the territory of Babylon some Jews had fortified themselves, against whom the Governor of Babylon drew up his army and lay in ambush, intending on the next day, which was the Sabbath, to come upon them and destroy them, when they would not take up arms. But the Jews, resolving that it would be far better to resist, "met and slaughtered a great many of the enemies, the residue being constrained to save themselves by a speedy flight." The account adds, "The like did Anilaeus, after being provoked by Mithridates, another chieftain of those parts." Here, then, is a "striking coincidence" for the seventh day. How does the Evangelist think this is to "be accounted for"?

—But, leaving the case in hand, let us look a little more minutely at the species of argument to which this belongs. It is said in favor of observing the first day of the week, that God has greatly blessed the observers of it. This we would not deny, but thankfully acknowledge. Instead, however, of its being a proof of their correctness in all things, it is only an evidence of his goodness and mercy. God was gracious to Ahab upon his repentance, although, as some conceive, it was but feigned; may he not be gracious to some that present him sincere service, though they are yet in ignorance and error? He has promised to be with and bless those who meet together in his name, and this promise has been verified on every day of the week. It is no proof of the sacredness of a day, therefore, because God blesses worshipers on it. If it were, no doubt as good evidence of God's favor has been shown to keepers of the Sabbath, as to those who observe the first day. One who wrote upon this subject more than a hundred years ago, said, "We hope we may affirm, without ostentation, to the praise of our Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier—Father, Son, and Holy Spirit—that we who observe the seventh day of the week for the weekly Sabbath, and reject the first day as an human device, have had very large and gracious appearances of God's blessing and presence with us in our worship of him on that day. And if so, what becomes of this argument for the first day?—is the way of truth and error both alike to Him?" It ought to be remembered, that God often does things "for his own name's sake," and for the doing of which no man has any right to take credit. Nor is it, in our view, a very good indication of one's state, that he should be more anxious to derive evidence of his condition from these outward things, than from examining his own heart in the light of the truth. If we grant that apparent outward prosperity is to be taken as a measure of God's favor, to what conclusions shall we be led! We must acknowledge that Papacy, which is now in a most flourishing condition, is especially approved of God. Nay, more, we must allow that the wicked of the world, who have always had the greatest visible blessings, are the favorites of Heaven. (Psalm 23.) When will men learn to judge of the right and truth of things by the Word of God, rather than by their own interpretations of appearances? Our Saviour's advice was, to "Judge not according to appearance."

Again, it is said, the judgments of God upon the profaners of the first day, prove that it ought to be observed. We are not aware that statistical information on this point has ever been collected to such an extent as to warrant our judging from it. But allowing that these judgments have been as numerous and satisfactory as could be wished—is it surprising that those who acknowledge the first day to be the Sabbath, when they presume to show their contempt of God's authority by profaning that day, should be punished with some eminent tokens of God's displeasure? Such persons contemn that which they profess to regard as sacred. Clark tells of some who contemned the heathen gods, and were plagued of heaven for it; but does this prove that those gods ought to be worshiped? No Christian will pretend it. An instance has never been given of a judgment upon a profaner of the first day, simply because he worked upon that day, (as in the case of the man stoned for gathering sticks upon the Sabbath day). In all the instances which have been given, contempt of divine authority may be found—hence punishment followed. And we might say, as an offset for these much-talked-of judgments, that in the oldest books on this subject numerous instances are given of those who, having had conviction of the duty of keeping the seventh day, yet not practicing it, have met with signal proofs of God's displeasure, while some others, who "have publicly wrought at their trades and callings upon Sunday, have never met with any visible reprehensions on that account, but sweet soul satisfaction and peace."

These things are not referred to in proof of the sacredness of the seventh day, or to enforce the duty of resting upon it; but simply to show, that if our practice is to be regulated by judgments and remarkable coincidences, these are as much in favor of keeping the seventh day as the first. We do not believe that any such help is necessary to support a divine institution, and we are sure that all attempts to promote the observance of Sunday by such means will be injurious rather than useful.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

This Association met with the 1st Church in Genesee, June 26, 1844. The opening discourse was preached by James R. Irish, and Nathan V. Hull was appointed Moderator. The letters from the churches show an addition of 162 members during the year. They lament a want of zeal and earnestness, yet give evidence that there is a strong desire to maintain the Christian warfare.

Among the resolutions passed, we find one recommending the churches to take frequent collections for religious purposes on the Sabbath; another expressing a sense of the loss sustained by the death of Bro. Hosea Whitford, and offering sympathy to the bereaved relatives; a third requesting the General Conference, in the future publication of the expose of the doctrinal sentiments of the denomination, to omit the fifteenth article.

We copy the following resolutions from the minutes, and hope that they may receive prayerful consideration:—

Whereas, with deep regret we witness and are often reminded of the deplorable desecration of the Sabbath by members of our churches, in journeying, making secular visits, reading secular newspapers, and indulging in conversation calculated to dissipate the sacred influence of that sanctified day—therefore, Resolved, That if we would serve God acceptably, and become effectual reformers, we must begin at home, and take these 'foxes that spoil the vines.'

Whereas, the use of alcoholic drinks has been the cause of much evil in the church—Resolved, That we recommend our churches not to receive into their fellowship those who make use of intoxicating drinks as a beverage.

Resolved, That we cheerfully respond to the resolutions of our last General Conference disclaiming all fellowship with slavery, feeling that we are religiously bound unitedly and individually to look unto God by our prayers, and to lend our individual influence for removing this curse and curse-procuring evil from under the sun.

From the report of a Committee on Missionary operations, we copy the following: "We recommend that the mission entered on in Illinois, be referred to the General Missionary Society, requesting their patronage; and in case it be acceded to, that the appropriation made to Bro. Scott be applied as a contribution to the funds of that Society according to its Constitution.

Missionary labors seem to have occupied considerable attention, and to have awakened a good degree of interest. A committee was appointed to revise the Constitution of the Missionary Society, whose report was adopted. The primary object of this society, as stated in the report, will be "to aid the feeble churches within the bounds of the Association in sustaining pastoral labor among them; yet it may employ its funds in disseminating gospel truth wherever a favorable door shall open."

A delegation, consisting of fourteen brethren, was appointed to attend the General Conference in Verona, in September.

ORDINATION.—A request having been made by the church in Hebron for the ordination of Rowse Babcock, and by the 3d Church in Genesee for the ordination of Lorenzo D. Ayres, these brethren were examined and approved by the Presbytery, and on the first day of the week were set apart to the work of the Gospel ministry.

After an interesting session of four days, the Association adjourned to meet with the 2d church in Alfred, on the fourth day of the week before the fourth Sabbath in June, 1845.

WESTERN CONVENTION—THE SABBATH.

A great Convention of Presbyterian and Congregational ministers assembled at Cleaveland, Ohio, on the 20th of June. Its deliberations related chiefly to the progress of religion in the churches that were represented, and developed many important facts. There was, however, if we may judge from the reports published, a disposition to exult in present attainments, hardly becoming a missionary convention. In illustration of this, read the words of one of the leading Doctors. He says, "Here we are now, one of the most cordial, happy churches that ever got together in this world. The devil would be glad to throw a firebrand among us, but there is no tinder to burn." We hope this watchman gives a true report of things in the western churches. But in the eastern churches we are sure that a caution to "him that thinketh he standeth," would be much more proper.

At an early stage in the proceedings of the Convention, a committee on the "observance of the Sabbath" was appointed, consisting of Dr. L. Beecher, V. D. Taylor, L. P. Hickock. This committee presented a report, which we copy, as expressing the opinion of the Convention that a reform is imperatively demanded. Two things in the report we cannot at all subscribe to. The first is, to the frequent use of the term Sabbath for the first day of the week, or Sunday. This is not warranted by the Scriptures in one single instance. Nor does the custom of the church, for a thousand years after the commencement of the Christian era, afford the least support for such a use of the term. If men will, regardless of right and Scripture, take this name for a day of human appointment, confusion and neglect will be the natural consequence. The second thing to which we cannot subscribe, is the habit of referring to mere considerations of policy for support of the institution. This runs through the article from beginning to end. He would be thought wanting in respect for the Bible, and certain of failure, who should oppose the worshiping of images exclusively or mainly because it was bad policy, and neglect to bring the command of God to sustain him. So in regard to the Sabbath. To leave out of account the command of God, and urge an observance of the Sabbath mainly on the ground of expediency, is to treat the word of God with contempt, and expose ourselves to certain failure. If we are to do anything for the promotion of this cause, it must be in a way approved by Scripture and common-sense.

Here is the report of the committee, so far as it is of general interest:—

It is notorious that Sabbath-breaking is alarmingly prevalent in our land. The nation, individuals, and not unfrequently even ministers and members of the church of God, are guilty of this sin. The mail runs; the post-offices are open; business, by land and water, goes on; traveling is persisted in; and amusements and pleasure are pursued, in direct violation of the law of God. The past history of nations is decisive, that a Sabbath is necessary to sustain the authority and order of civil government; and more especially do the free institutions of our country demand, for their perpetuity, the intelligence and righteousness of the people, which can be secured only where a Sabbath is observed. The church of God, also, will soon cease to exist when the Sabbath is lost.

A deep anxiety pervades the hearts of good men over all the land, in view of this wide-spread Sabbath desecration; and the many thousands employed along our thoroughfares, and upon all our inland waters, are beginning to sigh in their bondage, and cry aloud for the rest and the privileges of the Sabbath, from the possession of which the avarice and the pleasures of other men have so long excluded them.

This Convention, therefore, would speak to all the ministers, churches and families represented by it, in the earnest language of conviction for the guilt, and of alarm for the danger, which this extensive profanation of the Sabbath induces, and earnestly recommend to their prompt and diligent observance the following course—

1. That every person at once free himself from all participation in, and connection with, the sin of Sabbath-breaking, in all the forms in which it appears over the land.

2. That ministers preach more pointedly upon the doctrine and duties of the Sabbath; and thoroughly instruct the people upon this whole matter; and enforce upon every conscience all that the Bible inculcates respecting the sanctification of the Sabbath day (a); and awake, themselves, to the conviction that they must stand responsible to God, the church, and the nation, for very much of the lax principle (b) and sinful practice which shall be allowed to prevail in reference to this plain and permanent ordinance of heaven.

3. That a more strict watch and rigid discipline be maintained, through all the church, both towards ministers and lay members, on this subject; and that all recreation, amusement, secular labor, and traveling on the Sabbath be restrained.

(a) Queries: 1. Is it possible to "enforce all that the Bible inculcates respecting the sanctification of the Sabbath," without teaching that "the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God"? 2. Would the Convention countenance one who should teach that the seventh day is the Sabbath?

(b) Facts show that a great part of this laxity results from a refusal to take the Scriptures as our guide. While religious men will say, "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath," and at the same time work on the seventh day, irreligious men will be lax about Sabbath-keeping.

CONVENTION AT SARATOGA.—About seventy gentlemen, including the Mayor of Albany and Troy, have united in inviting a general Convention, to be held at Saratoga on Friday, the second day of August, to concert the best measures for encouraging the observance of Sunday. Rev. President NOTT and some distinguished civilians are expected to address the Convention.

THE THUGS.—On our fourth page will be found an interesting account of this wonderful people. The article was prepared by Mr. Alfred H. Guernsey, after much research; and this number, in connection with those which are to follow, will embody most of the information at present to be obtained concerning them.

A CARD.—As it is deemed desirable to obtain as accurate a list as possible of the Christian Israelites in this city, and throughout the United States, communications on the subject, specifying in every instance, the name, residence, and occupation of the party, with the name of the Christian Minister, by whom the ordinance of baptism was administered, are hereby very earnestly solicited, and may be addressed to the Corresponding Secretary of the American Society for meliorating the condition of the Jews, No. 23 Nassau street, New York.

JOHN LILLIE, Cor. Sec.

THE BIBLE THE YOUNG MAN'S GUIDE. Ry Rev. Gideon B. Perry, D. D. Philadelphia; Griffith & Simon.

This is a sermon delivered to the Young Men of the author's congregation, and put into the form of a book at their request. It treats of the Bible as identified with the progress of the Christian religion, as the efficient antidote against infidelity, as the legitimate source of moral and religious improvement, as inculcating a morality which is the only sure preservative of the purity of political governments, and as the Book which Young Men, who are an integral part of the great people, ought to study seriously in order to prepare them for their responsibilities. The theme is rich, and is appropriately discussed.

ITEMS.

LARGE SALARIES.—It is stated that the annual income of the 26 bishops of the established church of England and Wales amounts to $634,191. This sum exceeds the annual contributions of all the Christians in America for preaching the Gospel among the heathen. Imagine one of these men preaching from the text, "Silver and gold have I none."

BAPTISTS IN NEW ORLEANS.—During the year past considerable effort has been made to establish a Baptist Church in New Orleans. A request has been made that on the first Sunday in September all the eastern churches would take up a collection for the purpose of building a meeting house in that city.

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.—Rev. H. Norton, in writing from Washington city to the Boston Recorder, says: "Could I give you the names and number of Protestant children who within a few years, in this district, have entered the Romish Church through the channel of Romish schools, it would be a startling and melancholy exhibition." It cannot be doubted that great reliance has been placed by the Catholics upon their schools, as a means of making proselytes. But we do not believe the indiscriminate outcry against them will prevent this result. It is only by providing the means of thorough and consistent instruction among Protestants, that the evil can be remedied.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.—A State Temperance Convention of colored people was held at Catskill, N. Y., on the 5th inst., at which, it is said, "there were present not less than three thousand well-dressed, sober, orderly colored persons, of all ages and both sexes." This speaks well for the colored people of the State of New York. There were not many meetings on the preceding day of which better things could be said.

ORIGIN OF WASHINGTONIANISM.—There has been in certain sections a strange anxiety to disconnect the Temperance movements from every thing strictly religious, and to create an impression that the first efforts in this cause failed because they were made too exclusively in reliance upon religious influence. Believing that the religion of the Bible, when carried out, and that only, is capable of producing an entire renovation of human society, we have no sympathy with these efforts to disconnect what God has joined. The great trouble is, that we make too little of the Scriptures. If they were applied as they ought to be, we should find them able to furnish us for every good work. We are glad to see that a leading temperance lecturer, Mr. Hawkins, has repeatedly stated that a discourse delivered in Baltimore on the evils of intemperance, by Elder Knapp, led to the formation of the Original Washingtonian Temperance Society. The statement having been denied by Mr. Mitchell and some others, Mr. Hawkins has published testimonies in proof of its truth, which it is hoped will put the matter to rest.

EPISCOPAL MISSIONS.—The Episcopal Board at New York have voted to establish a mission among the Armenians. They are likewise making an effort to raise $20,000, the interest of which is to support a bishop in India.

REVIVAL.—The Religious Herald reports an interesting revival in Union Church, Taylor County, Va., which continued two years, and resulted in 100 baptisms.

THE BRAHMINS at Bombay held a meeting in one of their principal temples to concert measures to prevent Christianity from spreading among the children of their caste. Several resolutions were passed, setting forth the efforts of Christian Missionaries, the danger that the Hindoo religion will suffer from them, and forbidding any Brahmin to attend the school of the missionaries or to allow his children to do so.

THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY is said to be in a prosperous condition. Thirteen new auxiliary societies have been lately recognized, chiefly in the west. The issues of the Scriptures from the Depository during the last month were larger than during any previous month since the organization of the society.

PENNSYLVANIA BAPTIST CONVENTION.—The Board of the State Convention for Missionary purposes met July 16. The report shows 29 missionaries in the service of the Board, whose combined labors for the quarter ending July 1st, were—1162 sermons preached, 103 baptisms, 66 stations regularly supplied, 9635 miles traveled; 645 families visited. The present embarrassment of the Board, and the necessity of resuscitating the penny-a-week plan, was discussed with considerable interest. So says the Baptist Record.

RESTORATION OF THE JEWS.—The circular letter of the New York Baptist Association for 1844, was upon the subject of the Restoration of the Jews. It was written by Rev. Spencer H. Cone, and presents in a clear light the evidences from the Old and New Testament in favor of this event. It is not improbable, that one reason for discussing the subject at the present time was its influence, real or supposed, upon certain views of prophecy now common. Whatever might have been the reasons for it, we are glad to see that the subject is attracting the attention of religious bodies. Few who are familiar with the history of the Jews doubt that some purpose is yet to be attained through their wonderful preservation. What that purpose may be, is worthy of the consideration of every Christian. We believe their conversion will have a most important influence upon the doctrines and practices of the Christian Church. Some of those doctrines and practices are the greatest obstacles to their conversion—obstacles which will be removed at the time of their ingathering.

DAYS OF WORSHIP.

"Under this head the following paragraph appeared in the Plainfield (N. J.) Union of June 10:—

The following days of the week are set apart for public worship in different nations: Sunday or Lord's day, by Christians; Monday, by the Grecians; Tuesday, by the Persians; Wednesday, by the Assyrians; Thursday, by the Egyptians; Friday, by the Turks; Saturday, by the Jews. Some Christians also observe the seventh day."

In a succeeding number of the Union, the following corrections and additions were made by a correspondent:—

Sunday, or Sauntauge, according to our old Saxon ancestors, was the day on which Pagans worshiped the Sun. Montauge, or Monday, was the Moon's day. Tuisco's day, or Dienstauge, is Tuesday. Mitwoch, or Wodnestauge, Wednesday, was Woden's day. Donnerstauge or Thunder's day, was the day on which Jove or Jupiter was worshiped. Fritauge, or Friday, was the day on which the goddess or star Venus was worshiped, and as that lecherous Mahomet was addicted to her charms, I suppose that might be the reason why he adopted that day for a worship day. Sanistauge, or Saturn's day, Saturday, has long been known among benighted pagans; but it is injustice to the seed of Abraham to accuse them of worshiping on that day; for although prior to the Babylonian captivity they bowed down and offered cakes to the Queen of Heaven, I have yet to learn that they ever, before or after that event worshipped Saturn. But at least five millions, perhaps six millions, of Jews, in every commercial city of the world, do now keep as a rest that holy Sabbath that God blessed and sanctified at the beginning; and an unknown number of the ten tribes in upper Asia, with their predecessors, have ever done the same. And "some Christians" in various countries have ever kept the same day, since the Jewish teacher and Saviour of the world, said to the men of Galilee, "The Sabbath was made for man, wherefore the Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath day."

Yours, &c. CORRECTOR.

General Intelligence.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The steamship Hibernia arrived at Boston July 17, bringing intelligence to the 4th inst., 13 days later. She brought 112 passengers.

There had been a little advance on cotton. The grain markets are more depressed than they were at the sailing of the last packet.

In Parliament the most prominent topic of discussion has been the system of opening letters. It seems that by an act of Parliament, the Home Secretary has power to open letters which he deems treasonable, and that this power has been abused.

A public meeting was held in London at which about 10,000 persons were present, to take into consideration the proceedings of Government in relation to Ireland, and to petition for the release of the State Prisoners.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, Jr. had addressed the Repealers of Ulster after the manner of his father, calling upon them to abstain from any outrage upon the Orangemen, who, it is said, intend to walk in procession on the 1st and 12th of July.

It is announced that the Dublin Corporation, to mark their sympathy for Mr. O'Connell, intend to elect him Lord Mayor for the ensuing year; his present official term expires in November.

The Repeal Rent for the five weeks ending July 1, was about $70,000. These are the sterling evidences of the extinction of Repeal agitation by State prosecutions!

France.—The most interesting portion of the intelligence received from France since our last arrival, relates to the affairs of Algeria and Morocco. The Emperor of Morocco, on receiving the report of the defeat of his troops, disavowed the conduct of their commander.

The following dispatch, by telegraph from Toulon, was received at Paris on the 23d of June:

LALLA MAGRAIA, June 16.

The Governor of Algeria to the Minister of War.

Yesterday, in the midst of a conference with the chief of the Morocco army, his troops, amounting to 5,000 horsemen, fired on us, and wounded an officer and two soldiers, without our having answered the fire. The conference was broken up, and the Generals (Lamoriciere and Bedean) were attacked by the Morocco troops.

"I have just arrived and have taken the offensive, and I have killed of the enemy 300 or 400 men. I also took from him several horses, and 300 or 400 stand of arms.

"Never was a punishment better deserved. We have only six killed and twenty wounded."

The Prince de Joinville arrived at Toulon on the 20th and shifted his flag to the Suffren. The squadron was to sail for Morocco on the 21st.

The squadron consists of eight vessels—three ships of the line, a frigate (the Belle Poule) and four steamers. Twelve hundred troops were embarked. The destination was Oran, where the Prince was to put himself under the orders of Marshal Bugeaud.

The Queen of Spain has conferred the Grand Cross of Charles III. on Santa Ana, President of the Republic of Mexico.

It is now settled that the Count de Trepani, brother of the King of Naples, is to marry the Queen of Spain.

During the last 12 months, Spain has had seven different ministers.

Charles Dickens is now on a tour in Italy, and intends to be absent from England about a twelve month.

The King of Naples has prohibited the export of grain from his dominions.

The small-pox is at present prevailing to some extent in London.

The torch of the incendiary still blazes in the agricultural counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, and the most horrid depravity and appalling destitution exists among the peasantry.

In the county of Suffolk alone there have been 131 incendiary fires since Christmas.

The coal fields of Great Britain are calculated to cover 4,900,000 acres, those of France only 692,000 acres.

The Dublin bakers presented a ponderous loaf, weighing sixty pounds, as an accompaniment with the address to Mr. O'Connell. The fishermen of Galway sent him a splendid turbot, with lobster and salmon to match.

Francis, the young ruffian that shot at the Queen some time ago, is comfortably situated as a teacher in the Government school at Fort Arthur, Van Dieman's Land.

It is said Mr. Monk Mason is about to spend £3000 on the construction of a huge aerial machine, with which he expects to conquer all difficulties.

The Ojibbeway Indians, while in London, made a purchase of some 15,000 brass thimbles, for the purposes of ornament and barter when they get home again.

There are at present in the town prison of Cardif, four men for debt, which united, exclusive of costs, do not amount to £2.

A most important post-office arrangement is in progress, by which it is anticipated that by steamers letters will be sent to China in fifty days.

By Lloyd's returns, it appears that the annual loss to the country by shipwreck is 610 ships, £2,000,000 of property, and 1,500 lives.

The Great Britain was advertised to sail on the 11th of July. As however, she still remains in the dock of Bristol, and the attempt to obtain her liberation cannot be immediately made, the day of her sailing for New York is indefinitely postponed.

The weather throughout England, since the sailing of the last packet, has been, generally speaking, favorable to vegetation. In most parts of the country considerable quantities of rain have fallen, and in some localities heavy thunder-storms have been experienced; but, from the long continuance of the previous drouth, moisture in almost any shape was acceptable.

The American packet-ship Dorchoster, forming one of the regular line between this port and Boston, United States, recently arrived in the Mersey, with a cargo of ice.

Statistics of Cab-drivers, &c.—From some documents recently prepared for the Home Missionary Society, it appears that there are in the metropolis 347 watermen employed upon the various cab-stands, and 1,793 omnibus conductors, 1662 drivers of cabs, and 4,546 drivers of hackeny-coaches and omnibuses, making a total of 8,348 men, or, with their families, 20,000 persons living by the conveyance of passengers in and around London.

According to the recent census the population of St. Petersburg is 443,000 inhabitants, and that of Moscow 357,000. This, however, includes immense garrisons of soldiers, there being only 285,000 females in the two places in a total population of upwards of 800,000 souls.

The rejection of the Texas annexation treaty by the Senate of the American Congress has been the subject of much comment in the English journals, and the account has been received with general and unqualified approbation. Though such a result was anticipated, so large a majority was scarcely expected.

The Rev. Dr. Murry, and the other titular archbishops in several parts of Ireland, have directed "prayers to be offered up in all the chapels of their diocese for Daniel O'Connell on Sundays and holidays."

From Texas.—We have advices from Texas to the 6th inst.

Accounts from almost every section represent the crops as highly promising. The corn crop is regarded as perfectly safe, says the Editor of the Civilian, and the indications for cotton could not be better, although of this crop it will never do to be too sanguine. Should the weather, however, prove at all favorable, the amount raised will greatly exceed that of any other year.

The rate of Texas Government exchequer bills was 80 cents at the Galveston Custom House.

The Texas papers appear to say but little about annexation since the treaty was rejcted in our Senate. The Editors are now more busily engaged upon home or local affairs.

The most interesting intelligence is the account of a desperate action recently fought near the Point Tract, in which the daring Col. Hays with only 14 men, defeated a body of Camanches, Wacoes, and Mexicans numbering over 75.

Another battle was fought near the Coleto on the 12th June, between a party of some 25 Indians and a small number of men under Capt. York. Three of the Indians were killed on the spot. Two of the Texans were wounded, Jackson Bell and Col. Neil. The latter, like Walker, had been a prisoner in Mexico and escaped.

From Mexico.—By the brig Somers we have somewhat later intelligence. The New Orleans Picayune, of July 12, sums it up thus:—

We learn that the vomito still prevailed to a great extent, and it was thought had made some effect upon the troops at the Castle of San Juan de Uloa, although a disposition seemed manifest to conceal its extent.

The prisoners at Perote are represented as in good health, but are treated with increased rigor. Col. Fisher was recently ordered to be put to work on the roads, but positively refused and defied any measures of compulsion which could be used. He has been placed in irons, but his firmness in refusing to perform menial service deterred the authorities from attempting to compel him.

The Mexican Minister of War and Marine had recommended an increase of five per cent. in the direct taxes to raise means—four millions of dollars—to provide an army for the final invasion of Texas.

There were reports, credited at Vera Cruz, of importance touching the affairs of Northern Mexico. It was stated that Canales had "moved upon Monterey" with designs unfriendly towards the Government, and that Arista had been ordered to the capital in arrest, but was prevented from going "by indisposition." The Northern Departments do not appear to be regarded as very friendly towards the Government.

An official letter from the Legation of the U. S. at Mexico, dated June 17, says:—

I wrote you a few days since that it was Gen. Santa Anna's intention to invade Texas immediately with a large force. As yet nothing has been done by Congress in the way of raising money, but troops have been secretly dispatched to reinforce the army of the north, and Gen. Canales has been named to the command. Immediate preparations for resistence and defence should be made. I think that Santa Anna calculates on foreign aid.

From Venezuela.—From a letter dated July 3, we make the following extracts:—

The small pox has nearly left us; the cases of infection that have appeared for the last two or three weeks have been comparatively slight.

In the very fertile District of Sinamaica, in the valley of the river Limon, the loss by the flood is incalculable. The destruction of property far exceeds that caused by the great overflow of the year 1830. Cattle of all kinds have perished in almost incredible numbers; and what few houses on the plantations not actually washed away, are so injured as to be nearly worthless.

In the unfortunate city of Carora, half the population have lost their homes, and the Governor has been obliged to offer the hospitals and barracks as shelter to the suffering poor.

From Bogata, Carabobo, Maracaibo, &c., the accounts of suffering caused by the destruction of life and property during the late inundations, are really mournful. It will take years of prosperity to replace the damage done by the fearful rains of the year 1844.

From St. Domingo.—A report is in circulation respecting the doings in St. Domingo to the effect that the blacks had taken possession of the Island and murdered every white person except the English and American Consuls. It is from the Charleston Courier of July 18.

Awful Steamboat Explosion at Rio de Janeiro—Fifty-two Killed—Eighty Wounded!—We learn by an arrival at Baltimore that a calamity occurred at Rio on the 25th of May, which has filled the city with lamentation. One of the small steamboats which plied between Rio and a village on the opposite side of the harbor, where many of the citizens have country houses, was on her way across the water, with 300 passengers on board, when, at a short distance from the wharf, the boiler exploded with tremendous force, tearing the vessel almost to fragments, killing fifty-two persons, and wounding at least eighty more. Of the wounded, seven or eight died soon after the explosion, and twenty others were believed to be mortally injured. There were several Englishmen on board, but it was not known that there were any Americans in the boat. The catastrophe was the first of the kind that ever occurred at Rio. The cause of the accident is not stated. All the theatres were closed intokenof mourning on the 25th, 26th, and 27th ultimo.—True Sun.

Violence in Montreal.—The Montreal papers gives us the following picture of life in Montreal: Montreal is fast verging towards a dreadful state of anarchy and barbarism. In addition to the brutal conduct of pretended anti-Orangeists, we have repeated acts of recklessness and disregard of life on the part of cabmen and calechemen. A few days ago, a woman was knocked down in the Quebec Suburbs by a cabman, who then whipped his horses and escaped. A little girl was run over in Dalhousie Square on Monday. A day or two since Dr. O'Doherty was knocked down and severely hurt by a cabman, and has been dangerously ill since. And yesterday Capt. Doven of St. Ours, a Canadian gentleman of respectability in that parish, was struck on the breast by a shaft of a caleche No. 149, belonging to one Milton and driven by a little boy, and the wheel passed over his body. He died in the course of an hour and a half. The unfortunate gentleman was 74 years of age.

Important.—A decision of the Treasury Department has just been made on the subject of the duties paid on Madeira, Port and other white and red wines of Portugal. Instead of paying sixty cents per gallon, as heretofore, the rate for Madeira and other white wines will be only seven and a half cents in casks, and fifteen in bottles; and for Port and other red wines six cents per gallon in casks, and fifteen in bottles. The Tariff act of 1842 has been found to be an infringement of our treaty with Portugal. It exacted sixty cents per gallon on Madeira wines, while the white wines of other nations were put at the low rates above mentioned. Our treaty with Portugal stipulates that the wines of that country shall be received on the terms of the most favored nations. The treaty of course prevails over the act. The amount to be refunded to importers, according to the Express, will not fall far short of four hundred thousand dollars, and may reach a half million.

The Mississippi.—The Belville (Ill.) Banner says:—"The waters of the Mississippi have been gradually subsiding for several days past and will soon have fallen back into their proper channel—but their frightful ravages will remain for many years as painful mementos of the most disastrous flood that has ever visited any section of our country. The farms throughout the entire American Bottom are literally laid in ruins; and to many of them their owners will never return. Indeed, we have been told that many parts of the Bottom which have been thickly settled will be wholly uninhabitable, for the present season, at any rate.

New Line of Steamboats.—We are informed that a new company has been organized in this city, with a capital of $300,000. They have contracted with Mr. Brown, of New York, for two large boats, to be ready next spring, which are to outvie, for magnificence and speed any thing now on the river. Success to them.—Albany Atlas.

Injured at the Fire in Buffalo.—The Buffalo Courier of the 18th, says that twelve or fourteen persons were injured at the fire of the preceding evening. Five were taken to the hospital. The injuries were mostly caused by jumping from the upper stories. One man had his leg broken, one woman met with the same misfortune, and another woman jumped out of the scond story window with an infant in her arms. This woman escaped without serious damage, but the child it is feared will not recover. The others who were injured were bruised, cut, &c., but suffered no fractures, or very dangerous external hurts. It is said that the injured parties are mostly if not all foreigners, and but lately arrived in the place.

Church Struck.—The Sullivan Whig states that in a severe thunder storm on Sunday last, during the afternoon service, the Presbyterian Church near the village of Liberty, in that county, was struck by lightning, which knocked down some ten or twelve of the congregation. None were killed on the spot, but Mr. Henry Burr was so badly hurt that his life is despaired of, and Mr. Young was so seriously burned that he is in great danger. Most of the others were also seriously burned and otherwise seriously injured, but it is believed not fatally. The interior of the church was much shattered.

The machinery for a Cotton Factory arrived at St. Louis on the 10th inst. and is to be put in operation on Chesnut, near Main. This will be the first Cotton Mill in this State, and when in operation it will drive the first cotton spindle by steam that ever whirled West of the Mississippi. The enterprise, we doubt not, will prove profitable to its undertakers. In the article, of cotton yarn alone there is said to be at least half a million of dollars worth annually imported into the State.

Lost Ship.—All hopes appear to have been given up for the safety of the Bremen ship Johannes, bound to Baltimore. She left Bremen on the 22d of March, under the command of Captain Dierkes, with one hundred and fifty-six passengers, and a crew of fourteen, and has never since been heard from. She is no doubt lost, with all on board. The crew belonged to Bremen and its vicinity.

Kentucky Mammoth Cave.—Twenty-six large avenues and a third river, larger than those previously known, it is now stated, have recently been discovered in the Mammoth Cave. A sulphur spring of an excellent quality of water has also been found some miles within the cave.—Boats of suitable construction have been built expressly for the rivers, so that visiters desirous of taking a water excursion, a dozen or so miles under ground can be accommodated. Large additions have been made to the Hotel, and from all accounts, a visit to that great wonder of the world would be delightful in every respect; and particularly about these sunshiny days. Only think of the luxury of a pic nic, at about some half a day's journey beyond where old Sol would think of poking his fiery proboscis!

The Upas Tree.—A living plant of this celebrated tree has been lately presented to the Horticultural Society by the East-India Company, and is now growing in the Chiswick Garden, London. It is in perfect health, and notwithstanding the fables of Dutch travelers, perpetuated by Darwin, may be approached with safety. It is, however, so virulent a poison that no prudent person would handle it without proper precaution.

A Useful Plant.—Honorable Mr. Ellsworth says the sun-flower is prehaps destined to become one of the most valuable agricultural products. One hundred pounds of the seed afford forty pounds of oil. The refuse of the seed, after expression, furnishes an excellent food for cattle; from the leaves of the plant cigars are manufactured of singular pectoral qualities; the stalk affordes a superior alkali, and the comb of the seeds is a choice dainty for swine.

Philadelphia.—The old Girard Bank building is closed, and Third street no longer presents a warlike appearance. We trust that all military force may be safely withdrawn from our city, and that we shall not soon need it again.

Sad Accident.—We learn from the Rochester Democrat that a young man named Silas R. Howe, lately in the employ of a hardware merchant of Detroit, came to his death by the accidental discharge of his rifle, at Pittsford, on the 19th inst. His mother and friends reside in East Poultney, Vermont. In his pocket was a letter from his mother with this caution—"Silas, be very careful of your gun."

The Mormons.—The St. Louis papers of the 14th inst. say that no outbreaks had occurred with the Mormons, with the exception that while an anti-Mormon was harvesting in his wheat field, he was shot at and wounded by some person unknown. It is the impression at Quincy that the anti-Mormons are secretly preparing to make an attack upon the Mormons in their city when they shall have procured sufficient force. They still think it impossible for Mormons and anti-Mormons to live in one county.

SUMMARY.

It is said that the loss of Philadelphia by the last two riots, by loss of business to business men, reaches to millions of dollars.

A contract has been concluded between the Postmaster General and the Reading Railroad company, by which the latter was to cease carrying the mails on Sunday after the 1st of July.

The Morman paper in New York, "the Prophet," was dressed in mourning last week, for the death of Smith. The editor says he has been loth to believe the report; "but conviction is forced upon our minds by the testimony of eye witnesses."

A disgraceful affair took place in Fredrick, Md., July 16, in which a Dr. Taylor came near fireing a pistol which was placed against the breast of Gov. Thomas. The quarrel grew out of a private difficulty. The Govenor was arrested but discharged from custody, because he declined entering into recognizances.

Gov. Ford of Illinois has issued an Address to the people of that state, requesting them to hold primary meetings throughout the State, on Saturday the 27th of the present month, to obtain money, provisions, clothing, and other necessaries of life, for the sufferers by the late flood.

A letter from Philadelphia of July 23d, says: "There is nothing new in the city so far as excitement is concerned. We were never more quiet."

The office of the 'Sparkling Fountain' was broken open at Pawtucket, R. I., on Thursday night by some of the rum-rowdies of that place, and quite a lot of Type thrown into the river.

Another large new brig, something like 800 tons burthen, is now nearly ready for launching at Buffalo.

On Thursday last at Boston, a very worthy young man, a son of Mr. Ebenezer Parker, who has a tobacco store on City Wharf, while assisting some men in lifting goods, in his father's employ, suddenly remarked, "Father, I am dying," and almost immediately expired. He probably had broken a blood vessel; his father had just cautioned him against over-exertion.

We learn from Buffalo that there was a good deal of excitement at the Falls in consequence of a report that a collision was expected between a party of Orange men and a body of Catholics, said to be 2000 strong, principally from the Welland Canal. A company of soldiers have been sent to Drummondsville to keep the peace.

A Nauvoo paper styles Joe Smith and his brother Hiram "the two most noble martyrs since the time of Abel."

Greenleaf, convicted at Boston of manslaughter, in killing a German, was on Friday sentenced to three years hard labor in the House of Correction, and to pay a fine of $100.

The Ottowa and Chippewa Indians have lost everything by the recent floods in the western rivers. Their plantations on the Osage, (Missouri) were all submerged from 6 to 12 feet deep: their houses, fences, etc. were carried away, their new crops are destroyed, and the tribes are exposed to starvation. A letter from the Baptist mission to the Indian Superintendant at St. Louis pleades for aid, and says they number about 350.

A cedar shingle was put on the barn of Ensign Abel Bliss, of Wilbraham, in May, 1740, and taken off by his grandson, John Bliss, July 9, 1844—making it 104 years old, and yet but little rotten.

MARRIED,

In Alfred, on the 4th inst., by Rev. J. R. Irish, Mr. NELSON LEE, of Andover, and Miss SARAH DAVIS, of the former place.

In Almond, on the 6th inst., by the same, Mr. SILAS S. THOMAS, of Alfred, and Miss MARTHA A. CRANDALL, of the former place.

By Eld. H. Jones, Jr., Mr. JOHN V. SAUNDERS, of Brookfield, N. Y., and Miss SARAH V. CLARKE, of Sciota, Ohio.

DIED,

On the 7th inst., REUBEN MONROE, of Alfred, in the 48th year of his age. His death was caused by an accidental fall from a load of lumber, the wheels of the loaded wagon passing over and dreadfully mangling his body. He survived only a few hours. A wife, five children, and a large family connection mourn their unexpected loss.

LETTERS.

James R. Irish, James H. Cochran, Charles M. Lewis, Thomas S. Alberti, Joseph Jennings, A. H. Burdick, Isaac D. Titsworth, John Whitford, R. T. Green, Z. Campbell.

Postmasters—Oxford, Sherburne, Friendship.

RECEIPTS.

Sweedsboro, N. J.—Joseph Jennings, $2.
Plainfield, N. J.—R. Dunham, M. D. Randolph, John D. Titsworth, P. F. Randolph, Z. F Randolph, Wm. Dunn, J. O. Mauriac, $2 each.
New Market, N. J.—Asa Dunn, $2.
Schenectada—Abel Ward, $2.
Alfred—D. W. Stillman, G. W. Allen, $2 each.
Almond—C. Tift, $2.
Brooklyn—Wm. M. Rogers $2.
Hopkinton, R. I.—Silas Greenman, Luke Crandall, Danie Coon, $2 each; H. Chipman, $1.
Verona—Calista Grant, $2.
Oxford—R. W. Utter, $2.
Berlin—Jared Green, $2.
South Branch—Calvin Wheeler, P. Burdick, $1 each.
Friendship—Ezra Crandall, Abel Maxson, $2 each.
Shiloh, N. J.—John Bright, George Tomlinson, Beulah S. Randolph, Reese Ayers, Reuben Davis, Isaac West, Ayers & Swinney, Jer. B. Davis, Anna Davis, D. A. F. Randolph, John W. Davis, John T. Davis, $2 each.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST GENERAL CONFERENCE will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in VERONA, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference.
PAUL STILLMAN, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having alrendy reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year.
F. W. STILLMAN, Rec. Sec'y.

The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Association will meet at the same place on sixth day Sept. 13, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Society will meet on fifth day, Sept. 14, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Evangelical Board of Directors for Disseminating Religious Truth among the Jews, will meet on first day, Sept. 15, at the call of the President.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Naturo and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK

Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sobeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND

Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT

Waterford—Lester T Rogers
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY

Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA

Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA

Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.

Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN

Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN

Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA

Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS

Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

JUST PUBLISHED,
THE
MEDIATORIAL REIGN OF CHRIST ON THE EARTH.

REVEALED, in a series of Essays, compiled from eminent authors; to which is added a letter from CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH to the Bishop of Jerusalem, on the perpetuity of Israel's Ordinances.

The following are the subjects discussed in the above work:—

1. The Study of Prophecy, a Question of Degree.
2. Christ's Kingdom on Earth.
3. Reigning on Earth no Degradation to our Lord.
4. The Priesthood of Christ, as it shall be exercised during and after the Millennium.
5. Messiah's Reign on the Earth.
6. The uncertainty of the hour of the coming of the Son of Man.
7. The signs, times, and seasons preceding Christ's Second Coming.
8. War in heaven.
9. The First Resurrection.
10. The changing of the Living Saints at the First Resurrection.
11. The ascension of the Saints to meet the Lord in the air.
12. The ascended Saints preserved from the fiery judgments, exercise power with Christ over their enemies.
13. The restoration of the Jews to their own land.
14. The New Temple to be erected in Jerusalem, with a map explanatory of the same.
15. The New Temple Ceremonial Service.
16. The going up of all nations to worship the Lord at Jerusalem.
17. The New Division of the Holy Land, with 2 maps, the first showing the division of the land among the Twelve Tribes by Joshua, with references to chapter and verses The second the division which shall take place after their restoration, as shown by the Prophet Ezekiel, with references also to the prophecy.
18. The New Heavens and New Earth.
19. The Paradisaical felicity and perfection of the animal and vegetable kingdoms generally restored during the Millennium.
20. Longevity restored to the sojourners on Earth.
21. The loosing of Satan and consequent Apostacy subsequent to the Millennium.
22. The Last or General Resurrection and Judgment of the wicked and the Second Death.
23. The delivering of the Kingdom to God the Father and commencement of the Everlasting Age.
24. The Everlasting Kingdom of God perpetuated in the renewed Heavens and Earth.
25. The gathering together of all things in Christ, and the Earth (renewed) the court or centre of unity of the Everlasting Kingdom of all Creation.
26. On Death and Hades, and the period of Satan's dominion over the present evil world.
27. The approaching New Dispensation.
28. Charlotte Elizabeth's letter to the Bishop of Jerusalem.

☞ Any person desiring the above Work, can have it sent to them, in sheets, by mail, by enclosing One Dollar, (post-paid,) addressed to Rev. I. P. Labagh, New York, or by calling at his Office, 130 Fulton street, or at 9 Spruce street, between the hours of 11 and 3 o'clock.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES,
Pot, first sort	4 00 a 4 06
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	23 00a23 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	28 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	7 75 a 8 62
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4 4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Çalicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	– a —
Stripes, fast colors	– a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35.
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	27 @ 31
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 72 @ 2 75
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
Smoked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	9 50 @10 00
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 31 @ 4 37
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 12 @ 4 25
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	6 00 @ 6 00
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	12 00 @12 50
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	85 @ 95
Do South new	80
Rye, Northern	67 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	45 @ 47
Barley N R	@
Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	85 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12½@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	8 37 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 7 @ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10¼ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6½a 6
American	5 a
Spring	5¼a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8¼a 9½
Do Brown	6¾a 8¾
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack 1 10	a
Do do fine 1 35	a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¾
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17¾a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6½a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¼
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	[illegible]
Do E. India	16 a 17
[illegible] plates I X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pull'd superfine	35 a 38
No. 1	31 a 33
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

"THERE REMAINETH A REST."

There is a rest for those that sigh,
A place of calm repose,
Where lovelier tints adorn the sky,
And sweeter blooms the rose.

There are no storms to sweep the sky,
No tempests there abide,
No raging ocean rushing by Ingulphing in its tide.

Ah! pleasing thought, I love thee well!
I'll shed a joyous tear,
That foul aspersion doth not dwell
To blast a promise fair.

The iron speaking forms of death—
The din of clashing steel,
No more shall rouse the patriot's breast
To brave the battle field.

The streaming eye—the bleeding heart—
The care distracted mind,
Will find a sweet and tranquil rest,
All pleasing and divine.

Ah! passing rich are those bright scenes
My ravish'd eye shall greet—
No mortal footsteps there hath been;
No music half so sweet.

There verdant plains and spicy groves,
And birds of starry wings;
The orange there doth richer bloom,
And sweeter is the spring.

There streams of bliss do ever flow
The verdant banks among;
There angels tune their harps of gold,
And swell the joyous song.

Welcome the hour! that sets me free
From earth's oppressive load,
There is a better world for me,
"A welcomer abode."

There is a rest for those that sigh,
A place of calm repose,
Where lovelier tints adorn the sky,
And sweeter blooms the rose. Chr. Index.

For the Recorder.

THE THUGS.

A CHAPTER FROM HINDOO HISTORY.

Within the last few years there has been brought to light in India one of the most wonderful moral and religious phenomena that has ever existed. It has been shown that for centuries an association has existed in that country, the members of which, bound together by the most solemn obligations, and maintaining all the outward appearances of moral and religious decorum, are in the constant and habitual practice of robbery and murder as an established profession. They claim to have been originally instituted by one of their divinities, and to pursue their profession under her express sanction and guidance. Hence they look upon robbery and murder as being, instead of crimes, acts of acceptable worship. Although, as has been said, their existence has been measured by centuries, and their victims have been numbered by tens of thousands annually, yet such has been the skill with which their measures have been conducted, and so little notice is taken of the disappearance of a murdered person in those unhappy regions, that scarcely an individual of them, until since the year 1830, has ever been brought to justice by any human tribunal.

These persons are known by the name of THUGS (deceivers), or PHANSIGARS (stranglers); and the account of them which is here given, is mostly derived from official reports, made by order of the British government, based upon judicial investigations.

The origin of the Thugs is lost in the darkness of that night of ages, which the torch of history strives in vain to enlighten—the records of which are only written by the pen of the recording angel. Those who are conversant with the history of the crusades will find a striking similarity between the Thugs and that exceedingly obscure and wonderful sect, the Assassins of Mount Lebanon. Now and then, among the earlier historians of India, a transaction is recorded, which we, who are acquainted with their existence, can at once refer to the Thugs; but the Europeans, who have written of India, seem, one and all, to have been in utter ignorance of the existence of such a people; and even Ward, in his laborious "History of the Hindoos," makes no mention of them. A very curious fact with respect to them is, that among the sculptures on the walls of the celebrated rock-hewn temple of Elephanta, are many which distinctly represent all the peculiar operations of the Thugs; which circumstance is a strong proof of their high antiquity.

The account which the Thugs give of their own origin, connects them with one of the most celebrated of those gigantic fictions peculiar to Hindoo mythology. They say that in the early ages there was a giant, who devoured the human family as fast as they were created. This giant, whom they call Rukut-Beej Dana, or the Blood-seed Giant, they say, was so tall that the deepest ocean scarcely reached his waist, so that the whole earth was easily reached by him. To enable the earth to be peopled, the goddess Kalee undertook his destruction, but as she attacked him, from each drop of his blood as it reached the earth, sprang up another giant in his likeness. Thus far the Thug version accords with the common Hindoo legend, as related in their sacred books; which goes on to state that the goddess licked off the blood from their bodies with her enormous tongue, as she is represented in her images. But the Thugs say, that from the sweat which poured from her body, the goddess formed two men, whom she armed with cords, and bade them to strangle the giant, without letting a drop of his blood touch the ground. Having accomplished this, they brought the cords back to the goddess; who returned them again, telling them that they had acquired a right to slay mankind, inasmuch as they had enabled the earth to be peopled by destroying the giants; and bade them keep the cords as a means of livelihood, and transmit them to their posterity. These men, the Thugs say, were their ancestors, from whom their "vested right" of murder is derived.

At the time of their institution, the goddess promised to relieve the Thugs of the the task of concealing the bodies of those whom they had slain; but strictly enjoined upon them never to look back to see how she disposed of them; but once on a time a Thug looking behind, saw her in the act of devouring a body, with half of it hanging from her mouth, at which her delicacy was so much outraged that she would no longer assist them; but, out of compassion, she presented them with a pick-axe, with which to dig the graves of their victims, which she fashioned, say they, from a tooth plucked from her own celestial jaw. To this day the pick-axe is the most sacred object among them; it is at once their altar and their idol, their oracle, and the standard which leads them on, as the Israelites were led by the luminous cloudy pillar, in their ancient wanderings.

The Thugs are found scattered over the whole length and breadth of India, from the Himmelah mountains on the north, 1800 miles to the great Indian Ocean on the south; and from the Indus on the west, 1500 miles to the Brahmpoutra on the east. Ostensibly they occupy every station, and pursue every employment of life; and some have even held offices under government. "No men," says Capt. Sleeman, the officer appointed by government to superintend the operations against them, "observe more strictly in domestic life all that is enjoined by their priests, or demanded by their respective castes; and to those who do not know them, the principal members of the gangs will always appear to be among the most amiable, the most respectable, and most intelligent members of the different classes of native society." They seldom pursue their profession in the neighborhood of their own dwellings, but make frequent and distant expeditions, in gangs, numbering from a few members up to, in some cases, many hundreds. On these expeditions they assume every sort of disguise:—sometimes they appear as disbanded soldiers returning to their homes; as merchants, or travelers, or pilgrims visiting their sacred places; sometimes one of them personates a rich man, and the others his servants. They frequent the public roads, haunt the caravansaries where travelers resort, and worm themselves into their confidence by every possible artifice, in order to discover their business, destination, and the amount of their property. Perhaps the Thugs will pretend to fear robbers, and propose to unite their forces with those of the travelers, journeying with them oftentimes for days, awaiting a favorable opportunity; till at last, when a fit occasion offers, perhaps when their evening fire is kindled in some lonely jungle, while the traveler is seated by their sides, telling of his hopes and his fears, of the friends whom he is soon to meet,—the Thug leader gives the signal, the fatal cord is applied—the victim strangled—the body rifled, stripped, and flung into the hastily-dug grave; and all traces of the dark transaction speedily disappear. It is a somewhat curious fact, that their method of murder is always that of strangling; whether this was originally adopted in reference to the story of their origin, or whether that story was framed to perpetuate this mode of procedure, it is most evidently well adapted for concealment, practiced as it is without any witness of the deed, and precluding all cries for help, and leaving no tell-tale blood-spots to excite or direct suspicion. They generally make use of a girdle, in which a slip-noose has been tied, which two Thugs suddenly put around the neck of the victim, while a third, from behind, seizes his legs and flings him forwards, when one of those holding the noose, makes another turn of it around the neck, and placing one foot upon it, draws it tight; "as," (to use their own illustration,) "one would pack a bundle of straw."

Of course the mode of their proceedings varies more or less with the circumstances in which the attack is made, the force of the Thugs, or of their victims, and the like. Their snares are found in every path of life. Wherever there are victims, there, too, are Thugs. They traverse the highways, rest in the caravansaries, haunt the holy places of their religion. The sacred rivers swarm with the boats of the Thugs; and the stillness of the waters is often broken by the sudden dash of a corpse, which is committed to their sure keeping till the day when the sea gives up her dead. One circumstance is common to all:—"Dead men," they well know, "tell no tales;" hence, they always precede robbery by murder.

Of course any attempt to estimate the number of those who have been put to death by the Thugs can be no more than mere probable approximation. But from the the best information of those whose opportunities have been most favorable for estimating them, we are waranted in saying that it cannot, for a long series of years, have been less than 30,000 annually, and in all probability has been much greater. That such a state of things should exist may seem almost incredible to us, who are so accustomed to the jealous regard which is here paid to human life; around whose every path is thrown the sheltering shield of law, and who dwell where a blow struck at the meanest man arouses the might of the whole community to avenge it. But we must remember that of all this India, and, in fact, every heathen land, knows nothing. In those vast and populous regions human life is little thought of, and a man disappears, as little sought after or cared for as a snow flake which falls upon, and is lost in the bosom of the ocean.

Travelers, as has been observed, are the most usual victims of the Thugs. There are many circumstances belonging to the mode of travelling in India which facilitate their operations. Public conveyances are entirely unknown. Traveling dâk, or by palanquin, is too expensive to be in common use. Almost all who travel, must do it by their own private conveyance. In India, as in all ill-governed countries there is a strong desire to realize for all property, or to convert it into the tangible shape of gold, silver, or precious stones; and a person traveling from one section to another usually has his property in that shape upon his person. And then remittances from one banker or merchant to another must be made by means of private carriers; in fact, usually by the hands of common porters, who usually travel singly. There are also no public houses, so that the course of a traveler could be traced from day to day. All of which circumstances, while they greatly facilitate the operations of the Thugs, render their detection and apprehension almost impossible.

The first efficient measures which were taken for the suppression of the Thugs were in 1823, when a gang of 115 members were arrested near Jubulpoor. Some of the leaders seeing the evidence strong against them offered to turn states-evidences; and in the following year still further information was gained, and larger numbers were arrested; in 1830 courts were organized in different parts of the country for the detection and suppression of "Thuggee," the operations of which have been carried on with great vigor. In 1836, at one single session held at Jubulpoor, 241 prisoners were convicted of the murder of 474 individuals, of whom the corpses of 314 were disinterred, and subjected to inquest. During the few years past, at two stations alone, more than 2000 Thugs have been arrested; of whom 318 were allowed to turn approvers or witnesses; about 1800 were committed for trial, of whom 419 were executed, and 1080 transported for life.

Thus far the Thugs have been considered in their mere external aspects, as robbers and murderers. A most remarkable band, truly, whether we consider the time during which they have existed, the magnitude of their operations, or the impunity which has attended them. But their internal economy is what separates the Thugs by a broad line of demarcation from every other class of robbers and murderers the world has seen. They are in every, the strictest sense, a religious organization, with a creed and worship; with rites initiatory and probationary; with omens and oracles; with sacrifices and thanksgivings; with rites and ceremonies. Other robbers have violated conscience, the Thugs win it over:—these will be considered, when we speak of the Thugs as a RELIGIOUS ASSOCIATION.

AN ITALIAN GIRL AND ITALIAN WAGES.

The next day we went into the mountains to visit the Saravezza quarry, and also the Mercury mines. The last are very unprofitable and dreadfully destructive to human life. Mr. Powers uses the Saravezza marble exclusively. Wandering amid the hovels and along a mountain stream that disclosed at every step some new beauty in the stupendous scenery which enclosed me, I entirely lost track of my companions. Discovering at last that they had gone to the top of the mountain to visit the highest quarries, I was foolish enough to follow. But after winding up for a long time, I became confused in the multitude of paths which continually crossed and intersected mine. But while I stood midway on the mountain, doubtful what course to take, a young woman about 18 years of age overtook me. She was decidedly pretty, with a slight and graceful form. The everlasting distaff was in her hand, and she spun away as she slowly ascended the zigzag path. I inquired the path to the quarries; she told me she was on her way there and would accompany me.

We fell into a chit-chat—sustained as well as could be expected with my bad Italian on one side, and her miserable patios on the other. I asked if she were carrying the dinner to her friends in the quarries. "Oh, no," she repleid. "Ah," said I, in true Yankee inquisitiveness, "I suppose you are going up to visit your husband?" She burst into a clear laugh, and replied, "Oh no, I am not married."

"Well, then," said I in perfect despair, "what are you climbing this tremendous hill for?" "Oh, I carry quadrette," she answered. "Quadrette?" said I, "what is that?" On inquiry, I found that she was employed all day in bringing blocks of marble, dressed for pavements, from the quarry to the plain. A thick napkin was folded on the top of her head, on which she placed the quadrette or square piece of marble, and descended with it to the manufactory below—it was a mile from the top of the mountain—and then returned with her distaff. A mile up and a mile back, make each trip two miles long. She made seven trips a day, and received for each only a cent and a half!—Thus she travelled 14 miles a day, receiving for it ten cents. I looked at her, astonished and amazed. Her features and form were so delicate, and her voice and manner and all were so gentle and sweet, that I could not conceive for a moment that such a life of drudgery was her lot. Yet she seemed cheerful and happy.—Headly's Sketches.

SAFETY IN THUNDER STORMS.

People are often led to inquire, what are the best means of safety during a thunder storm? If out of doors, we should avoid trees and elevated objects of every kind; and if the flash is instantly followed by the report, which indicates that the cloud is near, a recumbent position is considered the safest. We should avoid rivers, ponds, and all streams of water, because water is a conductor and persons on the water in a boat, would be more prominent objects, and therefore more likely to be struck by the lightning. If we are within doors the middle of a large carpeted room will be tolerably safe. We should avoid the chimney, for the iron about the grate, the soot that often lines it, and the heated and rarified air it contains, are tolerable conductors, and should on that account be avoided. It is never safe to sit by an open window, because a draught of moist air is a conductor, hence we should close the windows on such an occasion. In bed we are comparatively safe, for the feathers and blankets are bad conductors, and we are to a certain extent insured in such a situation.

THE 'LONDON TIMES.'—The present circulation of the London Times newspaper, is about 20,000 per diem; its average daily number of advertisements during the last six months of 1843, was 718. Taking these numbers as the basis of the circulation, we find that the 'leading paper' pays for stamp duty about £27,000 per annum, and for advertisement duty about £17,000 per annum; making a total contribution to the revenue of £44,000. The gross receipts of the Times from a daily circulation of 20,000 would be about £135,000 per annum, while its advertisements, supposing them to realize 16s. each on the average, would produce about £112,000; making the entire yearly receipts of the paper not less than say £247,000, being more than a million of dollars of our currency.

A REMEDY FOR WAR.

From a letter of Mrs. Child to the Boston Courier.

"I have read of a certain regiment ordered to march into a small town, (in the Tyrol, I think,) and take it. It chanced that the place was settled by a colony who believed the gospel of Christ, and proved their faith by works. A courier from a neighboring village informed them that the troops were advancing to take the town. They quietly answered, 'If they WILL take it, they must.' Soldiers soon came riding in, with flying colors, and fifes piping their shrill defiance. They looked round for an enemy, and saw the farmer at his plough, the blacksmith at his anvil, and the women at their churns and spinning wheels. Babies crowded to hear the music, and boys ran out to see the pretty trainers, with feathers and bright buttons, 'the harlequins of the nineteenth century.' Of course none of these were in a position to be shot at. 'Where are your soldiers?' they asked. 'We have none,' was the brief reply. 'But we have come to take the town.' 'Well, friends, it lies before you.' 'But is there nobody to fight?' 'No; we are all Christians.' Here was an emergency altogether unprovided for by the military schools. This was a sort of resistance which no bullet could hit; a fortress perfectly bomb-proof. The commander was perplexed. 'If there is nobody to fight with of course we cannot fight.' So he ordered the horses' heads to be turned about,—and they carried the human animals out of the village as guiltless as they entered, and perchance somewhat wiser."

Punishment for Blasphemy.—In the year 1718, the General Court of New Hampshire proposed the following law declaring the punishment for blasphemy:

Section 4. And be it likewise enacted by the authority aforesaid, That if any person shall presume wilfully to blaspheme the holy name of God, Father, Son, or Holy Ghost, either by denying, cursing or reproaching the true God, his creation of government of the world; or by denying, cursing, or reproaching the holy word of God, that is the canonical Scriptures, contained in the Old and New Testaments—every one so offending shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding six months, and until they find sureties for their good behavior, by sitting in the pillory, by whipping, boring through the tongue with a red hot iron, or sitting upon the gallows with a rope about their neck, at the discretion of the Court of Assize and General Gaol Delivery, before which the trial shall be according to the circumstances, which may aggravate or alleviate the offence.

Provided, That no more than two of the forementioned punishments shall be inflicted for one and the same fact.

Wheat—Lime.—We saw yesterday a parcel of very superior red wheat, weighing 64 pounds per bushel, which had been purchased for city grinding, and which was raised under circumstances showing what good management may effect in the agricultural line. The wheat in question was the product of a field which a short time since was part of a waste common that had been uncultivated for many years, and was deemed to be too poor and worn out to yield any thing. After enclosing it, the present owner put lime upon it in the proportion of one hundred bushels to the acre, and subsequently followed the lime with a liberal application of stable manure. Last fall the field thus prepared was sown in wheat, and has just returned a crop of the very best quality, averaging thirty bushels to the acre. The field thus restored and enriched will require but little additional outlay for years to come, and in the mean time will yield a liberal annual return to the sagacious owner.—Balt. Amer.

An Errand Boy's Education.—A boy of thirteen or fourteen was about to be sworn to give evidence at an inquest lately held, when he said, as if he feared he was unfit to take an oath, that he could not read. He however said that he was in the habit of going to chapel, and was accordingly sworn. Having given his evidence in a tolerably clear manner, he, much to the surprise of the jury, wrote his name in a clear, legible hand at the end of the deposition. A juror thought it rather a strange mode of education to teach a boy to write before he could read, and felt curious to ascertain how he learnt. The boy said he had learnt to write nothing but his name; and a juror informed the Coroner that it was a common thing for errand-boys who had to sign their names frequently, to be taught to write their autographs, and nothing else.—London paper.

A Dilemma.—The editor of the (Charlottesville, Va.,) Christian Intelligencer says: "A correspondent complains of our declining to publish a communication which he forwarded us, and says we should not judge of the fitness of a communication, but leave that to our readers. Query: If our readers decide unfavorably of the propriety of its publication, how shall we unpublish it? We meet with the same difficulty here, that the man did who purchased garden seeds, with the understanding that if they did not come up he was at liberty to return them!"

To make Water Cold for the Summer.—The following is a simple mode of rendering water almost as cold as ice: Let the jar, pitcher or vessel used for water, be surrounded with one or more folds of coarse cotton to be constantly wet. The evaporation of the water will carry off the heat from the inside, and reduce it to a freezing point. In India and other topical regions where ice cannot be produced, this is common. Let every mechanic or laborer have at his place of employment two pitchers thus provided, and with lids or covers—the one to contain water for drinking, the other for evaporation—and he can always have a supply of cold water in warm weather. Any person can test this by dipping a finger in water, and holding it in the air of a warm day; after doing this three or four times, he will find his finger uncomfortably cold.

The term "Whig" is said to have been given to the liberal party in England by the royalists in Cromwell's time, the initials of its motto, which was "We Hope In God"—W. H. I. G.

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, (3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most River bks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ⅝	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ⅝	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2¼
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton, Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick. New Brunswick. N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatara, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10.

Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co. Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches, Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, AUGUST 1, 1844. NO. 6.

Biographical.

JOSEPH DAVIS.*

Joseph Davis was born in August, 1627, at Chipping-Norton, an ancient town in the county of Oxford. His father, Mr. John Davis, was a burgess and chief magistrate of that town, and was connected with the Puritans. At an early period in his life, Joseph Davis seems to have been religiously disposed, the Spirit of God (as he expresses it) having wrought his fear in him in his childhood, so as to shun and hate bad company of his rank, and to seek his Creator. As he grew up he became interested in the preachers of the Puritanic school, and "was drawn forth to thirst after their ministry." This thirst was gratified by frequent attendance on the preaching of those who were accounted the most profitable, until in judgment and feeling he was one with those who at the beginning of the civil war were nicknamed Brownists, and afterwards Roundheads.

While yet a lad, several incidents occurred to try the faith and exhibit the resolution of Mr. Davis. Soon after the first battle between Charles I. and the Parliament, which was fought at Edgehill, the king came to Oxford and made it his garrison. The father of Mr. Davis, having inclined to take the side of Parliament, was forced to leave his shop and house for fear of imprisonment, throwing the burden of his affairs upon his son. In these circumstances, while his mother lay in a languishing condition, the king's soldiers came in the middle of the night, broke open the shop, and were taking away the most valuable goods, when Mr. Davis interposed, and besought them to be merci*ful* if they expected to find mercy. They put a pistol to his breast, threatening to shoot him; but were finally induced to leave, after having well provided themselves with booty. Some time later, another company came with a pretended commission to take away all; "but the God of justice stirred up the people to do justice upon them, and prevented them from committing that barbarity." Afterwards, however, a "troop of robbers" came and took away all, so that father, sons, and daughter, were forced to fly to Warwick for protection and safety.

About the year 1646, Mr. Davis was apprenticed to a Mercer at Coventry, with whom he remained for nine years. During this time he secured the confidence of his employer to such an extent that he was placed at the head of a shop at Hales Owen, near Birmingham. Here a deep work of grace seems to have been wrought upon his heart, which induced him again to visit Coventry, where he was baptized. His being baptized brought upon him many trials, among which was the ill-will of his father's family, to whom he had been devotedly attached. Various were the expedients resorted to for preventing this. Clergymen whom he esteemed visited and discoursed with him; and when this was found to be powerless, an attempt was made to injure his character through the evil practices of one of his companions. All this, however, was to no purpose. He says, "Jehovah made me to stand. By rich grace I was enabled to continue, and being diligent in business I found time to study the Scriptures."

For a considerable time after his baptism, Mr. Davis continued to pursue his business, while he labored in various ways to promote the cause of religion. In company with several others, he established a meeting for religious inquiry and improvement. It was their custom to assemble early in the morning of Sunday to confer about the things of God. This conference was continued in the intervals of public worship, was sometimes occupied in an examination of the discourses which had been heard, and unquestionably contributed greatly to the growth of those who were connected with it.

The account of Mr. Davis' domestic arrangements, we give in his own language, as follows:—"After some time I purposed to alter my condition; and my conscience and judgment, according to God's Holy Word, directing me to a virtuous woman, I entered into a married state with Miss Elizabeth Wright, sister of Mr. Stephen Wright, of Daventree, in Northamptonshire, about the year 1655—by whom I obtained, as the gift of God, four children, which have all been removed from me by death, but my son Joseph, whom the Lord hath made a staff to me in my old age, and who is in the same communion with me, "keeping the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus."

The quotation with which this paragraph closes has reference to his observance of the seventh-day as the Sabbath—a quotation frequently found in the old books on the subject. At what time Mr. Davis became a Sabbath-keeper is not certainly known. From some facts, however, which will be hereafter referred to, we judge that it must have been as early as 1660—about the time that John James was a faithful martyr for the truth.

Mr. Davis was several times imprisoned, and remained a prisoner more than ten years. At first he was taken prisoner by the country troops, carried away seven miles to Burford, detained two days, and dismissed.

His second imprisonment was in 1661, when a troop of horse came to his shop on the seventh day evening, took him a prisoner, rifled his house, took away his goods, and kept him until Sunday evening. The oath of allegiance was then tendered to him, which he refused; whereupon he was sent to Oxford castle, with some of his neighbors, from which place he was released after the Lent assizes.

In January, 1662, one Worge, by an order from Lord Faulkland, took him to Oxford, delivered him to the jailer, where he was detained until the Lent assizes. The judge having called him, and hearing the cause, remanded him to await the decision of Faulkland. But the Lord released him by removing his adversary.

In the spring of 1663, he was committed to prison by Sir Thomas Pennison, where he remained about two years. At the expiration of this time he had a hearing, and was adjudged to the loss of all his goods, and imprisonment at the king's pleasure. But the Lord restrained the execution of the first part of the sentence. The care of his shop and family, together with the anxiety connected with the imprisonment of her husband, threw Mrs. Davis into a consumption of which she died in 1665. By the intercession of his friends, however, and by a statement of the case of his family, Mr. Davis was released from prison for a short time before her death, and permitted to administer consolation to her in that trying hour. After this event, he was allowed to dispose of his house and goods, provide for the care of his children, and then—was remanded to prison.

[To be concluded.]

---

* The principal facts here given concerning the life of Mr. Davis, are taken from a narrative prepared by himself some months before his death, printed between the time of his death and burial, and distributed among his friends at his grave. The title page of the book sufficiently explains its design. It is as follows:—"The Last Legacy of Mr. Joseph Davis, Sen., being a brief account of the most material circumstances of his life and profession. Presented to his dear friends and acquaintance, to be read and perused for their encouragement in duty, and imitation in piety, in order to the enjoyment of a Heavenly Life eternally. 'Though he be dead, yet speaketh.' 'They have Moses and the prophets: if they hear not them, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead.' London: Printed in the year 1707."

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER FOUR.

The Sabbath a part of the Moral Law.

It appears to me, from certain Scriptures, that the Decalogue contains the law referred to by the Apostle Paul—Rom. 5: 13—the law which showed sin from Adam to Moses; that the law given to Adam and his posterity was the same spoken of by God on mount Sinai, and enforced upon the attention of Israel by all the terrors of that dreadful day. It is not even intimated in the account of that solemn transaction, that these laws were entirely new, or before unknown, even to Israel. In Exod. 19: 9, the reason why God spake from that fiery mount is stated as follows, viz: "Lo I come unto thee in a thick cloud, that the people may hear when I speak with thee, and believe thee forever." And chap. 20: 20, when the sight became too terrible for the people to bear, "Moses said unto the people, fear not, for God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces that ye sin not." And from Deut. 5: 29, we learn that when the people begged permission to retire from the dreadful scenes of the mount, the Lord said, "O that there were such a heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always." Can words more explicitly teach the design of that awful transaction—the pronunciation of the law amidst the thunderings and lightenings of mount Sinai?

But learned writers in favor of the first day say, "That the Decalogue, as such, was delivered only to natural Israel, whom God brought out of Egypt, is manifest from its inspired preface, which runs thus: "And God spake all these words, (words of the Decalogue) saying, I am the Lord thy God who brought thee out of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." It is remarkable, too, that in the repetition of the Law, Deut. 5: 12 to 15, this consideration is annexed to the fourth commandment, the Sabbath law, and assigned as a reason for its present enforcement—not as a reason for its institution, but for the present strict enforcement of it, and so far as I know never mentioned by any inspired writer for the same purpose again. When, however, the law of release was given (Deut. 15: 1 to 15,) where they were commanded not to let a servant go out empty, but furnish him liberally out of the flock and of the wine press and of the floor, the strict observance of this law is enjoined by a remembrance of their redemption out of Egypt. And the same consideration is enjoined at the renewal of the Passover law, chap. 16: 3. And again in chap. 24: 18 to 22, the same thing is enjoined to enforce justice between the master and his hired servant, and mercy and kindness toward the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow. But who will pretend that the laws requiring justice, kindness and mercy among the Israelites were founded in the fact of their deliverance from Egypt, or that these laws were obligatory only on them? All candid persons will admit, that these were duties independent of that particular consideration, and belong to Gentiles as well as Jews. That particular consideration was urged under their peculiar circumstances to awaken and enlist all their feelings of gratitude, and compassion in favor of keeping diligently these commands of God. They had just experienced a remarkable deliverance from oppression, injustice, cruelty and superstition. They now knew the sweets of deliverance from compulsory, unrequited labor. They felt and were enjoying the benefits of that provision which the Lord had made for them when they came out of bondage, spoiling the Egyptians for their benefit. They had known very recently what it was to want kindness when they were strangers, fatherless and widows in captivity. How blessed a day of rest would have been to them, when their taskmasters exacted brick without straw! How touching, how forcible, therefore, must that consideration have been, when Jehovah said, I am the Lord thy God who brought thee out of Egypt, and exhorted them thereby to keep his holy commandments! All, then, in the Decalogue, that belonged 'only to natural Israel,' were the peculiar circumstances and considerations referred to in its inspired preface. The ten laws enforced from mount Sinai, are the revealed will of God concerning man, in his relations to God and his fellows, and from their very nature apply as directly and properly to Gentiles as Jews. This is generally admitted respecting eight of them. But the second and the fourth are rather too positive; the former for Papists, the latter for Protestants—exactly to comply with them. A Protestant writer of some eminence, not long ago wrote as follows, viz: "I am utterly unable to discern that any but Jews and those proselyted to Judaism have ever been, or that without a new revelation they ever can be required to sanctify any one day of the week, more than another! . . . . . . for the Decalogue, as such, was delivered only to natural Israel." And by personal acquaintance, I find this is the sentiment of not a few others.

In my former papers I have shown that the Sabbath was binding upon mankind, and observed by holy men before the Decalogue was given. I have shown from Scripture that mankind were never without the revealed laws of God, and that the Sabbath institution was among them, that the laws contained in the Decalogue were not new, nor peculiar to natural Israel, and that the manner in which the fourth commandment is enjoined shows that it in particular was a known and ancient law, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." I have shown that the Sabbath, like marriage, is a primitive institution, and obligatory upon all mankind; and in opposition to the sentiments of some modern divines, we find it so taught by our Saviour, Mark 2: 27, "The Sabbath was made for man," i. e. for man's welfare in all circumstances—rescuing it from the traditional punctilios of the Scribes and Pharisees, and placing it (as he did marriage on another occasion) upon the original design of its institution in Paradise. The law of marriage is not more directly recognized and perpetuated by our Saviour than is the law of the Sabbath as given in Paradise. If, therefore, the institution of marriage is binding as a primitive institution, and is recognized by the seventh commandment, which all evangelical Christians admit, so also must be the Sabbath institution, given in Paradise, and contained in the fourth commandment.

S. D.

APPEAL IN BEHALF OF THE JEWS.

We cheerfully comply with a request to insert the following. It presents in a concise manner the claims of Israel upon the Christian church, and the encouragements to engage in labors for their benefit. There may be a difference of opinion as to the best manner of approaching them, but surely none can fail to feel an interest in their welfare.

Office of the A. S. M. C. Jews,
New York, July 1st, 1844.

Dear Brethren in the Lord:—

Since the organization of the Society in 1816, for Meliorating the Condition of the Jews, it has, through many discouragements, held on its way. Its friends have never yet seen the hour in which they have ventured to say, it is a forlorn hope, and Israel must be abandoned without a voice to admonish him, or an advocate to plead his cause.

Having received from that people the lively oracles of God, embodied in the Old Testament, and accomplished in the New, and having observed the electric fires passing from one to the other, as between the clouds preparing to pour down their rain upon the earth; having the promise of Israel's restoration, when, baptized by the Holy Ghost, and incorporated in the Christian Church, they are destined to become most able, zealous, and successful Missionaries of the Cross; knowing, moreover, as we do, that God ordinarily works by means, and having the charge of our Lord to "preach the gospel to every creature," encouraged also by what occurred on the day of Pentecost, and by many subsequent conversions, both at home and abroad; and firmly believing from prophecy, that the restoration of the Jews will be the precursor of that great ingathering of the Gentiles, which will constitute the latter day glory, we feel as if we must not, and indeed dare not recede from the cause. Israel has been our instructor, and shall we now leave him uninstructed? He is our elder brother, and shall we forsake him in his destitution? If the Spirit of the Lord God of Abraham, of Elijah, or of David, rests upon us, we shall neither be disposed to restrain our hearts from prayer, nor our hands from labor in this cause. Many circumstances indeed combine to excite, at this very time, a growing interest in their behalf. From the best information we have been able to collect, there are strong misgivings in Israel in relation to Messiah. Their beautiful City has been destroyed with fire—their great convocations have ceased—the sacrifices of the Temple are no more, and much of their splendid ritual has disappeared. The Jew can no longer tell the tribe from which he is descended. He wonders at the ages that have rolled away from the time of Titus; at the long night that has followed without a day-break, and the universality and intensity of their national calamities. He cannot account for dispensations of the God of his fathers, so long protracted, and so painful. Nor can he so explain types and prophecies as to satisfy his own mind, nor indeed ponder on them all, without being carried by the force of truth to Mount Calvary, or to the forsaken tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. In the mean while other events are occurring, which indicate great changes. The Eastern Antichrist, if not entirely subdued, is crippled, and comparatively powerless. Scientific improvements, by bringing distant nations and regions in close contiguity to each other, have immeasurably facilitated national intercourse. The Dead Sea of Israel is interrupted by a rippling of its waters, indicating that the Spirit of God is abroad in the earth. Respectable travelers tell us that there is great excitement among the Jews, in hope of soon returning to their own land, and that larger masses of that people, than at any period since their dispersion, are found at Grand Cairo, and other places bordering on Palestine. Societies for evangelizing the Jews, have also recently been organized in Europe, and we are persuaded that active and prudent measures will secure to our American institution warm greetings, and a liberal support. There are said to be 60,000 Jews in our country, and more than 12,000 in our city.

Here, then, is an extensive Missionary field at our very doors. A large part of that field needs a German Missionary. One believed to be both able and willing to engage in its labors, has been recommended, and the Board has taken measures to obtain his future services. The door, here and elswhere, is also open for the distribution of Bibles, New Testaments and Tracts among the people. Our own monthly periodical has been enlarged to the size of a respectable pamphlet, and will not only circulate in that form among ourselves, but will doubtless reach and be read by some of them, perhaps by many. Into the secret purposes of God we cannot pry—our course is straight forward. We indulge, however, in no romance; for the number of Jewish converts, as detailed in a very able address which appeared in the Jewish Chronicle of the 1st of June last, is sufficient to show that our hope is not visionary. We appeal, therefore, freely and strongly to the Christian Churches of the Reformation, and ask their co-operation and their prayers. Shall we then vigorously re-enter upon this field, Christian Brethren, and will you sustain us in its prosecution? Will Isreal close his eyes, and harden his heart forever to our efforts? When we come to him with his own Scriptures, and ask his own explanation of his own prophets, will he turn away from us? Will he do it when we approach him not as dictators, conquerors or persecutors, but with the yearning of a brother's heart to a brother? Surely the Jew is a man of manly feelings, and as such, must have mind to apprehend truth, and God can give the heart that will respond to its impression.

We owe an immeasurable and inextinguishable debt of gratiude to that people, and shall we never attempt to meet it? Accept, then, we entreat you, our invitation to unite with us in renewed effort for Isreal's regeneration. Should we even fail in the attempt, which we have no right to anticipate, it will be a failure in a noble cause—and we shall never regret that it was in our hearts to do good to a people, of whom even a false prophet was constrained truly to say, "Blessed is he that blesseth thee." (Numbers 24: 9.)

But why should we anticipate such failure? We may not indeed accomplish all in one day that we may wish to accomplish, and yet may be the honored instruments of laying out the train of more extended operation, and of reclaiming many a hopeless wanderer from the fold of God, from living and dying in his infidelity.

Having made these statements regarding our duty, and our encouragements to labor in this cause, the Board would now beg leave to commend the whole subject to the prayerful consideration of pastors, and churches, and individuals whom this Circular may reach. The best modes of contributing to the support and enlargement of the operations of the Society, is left entirely to the Christian judgment of our brethren.

By order of the Board,
P. Milledoler, President.
Alex. M. Burrill, Recording Secretary.

CURIOUS TRADITION AMONG THE JEWS.

The following account of a tradition among the Jews respecting their Restoration, is given by Rev. G. Oliver, D. D.

The Jews have a tradition, which is preserved in the Gemera, that in the latter days, when the covenant shall be completed by their restoration, the temple will be rebuilt on Mount Moriah, in a style and magnificence which shall greatly exceed that of the temple of Solomon; and instead of hewn stone, its walls will be constructed of jasper, amethyst, carbuncle, onyx, topaz, chrysolite, sardonyx, and other precious stones; with gates of pearl, walls of jasper, and ornamental decorations of gold and ivory, and enlightened by the glory of God. At the dedication of this gorgeous edifice a grand banquet will be prepared, consisting of every delicacy the world can produce. A leviathan, purposely fattened for the occasion—a female behemoth, of exquisite flavor—and the bird barinchne, a species now extinct, if ever it had an existence, whose wings are of such extent as to obstruct the sun's rays—are named among the provisions of this august feast. Wine from the vaults of Adam and Enoch, preserved miraculously from the time of those patriarchs, so that its flavor increases in richness every age, will be produced in quantities which cannot be exhausted; and all virtuous and worthy Jews, from the time of the deliverance of their forefathers from Egyptian bondage, will be summoned from their graves to be present at feast, which will be attended with a worship more pure and spiritual than any thing that had ever been practiced under any dispensation from the creation of the world.

THE DESIGN OF AFFLICTION.

Many years ago a pious and devoted clergyman entered the shop of a prosperous London bookseller, with whom he was on terms of intimate and Christian friendship. He inquired for his friend, and when told that he was at home, but particularly engaged, sent a messenger to him to the effect that he wanted an interview with him, if but for a few minutes. This message being delivered, the clergyman was invited to walk up stairs into the bookseller's sitting room. He entered the room, and found his friend sitting by his child's cot. The child was dying, but with affection strong in death, it had clasped its father's hand, and was holding it with a convulsive grasp.

"You are a father," said the afflicted parent, "or I should not have allowed you to witness such a scene."

"Thank God, thank God," fervently exclaimed the minister, as he instinctively comprehended at a glance the situation of his friend; "thank God. He has not forgotten you! I have been much troubled on your account, my dear sir. I have thought much about you lately. I have been much afraid for you. Things have gone so well with you for so long a time, you have been so prosperous, that I have been almost afraid that God had forgotten you. But I said to myself, surely God will not forsake such a man as this; will not suffer him to go on so long in prosperity without some check, some reverse! And I see he has not. No; God has not forgotten you."

These were the sentiments of Richard Cecil on the design of affliction; and his friend, Thomas Williams, thankfully and joyfully responded to them. Within three weeks of his death he related the incident as it is related here, and the feeling of his heart was, "He hath done all things well." "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not; But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons."—Heb. xii: 6—8.—Lon. Bap. Mag.

THE BLANKET AND THE ROBE.

It is said that an Indian and a white man being at meeting together, both were struck under conviction by the same sermon. The Indian was shortly after brought to rejoice in pardoning mercy. The white man was for a long time under distress of mind, and at times almost ready to despair; but at length he was also brought to a comfortable experience of forgiving love. Some time afterwards, meeting his red brother, he thus addressed him: "How is it that I should be so long under conviction, when you found comfort so soon?" "O brother," replied the Indian, "me tell you: there come along a rich prince; he promise to give you a new coat, you look at your coat and say, I don't know, my coat pretty good, I believe it will do a little longer. He then give me new coat. I look on my old blanket; I say this good for nothing. I fling it right away and take my new coat. Just so, brother, you try to make your old righteousness do for some time, you loth to give it up; but I poor Indian, had none, therefore I glad to receive at once the righteousness of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Old Psalm Tunes.—There is, to us, more of touching pathos, heart-thrilling expression in some of the old psalm tunes, feelingly displayed, than in a whole batch of modernisms. The strains go home, and the "fountains of the deep are broken up"—the great deep of the unfathomable feeling, that lies far, far below the surface of the world hardened heart; and as the unwonted, yet unchecked tear starts in the eye, the softened spirit yields to their influence, and shakes off the load of earthly care, rising, purified and spiritualized, into a clear atmosphere. Strange, inexplicable associations brood over the mind. "Like the far off dreams of paradise," mingling their chaste melancholy with musings of a still subdued, more cheerful character. How many glad hearts in the olden time have rejoiced in these songs of praise—how many sorrowful ones sighed out of their complaints in these plaintive notes, that steal sadly yet sweetly on the ear—hearts that, now cold in death, are laid to rest around that sacred fane, within whose walls they had so often swelled with emotion!—Blackwood.

Preaching.—"I love a serious preacher, who speaks for my own sake and not his own; who seeks my salvation and not his own vain glory. He best deserves to be heard, who uses speech only to clothe his thoughts, and his thoughts only to promote truth and virtue. Nothing is more detestable than a professed declaimer, who retails his discourses, as a quack does his medicine."—Massillon.

A Ground of Steadfastness.—If I were not penetrated with a conviction of the truth of the Bible, and the reality of my own experience, I should be confounded on all sides—from within and from without—in the world and in the church.—Cecil.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, AUGUST 1, 1844.

From the N. Y. Evangelist of July 25.

LECTURES ON THE INSTITUTION OF THE SABBATH, by the Rev. John S. Stone, D. D. New York: A. V. Blake, 77 Fulton St. 1844.

A series of lectures on the Sabbatical institution, its true design, its universal obligation, and its appropriate duties and benefits. The argument for the change of the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week is remarkably clear and conclusive, furnishing a complete answer to the quibbles of the Seventh-day Baptists, who are so strenuous about observing the Jewish Sabbath, while there is every reason to doubt the coincidence of the Jewish day with the one on which Jehovah rested from the work of creation: for upon this coincidence rests all the argument against the change, which was introduced after the Resurrection. The volume is a beautiful specimen of typographical taste, worthy the excellent instructions which it aims to impart.

We call the foregoing, which we copy from the N. Y. Evangelist, rather a curious account of a new book. Whether Mr. Stone will thank the editor for his notice, more than two thirds of which is given to the "quibbles of the Seventh-day Baptists," we are unable to say. For ourselves, however, we gratefully acknowledge the labors of the Evangelist. We are glad to see, that a paper which was too "orthodox" to publish an advertisement stating that a Seventh-day Baptist paper had been commenced in New York, is not too "orthodox" to speak of that people in language [illegible] increase the spirit of inquiry already awakened in regard to their peculiar views. It is another illustration of the truth, that "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." But there are two or three things in this article, which we own ourselves at a loss to explain.

Our first difficulty is with the expression Jewish Sabbath; what Sabbath is that? We know of but one weekly Sabbath, and that is the one which was instituted in Paradise upon the seventh day, enjoined among the precepts of the Decalogue, and called in the Scriptures "the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." About the observance of that Sabbath we acknowledge ourselves "strenuous." We believe it to be vital to the religious interests of mankind, and we dare not, therefore, be otherwise than strenuous about it. Does the N. Y. Evangelist, in its anathemas against Sabbath-breakers, and its praises of Sabbath-keeping, refer to any other institution than this? If not, we take the liberty to suggest, that it can in no way more surely defeat its own objects, than by attempting in one breath to depreciate the day by calling it Jewish, and in the next to magnify it by referring to the example of God's resting upon it, and to its authority as one of the ten precepts. To pursue this course, is to inflict a deep wound upon an institution dear to every Christian heart—a wound which is deeper and more dangerous, because given by a professed friend.

Our second difficulty is with the assertion, that "there is every reason to doubt the coincidence of the Jewish day with the one on which Jehovah rested from the work of creation." Does the Evangelist mean to say, that the present seventh day is not as likely as either the first day or the fifth day, to be coincident with the one on which Jehovah rested? And if it be as likely, then what means the assertion that there is every reason to doubt it? This is a boldness and looseness of assertion unbecoming one who speaks on a theological question. But we believe the seventh day is much more likely than any other to be coincident with that on which Jehovah rested. The Scriptures speak of reckoning by sevens very early. Noah observed a period of seven days in sending the raven and dove from the ark; the term week is used in the contract between Jacob and Laban; Joseph mourned seven days for his father; and Job observed the period of seven days. These facts can only be accounted for by supposing that this mode of reckoning time commenced with the first Sabbath, and continued from that time forward. But, supposing the reckoning to have been lost between the first Sabbath and the time of giving the law, the fact that the Lord fixed upon the seventh day then and called it the Sabbath, ought to put an end to these "quibbles" about the coincidence of the day. From that period until the coming of Christ, or even until the present time, the practice of the Jewish people has been a continual testimony to the seventh day—a testimony which our divine Redeemer confirmed by his custom of observing that day. And it ought to be noted here, that no men more than some observers of the first day, and no periodical more than the N. Y. Evangelist, has strenuously advocated the perpetuity of the institution, and the divine authority of the day. What else is this assertion, then, than an attempt to throw dust into the eyes of those who might otherwise see plainly?

Our third difficulty is with the assertion, that "upon this coincidence rests all the argument against the change, which was introduced after the resurrection." In answer, we may be permitted to say, that the argument against the change does not rest at all upon this coincidence. The argument of the Seventh-day Baptists is simply this: That God from the beginning sanctified the seventh day for the Sabbath; that he enforced it by the fourth commandment; and that there is not one word in the Scriptures of the Old or New Testaments which speaks of the change of the Sabbath from that day. The difference, then, between an observer of the seventh day and an observer of the first day is not a difference of reckoning. Both reckon Saturday to be the seventh day of the week; one keeps the seventh day holy as the seventh day, the other keeps the first day holy as the first day. For a man to declare, therefore, that the argument against the change rests upon a coincidence of the present seventh day with that on which Jehovah rested, indicates woful ignorance or wilful misrepresentation.

In conclusion, we will say, that so far is Mr. Stone's book from furnishing a complete answer to the argument of the Seventh-day Baptists, that the writer himself says, after speaking of the Sabbath Tracts which have lately been published, "These Lectures can not be considered an attempt to answer the argument of those Tracts." How far the Lectures go towards answering the argument, we shall endeavor to show in a future number.

SYSTEM IN GIVING.

Few rightly estimate the importance of systematic giving for benevolent objects. While the necessity of system, in order to the accumulation of wealth, and the certainty that this, united with industry, will secure it, is universally acknowledged, most Christians allow themselves to pass along for weeks and months with scarcely a thought about disposing of what they have accumulated. If an object is presented, and its claims eloquently urged, they may be induced to open their hands. But it is only to close them again until another powerful appeal awakens in them a sense of obligation, and draws forth their contributions. The consequences of this are in many respects disastrous. It leads contributors to act more under the influence of feeling than of principle. It leads [illegible] of benevolent enterprises, to trumpet each the merits of his own object with an earnestness not at all proportioned to its real importance. It creates a difficulty in maintaining any but the popular organizations, and interposes an almost insurmountable barrier to the spread of unwelcome truths, however wholesome and necessary. In short, it puts an end to cheerful giving; sets the left hand to proclaiming to the right what it has been doing; and makes the whole business of contributing for benevolent purposes one of worldly policy rather than religious duty.

Now how is this difficulty to be obviated? We believe there is no better way than by inculcating the duty of individuals to adopt some uniform plans for benevolent action and carry them out. Those who do this, will in most cases be able to do more than any others; they will always have it in their power to do something; and they will be able to decide deliberately as to what objects have the greatest claims upon them.

We are not of the number who believe that men make themselves poorer, and diminish their comforts, by such a course as is here recommended. The promises of Scripture have been confirmed by the histories of individuals; and the number is large of those who can testify, that "The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." Carefulness and economy easily supply the deficiency which liberality may seemingly have made; and "the blessing of God, which maketh rich," will repay ten fold all the care and labor. Add to this the influence of pursuing this course upon his own character, in strengthening and developing it, and forming it after the model of Scripture; and who, in view of these considerations, would wish to be excused from the duty of contributing?

But there are some persons who ask for facts to sustain the theory of the importance of system in giving. Facts are at hand. Here is one:—A pious merchant in Boston, connected with a Baptist church, while yet a young man, resolved that by the grace of God he would give one fourth of the net profits of his business to charitable and religious uses. This was done systematically and faithfully, until he closed his life at the age of thirty-six years. On his death bed, he said to a friend, "By the grace of God—nothing else—by the grace of God, I have been enabled, under the influence of this resolution, to give away more than $40,000." Here is a practical illustration of the power of systematic contributions. Who would not prefer, in his last hours, to reflect upon these $40,000 thus expended, to seeing around him ten times that amount for thankless children to quarrel about?

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CENTRAL ASSOCIATION.

We have received a copy of the Minutes of this Association, from which we learn that it met with the church in De Ruyter, N. Y., June 5, 1844. Elder Varnum Hull preached the introductory discourse; Eld. Eli S. Bailey was chosen Moderator. The session seems to have been harmonious, and a number of resolutions were discussed with considerable interest. Resolutions were passed, approving of the correspondence with our brethren in England conducted by the former Secretary; recommending the churches to form Tract Societies for the purpose of disseminating Gospel truth; referring the question of representation to Conference, whether directly from the churches or through the Association, to the churches, for their action thereupon before the next session; directing the Corresponding Secretary, in case the law exempting Sabbath-keepers from military and civil duties on the Sabbath shall be found defective, to prepare a petition covering the whole ground; expressing the views of the Association in regard to the present movements in favor of closing the canals on the first day of the week; recommending all the ministers of the Association to lay the subject of Missions and the Tract cause before their churches; responding to the resolution of the General Conference against slavery.

A plan for Missionary Operations was reported, recommending the holding of a semi-annual meeting in January, to hear reports, devise plans for future operations, and awaken an interest in the cause of Missions. The meeting for January next was appointed with the 3d church in Brookfield.

The Association continued its sessions until the first day of the week, when it adjourned, to meet next with the church in Adams.

SABBATH CONVENTION—A RESPONSE.

The proposition of "The Liberator" for a Convention to be held in Boston, or some other public place, "for the purpose of discussing the Sabbath question, pro and con, and to adopt some efficient plan for agitating the nation," is one which strikes my mind favorably. The friends of the first day have for some time past been making unusual efforts, in the way of Conventions, invoking legislative aid, &c., to promote its observance. That they have a right to make these extra efforts, so far as they shall not interfere with the equal rights of others, will not probably be denied by any one. Nevertheless, it always appears to me that there is a lack of modesty in calling upon men indiscriminately to keep holy the Sunday, until it is first established beyond all doubt that God has constituted it holy. From the manner in which they usually address community, one would suppose that the holiness of the first day of the week was a thing universally conceded to them. But in this they are most egregiously mistaken. For it is called in question not only by those who religiously honor the seventh day of the week, but also by others constituting a very large class, whose conscientiousness in the matter it would be a breach of that charity which "hopeth all things," to doubt. It therefore strikes me, that while Conventions to promote the observance of the so-called "Christian Sabbath" are the order of the day, it would be much more in accordance with propriety, as well as modesty, so far to defer to the judgment of others, as to make first in the order that Convention which shall thoroughly discuss what is so summarily taken for granted, viz: whether the day which calls forth all these movements in its favor, possesses any holiness by divine appointment. This certainly lies at the bottom of the whole business. For while a respectable portion of community are firm in the persuasion that the seventh day, to the exclusion of all others, is holy; and another very large portion just as firm in the persuasion that no day at all is holy; and still another very large class of persons that have no settled conviction on the subject, but still are totally unable to see the point and force of that reasoning by which they are denounced as wicked sinners for not keeping the Sunday, it is the most reasonable of all things that the very question which lies at the foundation of the subject, be laid open to inspection. Such as doubt the holiness of the first day of the week, have a right to know why it is that they are thus urgently pressed to yield it a sacred regard. They have a right to know why its defenders are perpetually invoking legislative aid, thus forcing upon them a thing for which they feel no inward respect. They have an undoubted right to know the reasons of these things; and if the observers of Sunday are not willing to satisfy them on these points, they need not be surprised if their efforts in its favor prove as abortive as they have hitherto done. It is vain for them to flatter themselves that there is no need of discussing the subject. There is need. That large class of persons, over whose errors there is so much professed lamentation, know that there is need, and will never feel satisfied until the duty of sanctifying any particular day, is presented to their understanding as plainly as the law which says, Thou shalt not steal.

I do not suppose that such a Convention as that proposed by the Liberator can, or ought to, settle the question for the consciences of others; but, on the contrary, let the result of its proceedings be what it may, that every man should still think, and act, as feeling that he must give account for himself unto God. But I do suppose, that by giving free scope to discussion, and by having the reports, speeches, &c., of the assembly accurately given, much light may be thrown on the subject, and the restraints now imposed upon the free progress of divine truth, weakened, if not broken.

I shall be glad to see such a response to the proposition of the Liberator as will insure the gathering of the Convention. I think it ought to be held in the early part of October, anticipating the National Sunday Convention which it is proposed to hold in Baltimore in November.

UNUS.

UNION COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The Anniversaries of Union College were held last week, and were in a high degree interesting. An address was given on Sunday P. M. by the Rev. Mr. Kennedy, before the Theological Society. The address which was to have been given to the "Senate," was not delivered in consequence of the ill health of their orator, Charles Eames, Esq. The oration before the Phi Beta Kappa Society on Tuesday, by Hon. W. H. Seward, was an enlarged and statesman-like view of the Condition and Prospects of the American Union, and was followed by a Poem from the Rev. Dr. Messler of New Jersey. Next followed the annual meeting of the Alumni, "to take coffee together." Speeches were made by Dr. Sweetman, the first graduate of the college, Dr. Eddy of New Jersey, Bishop Doane, Ex-Gov. Seward, Prof. Lewis of N. Y. University, Prof. Eaton of Hamilton, Prof. Bartlett of Poughkeepsie, and other distinguished graduates of this college. Prof. Potter stated that there had been 2500 Alumni, of whom 2000 are now living, and dispersed from the Rocky Mountains to the "Celestial Empire"—that the next year would bring the fiftieth anniversary of the college, when their affectionate Alma Mater invites them all home, old and young, father and son, all to meet as brothers at the old homestead. Preparations will be made for a glorious gathering, and it will be one of the most remarkable literary festivals ever held in this country. The exercises of Tuesday concluded with a very able address before the literary societies by John Thompson, Esq., of New York, on the Influence of Literature, which was thrillingly eloquent. The commencement exercises on the day following were very creditable to the graduating class, and evinced a good degree of talents. The Schenectady Lyceum has recently been connected with the college, under the name of the Union College Grammar School, and Wm. Kelly, A. M., one of the tutors of the college, has joined the former principal in its management. From what we know of the principals, we are confident that it will take a high rank among the Academies of the State.

LENOX.

A SHORT WAY

WITH AN OBSERVER OF THE FIRST DAY AS A SABBATH.

[An actual Dialogue between an Episcopal Minister of New York and a Sabbath-keeper.]

Quest. Did Jehovah ever sanctify one day above another?

Ans. He did.

Q. And what day was that?

A. The Seventh.

Q. When?

A. When he finished his Creative work.

Q. Where?

A. In Eden.

Q. On whom was it obligatory?

A. On our first parents and all their posterity.

Q. Did he ever unsanctify that day?

A. No.

Then you may live in rebellion and reap the fruits of it; through mercy I will not.

Q. Did he ever sanctify the first, or any other day than the seventh, as a day of rest?

A. Not that I know of.

Then you may go on observing days, and weeks, and months, and years, and fall under the reproof of the Apostle Paul, "I am afraid of you," &c.

ALPHA.

Sweedesboro, N. J.

From the Morning Star.

SIN IS A TRANSGRESSION OF THE LAW—Not only doing that which the law forbids, but also neglecting to do that which it commands; "For he that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin; and he that knoweth his Master's will and doeth it not, shall be beaten with many stripes." Think on that, ye neglecters of duty. "The wages of sin is death."

Very true; then "why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?" The commandment of God says, "The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." Now for a man to work on the seventh day, though he may rest on the first, "is a transgression of the law." "Think on that," too. "The wages of sin is death."

MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE.

The Missionary Herald for August contains several interesting items of missionary intelligence.

A letter from the Sandwich Islands states that protracted meetings had been held at Kaneoke and at Honolulu, which led to considerable additions to the churches, and a great increase of supplication and diligence. Meetings had also been held in the other islands with pleasing results. It is said, however, that some who had joined the churches, taking offence at their strictness, had gone over to popery. The change which has taken place in these islands since the introduction of Christianity, affords gratifying evidence of the power of the Gospel.

At Athens, Greece, the number of hearers had doubled within a few months, and a growing interest was manifested.

Among the Armenians some interesting facts had occurred. "The Lord is beginning a good work at all the principal seats of Armenian influence in Asia Minor."

Mr. Winslow writes from Madras, that several had been added to the church. The baptism of a young Brahmin, by the missionaries of the Scotch Free Church, had given rise to some excitement, and led to the withdrawal of many children from the mission schools. It was thought that the storm would soon pass away.

MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE.—Brother R. C. Bond writes under date of July 15, that he is still in the field of labor traveling throughout his circuit, according to his instructions, in Virginia and part of Pennsylvania. There is good attention on this circuit, and a better prospect for the future. The field he travels over is large, and the immediate fruits can hardly be expected, without more labor. But the labor of one man is greatly calculated to encourage the small and scattered flocks.

W. B. GILLETT, Rec. Sec.

ITEMS.

FRUITS.—We learn that Mr. Sable Rogers, of Springfield, Mass., was brought before a justice on the 15th of July, on a charge of violating the Lord's day in mowing, making hay, &c. Mr. Rogers was fined $10 and the costs of the court, and was put under $100 bonds for good behaviour and to keep the peace in future. If this be a "fruit" of the present movements in favor of the first-day of the week, it ought to be pondered by those who would not welcome the return of blue law days. A strange kind of consistency it is, for men to use the punishment which was originally inflicted upon Sabbath-breakers as an objection to the perpetual sanctity of the seventh-day, and yet to inflict punishments upon those who disregard the first-day. We fear that nothing else than power is wanting, to make some of the leaders of these movements into religious despots. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

"BE NOT YE CALLED RABBI."—Our exchange papers just at this time contain numerous accounts of college commencements, at nearly every one of which the degree of "D. D." is stated to have been conferred on some of the ministers of Christ. If these degrees were conferred chiefly upon such as have proved themselves "greatest" by becoming "the servants of all," they would be less objectionable than under the present system, which gives them, in many cases, to those who are least disposed to serve any body except themselves. It is to be hoped, that the multiplication of these titled dignitaries of the church will prove the best means of curing the evil.

FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—The history of the Free church of Scotland affords a happy illustration of the power of the voluntary principle. It was recently stated in the House of Commons, that 580 ministers, 2,900 elders, and nearly 1,000,000 of people had withdrawn from the church establishment, and had built 580 houses of public worship during the past year.

RECANTATION.—The Edinburgh Witness of June 26, states that three Roman Catholic priests in Ireland have within the last three months left the Catholic church and embraced the Protestant faith. One of these was Rev. John O'Brien, curate at Kilkee.

FIRST OF AUGUST.—This Anniversary day of British West India Emancipation is to be celebrated with unusual demonstrations of joy and gratitude. Great gatherings are expected at Hingham, Mass., at New Bedford, at Concord, and in various places throughout the country. The event is one which will ever be regarded as a brilliant triumph of the principles of Justice, and it ought to render the day illustrious to the end of time.

GENERAL BAPTISTS IN ENGLAND.—It is known to some that the General Baptist Churches in England have been for a long time in a languishing condition. Their annual Association was held in the latter part of June, at which time, it is said, the reports from the churches were cheering. They have agreed to send a missionary to the north of China.

COST OF RELIGIOUS ESTABLISHMENTS.—A pamphlet recently published in England, states that the Established Church in England, Wales, and Ireland, embraces 6,400,000 people, and that its clergy receive £8,896,000. The clergy of all the other denominations in the same countries, embracing a population of 14,600,000, receive only £1,024,000. The expense of sustaining the clergy in all the other countries in Christendom, including the United States, France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Austria, Prussia, German Small States, Holland, Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Russia, &c., with a population of 198,728,000, is estimated at £8,852,000.

WHAT CHILDREN HAVE DONE.—A good deal has been said about the efforts of the children in England to raise money enough to pay for a Missionary ship. It seems that the object has been accomplished, and that the ship has sailed for the South Seas with a cargo of Missionaries. Blessings on the children, and success to the children's Missionary ship.

MISSIONARY CONVENTIONS.—A Convention was held in Syracuse, about two weeks since, to deliberate upon the interests of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Among the subjects discussed we notice the following:—How can a spirit of prayer in behalf of missions be awakened, and the interest in the monthly concert increased? How can more general and copious missionary intelligence be diffused?—The Convention was numerously attended, and its discussions were spirited and interesting. Other Conventions of a similar character were to have been held in Oswego, Buffalo, Geneva, and Ithaca, during the past month.

IGNORANCE AND SUFFERING.—It is stated that there are 60,000 adults in London, who never enter a place of worship, except at a marriage or funeral; 12,000 adults cannot read; 14,000 families have not a solitary fragment of the Word of God; 25,000 go to no school whatever; and some 70 or 80,000 know not in the morning where they shall procure their daily bread.

General Intelligence.

LETTER FROM CHINA.

The following letter from Mr. Cushing was written to the editor of the Commercial Advertiser, and is dated

MACAO, March 18, 1844.

I arrived here safe and well in the Brandywine, on the 24th ult. and Mr. Webster the same. We tarry here until the monsoon will permit us to proceed North towards the "Heavenly Court."

Our country and countrymen are in high favor in China; and, if nothing else occurs to interrupt my endeavors, I am confident of success in negotiating with this Government.

The newspapers will have informed you that Dr. Bridgeman and Dr. Parker are joint interpreters of legation. It ought to be understood, in addition, that Dr. Bridgeman is chaplain of the legation in title and in fact. I have deemed it essential to have religious services performed at the residence of the legation every Lord's day, and shall adhere to the practise so long as my mission lasts.

I have had a very interesting journey to this place through part of Egypt, Arabia and India; and hope, if I live to return home, to bring with me some fruits of my expedition, in knowledge and experience, if nothing else.

I am now diligently employed in the studies and correspondence of the legation, so that no time is lost by the sojourn at Macao.

I am, very truly and respectfully, yours, &c.

C. CUSHING.

Late from Mexico.—The United States Revenue Cutter Woodbury, arrived at New Orleans on the 22d ult., in eight days from Vera Cruz, bringing despatches from the United States Charge d'Affaires at the city of Mexico to our government. We are indebted to the Tropic for the following items of intelligence:—

The Woodbury left Vera Cruz the 12th ult., whither she had been dispatched to receive and bring to New Orleans the 4th instalment of the Mexican indemnity; but having waited one month, and receiving official information that there was no prospect of its being paid for a long time, Capt. Foster deemed it proper and expedient to return.

News of the rejection of the Treaty of the United States Senate, was received at Vera Cruz, via Campeachy, on the 10th ult. It was immediately forwarded by express to Mexico. The news gave great joy at Vera Cruz, and a revival of American business was expected from it.

The "vomito" was raging at Vera Cruz, but considered of milder type than for many seasons previous. It was attributed to early heavy rains, which were incessant every night.

The Mexicans are building a new custom-house, and repairing the mole of the port.

General Santa Anna's orders for all officers on leave to report immediately for active duty, on pain of dismissal, had been published.

The requisition of the President for 30,000 troops and $4,000,000 had been granted, after some tardy but warm discussion in Congress.

The Electric Telegraph.—The application of this new discovery, which secures the transmission of human thoughts with the rapidity of light to points most distant, is beginning to be extensively made both in France and England. The Orleans Railway Company, in France, have nearly completed the construction of a Telegraph along their line.

"THE LIVING-DEAD," a new religious sect, has been founded by a young lady in the town of Coventry, Conn., who has persuaded herself and others that recently, while under the influence of an opiate, she died and went to Heaven. She describes her alledged adventures in the world of spirits to scores of visitors daily, and finds many believers.

...Witness of June 26,
...arrests in Ireland have
...Catholic church and
...of these was Rev.

...day of British
...celebrated with unusu-
...Great gatherings
...at New Bedford, at Con-
...throughout the country. The
...be regarded as a brilliant
...justice, and it ought to
...of time.

...It is known to some ...Churches in England have been
...condition. Their annual
...latter part of June, at which
...from the churches were cheer-
...a missionary to the north

...ARLIAMENTS.—A pamphlet re-
...states that the Established
...and Ireland, embraces 6,400,
...revenue £8,896,000. The ...communications in the same coun-
...of 14,600,000, receive only
...sustaining the clergy in all
...kingdom, including the United
...al, Italy, Austria, Prussia,
...Netherlands, Denmark
...population of 198,728,000, is

...—A good deal has been
...children in England to ra-
...missionary ship. It seems
...accomplished, and that the ship
...with a cargo of Missionaries
...success to the children's.

...A Convention was held
...since, to deliberate upon
...Board of Commissioners for
...other subjects discussed we no-
...spirit of prayer in behalf
...the interest in the monthly
...general and copious
...diffused?—The Convention
...its discussions were spirit-
...Conventions of a similar char-
...in Oswego, Buffalo, Geneva,
...south.

...It is stated that there are
...or never enter a place of
...or funeral; 12,000 adults
...have not a solitary fragment
...go to no school whatever,
...out in the morning where
...red.

Intelligence.

...FROM CHINA.

...From Mr. Cushing was
...Commercial Advertiser,

...Macao, March 18, 1844.
...in the Brandywine,
...Webster the same. We ...soon will permit us to
...the "Heavenly Court,"
...are in high favor
...also occurs to interrupt
...of success in nego-
...informed you that
...are joint interpre-
...to be understood, in ad-
...the chaplain of the lega-
...I have deemed it essen-
...performed at the res-
...Lord's day, and shall
...as my mission lasts.
...journey to this
...Arabia and India,
...home, to bring with
...tion, in knowledge
...employed in the studies
...legation, so that
...Macao.
...ectfully, yours, &c.
...C. CUSHING.

...United States Reve-
...at New Orleans on
...from Vera Cruz, bring-
...United States Charge
...to our government
...for the following
...Cruz the 12th ult.
...to receive and
...instalment of the
...waited one month,
...that there was
...a long time, Capt.
...to return.
...Treaty of the Uni-
...at Vera Cruz, was
...was immediately
...The news gave
...revival of American
...Vera Cruz, that
...for many seasons
...heavy rains,
...custom-house,
...officers on
...duty, on pain
...for 30,000
...granted, after
...Congress

MORE TROUBLES ON THE MANOR OF RENSSELAERWICK.—We are informed by our correspondent, that on Wednesday of last week Mr. Deputy Sheriff Allen, of Lansingburgh, summoned a posse of some thirty citizens of Troy, and started for Stephentown for the purpose of serving process upon some of the tenants who were in arrears for rent. When near the line of Stephentown, and passing near a small piece of woods, they were surrounded by a company amounting to one hundred and ten in number, disguised completely in Indian costume, and armed with rifles, tomahawks, and scalping knives. They stopped the company, unharnessed their horses, and turned them loose.—The Deputy and the whole company underwent a thorough search, and weapons of every kind were taken from them, while their money and papers were returned. The papers found on the Deputy were burned before them. The Deputy was marched a short distance into the woods and treated to a coat of tar and feathers. The whole company, with the Deputy at the head, was then marched a mile and a half through thick dust, surrounded by the Indians whooping and flourishing their weapons on every side, to the village, where they received from the chief an address, accompanied with an admonition not to visit their territory again on similar business. The pistols and other weapons were again returned and the company dismissed. The Indians then discharged their rifles by companies, which, with now and then a report from the cannon, gave the whole scene a warlike appearance.

It is said that Gov. Bouck has declined to accede to the requisitions of the Sheriff of Rensselaer county for military aid in the present state of affairs.

DIFFICULTIES IN DELAWARE COUNTY.—The Post of Friday last, gives an account of similar difficulties that have recently occured in Delaware County, as follows:—

Immense tracts of land in Delaware county, divided into farms, are held by tenants under perpetual leases on the payment of small annual rents. The attempt to collect these rents has been lately withstood, and an organized system of resistance, a sort of Anti-Rent League, much like that which prevailed in the Helderberg tract three or four years since, has been adopted.

A letter which we have lately seen, states that a very general understanding prevails among the tenants not to submit to the collection of these rents. A set of regulations has been drawn up, disguises have been procured and are kept ready by the tenants, and whenever a horn is sounded in the region, it is a token that the officers of the law are engaged in the collection of rents, and the conspirators assemble in their disguise to prevent by any means of annoyance, or by force, if necessary, the execution of legal process. No person is allowed to blow a dinner horn on any other occasion, and if a housewife should be so indiscreet as to use this method of calling laborers from the field at noon, the anti-rent-leaguers come in a crowd and eat up the dinner prepared for her family.

This association is said to extend over all the leasehold lands in the counties of Delaware, Schoharie, Green, Ulster and Sullivan. Those who are engaged in it, says the letter, pretend that it has yet wider limits, that it embraces all the leasehold tracts in forty-two counties in the State, and that a fund of seventy thousand dollars has been collected, and placed in one of the banks of this State, for such purposes as may become necessary in the prosecution of their plan. Whatever truth there may be in the rumors, there is no doubt that the combination is an extensive and formidable one. Many of the persons engaged in it are opulent farmers; their plans are laid with method, and followed out with determination, and the more peaceful and submissive among the tenants are overawed and carried along by the majority.

Long Island Rail Road.—This great work, connecting the eastern end of Long Island with Brooklyn, has been completed and opened to the public. On Saturday last, a large party of stockholders and others celebrated the opening of the Road by a trip to the eastern terminus at Greenport. The road is 95 miles long. The time occupied by the first train, in passing over it was 3 hours and 35 minutes, being at the rate of about 27 miles per hour. A portion of the distance was done at the rate of 48 miles per hour. The road is said to be level, without curves, and better calculated for high speed than any other in the country. Three hours is named as the regular time for passing over it. By this means Boston will be brought within nine hours of New York. The smoothness of the road, and the beauty and convenience of the cars, is said to equal any in the Union.

Mr. Torrey's Case.—A good deal of interest has been felt in the case of this gentleman, who has been for some time in prison at Baltimore. The following statement of the case we copy from the Emancipator.

It all lies in a nutshell. Torrey went to Baltimore, to get into business for the support of his family. He succeeded in forming an arrangement to go into partnership with a couple of men, in the manufacture of starch, and had sent for his family to come on and live with him at Baltimore. He is now imprisoned on an executive requisition from Virginia, and on a complaint in Maryland, the latter to be tried in October. The only charge laid against him in both cases is that of counseling and assisting negro slaves to escape from their masters. For a slave to escape from bondage is not a crime, by any law, human or divine. Of course, counseling or aiding a slave to escape cannot be a crime within the constitution of the United States, or any other constitution or law whatever. That's the whole case. The only difficulty about it is its extreme simplicity, and the novelty of the question in our courts. Westminster Hall would not hear an argument on so plain a proposition.

On the 23d ult., a man named Collier, residing in Maiden Creek Township, Pa., fell from the swingle tree of his wagon, which he was using as a step to mount his horse, and as he lay in the road the wheels of the vehicle passed over his neck, causing instant death.

American Productions in England.—It will not escape observation that the Americans continue to pour in their farming produce upon us. We have, in the list of the Prince Albert's cargo, 1554 packages of lard, 1508 packages of cheese, and 540 packages of cured beef, all of them commodities that may be supplied by our own people in the most ample abundance and perfection. We have also a further importation of clocks, chairs, brooms, and biscuits, so that, while thousands of poor people are roaming about the country in search of employment, many of whom have been deprived of it in consequence of the sinking condition of our native agriculture, the Americans have the privilege of serving us not only in the character of butchers, bakers, cheesemongers, and the like, upon a large scale, but of becoming our clock, broom and chair makers. The contents of 1150 packages of merchandise, of which no particulars are given, may be believed to comprehend a variety of things, the importation of which from foreign countries interferes directly with English industry.—London Post.

Another Giant.—The Medical Journal gives an account of Nathan Lampman, who was born at Coxsackie, N. Y. and is now sixteen years of age, and stands seven feet one half inch in height! Dr. Smith says, "he is a great, tall, awkward, good natured, sixteen years old boy, whose chin has never been smoothed by a razor, and who bids fair, being still actually growing, to reach another foot. In the last year he positively declares that he grew nine inches! At present his weight is 198 pounds. The body is stilted up by a pair of the longest legs, prehaps, on the Western continent, whose base is a pair of feet fourteen inches from heel to toe! Nathan is a sight worth seeing. Should his life be spared, we may fully expect that he will ultimately eclipse all the giants of modern times, for every thing is in his favor, viz: youth, health, good habits, and a desire to outgrow all the descendants of Adam."

Fatal Accident.—The train of passenger cars which left Utica on Friday morning last at 2 o'clock, after proceeding about three miles was stopped in consequence of the wheels slipping on the rails, and while thus detained was run into by a train of wood cars, which followed them about half an hour after the passenger train left the depot. The concussion was very severe. The rear car of the first train was much broken, and the collector, Mr. Smith, was crushed between the end of the car and the locomotive of the wood train. A little girl about 10 or 11 years of age, the daughter of an emigrant, was killed by a piece of wood or iron which entered her eye and came out at the back of the head. Mr. Smith lived till about 8 o'clock in the morning. There was a dense fog at the time of the collision, which prevented either of the trains being seen from the other. The car of the passenger train which was run into, was filled with emigrants, and it is wonderful that there was no greater loss of life.

A New Subsoil Plow.—We saw, a few days since, says the Boston Cultivator, a subsoil plow of novel construction, and designed and made by Capt. Chandler. It is well constructed for strength, for running steady and keeping its true position with very little labor of the plowman and for a thorough and deep pulverization of the soil, with a moderate drought. It will run fifteen inches deep below the wake of another plow. He has subsoiled several acres with this plow, running from twelve to fifteen inches deep after a common plow that went six inches deep. The soil was clayey, full of small stones, and now and then one of good size. A team of three horses was amply sufficient, and some over an acre was plowed in a day, leaving the soil so light that it was difficult to walk on it.

Cotton Factory Burnt.—The Pochassett Cotton Factory, situated in Cranston, on the middle road to East Greenwich, four miles from Providence, R. I. was burnt down on Wednesday afternoon last; the fire was first discovered in the picker-room, where it made so much headway that all attempts to extinguish it were unavailing. The factory contained 1,000 spindles. Nothing was saved. It was insured at the Providence Washington Insurance Office, for $1,500. The house and store near by, took fire a number of times, in several places, but by great exertions they were saved. The loss was about $5,000.

Fire in Brooklyn.—A disastrous fire occurred in Brooklyn on Thursday last, which destroyed an extensive carpet manufactory, employing about 200 hands, together with twenty or thirty tenements in the vicinity. About 50 families were rendered houseless by the disaster. They were fortunate enough in most instances to save their furniture from the flames, but it was a pitiable sight to see it piled up in promiscuous heaps in the street, broken and shattered or trodden under foot by the unthinking spectators. The amount of property destroyed is variously estimated, but it cannot fall short of $120,000.

An old Jersey Blue Gone.—Cornelius Wells died on Sunday evening at his residence in Washington, near Princeton, aged 94. He was in the battle of Trenton and Princeton, in the last of which he received a bayonet wound which the Whig says, affected him to the end of his life. He was in the frigate Confederacy when it was taken, and was sent to a British prison ship in New York, from which he was released in the Autumn of 1781. He continued in service to the end of the war, and received an honorable discharge. [Newark Daily Advertiser.]

Great Haul of Fish.—A seine was drawn at Narragansett Pier last Wednesday, containing the largest number of fish of any haul on record in that part of the State, so famous for piscatory enterprise. It was found necessary to place smaller seines within the large one to relieve it, and when our informant left about 1,600,000 manhaden had been landed, and it was supposed that 400,000 remained to be drawn ashore. The seine belonges to Jonathan N. Hazard and Thurston Robinson. [Providence Journal.

The Atlantic and Pacific.—By an arrival at Key West, a few days since, of a vessel from the Spanish Main, we learn that the French Government have been actively engaged for the last two months in the laying of rails, grading, and otherwise making preparations for a steam conveyance from Porto Bello to Panama, thus connecting the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and doing away for the present any intent upon cutting a canal at the Isthmus. [St. Augustine News, July 23.

Explosion.—On Thursday morning about half past five o'clock, one of the drying houses attached to the powder manufactory of the Messrs. Dupont, on the Brandywine, Delaware, exploded, killing two men who were on the premises at the time. There were about 4,000 pounds of powder in the house at the time of the explosion.

SUMMARY.

The steamer John Hull, from St. Joseph's, arrived here last evening, having on board two hundred passengers—many of whom were driven from their homes by the flood, and are returning to the old States, from which they originally emigrated; several of them have lost their all, and are almost destitute—others are carrying with them the scanty remains of their property.

The Missouri river is falling very rapidly. [St. Louis Rep. 17th inst.

A late census of Montreal makes the whole population 44,531. Of these, 29,280 are put down to the church of Rome. The census reports 400 Baptists.

Samuel White, of Licking county, and the Whig candidate for Congress in the Columbus District, died at Delaware, Ohio, on the 20th ult., where he had been lying sick since the first of the month.

A letter from Auburn, July 25th, says: "Out of nine hundred convicts now in the State Prison, seven hundred were sick with the cholera morbus. On Wednesday last only one hundred days' work was performed by the whole of the inmates."

A French traveler in Egypt has sent a valuable present to Paris, consisting of sixty portraits of the Pharaohs in their dynastic order.

At Nantucket on the 24th inst., a young man named Timothy Gorham, son of Mr. Davis Gorham, made an attempt on his life, by stabbing himself in the side twice.

The venerable Thomas Parke, L. L. D. formerly Professor of Languages in the South Carolina College, and we believe, of late Treasurer and Librarian to that institution, died at Winnsboro', S. C. on the 16th inst. in the 80th year of his age.

The pirates of the bark Saladin, at Halifax, have been tried and found guilty—principally upon their own confessions. The names of those convicted are Charles Gustavus Anderson, William Travasgus, George Jones, and William Hazleton. Carr and Galloway were still on trial.

The St. Louis Reveille says that a monument is to be erected on the landing in front of the City Hall there, to be not less than fifteen nor more than twenty feet high, and not less than twenty inches square at the base. Each of its sides to bear a record of the height of the floods of 1785, 1823, 1826 and 1844.

For the arrest of indivduals concerned in the late riots at Philadelphia, Recorder Vaux has issued 37 warrants—8 persons are in prison, 1 has died from a wound received at the hands of one of his fellow rioters, 7 have fled, and 4 have not yet been taken, but are supposed to be still in the neighborhood.

A duel took place on the 11th instant at Grand Gulf, Miss. between two gentlemen. Shot guns, loaded each with three buckshots, were the weapons used. At the first fire both parties were severely, but not dangerously, wounded.

Daniel T. Adams was convicted of manslaughter at New Orleans on the 15th—having kicked an apprentice of 13 years in the left side, so that he died of congestion of the brain.

A few days since a farmer at Marshfield, in Massachusetts, unconsciously threw a load of hay over a nest of new laid eggs, in a farm chamber. The location was near the roof, and exceedingly warm. In three weeks the farmer, while engaged in the loft, heard a chirping, and on removing the hay, found a fine brood of chickens, hatched out by the heat.

By a parliamentary return, lately published, it appears that the duties on patent medicines in Great Baitain, amount to £30,000 per annum.

An altercation on some trifling affair took place in Olneyville yesterday afternoon, between two men named Aaron C. Miller and Robert Jenkins, which ended by the former stabbing the latter in such a manner that his life is despaired of. The subject was of a most trival character. Miller was arrested and is now in prison awaiting his trial, which takes place on Wednesday. [Providence Transcript, July 29.

In 1828, there was not a single mile of railway, (if we except a wooden track in the town of Quincy, Mass. used for the transportation of stone from the quarries,) in all New-England. Now, eight hundred and fifteen miles of Railroad have their termination in Boston. [Brooklyn Star.

Justice Hutchinson, of Kensington, (Pa.) was thrown from his carriage and badly hurt, in consequence of the vehicle being recklessly driven into by a man in a heavy wagon.

The weather has been oppressively hot at Vicksburg and other places on the Mississippi. Several sudden deaths have occurred at Vicksburg.

On Saturday evening last, Robert Leatch, a carpenter, was drowned near the Long Bridge, Baltimore.

POPULATION OF THE UNION.

Pennsylvania,	1,724,024	Mississippi,	375,651
Maine,	501,703	Louisiana,	351,170
New Hampshire,	284,573	Ohio,	1,510,467
Vermont,	295,948	Tennessee,	820,216
Massachusetts,	735,699	Kentucky,	777,397
Rhode Island,	108,830	Indiana,	683,314
Connecticut,	310,010	Illinois,	474,404
New York,	2,428,921	Missouri,	383,702
New Jersey,	373,306	Michigan,	211,705
Delaware,	78,080	Arkansas,	85,642
Maryland,	469,323	Dist. Columbia,	43,744
Virginia,	1,239,797	Florida,	54,207
North Carolina,	753,110	Wisconsin,	30,752
South Carolina,	594,439	Iowa,	43,068
Georgia,	677,197
Alabama,	269,645	Total,	17,100,573

DIED,

In Scott, N. Y., on the 16th of July, Mr. EZRA BABCOCK, aged about 75 years.—The deceased was born in Hopkinton, R. I., in 1769. He embraced religion when about 17 years of age, and united with Eld. Wilcox's church, where he continued his membership for some time, until a difficulty arose among some members of the church, which induced him, with a number of others, to withdraw and unite with Eld. Brown's church in Stonington, Ct., of the first-day Baptist denomination. In 1798 he left Rhode Island, and removed to Leyden, Mass. There being no Seventh-day Baptist Church in that place, he continued to walk with the first-day Baptists. In 1812 he removed to Scott, Cortland Co., N. Y., and was one of the early settlers of that town. He continued his membership in Eld. Brown's church until after the Seventh-day Baptist church was constituted in Scott, of which he became a member, and continued to be a member until he was removed from the church militant to join the church triumphant. Through life he was a strenuous advocate for the Sabbath according to the commandment of God, a firm believer in the doctrines, and a consistent observer of the ordinances of the Gospel of Christ. He has left an aged companion, a large family of children, and a numerous circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss.

LETTERS.

Nathan V. Hull, Thomas B. Brown, Wm. B. Maxson, Andrew Babcock, E. Babcock, Isaac D. Titsworth, Sanford P. Stillman, R. I. S. Rogers, W. B. Gillett.

Postmasters—New York Mills, Smithville, Scott 2, New London, Ct., 2.

RECEIPTS.

Brookfield—Jonathan Babcock, Daniel Brown, Wm. Whitford, C. F. Rogers, $2 each; N. Spencer, James Hills, $1 each.

Scott—J. R. Babcock, Mrs. S. Babcock, $2 each.

Westerly, R. I.—Adam Stillman, Silas Maxson, Sanford Noyes, Elnathan W. Babcock, $2 each; Daniel B. Irish $1,00.

W. C. Kenyon, B. W. Rogers, A. D. Titsworth, Clark Saunders, Rudolph M. Titsworth $2 each.

Le Raysville, Pa.—Richard I. F. Rogers $1.

New Market, N. J.—Pinckham Mosher $2; Jacob R. Titsworth $1.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST GENERAL CONFERENCE will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in VERONA, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference.

PAUL STILLMAN, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having already reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year.

F. W. STILLMAN, Rec. Sec'y.

The Missionary Association will hold its second Anniversary, with the 1st Church in Verona, N. Y., on the Sixth day of the week, before the second Sabbath in September. A Sermon on the subject of Missions will be expected during its session from T. B. BROWN—the time to be determined by the Executive Board. It is desirable that all missionary returns may be made to the Secretary previous to that time.

W. B. GILLETT, Rec. Sec.

The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Society will meet on fifth day, Sept. 14, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Evangelical Board of Directors for Disseminating Religious Truth among the Jews, will meet on first day, Sept. 15, at the call of the President.

A CARD.

THE subscriber wishing to remove to Plainfield, N. J., offers to sell to a Seventh-day Baptist the following desirable property, situated in Shiloh, Cumberland Co., N. J., viz: A new and commodious dwelling-house, with a large store-house attached, being a good stand for country business; a new barn, wagon-house, corn-crib, wood-house, and other out-buildings, all of which have been built within six years, and are in complete order.

Also, a pretty good assortment of Store Goods, such as are generally kept in a Country Store, which are offered at such a price as will make it an object for any one who may wish to locate in this part of New Jersey, and enter into the mercantile business.

Also, a small farm adjoining, consisting of about 24 acres, some of which is in a high state of cultivation, and on which is a newly rebuilt dwelling-house, convenient for two small families, a large apple orchard of choice fruit, and other fruit trees, with a good well of water at the door, &c.

The house and lot, and the Store Goods, will be sold with or without the Farm.

If further information is wanted, address the subscriber.

ISAAC D. TITSWORTH, P. M. Shiloh, N. J.
July 22, 1844.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK.
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H O Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND.
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT.
Waterford—Lester T. Rogers
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY.
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA.
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre — Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA.
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN.
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN.
Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA.
Fredonia, Louisa Co.—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS.
Trivolia, Peoria Co.—James Dunham

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

NEW-YORK MARKET, JULY 29.

At market 1000 Beef Cattle, 350 from the South, 80 Cows and Calves, and 2500 Sheep and Lambs.

PRICES BEEF CATTLE—Market dull. We place best Cattle at 4 50 a $5 50.—Unsold, 300.

COWS AND CALVES—All taken at 13 to $25.

SHEEP AND LAMBS—We quote the former at 1 25 a $4, and the latter at 1 25 a 2 50. 230 unsold.

HAY—New abundant at 50 a 59 cents, and old at 62½ a 75 cts per cwt.

PROVISIONS—Pork is dull. The market stands nominally at 7 62½ and 9 50, with no disposition to operate. Beef is in good demand and steady. About 500 or 600 bbls were taken at 1 12½ a 3 50 for Country and City Prime, and 5 06¼ a 5 50 for Mess.—100 bbls Beef rounds sold at 2 c per ld. We note a sale of 500 kegs Lard at 6¼c, and 60 hhds inferior Smoked Hams at 3½ c. Western Butter is firm and selling freely at 8 a 11 c, and Dutchess and Orange Butter at 15 a 17 cents. Cheese is very dull at 3 a 5 cents.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 00 a 4 06
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	23 00a23 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	28 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liverpool, chal.	7 75 a 8 62
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	— a —
Stripes, fast colors	— a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3¼a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrrh	12½a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¼@
Sarsap'lla, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS.
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS.
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	27 @ 31
FISH.
Dry Cod, cwt	2 72 @ 2 75
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
Smoked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	9 50 @10 00
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	[illegible]
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Buckspt do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass. do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX.
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT.
Raisins, Sun cask	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 31 @ 4 37
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 12 @ 4 25
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	6 00 @ 6 00
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	12 00 @12 50
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	85 @ 95
Do South new	90
Rye, Northern	67 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	45 @ 47
Barley N R	@

Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	85 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A. & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng & Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer.	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do Russ PSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5½a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4¼@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12½@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft]	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinidad, Cuba	28@30
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	8 37 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 37 @ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5½
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½a 7
Trieste	5 a 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, ℔ bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6½a 6
American	5 a [illegible]
Spring	5½a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8½a 9¼
Do Brown	6½a 8¼
Loaf	11 a 11¼
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10 a
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	[illegible]
Castile	9½ a 9¾
SPICES.
Cassia lb	[illegible]
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a [illegible]
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	[illegible]
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	[illegible]
Hyson	[illegible]
Young Hyson	[illegible]
Hyson skin	[illegible]
Souchong	[illegible]
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	[illegible]
Do E. India	[illegible]
Tin plate I X box	[illegible]
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	[illegible]
Do merino	[illegible]
Pulled superfine	[illegible]
No. 1	[illegible]
No. 2	[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

MYSTERIES.

The following beautiful lines are from the "Breviary" of N. P. Willis.

Strange, that the wind should be left so free,
To play with a flower, or tear a tree;
To range or ramble where'er it will,
And, as it lists, to be fierce or still;
Above and around to breathe of life,
Or to mingle the earth and sky in strife;
Gently to whisper, with morning light,
Yet to growl like a fettered fiend at night,
Or to love, and cherish, and bless to-day,
What to-morrow it ruthlessly rends way!

Strange that the sun should call into birth
All the fairest flowers and fruits of earth,
Then bid them perish, and see them die,
While they cheer the soul and gladden the eye,
At morn, its child is the pride of spring—
At night, a shriveled and loathsome thing!
To-day, there is hope and life in its breath,
To-morrow it shrinks to a useless death.
Strange doth it seem that the sun should joy
To give life, alone, that it may destroy.
Or cherish it all the way it must roam,
To leave it a wreck within sight of home;
To smile as the mariner's toils are o'er,
Then wash the dead to the cottage door;
And gently ripple along the strand,
To watch the widow behold him land!

But, stranger than all, that man should die,
When his plans are formed and his hopes are high;
He walks forth a lord of the earth to-day,
And the morrow beholds him a part of its clay;
He is born in sorrow and cradled in pain,
And from youth to age—it is labor in vain;
And all that seventy years can show,
Is, that wealth is trouble, and wisdom, woe;
That he travels a path of care and strife,
Who drinks of the poisoned cup of life!

Alas! if we murmur at things like these,
That reflection tells us are wise decrees;
That the wind is not ever a gentle breath—
That the sun is often the bearer of death—
That the ocean wave is not always still—
That life is chequered with good and ill;
If we know 'tis well that such change should be,
What do we learn from the things we see?
That an erring and sinning child of dust
Should not wonder nor murmur—but hope and trust.

For the Recorder.

THE THUGS.

The RELIGIOUS BELIEF of the Thugs is the foundation of their whole system; or rather, it is at once quarry and foundation—the rock of which and upon which it is built. The strength of that belief is shown in the fact, that it binds together in a common league and worship two things so opposite and elsewhere irreconcilable as Hindooism and Mohammedanism. The Mussulman Thug, whose religion affirms and re-affirms the unity and spirituality of the Deity, with a pertinacity of iteration scarcely paralleled by the Hebrew Scriptures themselves, offers to Kalee the same homage and worship as the Hindoo, with his multiform, multitudinous, and monstrous divinities.

OMENS.—Not only do they hold that their association was in its outset appointed by Kalee, but they regard themselves as the ministers of her will, and acting under her express guidance and direction. They believe that she manifests her pleasure to them by omens, which, if implicitly regarded, will always insure success. These omens, like the auguries of the ancients, are derived mainly from the appearance and voices of different birds and animals; of these some are always good, others always bad; some good or bad as they proceed from the right hand or the left, or according to the hour at which they are heard. Thus, a lizard chirping, or a crow cawing from a living tree, or a partridge, are good omens; while a hare crossing the road before them, the voice of a crow from a rock, or a dead tree, an ass, or a jackal, are all bad omens. The omen as heard from the right they call the Thibaoo, that from the left, the Pilkaoo. If, when about to set out on an expedition, the latter is heard, it betokens that the goddess has taken them by the left hand to lead them on; and if, shortly after, the Thibaoo is heard, it signifies that she has taken them by the right hand also. These examples will serve to show the nature and character of the omens, which are multiplied to an indefinite extent. The association of the most abject superstition with the deepest guilt finds here a most striking example. Without the sanction of Kalee no expedition is undertaken; if, during its progress, unfavorable omens are heard, they stop at once, and endeavor to avert them by prayers and sacrifices, failing in which, they retrace their steps, change the direction of the expedition, or abandon it altogether. They watch for the least indication of the will of the goddess, as the Israelites of old watched the uprising of the cloudy pillar to marshal them on their way; and to this day, although their bands have been destroyed and dispersed, there is not a Thug from the mountains to the ocean, from the Indus to the Brahmpoutra, even among those who have been admitted as witnesses by the government against their fellows—there is not one who does not in his heart and soul believe that all this has happened to them solely because they have disobeyed the directions of Kalee. In proof of this, they appeal to their past history. "Have not," say they, "have not the Thugs always prospered, as long as they attended religiously to their rules? When our ancestors attended to her commands, did not Kalee herself take care of the bodies for them, and remove every trace by which they could be discovered? But our old and wise men have told us, when we had broken the rules, that we should one day be punished for it."

From the moment that the omens are favorable, the most orthodox Thugs hold that the traveler in in pursuit of whom they are, must not be allowed to escape. But on this nice point there is some disagreement, as the subjoined conversation between the examining officer of the government and a number of Thug approvers from different sections, will show:—

"When you have poor travelers with you, and the omens are good, do you not let them go, in hope that the omen will guide you to some-

"Let them go?" cried one, "never! never!"

"How could we let them go?" cried a second; "would it not be disobedience to let them go? If we did not kill them, should we ever get any more travelers?"

"Yet," said a third, "I have known the experiment tried with good success; I have known travelers who promised little, let go, and the virtue of the omen brought better."

"Never! never!" interrupted a fourth; "that is one of your wretched heresies. You could never let him go without losing all the fruits of the expedition. Even should you get property, it would never do you any good. No success could result from your disobedience."

"What a monstrous idea!" exclaimed a fifth, "to think of securing the good will of Kalee, by disobeying her orders! Our ancestors were never guilty of such a folly."

THE PICK-AXE.—The Kussee, or consecrated pick-axe, bears an important part in all their ceremonies, and is made and consecrated with peculiar solemnities. On some day which the priest pronounces to be lucky, the leader of the gang goes to the blacksmith, and engages him to make the axe, without touching any other work till it is completed. Then on a fixed day, either Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Friday, it is consecrated by washing, libations, prayers, and sacrifices, which must be repeated before every expedition that they make. It is given into the charge of the shrewdest man of the gang, who carries it concealed, and when they encamp, buries it, with the point in the direction in which they propose to go; and if another direction be better, it will be found in the morning pointing it out. Or he throws it into a well, from which it springs up of its own accord at the call of its bearer. Should he at any time suffer it to fall from his hand, it is a most dreadful omen, and portends that he will be killed within the year, or that some grievous misfortune will happen to the gang. They must deprive him of his office give up their expedition, and consecrate the pick-axe anew; and the whole band bears an unlucky character ever after. An oath taken upon the Kussee is the most sacred that can be imposed; more binding than that by the water of the Ganges to the Hindoo, or that upon the Koran to the Mussulman; and they have the firmest conviction that perjury on the Kussee must inevitably cause the death of the one guilty of it within six days. In prison, they sometimes make an imitation of it of clay or cloth, in cases of dispute among themselves. Their confidence in its efficacy is most unbounded:—"It is no juggle, no trick," say they; "we have seen it, and our fathers have seen it. Shall not a hundred generations of Thugs be able to distinguish the miracles of God from the tricks of men?"

INITIATION.—No Thug is permitted to put to death a victim without having regularly taken his degree of Bhurtote or strangler; which he cannot obtain till he has been on many expeditions, and acquired the requisite hardihood or insensibility. The young Thug is at first kept away from the scene of murder; but presents are made to him from the spoils. He his gradually let into the secret, then he is employed as a scout, then as a grave-digger, then holding the hands of the victim. When he has acquired sufficient strength and courage, one of the most renowned Thugs is appointed his gooroo, or, as we might say, godfather. When they fall in with a favorable subject, they proceed to inquire the will of the goddess. The candidate, his gooroo, and some others, steal out into the field, where the gooroo implores her consent. "Oh Kalee!" cries he, "Oh man-devouring Kalee! if it seemeth good to thee that this victim perish by the hand of this thy slave, vouchsafe, we pray thee, a sign!" If a favorable omen is given, the gooroo proceeds to invest the candidate with a girdle tied with a peculiar knot, who accomplishes the murder, and after sacrifices, offerings, and presents to his gooroo, he becomes a Bhurtote, "in good and regular standing."

It will be noted that the manner of initiation into the gang bears a considerable resemblance to that ceremony by which the disciple is admitted into the church of the True God, and becomes a member of the mystical body of Christ. This same remark will hold good with respect to almost all the ceremonies of Thuggee; they seem to be a horrid caricature of things most holy:—this will especially appear in the only further ceremony which we shall notice, and which may be called their SACRAMENT.—At the close of every expedition, or as soon as possible thereafter, a certain quantity of goor, or coarse native sugar, is procured, and spread on a cloth, in a clean place, and by its side are laid the consecrated pick-axe and a votive offering. The leader and a number of the most celebrated Thugs seat themselves upon the cloth, while the others are seated around. Taking a little of the goor in his hand, the leader, fixing his thoughts on the goddess, lifts up his voice in prayer—"Great goddess, as thou didst vouchsafe one hundred and sixty-two thousand rupees to Jhora Naig and Koduk Bunwaree in their need, so we pray thee fulfil our desires!" Which prayer all the Thugs repeat in solemn response. A little of the goor is then placed in the hands of each; then at a given signal they all go through the operation of strangling a person, in perfect silence. The goor is then eaten, and any of it which may remain is carefully buried so that it shall not be profaned by any foot treading upon it. Of this Sacrament no one is allowed to partake but a regularly initiated Thug who has with his own hands strangled a person; for it undergoes some mysterious transubstantiation, so that if any human being should partake of it, they hold that he would at once take to Thuggee, without being able to leave it off. "Alas!" said one of them, a Brahmin of high rank and polished manners; "that fatal goor! My father made me taste it while a boy, and should I live a thousand years, I could never follow any thing else. Why, I never wanted anything, yet I was always miserable when away from my gang."

It will be seen from all this, that no Thug can ever feel remorse for his deeds. They look upon their victims as the priest does upon the sacrifice on the altar; as the Israelites did upon the nations whom they exterminated from the Promised Land; as Samuel did upon Agag, when he hewed him in pieces before the Lord. It is the hand of God that kills them, they are but His instruments. The spirit of the murdered haunts the murderer, tormenting him to madness; but no Thug, say they, was ever so tormented. A doom hangs over his house, darker than that which impended over the fated Atridæ; his family becomes extinct; it never survives, they believe, the third generation; "but our families still flourish." The Thug traces his descent from some famous strangler with no less pride than the nobleman does his from those mail-clad warriors, whose banners flaunted at Cressy, or Poictiers, or Agincourt. They have their Thermopylæs, their Bannockburns, and their Bunker Hills. They regard the scene of some famous robbery as we do the fields where the sword has decided the mightiest cause for human weal or wo. Yet this, alas! is but a single figure segregated from the great picture of heathendom; a single page from the book of crime; a leaf from the branches of "that forbidden tree;" a grain of sand from the shore of the great ocean of human guilt!

G.

THE ARAB AND HIS HORSE.

The following beautiful illustration of the strength of attachment between an Arab and his horse, is given by Allison on the authority of Lamartine the traveler:—

An Arab chief, with his tribe, had attacked, in the night, a caravan of Damascus, and plundered it; when loaded with their spoil, however, the robbers were overtaken on their return by some horsemen of the Pacha of Acre, who killed several, and bound the remainder with cords. In this state of bondage they brought one of the prisoners, named Abou el Marck, to Acre, and laid him bound hand and foot, wounded as he was, at the entrance of their tent, as they slept during the night. Kept awake by the pain of his wounds, the Arab heard his horse's neigh at a little distance, and being desirous to stroke, for the last time, the companion of his life, he dragged himself, bound as he was, to his horse, who was picketed at a little distance.

"Poor friend," said he, "what will you do among the Turks? You will be shut up under the roof of a khan, with the horses of a pacha or an aga; no longer will the women and children of the tent bring you barley, camel's milk, or dourra, in the hollow of their hand; no longer will you gallop free as the winds of Egypt in the desert; no longer will you cleave with your bosom the waters of the Jordan, which cool your sides, as pure as the foam of your lips. If I am to be a slave, you at least may go free. Go! return to your tent which you know so well; tell my wife that Abou el Marck will return no more, but put your head still into the folds of the tent, and lick the hands of my beloved children."

With these words, as his hands were tied, he undid with his teeth the fetters which held the courser bound, and set him at liberty; but the noble animal, on recovering its freedom, instead of bounding away to the desert, bent its head over its master, and seeing him in fetters on the ground, took his clothes gently in his teeth, lifted him up, and set off at full speed towards home. Without ever resting, he made straight for the distant, but well-known tent, in the mountains of Arabia. He arrived there in safety, and laid his master safe down at the feet of his wife and children, and immediately dropped down dead with fatigue. The whole tribe mourned him; the poets celebrated his fidelity; and his name is still constantly in the mouths of the Arabs of Jericho.

THE QUAKER AND THE LAWYER.

"Friend Broadbrim," said a servant to a rich Quaker, who lived, no matter where, "we have no fresh meat for dinner to-day."

"Why not?" asked the good Quaker.

"Because Lawyer Foxcraft's dog stole it, and eat it."

"Beware, Zephaniah, of bearing false witness against thy neighbor. Art thou sure it was friend Foxcraft's dog?"

"Yes, I saw it with my eyes, and it was Pinch-'em."

"Upon what evil times have we fallen!" sighed the Quaker, as he wended his way to the Lawyer's office. "Friend Foxcraft," said he, "I want to ask thy opinion."

The Lawyer laid down his pen.

"Suppose, friend Foxcraft, that my dog had gone into my neighbor's pantry, and stolen therefrom a leg of mutton, what ought I to do?"

"Pay for the mutton—nothing can be clearer."

"Know, then, friend Foxcraft, that thy dog, Pinch'em, has stolen from my pantry a leg of mutton of the value of four shillings and sixpence, which I paid for it in the market this morning."

"We-well! then it's my opinion that I must pay for it," and having done so, the worthy friend turned to depart."

"Tarry yet a little," cried the Lawyer, "thou owest me nine shillings, for advice."

"Then I must pay thee—I have touched pitch and been defiled."

A SUBSTITUTE FOR A BELL.—The first bell in Haverhill, Mass., says the Salem Gazette, was purchased in 1784; before that time there was a singular substitute, as appears by a vote passed in 1650: "That Abraham Tyler blow his horn half an hour before meeting, on the Lord's day, and on lecture days, and receive one pound of pork annually for his services, from each family."

FINE ILLUSTRATION.—A clergyman, in a recent discourse, was speaking of the common practice of pointing to the sins and follies of the members of churches, as an excuse for those of others, when he thus illustrated the evil of such an argument: "Ah!" said he, "this is a common device of the Devil, to blind the eyes of his poor disciples, with dust shaken from the soiled garments of Christians."

THE PENITENT'S RETURN.

BY THOMAS RAGG.

She sought her father's home; the house she left
Clandestinely but some few years before,
In search of wild delight. For weary miles
Her feet had borne her onward in the strength
Of warm excitement, nurtured by her vow
Of strict return to virtue. But the tide
Of fond remembrance burst upon her now,
And her limbs trembled. Every tree and shrub
Was known to her. Those green fields were the same
Through which in childhood's mirthful hour,
She wandered joyous by her parents' side,
Or sprang before them in their path, to pluck
The king-cup and the daisy. Sickening thoughts
Looked on her later years with agony,
And penitential tears again suffused
The pale cheek of the woe-worn.
Could she not
Again beneath the dear parental roof
Find peace and joy? She brought a contrite heart.
Smitten and wounded by the shafts of sin,
She bled at every pore. A bruised reed,
She bowed 'neath judgment's fiercely beating blast;
And oh! if sorrow could atone for crime,
Or virtuous resolutions, in the strength
Of a Redeemer formed, efface the stains
By guilt contracted, her dejected heart
Might yet expand beneath a sunnier heaven,
And her fond spirit smile.
Nearer she drew
To the lov'd cot which blest her infant days!
But ah! the finger-marks of change were there!
Could it be all illusion? Did her soul
Cast its black shadow o'er that lovely spot,
And make its sunshine gloom! The summer flowers
Looked sad. The garden paths and borders, all
Neglected now, with weeds were overgrown;
And spoke to her of weeds and cankering thorns
In the fond heart whose choicest flower was stolen.
With knees that scarce sustained her tott'ring weight,
She reached the door and knocked. What years of woe
Were gathered up into her heart's deep pang,
That awful moment! Could she hope to meet
A smile from those whose spirits she had wrung!
Alas! she could not; and her feeble frame
Was well nigh sinking. But what strange face
Attends the call? She knows her not. Confused
She asks of those who once inhabited
The altered place. Across the good wife's brow,
A look of thoughtfulness some moments passed,
Then thus she spake. "The story would be long,
And if thy pallid face deceives me not,
Thy limbs must be weary: but sit down,
And I will tell thee all." Thus urged, she passed
The well-known threshold, and with aching heart
Began to listen to the stranger's tale.
I need not tell it. For a time she spoke
Of prosperous years that blest the gardener's toils,
Who cultivated late th' adjacent grounds;
Till in an evil hour a wild young 'squire
Seduced his only daughter. Then her tongue
Spoke eloquently of the old man's grief,
Which led him to a tavern, where he passed
His days and nights away. His garden grounds
Were thus neglected, and his little all
Became a wreck; while his unhappy wife,
Wounded herself, but wounded more to find
That with a daughter she had lost a sire,
Became the prey of grief, and dwelt in dust.
This brought the old man to his thoughts again.
Woe, woe, was on his heart. Eager he strove
His ruined fortune to retrieve once more:
But all his efforts proved to be in vain,
A workhouse held him now.
Thus spake the dame
And sometimes looked into the wanderer's face,
Whose head reclined against the arm-chair's back,
Scarce moved one feature while she told her tale,
And were it not the eye-lids ne'er had fallen,
She might have thought that stillness was from sleep.
But ended now, the kindly woman rose
And seized her hand. Oh horror! it was cold.
Her frame was stiffened. The repentant heart
Had broken at the detail of its woes;
And she who sat to listen, breathed no more!

THE LITTLE BLIND BOY.

A few weeks since, an interesting little blind boy about twelve years of age, in Providence R. I., became the hopeful subject of converting grace, and after relating such a religious experience as drew tears from almost every eye, he was baptized and received as a member of the church.

Immediately upon his conversion he became very desirous to learn to read the Bible with raised letters prepared for the use of the blind, and in a very short space of time he learned to run his delicate fingers along the page and to read with ease and propriety. The utmost object of his wishes seemed now to be to possess a complete copy of the Bible for the Blind, that consists of several large volumes. His parents were unable to buy one, but his pastor obtained one from a Society in Boston.

Not long after the little boy received the volume, his pious mother saw him retire to the room where they were kept, and she stepped softly to the door to see what he would there do. And why do you think the little fellow went to his room? His mother saw him kneeling by the side of these precious volumes and lifting up his little hands in prayer, to return thanks to God for this blessed gift of his holy word. He then rose from his knees, and taking up one of the volumes in his arms, hugged and kissed it and then laid it aside and proceeded to the next, and so on, till he had, in this simple but beautiful and expressive manner, signified his love for each of those blessed volumes, which, through the medium of touch, had spread before his mind the wonders and the glories of God's revelation to man.

What a beautiful comment is afforded by the above touching incident upon the words of David, "The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honey comb!"—Bap. Adv.

THE WRETCHED HOME.

I suppose that most of the children who read this, have a good home, where they meet their dear parents, and brothers and sisters. How thankful ought you to be to God, for providing such a home for you, and for bestowing every other blessing which you receive. While you enjoy all these favors, there are thousands of children who have no home, or if they have that which they call home, it is scarcely better than none. It is not long since I called at a house, which was the miserable home of a beautiful little girl, about five years old. Her name was Adelaide R. Her father was a respectable man, a sailor. The bad conduct of his family had driven him from home. He had been heard of as sailing from different ports, but for four years he had not seen his home or family. Her mother was accustomed to spend the most of her time on the bed, pretending to be sick, or to be unable to work. But although she said that she was weak and incapable of attending to the wants of her child, yet she had strength enough to get rum, whenever she wanted it. Adelaide's grandmother lived with her daughter, and took care of her and her little girl. The grandmother also loved rum, and to obtain it, sent little Adelaide to beg money. Often have I seen the little girl in the winter, thinly clad, standing at the corner of the street, and asking each passer for a cent or two. When the grandmother and her daughter got rum, they drank until they were crazy, and then they would fight together.

At such times little Adelaide would fare rather hard. Many times she has been beaten by her drunken mother, until she has fainted. Once her grandmother struck her a cruel blow with a chair, and the mark of the wound will always remain on her beautiful forehead. At three different times I tried to visit this family, but they always saw me coming and barred the door. When for the fourth time I approached the house, I heard a noise as of persons fighting. Entering the outside door, I pushed open the room door, and beheld such a sight as I never desire to see again. The drunken grandmother was holding little Adelaide by the arm, and beating her with a broom. The mother of the child was sitting on the bed, throwing everything within her reach at her mother, and scolding at the same time at the top of her voice. Chairs, tables, tubs, dishes, bed-clothes, and all the things in the room were thrown about in great disorder. The little girl was soon released, an officer called, and the old lady and her daughter taken to the almshouse. Adelaide was taken care of by kind friends, and soon placed in the Asylum for poor children, which is in this city, and about which I may sometime tell you. This was all the doings of rum. Remember never to touch the vile stuff; it is poison. Adelaide is now happy, for she has a good home, where she is treated kindly, and comfortably fed and clothed. When your kind parents or friends give you money to spend, think before you lay it out for candy, or for toys, if it would not be better to give it to the poor children, who as Adelaide have been snatched from ruin. And when you lay your head on your soft pillow at night, think of Adelaide, and her home, and thank your Heavenly Father, for giving you a home, where you may rest in peace.—Sunday School Visitant.

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh-day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile, to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street; (3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST,

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	½ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ¾	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ¾	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:		Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1½	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1½
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1½
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	2
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2½
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Hallowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton, Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kilby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc., Bridgeport Manufacturing Co. Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co. 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff. 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff. 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38. West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatars, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10.

Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co. Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20

Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches, Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.

"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."

PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, AUGUST 8, 1844. NO. 7.

Biographical.

JOSEPH DAVIS.

[Concluded.]

The account of Joseph Davis in our last number, closed with his return to prison, after having smoothed the dying pillow of a beloved companion, whose end was hastened by his own imprisonment. Days of darkness and weariness must those have been which succeeded this event. The ties that had bound him to earth were severed; his prospects were blasted; and his only source of consolation was in the contemplation of that state where separations are unknown, where the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest. It was in 1665 that Mr. Davis returned to prison, where he remained until 1673—a period of nearly eight years. How he was sustained during this period, and what were the fruits of this trial of his faith, he has told us for himself in a letter written from a "cold high tower" in Oxford castle, and addressed to the Sabbath-keepers in Newport, R. I. Thanks for that letter, which reveals to us the heart of a suffering yet joyful "witness." It carries us back to the prison at Philippi, where the apostles prayed and sang praises to God at midnight. We cannot abbreviate it. Every sentence is instructive, and in every word is breathed the spirit of Christian heroism. The letter is dated "Oxen Castle, 26th of the 1st month, 1670"—more than one year before the brethren to whom it was directed were organized into the "Sabbath-keeping Church of Newport, R. I." It is as follows:—

Dear Brethren and Sisters, whom I cannot but love for the truth's sake, which you profess, and that gracious spirit that is upon you, which causes you to bring forth that precious fruit of righteousness, which through Jesus Christ will be much to the praise and glory of God—I received your sweet epistle, dated the 4th of the 7th month, 1669, with much joy for the grace of God that is in you, which bringeth forth such acknowledgments of his work upon you, who have ascribed the whole work to his free grace, that did savingly enlighten you, and make you willing in the day of his power to conform universally to the gospel precepts, and his holy laws, and that by divine power faithfully preserved you in your holy and righteous course, notwithstanding those fightings within and troubles without, that you meet with, which cause many thanksgivings to God.

I salute all with my affectionate love; and I give you thanks for accepting and rewarding my love (in the epistle I sent you) with such a return, which doth further engage me to let you know how things go with my own soul, the churches of Christ, and other professors, that may cause thanksgivings, humiliations, and supplications. Through the riches of grace, I have abundant reason to declare that our God is good, and hath done me good in keeping my soul in life, and not suffering my foot to stumble out of the way of his commandments. Notwithstanding the various kinds of trials I have met with through satan transforming himself in these several shapes that appear among us, yet by the power of the Lord I have been brought in by the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ, and in the order of the glorious gospel. But satan in the present day hath appeared, and operates in the spirits of men who rage with violence, and open force, casting forth waters like a flood, thinking to destroy and swallow us in the sea of their confusion. But the Lord hath given special and sufficient grace to help and perform the child of faith in the exercise whereof the world is overcome, for which I have suffered the loss of wife and enjoyment of children, trade and public ordinances, in the hope of being of that happy number who shall stand on mount Zion, to sing the song of Moses with unspeakable delight, when with all the saints I shall be able to say, "This is the Lord, I have waited for him; I will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." In the exercise of faith I have comfortably endured much hardness, as seeing him and his glory that is invisible, which hath always made the saints to glory in tribulation, and patiently bear the weight of affliction as they are the appointments of our dear Father, who pitieth his children, and doth not afflict willingly, but doeth all for our spiritual profit, that we may be made more partakers of his holiness.

My trials have been very much lightened and made easy by trusting in a higher power than any that hath been or is against me; and I dare not but believe all things work together for good, and that all the Lord's ways towards me are mercy and truth. I have been much tried and troubled with perplexing doubts concerning the Great Disposer's will, as were some of his choice servants in ancient days, (Ps. lxxvii. 7, Isa. xlix. 14,) and through a great power of grace, I faint not, neither am I weary of his house of correction. I have been more afraid of being out of the furnace too soon, than of staying too long, lest God's work should not be done upon me. He is the great desire of my soul, to glorify him in my body and spirit which are his, with the blessed hope of being glorified by him in that day when for loss and shame everlasting joy shall be put upon me as my crown. Verily if our hope was only in this life, we should be of all men the most miserable; for there are no worldly comforts certain to us, but tribulations are certain. The vanity of all worldly things should teach us not to set our hearts upon them, and to be content in the loss of them. O! how should believers mind their God, their portion, and their heavenly inheritance, which are so certain and eternal. There we shall sin no more, which hath been the procuring cause of all our sufferings; there all tears shall be wiped from our eyes, by our blessed Redeemer. When by faith I take a view of these things, how my spirit and strength increase in this spiritual warfare. The grace and goodness of God hath been very manifest to me; in this my wilderness the sun of righteousness hath arisen upon my soul, dispelling those clouds of darkness that many are under, whereby my condition is much more comfortable than that of many who enjoy their liberty. Surely our Father hath reserved his best wine for such a condition, for he knoweth our frame and considereth that we are but dust. It is my lot to sit here alone in the observation of God's holy Sabbath, yet not without some precious tokens of his presence, which makes a wilderness like an Eden, and a desert like a garden of the Lord. Happy should I be if the glorious things made known and believed by me, had such an effectual work upon my soul, to cause me to seek after them, and delight in those everlasting pleasures, having a conversation in heaven, always waiting for the blessed change, when my vile body shall be made like unto his glorious body.

As for my own outward mercies, they are many. I have hardly known these many years what sickness or pain is, although but a weak body, and my lodgings dangerous, being in a cold high tower; and by admiring Providence, the pit hath not shut its mouth upon me to swallow me, nor the snares which were laid to take away my life, prevailed.

As to the churches of Christ, they generally keep from a sinful compliance with the false worshipers. There were many shining lights in this nation, but many of them, I fear, have decayed, and much lost their splendor, for which reason God seems to be working against us, yet not with his great power and wrath. Our enemies are numerous and mighty, and though they have threatened to swallow us up, the spirit of the Lord hath set up a standard against them, and that sweet prophecy is much fulfilled, "No weapon formed against Zion shall prosper."

Myself, with all the non-conformists, have been greatly disappointed in our expectations, like the old church, Jer. xiv. 19.; and as to our deliverance from our thraldom, we see not our signs, neither is there a prophet who can tell how long God will deal with us as he did with Israel, when he led them into the wilderness about forty years, to humble them, and prove them, and know what was in their hearts, and to do them good in the latter end. And another thing which greatly saddens our hearts is, that the glory seemeth to be departed from the churches and congregations of most professors, for many of their glorious lights are extinguished by death. Love is waxed cold, and the Christian zeal of many is very low; and there are but few who follow on to know the Lord in further obedience in a gospel spirit, striving together for the faith of the gospel. The crown is fallen from our head! Woe unto us! for we have sinned, and the candlestick is threatened to be removed. And of late the eminent leaders of Baptist and Congregational churches, have taken upon them to preach down, and write against God's holy seventh-day Sabbath; but it prognosticates to me that the breaking of it is near. Precious souls, be not discouraged by what opposition you have or may meet with. I hope that the hand of the Lord will be with you to the increase of true Sabbath light. Let your conversation be as becometh the glorious gospel, and our high calling. And let your light shine forth; for God expects more, and man expects more from us than from others, who are not so enlightened. For herein shall we only be accepted of God, and rewarded by him, as we live in the life and power of what we profess.

My brethren, I should sin if I should cease to pray for you, that the grace of God may be manifest in the sufficiency of it, to the supplying of all your wants. And I hope I shall not be forgotten by you, that I may have such supply of spiritual strength and divine teachings, enabling me to war faithfully against the whole body of sin.

My unfeigned love is to every one of you that is a sincere Sabbath-keeper, and I do desire, while at this distance, to hear from you. The God of Abraham bless you, the God of Isaac defend you. I shall remain your loving brother,

Joseph Davis.

In 1673, when his "ten years of tribulation were filled up," Mr. Davis was loosed from prison by an order from the King. While planning to enter anew upon the business of life, he learned that an aunt, who had died during his confinement, had left him a small property. With this he was enabled to purchase a co-partnership, which soon opened the way to a successful business in the town where he had formerly resided. Afterwards, however, he removed to London, gathered his children about him, and established himself as a linen draper in the Little Minories. Here, notwithstanding the interruption of business occasioned by his strict observance of the Sabbath, he prospered beyond his highest expectations. He found himself at ease, surrounded by a happy family, and enjoying the confidence of a large circle of friends.

But this peaceful state of things was interrupted by a storm which arose against Dissenters about 1680. Mr. Davis was charged with having been present at three meetings held contrary to the prescribed forms, and for this he was fined £20 per month. Upon a certain Sabbath evening the persecutors came to break open his shop and remove his goods. The family were engaged in devotional exercises; and after listening for a while to the praying and singing in the upper part of the house, the band quietly retired. Having been informed, however, that a trained band were to come during the next week for the same purpose, Mr. Davis removed his goods, made a sale of them, and went to live in private for some years.

After King James ascended the throne, in 1685, Mr. Davis left his lodgings and took a house and shop in London, where he lived for about twenty years, in a prosperous condition. His "Narrative" says, "In this year, 1706, I live. His grace has been sufficient for me, and I rejoice to be accounted worthy to suffer for Christ." "He made known to me what I did not know before, even his holy Sabbath, the day he hath commanded for weekly worship." Indeed, in whatever occurred to him he seems to have recognized a Father's hand, and to have found an occasion for joy.

Near the close of his life, Mr. Davis says his heart was drawn forth to do something for the pure worship of his Lord and Saviour, and to manifest that outward blessings had not been bestowed upon him in vain. He felt that "the Lord had sent him, as a Joseph, to do something for the cause of religion." Under the influence of this impression, he purchased, in 1691, the grounds adjoining the present Mill Yard Church, erected a place for worship, and thus provided for the permanency of the society with which he was connected. This property was conveyed to Trustees appointed by the church in 1700. In 1706, shortly before his death, Mr. Davis bestowed his property upon his son, with an annual rent charge in favor of the Mill Yard church, together with seven other Sabbath-keeping churches in England. He likewise provided, conditionally, that his whole estate, might thereafter become the property of that church, and be vested in Trustees for its benefit. The history of this matter need not be dwelt upon here. It is sufficient to say, that after having endeared himself to the church by his pious and consistent life, he did not forget it in his death, but provided for religious instruction which has been enjoyed by some until the present time. His life affords a happy illustration of patient endurance and Christian faithfulness; and through it he, 'though he be dead, yet speaketh.'

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER FIVE.

The Sabbath an integral part of the Moral Law.

One of the many inventions sought out by man, is to make void the law of God by fictitious distinctions, such as non-essential, susceptible of occasional intermissions, &c. Some such sentiment induced a Pharisee, who was a lawyer, to ask our Lord a question, tempting him, saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment; and the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two hang all the law and the prophets. Can any man take this answer of our Lord, and by it tell whether the second, the fourth, or any other of the ten commandments is less moral or less obligatory than the other? Is it possible by it to say that any part of the law is non-essential, or susceptible of occasional intermissions? What is the meaning of this answer of Christ, but that all the precepts of the law are authoritative and obligatory by the immutable obligations of love? This rebuke of the Pharisee appears to me equally applicable to modern divines, who have said, "The Sabbath law, in its nature, was not moral but positive, and therefore susceptible of occasional intermissions."

In several works upon Sabbath-keeping now lying before me, I find the following objection to the morality of the fourth commandment: "None but Jews were liable to the deadly penalty for violating it; nor is there a single divine charge of Sabbath-breaking upon sacred record, before or after the Mosaic dispensation." What do these authors mean by the "deadly penalty?" Is it the stoning to death of the Sabbath-breaker? Then the same may be said of all the other commandments, for none but Jews were ever liable to stoning to death for disobedience to parents, or for soliciting each other to worship idols. But, (as those writers well know,) that penalty was never incorporated into the Decalogue, but was a statute of the Israelite theocracy. But if they mean by the deadly penalty, the awful displeasure of Jehovah, then we say, the objection is not true, for the Old Testament and the New say, "Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things written in the book of the law to do them." It is true, there is not a single specific charge against the antediluvians of violating any one commandment more than another; but this awful accusation is made, (Gen. 6: 12,) "All flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth." They had violated all law; why charge upon them the violation of one single precept more than another? Similar accusations against the heathen are repeated through the Old and New Testaments. Thus Moses says of the Caananites, (Deut. 12: 31,) "Every abomination to the Lord have they done." And Jehovah, (Levit. 18: 26,) says, "Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations, for all these abominations have the men of the land done which were before you, and the land is defiled." In the same manner the Apostles speak of the Gentiles of their time, calling them "children of wrath, children of disobedience, filled with all unrighteousness, without God in the world, far off." Would a specific charge of Sabbath-breaking add any thing to the enormity of this character? The following awful Scriptures certainly comprehend it. "The wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness." (Rom. 1: 18). "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one precept, is guilty of all." (James 2: 10.) The absence of a particular charge of Sabbath-breaking against the heathen, is to be accounted for in the general charge of total disregard of Jehovah.

Among modern theologins, there is a popular, though hackneyed distinction of divine laws, called moral and positive. Moral laws are supposed to be dictated by reason, and discernable by the light of nature. And positive laws, those which are altogether dependent upon revelation, and would not have been known to be duties without it. And it is alledged that the seventh-day Sabbath is one of the latter class; and it is inferred, hence, that it was temporary in its nature and subject to change. It would appear from the Gospels that the Pharisees had a similar distinction, of which they made a like use, for they said, "Whosoever shall swear by the temple it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple he is a debtor." What was this swearing by the gold of the temple, but binding by that which was esteemed most precious among them? Just so modern divines bind men's consciences by that which they have judged most important in the law. "Ye fools and blind, (said Jesus,) which is greater, the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold?" The question is as pertinent now as then. Which is greater, that which reason dictates, or that which God (who gave man reason,) commands? It is all assumed, that the reason of man would have dictated the observance of one part of the Decalogue more than another. Adam needed revelation when he was first created; so have all his posterity; and all they retain of morality, without the immediate light of revelation, they have derived from tradition, however remote. Paul declares (Rom. 7: 7,) he should never have known lust except the law had said, "Thou shalt not covet." The light of nature, unaided by revelation, would have discovered no more of the morality of the seventh commandment than of the fourth. The seventh commandment sets a limit to man's nature which his reason would never have dictated, as is abundantly proved by the writings of Hume, Owen, and others who have thrown off the restraints of education and rejected revelation. The same may be observed of the sixth commandment, and the fashionable duelists of the present day. Deists boast of the religion of nature. Believers in divine revelation, say they, have received all their just notions of virtue from the light of revelation. Thus it is with Christian sophists; they talk of the morality of the Decalogue as discernable by the light of nature, but it would never have been practiced were it not enforced by divine revelation. By none of the sacred writers, has the fourth commandment ever been separated from the obligations or sanctions of the great moral code contained in the Decalogue. On the contrary, they say, "All his commandments are sure, they stand fast forever, and are done in truth and uprightness."

S. D.

UNIVERSALISM.

The following picture of Universalism, in its nature and effects, is taken from an address occasioned by the exclusion of a Free Will Baptist preacher, on account of his teaching that doctrine. We copy from the Morning Star.

We regard the doctrine of Universalism as directly opposed to the fundamentals of the gospel, as subversive of the very elements of Christianity. It rejects the doctrine of depravity, making sin of comparatively little consequence. It opposes the doctrine of spiritual regeneration, teaching that punishment may purify the heart. It mocks the doctrine of atonement, teaching that all men must satisfy the claims of the law in their own persons. It rejects the doctrine of forgiveness of sins, teaching that all men must suffer all the demerits of all the sin they commit, their repentance notwithstanding. It ridicules the doctrine of justification by faith, teaching that men can only be justified from the guilt of transgression by suffering all the penalty of the law. It stands directly opposed to a fundamental principle in the government of God, as revealed in every dispensation of which we have any knowledge, teaching that all punishment is for the good of the punished; this is also opposed to a vital principle in every good or well regulated government, in every age and clime, from the rude barbarian to the refined and philosophic. It contradicts the plain and positive declarations of God's word, which declare that some were set forth for ensamples, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. It has been urged that for sin and misery to exist eternally, is contrary to the perfections of God. This is not in accordance with matter of fact; for sin and misery have already existed near 6000 years, and unless the perfections of God may be changed, we can see no good reason why they may not exist eternally in harmony with God's perfections. It reasons from a priori, which is unsafe; for mortals to presume what is proper for infinity to do, is preposterous or dangerous at least. A partial view of God's character and government leads to distorted views of the very principles of his government. Universalism has no power to reclaim mankind; it fails to produce religious reformation; finally it is false in its theory, philosophically and theologically; inefficient in its application to do good; destructive to piety; like the Bohon Upas, it blasts the trees as well as fruits of righteousness by its withering influences; is ruinous to souls; like a deadly opiate, it stupifies the conscience, and leads down to hell, where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched.

MOTIVES TO GRATITUDE.

Man, so fearfully and so wonderfully made, was not left unprotected and unprovided for, an outcast on the earth. On the contrary, by day and by night alike, an eye has watched for his happiness that never slumbers; an arm has been stretched out for his defence that never tires. It is that arm that sustains him during the helplessness of childhood—that shields him amid the perils of youth, and props his enfeebled constitution when sinking beneath the infirmities of age. To none are mercies conveyed by accident. It was God that kindled that sun that lights the laborer by day, and planted those stars that guide the wanderer by night. His, are those showers that bring forward the harvest, and His those dews that ripen the vintage. The good and the bad alike experience His care and subsist upon his bounty. Not even the veriest wretch can deny that God has fed and clothed him—that he has nourished and brought him up.

And are there no motives in these considerations to induce rebellious man to return to his allegiance? Is God, then, a friend that may be forgotten? His mercies, too; deserve they no requital? Ah! shall this earth of ours be cursed forever with the crime of cold ingratitude?—and yonder Heavens, which have witnessed God's goodness, always hear him say, in reference to the race and abode of man—"There, in that ungrateful world, I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me."

—President Nott.

A CLERGYMAN'S LIFE.

One who knew nothing of what he was writing, has thus expressed himself.

"How full of beauty, how desirable and picturesque is the lot of a clergyman, especially in the country. Religion and poetry dwell with him like twin sisters; and his thoughts, when turned aside from heaven, rest on all that is most beautiful on earth."

If the faithful minister is in the enjoyment of a happy lot, his happiness does not lie in his repose, in such a repose as is here described. No faithful minister ever drew such a picture of a clergyman's life from his own experience. When we glance upon the exhausting demands made upon a minister's body and mind—demands under which many sink to an untimely grave;—when we think of his many sources of sorrow—his responsible relation to other men—each so many sources of solicitude—his exposure to wounds upon his feelings through all his every day duties—wounds which he must bear in silence;—when we reflect that his employment brings him against the sharp points of this world's hostility to religion, and makes him the target for many a poisoned arrow—that his being cut off from the common resources of men and made dependent for support upon those for whom he labors, arms the selfishness of men against him—that the sorrows of others lay a tax upon his sympathies, and compel him to bear a part that the joys of any success in his labors, are more than counterbalanced by the hardness of those whom he seeks in vain to win to Christ; when we take these things into the account, the "picturesque" of the minister's calling vanishes. Let none be attracted to the ministry with any such expectations. Whoever enters the sacred calling for the poetry of it, will find the thorn within the rose. A faithful ministry cannot be executed without a soul armed to meet trials more severe and constant than fall to the common lot. And his happiness must be of a nature that can thrive amid thorns and rejoice in tribulation.

A thistle when seen in the far off landscape may contribute as much as the lily to the general beauty. But when you approach and grasp it, you feel its thorn. So the clergyman's life, to those who look at it from a distance, may be regarded as the abode of poetry and Elysian sweets. But a little experience will correct this error.

—Puritan.

MARTIN LUTHER IN HIS CLOSET.

I cannot (says Vitus Theodorus, one of the German reformers,) enough admire the cheerfulness, constancy, faith, and hope of Luther, even in these trying times. He constantly feeds these good affections by a very diligent study of the word of God. Then not a day passes in which he does not employ at least three of his best hours. Once I happened to hear him at prayer. O, what spirit, what faith, was there in his expressions! He petitions God with as much reverence as if he were actually in the divine presence; and yet with as firm a hope and confidence as he would address a friend. "I know," said he, "that thou art our Father and our God; therefore I am sure thou wilt bring to nought the persecutions of thy children. For shouldst thou fail to do this, thine own cause being connected with ours, would be endangered. It is entirely thine own concern; we, by thy providence, have been compelled to take a part. Thou, therefore, wilt be our defence!" Whilst I was listening to Luther praying in this manner, at a distance, my soul seemed to be on fire within me, to hear a man address God so like a friend, and yet with so much gravity and reverence; and I also to hear him, in the course of his prayer, insisting upon the promise contained in the Psalms, as if he were sure his petitions would be granted.

—Luther's Works.

Three things make a divine: prayer, meditation, and temptation.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, AUGUST 8, 1844.

TRAVELING AGENT.

Jason B. Wells has been appointed a Traveling Agent for this paper, and will visit the churches in the interior and northern parts of the State of New York. He is commended to the confidence of our friends.

AUTHORITY OF THE FATHERS.

The recent discussions which have been going on in this country respecting Episcopacy have developed many things worthy of note and record. Among these note-worthy things, the estimation in which the different parties hold the Fathers is not least. On one side an attempt has been made to magnify their authority as much as possible, while on the other they have often been placed in the lowest rank of religious writers, and their precepts and decisions spoken of as altogether insipid and foolish. This difference of opinion has led Episcopalians to examine the writings of their opponents, to see whether they have always spoken consistently with their present professed belief. The glaring inconsistencies which have been developed by the examination, have given rise to the charge, that whenever an opponent of Episcopacy wishes to substantiate a point, he appeals with the most triumphant assurance to the authority of the Christian Fathers; but whenever a Churchman refers to the same writers, their authority is set aside as apocryphal and of no value. This charge has been made again and again in almost every discussion between the two parties; and it will continue to be made until it is fairly met. But what is the proof of the justness of this charge? Reference is at once and invariably made to the change of the Sabbath, for which all observers of the first day rely mainly upon the authority of the Fathers. Let us look at one or two instances.

Take Dr. Dwight, late President of Yale College, whose theological writings are regarded by many as second to no others. In his sermon on the Perpetuity and Change of the Sabbath, he quotes, as authority for the change the following names, with the accompanying descriptions:—"Ignatius, a companion of the apostles, says," &c. "Justin Martyr, who lived at the close of the first and beginning of the second century, says," &c. "Ireneus, a disciple of Polycarp, the disciple of St. John himself, who lived in the second century, says," &c. "Tertullian, who also lived in the second century, says," &c. These quotations are made without the least qualification or misgiving, and are spoken of as altogether satisfactory proof of the propriety of keeping the first day of the week instead of the seventh.

Now let us hear Dr. Dwight's opinion of these same Fathers, when he comes to treat on another subject. In his discourse on the "Offices of the Church," after speaking of the reliance which is placed upon the authority of the early Christian Fathers, he says:—"1. No testimony from the Fathers can give divine authority to any institution whatever. The Fathers are merely human witnesses, and are to be regarded with no more confidence than other human witnesses of equal credibility. All things necessary to life and godliness are given to us in the Scriptures. The testimony of the Fathers can add nothing to what is contained in them; can set aside nothing—can change nothing. 2. The testimony of the Fathers is far from deserving the credit which is sometimes given to it. For, in the first place, those who have testified concerning this subject, have given erroneous testimony concerning other things." "Secondly, the works of several of the Fathers have been interpolated, corrupted, and partially lost."

Here, then, we have Dr. Dwight, in one case quoting in proof of the change of the Sabbath, and without qualification, the authority of those whom in another case, he declares to be merely "human witnesses," who "have given erroneous testimony in regard to other matters." Notwithstanding his assertion that they "can set aside nothing, can change nothing," they are allowed to set aside the seventh day which God has sanctified for the Sabbath, and to change the first day which was a working day into a day of rest. Does not this afford good ground for the charge of inconsistency? Would it be safe to follow the leadings of one who so palpably contradicts himself?

In this connection we wish to say a word as to the light in which the Fathers so often quoted did really regard the first day. We deny that all of them, or a majority of them, regarded it as a Sabbath. That it was observed as a festival, and spoken of as such, we do not dispute. According to this view of it, as a festival in honor of the resurrection and their deliverance by it, we find many of the early Christian writers speaking of it as analogous to the life of a Christian, his abstinence from whatever would be likely to draw off his attention from God, his rest from sin, and his entire dedication to the service of God. Evidence of this may be found in almost any of the discourses of the Fathers. Athanasius, Justin Martyr, and Chrysostom, have frequent allusions of this kind. Their writings afford indefinitely more in favor of this view than of the change.

What importance, then, ought to be attached to the authority of the Fathers for the change of the Sabbath? We find that they have often erred in other things, and that those who have made the most of their sayings respecting the Sabbath, not only deny their authority in other things, but declare that they cannot be implicitly relied upon. Their sayings, advice, and exhortations, must be compared with the Word of God. If they speak according to this, their word is to be received; if not, they are to be rejected as having no light in them. It is when they are used in this way that they are honored; and no thanks would the Fathers give to those who should represent them as above or opposed to the Scriptures. It would be well if all Protestants, and especially, those who engage in controversy with the advocates of papacy and prelacy, would carry their principle, that "the Bible is the religion of Protestants," into practice. Until they do this, they will be met with the rebuke, "Physician, heal thyself."

PAPAL POLICY.

Many speak with surprise of the apparent success which crowns the efforts of papists. This surprise would be greatly modified, however, by examining the manner in which these efforts are put forth. Such an examination would show us, that the results which we witness flow naturally from the direction and character of their labors. Let us refer to some features in their system of operations, which seem to us intimately connected with their success.

1. They are watchful of the character and qualifications of their leaders. However little anxiety they may show for the general diffusion of education, they are most careful about the education of those who are to give religious instruction. The means which are provided for securing this object are abundant, and the rules which regulate the use of these means are strictly applied. The consequence is, that there are always at command numbers of well-trained men to do the bidding of such as direct. Plans do not fail by being awkwardly executed. Once distinctly and wisely formed, the result is almost certain. How different this from what is witnessed in a body whose leaders are unprepared for their posts—a body in which petty jealousies and envyings give rise to discord and inefficiency. It is preposterous to expect harmony and efficient action where no attention is given to this subject. In this strict watchfulness the papal church acts upon a policy which worldlings find indispensable to success; and the result of their course has been seen. Why will not every Protestant body learn a lesson from them? Some, it is true, have learned. It were well if all would be instructed.

2. Papists seldom allow minor differences to prevent their uniting to promote their general cause. It is not to be supposed that in all things they see eye to eye; indeed, it is known that they do not. When, however, the general question at issue between them and others comes up, these differences are lost sight of, and they act in concert. Undoubtedly this action is sometimes compelled by fear, and at other times it may result from an unjustifiable carelessness about the points of difference. The absence of that general intelligence which characterizes some other communities would make it easy for a few leading spirits to carry out their plans in spite of minor differences. But their history is nevertheless a proof of the importance and power of their systematic action. If the followers of him who prayed that his disciples might be one should imitate to some extent the example set them, good would surely follow. We do not believe that an abandonment of what is believed to be true, for the sake of union, would be of any advantage. It would only open the way to more serious difficulties in the future. A union which is to be beneficial and lasting must be a union upon the truth. The great question between the two parties now is, as it was long ago, wheher the Scriptures be a sufficient rule of faith. Upon this question there may be a theoretical and practical union. If it could be realized, it would administer a most serious rebuke to all errorists. Let it be tried, by forsaking whatever is contrary to Scripture, and we are sure that most important results would follow.

The Papal church is under the direction of men who have been trained for their work, and who are exerting themselves vigorously and harmoniously to extend their opinions. It is not surprising that great results should have been achieved. If we would counteract their influence, it must be by out-doing them in every thing which is lovely and of good report—out-doing them, not for the sake of victory, but with a single eye to the glory of God and the salvation of those who are in error.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO AN EDITOR.

An English writer of great discernment has said, "The preachers of this country are the editors of its newspapers." Perhaps the assertion is a bold one, but it approximates to the truth. The confidence which is generally placed in the declarations of the press, the vast number to whom it speaks, and the permanency of its influence, makes it a most powerful instrument of good or of evil. The class of persons who direct the press have a responsibility which can scarcely be overestimated; and those who have taken this position intelligently and conscientiously, will often tremble in view of their responsibility and the relation they sustain to society. A variety of circumstances combine to increase the anxiety of such an one. He feels, perhaps, that he is looked upon as a representative of the opinions of others, whom he would not willingly misrepresent; he knows that an unguarded expression once committed to the press and sent abroad can never be recalled; he is perhaps aware that many are looking anxiously for such expressions, and are ready to make him an offender for a word; and in view of these considerations he is ready to cry out, "Who is sufficient for these things?" But, sufficient or insufficient, if he has taken the post he must speak, and speak frequently; there is no alternative. It need hardly be said, that one who stands in such a position needs the encouragement of his friends and knows how to value it. We shall venture to refer to two or three ways in which this encouragement may be given.

1. By remembering him in prayer. If the editor has engaged in his labor with right views of its importance, he will be sure to feel his need of divine guidance, and to seek it for himself. But how greatly would his confidence be increased and his heart encouraged, by knowing that his readers were likewise accustomed to ask for him aid, that he might be wise in presenting and faithful in defending the truth.

2. Another way to give this encouragement is by speaking directly to the editor, if at all, in the spirit of brotherly kindness, of the faults or the excellencies of his paper. Thanks to that experienced brother who says, "I wish you God speed in your arduous undertaking, and in the spirit of fraternal feeling take up my pen to give you a friendly hint." Thanks to another, of years and observation, who says, "The Recorder answers my expectation," and accompanies this with a remittance. Thanks to a third, who says, "I have carefully read your first and second numbers; I cannot but express my sincere gratification on the establishment of a Sabbath paper in this city, and shall feel happy in furnishing my mite towards its support." But quotations of the kind need not be multiplied. It is sufficient to say, that few editors claim or expect to reach perfection. If any do expect it, they will be disappointed. Those who do not, will thank their friends and take courage, when they see that their paper is carefully read and deemed worth improving.

3. A third way to encourage an editor is by efforts to extend the circulation of his paper. The only way to make a useful paper, is by bestowing much labor upon it; and the only way to secure this labor, is by furnishing a subscription list sufficiently large to meet the expense. It is for the interest of every reader, therefore, to increase the number of subscribers to his paper as much as possible. Most readers seem not to understand this. There are some, however, who do understand it, and who give good proof of their wisdom and their friendship by constantly adding to our list. We thank them for the encouragement they thus afford us, and shall cheerfully comply with their significant rquest to go on.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

It is common for new papers to publish the notices which they receive from the corps editorial, as well as from their particular friends. But not having much sympathy with this system of puffing, we have refrained from publishing such extracts. Here is one, however, which we give because it contains important suggestions, and alludes to considerations which have much influenced us in regulating the character of our paper thus far. It is from a brother in Pennsylvania, whose praise is in the churches.

"I like the appearance of the Recorder. One thing about it, in particular, pleases me; that is, it is so thoroughly Sabbatarian in its character. I like to have a good deal said editorially upon the Sabbath question, provided it is well said; also full notices of all the movements of the day in reference to the subject, as well as of all other movements, whose ultimate bearing may be upon this great question of reform. A paper conducted in this manner will better please our own people than any other; and if any patronage be expected from others, there is no way so likely to secure it, as to let them know that a perusal of it will give them a thorough insight into our sentiments. For this is a subject upon which there is a great deal of curiosity to be informed. The people want to know what we believe, and how we manage our argument. Make the sheet, therefore, a thorough exponent of Sabbatarianism. Keep it constantly before the people; not to the neglect of other important topics, to be sure, but still make it very prominent. This is the portion of divine truth that God has called us in a particular manner to defend. Let us do it boldly, 'in the name of God setting up your banner.' It appears to me, if the paper continue to assume the same character which it has thus far done, that our brethren who have the means ought to be more than merely subscribers for themselves; they ought to take some for distribution among their first-day friends."

"THESE SPLENDID PRIZES."

A Roman Catholic Magazine for October 1843, [the London and Dublin Orthodox Journal,] contained an article offering the following rewards:—

"Twenty Guineas Reward to any Protestant who will find, in the New Testament, a single instance of infant baptism administered either by deacon or apostle."

"Fifty Guineas Reward to any Protestant who will point out a single passage in the Scriptures which states that a woman can hold rule in the church, or that Queen Victoria, or any of her predecessors was to be the supreme head of the church."

"One Hundred Guineas Reward to any Protestant who will prove from the Scriptures that the sign of the cross was ordered to be used in the administration of baptism, either by Christ or his Apostles."

To these liberal offers we will add another: Five Hundred Dollars Reward to any Protestant or Catholic "who will point out a single passage in the Scriptures which states," either that the seventh-day Sabbath has been abrogated, or that the first day of the week is the Sabbath, or that the first day has been substituted for the seventh.

Will any Protestant or Catholic undertake to secure "these splendid prizes?"

Right use of Terms.—A correspondent has written us to correct the statement made in an account of "the Fourth at Waterford, Conn.," saying that there were five Sunday Schools present at the celebration. He suggests, that one of the schools was a Sabbath school, and should have been so designated. We cheerfully make the correction, and hope it will turn attention to the importance of using terms so as to distinguish between Sunday and the Sabbath.

ANOTHER SHORT WAY.

Being the substance of a recent conversation between an eminent Counsellor (late a Judge) of New York and a Sabbatarian.

The Lawyer contended that although the first day of the week had no divine authority for its sanctity or observance as a Sabbath, yet if it be kept as scrupulously and conscientiously as the seventh day demanded, it could not but be as acceptable to God.

In answer to such sophistry the Sabbatarian submitted the following legal case to him:—

"I am told that I can purchase, in the State of Connecticut, one hundred copper cents bearing the impress and superscription of the United States Mint, and equal in every respect in value to the mint coin, for sixty-five cents, payable in gold or silver. But I admit them to be counterfeit. I admit, also, that I circulate this spurious coin. Now will you undertake, for a fee of $10,000, to defend my cause against a prosecution for passing such false coin, and exonerate me from conviction in the United States Court?"

The honest lawyer's answer unhesitatingly was, I cannot argue your cause in the very teeth of so unquestionable a law as appears to exist on the Statute Books.*

The Sabbatarian replied—Then you admit your first day Sabbath a counterfeit, and allow me to answer you as the celebrated Mr. Whiston did Chancellor King of England upon a similar question: "If God Almighty should be as consistent, as just, and as jealous of his laws in the Court of Heaven as my Lord Chancellor is in his, where are we then?"

THE INFERENCE.

If, then, I cannot obtain an advocate on earth, (for no one of repute would undertake it,) to plead my cause with the offer of a fee of $10,000, for the violation of a law of man's making, what ground have I to expect that the only advocate to be obtained in the Court of Heaven, i. e. the Lord Jesus Christ, will defend my cause against the breach of that law which his father ever made punishable with DEATH, temporal and eternal?—and who himself, when on earth, in his comment on that law, averred that not one jot or tittle could in any wise pass from it? (Matt. 5: 18, 19.)

Sweedesboro, N. J. ALPHA.

---

* If any person shall falsely make or counterfeit any copper coin of the United States or pass or publish the same, he shall be subjected to a fine of $1000 and suffer imprisonment to hard labor for a term not exceeding three years.—Gordon's Digest, p. 922; act passed March 3d, 1825.

MORAL NATURE OF THE SABBATH AFFECTED BY SAILING AROUND THE WORLD.

Those who may have read the polemical writings of the seventeenth century will have observed how much stress is laid by them on the supposed grand distinction between moral and positive institutions, especially when the law was the subject of discussion. To determine the obligatory nature of a precept, it was usual with theological disputants to bring it to this test, is it moral? If this character can be discovered, it is considered unchangeable, and binding upon all men; but, if it be merely positive, by which is understood a law unaccompanied by evidence appreciable by us of an independent natural obligation, then it may be changed! And the discovery of this distinction was made dependent upon human perception, rather than upon the authority of the Word of God. The authority of the Scriptures in relation to the SABBATH appeared to be suspended, while prelates and people gravely discussed theological distinctions in relation to the nature of the institution. It seems to have been assumed, that if the sabbatic law could be denominated MORAL, it must relate to the seventh day exclusively. If POSITIVE, it might be of partial obligation, so as to admit not only of the substitution of another day, but of the abrogation of all distinction of days whatever if occasion require. And if partly moral and partly positive, it was supposed to be unchangeable as to the proportion of time and the religious duties required, but changeable as to the particular day of the week to be observed.

However preposterous this theory may appear in the light of Scripture truth, as an excuse for the neglect of the seventh day, and however unsupported by the Word of God such neglect may be, there are still very many who, to accumulate evidence against the morality of the fourth commandment of the Decalogue, do not hesitate to adopt a course of reasoning which would tend also to exhibit the character of God in an unreasonable point of view, charging Him with folly in promulgating a law which neither Jew nor Gentile could observe in every age or country. It is an argument very commonly used against the Sabbath, that it could not have been intended for universal observance, inasmuch as in sailing around the world a ship's crew could not preserve an equal division of time, or observe the same moments of time for their rest which would be observed by their friends at home; as if the moral nature of the Sabbath depended upon man's being fixed in one place, immovable; or, that to prove the sabbatic law of no moral force, it need only be shown that man can move from one place on the earth to another, or from one degree of longitude to another. Would it not follow more naturally, that if the seventh day could not be observed without remaining in the same degree of longitude, or on the same continent where the Sabbath was instituted, that emigration was a sin! It was the will of God that the Sabbath should be kept; and if under these circumstances it should be found impossible for mankind to continue in one place, obedience to the law would evidently be impracticable, and God would be unreasonable in requiring it. This conclusion is forced upon us from the adoption of false premises.

To say that the same precise and identical portion or period of time must be observed in all parts of the earth to fulfil the requirement of the fourth commandment, is false. It is a proposition that must fall to the ground before enlightened investigation. If we assume that the seventh day in the order of the earth's revolution is the Sabbath, we shall be relieved from the embarrassment with which the foregoing hypothesis is attended. Had the continent of America been inhabited when the law was given in Asia, the earth rolling eastward, Americans would necessarely have had to wait six hours after sun setting in Asia before their Sabbath would have begun. But is the seventh day less the Sabbath to Americans, because it begins later by a few hours than it does at the place of publication of the law? It seems to follow, then, that the same identical period of time was not intended in the law, nor required of the nations of the earth, as the day of rest, but the seventh day according to the natural division of time.

Whether the fourth commandment be moral or positive, if it be the commandment of Jehovah, it should be obeyed, wherever a natural day may be discovered, wherever the sun rises and sets, or day and night mark in successive periods the progress of time.

LUTHER.

Sabbath Convention at Saratoga.—We copied from the New York papers, two weeks since, the notice of a Convention to be held at Saratoga, Aug. 2d. This notice was a mistake; and we make the correction, lest some should identify this Convention with one which is yet to be held on Wednesday, the 28th of August.

Mr. Fairchild.—A large and respectable ecclesiastical council has been engaged in examining the charges of licentious conduct against this gentleman. The report of the council is, that "they feel compelled to express their deep conviction that Mr. Fairchild cannot be innocent in this matter, and that unless he can present a clearer vindication of himself before some tribunal more competent than ourselves to compel the attendance of witnesses, and the utterance of all the truth, and till such act be done, he ought not, and so far as our decision goes, does not, hold the place of a Minister in the Church of Christ."

Persecution.—The American Messenger states, that two Colporteurs who have been laboring at Hamburg, Germany, in connection with the American Baptist mission, have been banished, and the goods of another confiscated, on account of their fidelity in the good work of seeking the salvation of men, in connection with Bible and Tract distribution.

Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder.—A Mr. Pierce Connelly, formerly an Episcopal clergyman of Natchez, having become a Catholic, has determined to enter the ministry. In order to open the way for this, his wife has "voluntarily" entered a Convent of Nuns of the Sacred Heart. Mr. C. is at present in the college of the Nobles at Rome.

An Example worthy of Imitation.—A Chinese, who one year ago was a worshiper of idols, and had never heard of the gospel, has been present at the last seven monthly concerts for prayer, and has given one dollar each month. He gains his subsistence by working for twenty-five cents per day.—Am. Mess.

Death of a Missionary.—Intelligence has been received at the Missionary House, of the death of the Rev. Mr. Campbell, a Missionary of the American Board in South Africa. He was well known to many as the author of a very large "Map of the Moral World."

Independency.—The Yarmonth Herald informs us, that the Synod of Nova Scotia, hitherto in connexion with the Church of Scotland, at the annual meeting week before last at Pictou, after a long discussion, passed a resolution, 11 to 4, "repudiating" any connexion between that body and the Scottish establishment, and declaring its designation to be "The Presbyterian Church of Nova Scotia."

Union.—A friendly negotiation is said to be in progress, which has for its object a closer union between several branches of the Presbyterian family—including the Associate, the Associate Reformed, the Roformed Presbyterian, and the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. The main difference is about the use of a Psalmody which is not strictly scriptural. We are glad to see this inclination to union, and believe it will lead to good results.

A Heavy Haul.—No less than 17 persons were arrested on Sunday last, and brought to the police office, from No. 127 Anthony-street, N. Y. They were engaged in playing the game of ball or racket. The keeper of the house, Michael McCarten, was held to bail in the sum of $400 to answer, and the others in the lesser sum of $200. Would it not be well to abate such nuisances on any day of the week?

John Gliddon, Esq. U. S. Consul for Alexandria, Egypt, died at Malta, on the 3d ult., after a patient illness.

Hon. John L. White, Jr., of Bolton, late Treasurer of Connecticut, died on Sunday last, after an illness of one week, aged 52 years.

The remains of Fisher Ames, who died 36 years ago, were removed to a new tomb in Dedham on Thursday last, where a monument is to be erected by his descendants.

The Long Island Rail-road is to commence its regular trips in connection with the Boston trains of cars, from Stonington and Norwich, on Friday, 9th inst., by which means passengers can leave New York at 8 o'clock A. M. and reach Boston before 5 P. M.

General Intelligence.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The steamship Caledonia reached Boston on the 1st inst., bringing English news to the 19th ult.

The cotton market was in a most unfavorable condition.

The result of a late election contest for Birmingham, was the return of Mr Spooner. There were two other candidates, one of whom was Mr. Joseph Sturge, the celebrated anti-slavery and chartist advocate.

An examination into the post-office espionage, mentioned in last intelligence, was progressing.

The hearing of the appeal upon the Irish State Trials was commenced before the House of Lords on the 4th of July, and progressed in from day to day until the 10th, when the Lord Chancellor announced that certain questions would be propounded to the judges, and the further proceedings be suspended to await their reply. In the course of the hearing, the Lord Chancellor admitted that the Jury lists were fraudulently made up, and the opinion seems to be that the counsel for the prisoners have made out so strong a case that the judgment will be reversed, but it appears that O'Connell has no hopes that the appeal will be successful.

O'Connell continues in the enjoyment of good health in his prison, and through his son has announced his great satisfaction at the peaceable demeanor of the people, exhorting them to persevere in the agitation for Repeal. At the weekly meeting of the Dublin associations, on the 15th ult., the amount of Repeal contributions for the week was announced at £1700.

An interesting discussion on the subject of the slave trade took place in the House of Commons, on the 27th ult.

A letter, it is said, has been received by the Commander of the Forces from the Horse Guards, inquiring if it would be safe to withdraw some of the troops from Ireland, the military force there being 26,700 men, exclvsive of 10,000 police and 12,000 pensioners, well armed and equipped. The reply was, that it would be unsafe to do so until O'Connell's release from prison. Some surprise has been expressed that nothing has emanated from the pen of O'Connell since his imprisonment. The reason is said to be, that if any did appear, with his name, he would be deprived of pen and ink, and prevented from writing altogether.

On the 13th instant, says an Irish paper, "Mr. O'Connell commenced his great literary labor, his 'Life and Times,' or by what other style and title his projected autobiography is to be distinguished, employing Mr. O'Neill Daunt as his amanuensis."

Sir R. De Bourgho, Bart. of Castle Connell, abjured the Church of Rome, and embraced the Protestant faith, at Castletownroche Church, county of Cork, on Sunday se'nnight.

Mr, Legh, a gentleman of fortune in Herefordshire, has joined the Church of Rome, and removed his son from one of our leading schools to Oscott.

Funeral of Campbell, the Poet.—The funeral of Thomas Campbell, the author of that sweet and popular poem, the Pleasures of Hope, took place on the 3d inst., in Westminster Abbey. Lord Brougham, Lord Aberdeen, Lord Campbell, Lord Morpeth, Sir Robert Peel, and other distinguished men acted as pall-bearers. He was buried in nearly the centre of the Poets' Corner, Westminster Abbey, within a few yards of the tomb of Addison. The attendance of peers, members of Parliament, eminent literary and scientific men, was considerable, including a considerable number of Poles, one of whom threw on the coffin a portion of earth from the grave of Kosciusko.

Miniature of Milton.—A miniature of Milton has recently come to light by Samuel Cooper, which has been purchased by the Duke of Buccleugh for a hundred guineas. The miniature bears a general likeness to the portraits of the great poet, taken after his blindness—but has a finer, more youthful, and more elevated expression. It is about being engraved. In this dirty and dilapidated state, it was sold for £2 10s.

A letter from Florence of 25th of June states, that Prince Jerome Bonaparte has precipitately left the city, after long occupying one of the finest palaces of Florence, where he formely held a sort of court. The Prince's sudden departure is ascribed to financial embarrasment which it is impossible for him to overcome at this moment.

Spain.—The Madrid Gazette of the 1st, contains the following revolting summary of the executions in only one district of Catalonia:

"Between the 1st of Febuary and the 15th of June, the 'faction' in the Meastrazzo have sustained the following losses: Killed on the field of battle, 54 men; shot, after being made prisoners, 120 men; pardoned, for various reasons, 107. Among the prisoners shot are the chiefs El Serrador, Viscaro, Lauva, and Taso; Marsel and his lieutenant, Pilaren, Cotarro and his second, Martinez el Serano, Taranques, and Galo de Santa Oleon, and 25 generals or officers, including one colonel, one commandant, three captains, and thirteen lieutenants. Since the 29th of May, 14 spies and 19 officers, coming from France, a certain number of douaniers who had joined the bands, have been shot. General Don Juan de Villalonga has, by hs energetic activity, not a little contributed to this result."

The Madrid journals still abound with rumors of conspiracies, which are said to be in active preparation at Saragossa, Barcelona, and the Capital. It is suspected, however, that reports are raised for political purposes to terrify the timid.

Mexico and Texas.—A manifesto has been sent to President Houston, informing him that the armistice concluded on the 15th of February expired on the 11th of June, and that hostilities are re-opened against the usurpers of Texas. The manifesto adds:—"I also make known to you that my government has seen with well-found idignation the perfidy of the inhabitants of the said territory, towards a Republic whose generous conduct towards them they misunderstood, in relation to a question on which they were thought to be acting with a good faith, but they have abused the confidence of the Republic by violating the condition of the armistice respecting the commissioners, who, according to the 4th article of said armistice, should have repaired to the city of Mexico, in order to regulate our differences so far as their propositions might be admissible. His excellency the President, convinced that the honor and dignity of the nation require the chastisement of a conduct so little creditable has ordered me to apprise you of his resolution, so that it may be well understood that it is not through timidity or want of power, but because his excellency has always listened to the voice of humanity, that hostilities were not re-commenced at the period fixed by the armistice.

Notwithstanding my regret in thinking that blood is once more about to flow, yet in transmitting to you the declaration of the President, I enjoy the satisfaction to find that justice is on the side of our cause, which reposes on sacred and imprescriptible rights. In this we place our confidence as well as in the valor of our troops. When the struggle shall once more begin, the civilized world will judge between us, and the fortune of war cannot but be favorable to those who fight for their country against usurpers.

I have the honor to renew to you assurances of my high consideration. Adrien Woll.

Head Quarters, Mier, 19th June, 1844.
To Gen. Samuel Houston.

Execution of the Pirates of the Saladin.—The Correspondent of the Commercial Advertiser sends that paper the following account of the execution of the pirates of the Saladin:

The four criminals under sentence of death—Johnston, alias Trevaskiss, Charles Anderson, the Swede, George Jones and John Hazleton—were executed this morning, in view of that sea whose waters they had polluted with blood, and in the presence of a large concourse of spectators.

Jones, who seemed to be the least affected by his awful situation, or who bore it with a more elastic fortitude, shook hands with his companions in guilt, and kissed them on the cheek—he then resigned himself to the executioner, by whom, under the directions of the Sheriff, the adjustment of the cords, the caps, and other fatal preparations were made.

He then came forward and addressed the audience in a few words; he said he was a native of Ireland, and advised all his countrymen to take warning from his fate. He acknowledged the justice of his sentence, and that he was sorry from his heart for the transactions in which he had been a participator. After a pause he said he was from Clare, in Ireland. The cap was then drawn over his features, the signal given, and the world closed upon him for ever.

Out of the 14 persons who embarked in the vessel from Valapraiso, on the 8th February last, only two now remain alive.

An Exciting Incident.—As the train of cars for Philadelphia were leaving the Canton depot, Baltimore, on Tuesday morning, Mr. Duffy, the chief engineer, cast his eyes along the under part of the cars, as is his custom, to see that all was right. In doing so he was surprised to see a boy about twelve years of age stowed away on the top of the lever connected with the break of one of the cars. He immediately called on the conductor to stop, but he was not heard, and the train was soon in progress on its route to Philadelphia. Knowing that the boy would be crushed to death the first time the break was used, as it certainly would have been before they reached Philadelphia, he immediately jumped on a locomotive that was "fired up," and in a few minutes was in pursuit, urging his iron horse to its utmost speed to overtake the train. He came up to them at Stemmer's Run, nine miles from Baltimore, where he recognized the boy standing in the road alongside the train, waiting for them to start again, in order to resume his former position. It was a miracle that the brake on which he was sitting was not used when they stopped, as, if it had, his death would have been inevitable. Mr. Duffy took him on his locomotive and brought him back to Baltimore, but he refused to give his name, merely stating that he wanted to go to Philadelphia.

Substitution for Slave Labor.—Mr. Bryant Cobb, of North Alabama, proposes to give up Slave Labor, and to offer suitable encouragement to induce good German farmers to settle about him, also some Machinists and Mechanics. He is located in a fertile valley which is well watered; it is large enough for 15 or 20 farms; several saw-mills are in operation. He proposes to furnish farming implements and one year's provisions to industrious families, and let them farms on long leases, or make such other arrangements as may be thought mutually beneficial.

Wholesale Robbery.—The Cincinnati Chronicle says: "The Court of Common Pleas on meeting this morning, discovered that since their adjournment on Saturday, the court room had been entered and the Clerk's department robbed of the indictments, recognizances, and all the papers belonging to the pending criminal term. The court has been in session some four or five weeks, and numerous convictions had taken place; among others ten for penitentiary crimes. The result is, that the convictions already had are null; no further trials can be had; a new venire of the Grand Jury is necessary, and matters must all begin over again. The Court's labors are lost, and the county is put to a new expense of some $2000 in amount.

Sudden Deaths.—We hear with pain, says the Newark Advertiser, of two sudden and remarkable deaths at Elizabethtown on Friday evening. Mrs. Jemima Chandler, an aged widow lady of some 70 years, was seized with apoplexy at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Samuel Whitehead, of whose family she was a member, soon after 9 o'clock, and expired almost instantly. Her daughter, Mrs. W., shocked by the spectacle, complained of a head ache and fell dead on the instant. Thus mother and daughter were snatched away almost in the same moment of time as by an electric shock, leaving a large circle of bereaved children and friends.

The Pomeroy Ejectment.—Speaking of the late refusal by one of the western rail roads, to carry an express agent, the Rochester Democrat says: The nut-shell of it is here. The Post-office Law makes it a penal offence for the Railroads to carry, or knowingly allow any passenger to carry, letters. The fine is $50 for each offence. The Express notoriously carries letters. To save the fine, the Railroads exclude the express agent; but intimate a willingness to allow the transfer of all express matter not mailable. Meanwhile, they are ready, we understand, to have the constitutionality of the law tested. But meanwhile the public will be obliged to pay government 2s. to do what the express will do as well for 6d. The affair is in a hard corner; but it should be seized upon as a fit opportunity to concentrate public opinion against the existing postage burthens.

Southern Factories.—An Iron factory has recently been established in Benton county, Ala. at which they make castings of every description, which are said to be equal in every respect to any brought from elsewhere. They can be sold at seven cents per pound, and yield a handsome interest on the amount invested, while those from abroad sell at 12 cts. There are sixty men employed in the establishment, whose bread-baskets are supplied by the farmers of the vicinity—thus opening a market for articles which, on account of their employment, they cannot make for themselves.

[Sandersville Telescope.

Grand Jury of Philadelphia and the late Riots.—The Grand Jury made their presentment last Saturday morning. The correspondent of the Tribune says:—It assigns as the remote cause of the late disturbances in Southwark, the murdering of American citizens in Kensington by foreigners, and as the immediate cause the arming of St. Philip de Neri Church—supports and sustains the conduct of Sheriff McMichael in both the Kensington and Southwark disturbances, and censures the citizens for refusing to obey his summons when called upon to act as his posse—the conduct of the military is also sustained—a riot act recommended—and several fire companies presented as a nuisance, &c. &c. Judge Jones expressed the approbation of the Court to the contents of the document, after whice the Grand Jury were dismissed for the term. The presentment altogether is an important one.

The New Monarch of Mormondom.—The Mormon mantle has fallen upon Sam Smith, elder brother to Joe, the late Prophet, who has been, or is to be inducted into office with all due solemnity, and take upon himself the entire government of the "Latter Day Saints," as prophet and patriarch chief.

SUMMARY.

The meeting house of the Orthodox Society, in East Bridgewater, Mass. (Rev. Mr. Sandford's,) was discovered to be on fire about two o'clock on Sunday morning last, and the person who first discovered the fire, on opening the door to ring the bell, found the bell rope cut. The building was consumed, and under circumstances which convinced the people present, that it must have been the act of an incendiary.

We learn from the Taunton Whig that an affray occurred between George Shores and Warren Billings at New Forge, Mass. on Saturday last, in which the former received an injury which it was feared would prove fatal. It seems that Shores discovered a horse in his field belonging to Billings, and proceeded to drive it out by throwing stones at the animal. Billings being near began to stone Shores, who returned the attack, when the third or fourth throw by Billings struck Shores with such force that it knocked him down and fractured his skull. Billings has escaped.

The revenue and income of the city of Providence, for the year ending the 1st of June last, amounted to $117,219. The expenditures amounted to $101,107. Of the expenditures the sum of $27,444 was for public schools, besides $3365 for school houses.

The ice trade of Boston is getting to be of great importance. The exports in June were 4,097 tons, of which there were to Liverpool 430, Calcutta 556, St. Jago 200, Trinidad 10, New Orleans 2160, Mobile 441, Charleston 800.

In Dresden, lately, a little girl was heard to call from the window of a mean house, to her opposite neighbor, "Please, Mrs. M——, mother sends her best compliments, and if it's fine weather, would you go a begging with her to-morrow?"

A person lately opened a toad in a wheat-field, and found 16 fresh beetles in its stomach, which the patient animal had probably snapped up while they attempted to cross the path. Toads are often kept with advantage on hot-beds for killing insects, and are among the gardener's best friends.

The police of Erie county have arrested five men, supposed to be a gang of burglars which for some time past have infested the city of Buffalo. Considerable property, indentified as stolen, has been found in their possession.

The bridge across a ravine, in Columbus, Mississippi, fell a few days since with a great crash, while four persons were on it, all of whom were severely injured, and one, it was feared, mortally.

The Boot and Shoe Trade is one of immense importance in this State. In Abington the value of these articles manufactured is $1,230,000; in Weymouth, $1,045,257; in Quincy, $111,881; in Braintree, $656,541; in Randolph, $944,714; in North Bridgewater, $184,000; in East Bridgewater, $277,800, &c. [Lowell Courier.

A late English paper says that in the Court of Queen's Bench, recently, a jury refused to make a husband responsible for an extravagant milliner's bill to his wife, comprehending amongst other items ten bonnets and forty-three pairs of gloves in seven months!

Mr. David W. Cornwall, whose disappearance created so much excitement in this place two or three weeks since, returned home on Sunday morning last. [New London Advocate.

Three hundred and thirty-four marriages were solemnized by the different clergymen of Lowell, during the year ending April 30, 1844.

It is asserted upon high authority that the French Steam Packets will begin their trips to this port before many weeks are past.

It is computed that the Albany steamboats on Monday evening carried out at least two thousand passengers. The Knickerbocker alone had on board nearly eight hundred.

A citizen of Utica had his pocket picked of $40 at the railroad depot in that city, on Saturday. Three persons were arrested on suspicion. During their examination a Southern gentleman entered a complaint of having been robbed of his pocket book containing $140, shortly after the arrival of the cars at Utica, on Friday.

The steamer Julia Palmer, which has been running on Lake Erie without regard to the rules of the combination, has been taken possession of by the collector of Buffalo, Mr. Lathrop, in consequence of being owned, it is alleged, principally by foreigners.

We are sorry to learn that in several cases our papers have been delayed in the mails. This resulted, in the cases of which we have heard, from their being sent by a bad route. Our southern papers leave New York invariably at 9 o'clock on the morning of publication day, and our western papers at 5 o'clock P. M. of the same day. In cases where a direction as to the route would hasten their arrival, we shall be glad to be informed of it.

DIED,

In Leonardsville, N. Y., on the 26th ult., Mrs. Nancy Brown, wife of Isaac Brown, Esq., in the 42d year of her age. Mrs. Brown was a member of the 1st Seventh-day Baptist Church in Brookfield, and universally beloved for her Christian meekness and consistency. Her last illness was protracted, yet borne with cheerfulness and resignation. Many will remember the words of advice and warning which fell from her lips during her stay among them.

LETTERS.

John Davis, William Utter, Augustus M. Dunham, Charles Potter, Lester T. Rogers, R. T. Green, B. Church, L. D. Ayres.

Postmasters—Adams Center, Yatton, Iowa, Crossingville, Pa., Scott, Smithville.

RECEIPTS.

Unadilla Forks—John Davis, Morris Langworthy, E. S. Weaver, Ethan Clarke, Isaac Clarke, Lewis Bassett, John B. Stillman, $2 each; Elisha Stillman, $1.
Adams Center—Edward Whitford $4; Joseph J. Green, Samuel L. Babcock, Maxson Whitford, Jesse Maxson, Nelson Babcock, $2 each; Isaac Wright $1.
Adams—Charles Potter $2.
Preston—Russel Maxson $2.
Tallmadge, Mich.—B. Church $2.
Smithville—Elisha Crosby $2.
Chaumont—William Johnson, John S. Smith $2 each.
Verona—Harrison J. Williams $2.
Plainfield, N. J.—Augustus M. Dunham $2.
Scott—Ezra Babcock, Jr. $2.

A CARD.

THE subscriber wishing to remove to Plainfield, N. J., offers to sell to a Seventh-day Baptist the following desirable property, situated in Shiloh, Cumberland Co., N. J., viz: A new and commodious dwelling-house, with a large store-house attached, being a good stand for country business; a new barn, wagon-house, corn-crib, wood-house, and other out-buildings, all of which have been built within six years, and are in complete order.

Also, a pretty good assortment of Store Goods, such as are generally kept in a Country Store, which are offered at such a price as will make it an object for any one who may wish to locate in this part of New Jersey, and enter into the mercantile business.

Also, a small farm adjoining, consisting of about 24 acres, some of which is in a high state of cultivation, and on which is a newly rebuilt dwelling-house, convenient for two small families, a large apple orchard of choice fruit, and other fruit trees, with a good well of water at the door, &c.

The house and lot, and the Store Goods, will be sold with or without the Farm.

If further information is wanted, address the subscriber.
ISAAC D. TITSWORTH, P. M. Shiloh, N. J.
July 22, 1844.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on Wednesday, August 14th, under the care of W. C. Kenyon, as Principal, and Miss Caroline B. Maxson, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

Tuition, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the Seventh-day Baptist General Conference will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in Verona, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference.

Paul Stillman, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having already reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year. F. W. Stillman, Rec. Sec'y.

The Missionary Association will hold its second Anniversary, with the 1st Church in Verona, N. Y., on the Sixth day of the week, before the second Sabbath in September. A Sermon on the subject of Missions will be expected during its session from T. B. Brown—the time to be determined by the Executive Board. It is desirable that all missionary returns may be made to the Secretary previous to that time.

W. B. Gillett, Rec. Sec.

The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Society will meet on fifth day, Sept. 14, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Evangelical Board of Directors for Disseminating Religious Truth among the Jews, will meet on first day, Sept. 15, at the call of the President.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT
Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN
Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA
Fredonia, Louisa Co.—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS
Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath Tract Society publish the following Sabbath Tracts, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

NEW-YORK MARKET, AUGUST 5.

At market, 1100 Beef Cattle, 300 from the South, 55 Cows and Calves, and 2750 Sheep and Lambs.

Prices—Beef Cattle are a little quicker, and we quote $4,25 a 5,50 for retailing, and a few extra at $6. Left unsold 100.

Cows and Calves—$13 to 26. All sold.

Sheep and Lambs—Are a little cheaper. We quote Lambs $1 a 2,62½, and Sheep at $1,25 a $3,50. Left unsold 250.

Aay—A good supply of New at 50 a 56 cts. for cut. The farmers generally state the crop in this vicinity to be very good.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES,
Pot, first sort	4 00 a 4 06
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	23 00a23 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
Americanyellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	28 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	7 75 a 8 62
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5,25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4 4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	– a —
Stripes, fast colors	– a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	27 @ 31
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 72 @ 2 75
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
ickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon Mlb	9 @ 10
ackerel, 1 bbl	9 50 @10 00
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 31 @ 4 37
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 12 @ 4 25
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	6 00 @ 6 00
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	12 00 @12 50
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	85 @ 95
Do South new	80
Rye, Northern	67 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	45 @ 47
Barley N R

Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	85 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng. & Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	8 37 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 7 @ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6½a 6
American	5 a
Spring	5¾a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8¼a 9½
Do. Brown	6¾a 8½
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10 a
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¼
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17¾a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7½
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	[illegible]
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a [illegible]
Souchong	21 a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
n plates I X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	[illegible]
No. 1	[illegible]
No. 2	[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

"THE LAND WHICH NO MORTAL MAY KNOW."

BY BERNARD BARTON.

Though Earth has full many a beautiful spot,
As a poet or painter might show;
Yet more lovely and beautiful, holy and bright,
To the hopes of the heart, and spirit's glad sight,
Is the land that no mortal may know.

There the crystalline stream, burst forth from the Throne,
Flows on, and for ever will flow;
Its waves, as they roll, are with melody rife,
And its waters are sparkling with beauty and life,
In the land which no mortal may know.

And there, on its margin, with leaves ever green,
With its fruits healing sickness and woe,
The fair tree of life, in its glory and pride,
Is fed by the deep, inexhaustable tide,
On the land which no mortal may know.

There, too, are the lost! whom we loved on this earth,
With those mem'ries our bosoms yet glow;
Their reliques we gave to the place of the dead,
But their glorified spirits before us have fled
To the land which no mortal may know.

There the pale orb of Night, and the fountain of Day,
Nor beauty nor splendor bestow;
But the presence of Him, the unchanging I AM!
And the holy, the pure, the immaculate Lamb!
Light the land which no mortal may know.

Oh! who but must pine in this dark vale of tears
From its clouds and its shadows to go,
To walk in the light of the glory above,
And to share in the peace, and the joy, and the love,
Of the land which no mortal may know.

THE SPANISH INQUISITION.

[Translated for the Recorder from the German of Schiller.]

The Spanish Inquisition is an institution of a peculiar kind, and which has no example in the whole course of time, and bears comparison with no civil or spiritual tribunal. There has indeed been inquisition of some sort, ever since reason first ventured upon holy things; ever since there have been sceptics and innovators; but about the middle of the thirteenth century, after some examples of apostacy had alarmed the Romish Hierarchy, Pope INNOCENT III. erected for it a special judgment seat, and separated in an unnatural manner spiritual oversight and instruction from the punishing power. To make it sure that no impulses of humanity and no feelings of nature should mitigate the stern severity of the statutes of the Inquisition, he withdrew it from the bishops and the secular clergy, who were still bound to mankind by the ties of civil life, and made it over to the monks, men who had abjured all the feelings of nature—supple creatures of the Romish chair. Germany, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and France received it. A Franciscan monk sat in judgment over the Knights Templars. A few states were able to exclude it, or to subject it to the civil authority. The Netherlands remained exempt from it till the reign of Charles V.; their bishops exercised the censorship in spiritual matters, and in extraordinary cases availed themselves of foreign courts of Inqusition; the French provinces applied to that of Paris, the German to Cologne.

But the Spanish Inquisition, which we are now specially to consider, came to the West of Europe, otherwise in origin and different in power. In the fifteenth century the last Moorish throne in Grenada was subjugated, and the Saracenic faith finally yielded to the superior fortune of the Christian. But the latter was yet freshly and feebly established in these young Christian kingdoms; and in the confused mixture of heterogenous laws and customs, the two religions had not fairly separated themselves. The sword of persecution had indeed driven many thousand families to Africa; but a far greater part clung to the beloved land of their nativity, and purchased for themselves, by the trick of a pretended conversion, exemption from the dreadful necessity of expatriation, yet continued on Christian altars to serve their Mohammed or Moses. Grenada was not wholly subdued, while its faith still pointed towards Mecca; and while, in the privacy of their homes, the new converts to Christianity became again Jews or Mohammedans, the power of the throne was no more secure than was that of the Romish See. It was not enough that this hostile people should be constrained to the outward forms of a new faith, or wedded to the victorious church by the weak bonds of ceremony:—it was essential to extirpate the very roots of the old religion, and conquer an obstinate predilection, which, by the long-working power of five centuries, had become deeply rooted in their speech, their customs, their laws; and was kept in perpetual activity by the influence of their native soil and sky. If the church would celebrate a complete victory over the hostile worship, and secure her new acquisition against any relapse, she must upheave the very foundation upon which the old faith was built; she must break in pieces the whole form of symbols to which it was secretly attached; she must tear up its secret roots in the most hidden depths of the soul, and obliterate every trade of it in the circle of domestic life, and in the civil world; she must destroy every remembrance of it, and if possible the very susceptibility for its reception. Conscience and honor, native land and family, the sacred feelings of companionship and of nature—these are ever the first to intertwine themselves with religious faith; from it they receive, and to it they impart strength. These bonds must now be unloosed: from the holy feelings of nature must the old religion be violently torn, should it cost even the sanctity of those sentiments.

Thus arose that, which, to distinguish it from the human tribunals which bore the same general name, we call the SPANISH INQUISITION. It had XIMENES for its founder; TORQUEMANDA, a Dominican monk, first ascended its bloody throne, established its statutes, and with the inheritance of them cursed his order forever. Its vows demanded violation of reason and the murder of souls; its instruments were terror and shame; every passion stood in its pay; its snares lay in every joy of life. Solitude itself was not solitary for it; the dread of its omnipresence held freedom in fetters in the very depths of the soul. Every instinct of humanity was subjected to the faith; to it every tie was weak which men had hitherto held the holiest. A heretic was declared to have forfeited all claim upon his kind; by the slightest unfaithfulness to Mother Church he had renounced his species. A modest doubt of the infallibility of the Pope was reckoned as the vilest of crimes, and branded as parricide. The judgment of the Inquisition, like the infection of the plague, brought the soundest body to quick destruction. The dead body, even, of a herteic was accursed; no accident could intercept its sacrifice, the sentence of the Inquisition was executed on corpses and pictures; and the grave itself was no refuge from its terrible arm.

The atrocity of its decisions was only exceeded by the inhumanity of their execution. While they conjoined the ridiculous and the terrible, and captivated the eye by the singularity of their proceedings, by exciting other feelings, they weakened that of sympathy, and drowned all compassion in mockery and derision. With solemn pomp they bear the criminal to the place of execution; a blood-red banner flaunts before; the ringing of all bells accompanies the march. First come the priests in their festal robes, singing a sacred hymn; then follows the victim, clad in a yellow garment upon which figures of devils are painted in black; upon his head he wears a cap of paper, terminating in a human figure, around which curl flames of fire, and hover horrid demons. Averted from him who is forever lost, is borne the crucifix, in token that the Redemption is of no more avail to him; as his mortal body is consigned to the flames, so also is his immortal spirit to the unquenchable fires of hell. A gag stops his mouth, and prevents him from alleviating his misery by cries, or awakening compassion by his mournful story, and disclosing the secrets of the holy Inquisition. After him follow the clergy in their robes of office, the magistracy, and the nobility; the Inquisitor who condemned him closes the melancholy procession. These executions were usually appointed on some high-festival day, for which a certain portion of the unfortunates in the dungeons of the holy houses were set apart, in order to enhance the effect of the spectacle by the number of victims offered; on which occasions the King himself was present, and sat with head bared upon a seat lower than that of the Chief Inquisitor, who, on such a day, took precedence of the monarch himself.—Who would not tremble before a tribunal to which even royalty gave place?

The great religious revolution brought about through LUTHER and CALVIN again imposed that necessity from which originated the Inquisition in Spain; which, instituted at first only to purify the little kingdom of Grenada from the feeble remnant of Saracens and Jews, had now become no less the need of all Catholic Christendom. All Courts of Inquisition in Portugal, Italy, Germany, and France, now assumed the form of that of Spain. It followed the Europeans to India, and established at Goa that terrible tribunal, whose inhuman procedures make us shudder at the bare recital of them. Wherever it sat its foot, desolation followed; but it raged in Spain as in no other country. The dead whom it sacrificed have been forgotten; for the human race again renews itself; the lands bloom again which it has desolated and dispeopled, but a half-millennium will pass away before its traces will disappear from the Spanish character. A noble, magnanimous nation has it checked midway in the career of improvement; from a climate to which it was native has it banished genius; and a gloom, like that which broods over the sepulchre, has it flung upon the spirit and soul of a people, naturally among the most high-spirited and ingenious of any in Europe. G.

TOO MANY KINGS.

Prof. Wright, in one of his letters from England to the Boston Chronicle, uses the following language in discoursing of the present condition of that country:—

The fact is, England has too many kings to support. If I get time, I mean to reckon them up some day. Little and great, I think there cannot be less than a thousand, who by means of primogeniture, corn laws and game laws, are preserved in perpetual royalty, wallowing in wealth like Crœsus, with nothing under the sun to do, except what they like, to pay for it. The Mosaic law took special pains to aid the great natural process of the division of landed property,—the English law, on the other hand, takes as much pains to counteract it. England, not contented with one sacred impersonation of the governing principle, to be drinked to on week days, and prayed for on Sundays, has made herself, in fact, a thousand-fold monarchy. A thousand thrones, with their domains, are set up, and one is preserved sacred to each king and his heir for ever, while all the rest of the seed royal are turned out to graze in the fat and variegated pastures of the church, the army, the navy, and the colonies. But it is said any body, by merit, may become one of these kings—the shoemaker, for instance, whose whole shop is the recess in the wall beneath a window. Very true; but how are the millions who have not merit, but mere manhood, the better for that? They are completely uprooted from the soil, and they and their seed after them, work as they may, must live on, seperated from starvation only by a few paltry shillings and the bitter broth of the "poor laws." What becomes of an earthly paradise when you shut the angel of hope out of it? It is a terrible thing for a nation to be sorry when its children are born. If the author of the Mosaic law was wise, time will prove this English law to be stupendous folly.

THE MOURNER.

"It is very lonely, mamma," murmured a fair haired, lovely girl, as she rested upon a sofa one evening; "it is very lonely now, and the night seems very long. Shall I never see papa any more?"

"Yes, my love, you will see him again in a brighter world than this."

"But this is a fair world," said the little girl, "I love to run and play in the warm sunshine, and pick the water cresses from the brook; and when the weather is a little warmer, I shall go and gather the blue-eyed violet that Pa said was like me."

"Too like, I fear," said the mother, as the crystal tear-drop trembled on the drooping lid, "but, my dear child, there is a fairer world than this, where the flowers never fade; where clouds never hide the light of that glorious sky; for the glory of Him, whose name is love, beams brightly and for ever in those golden courts; the trees that grow on the banks of the river which waters that blessed place, never fade as they do in this world, and when friends meet there they will be parted no more, but will sing hymns of praise to God and the Lamb forever."

"And shall I go to that happy place when I die," said the child, "and will you go with me?"

"Yes," said the mother, "we shall both go in God's own time; when He calls us from this life we shall dwell forever in His presence."

It was a little while, and the mother bent over the grave of this frail flower of intellect, withered by the untimely frosts of death; but was she alone, when in the deep twilight shades, she sat upon the grassy mound, where the deep yearning hopes of that fond heart were gathered in obvious silence? Oh no! The soft and silvery tones of buried love whispered in the breeze that lifted the drooping flowers, overcharged with the dewy tears of night. The diamond stars, that one by one, came forth upon their silent watch, seemed beaming with the light of that deathless flame, which burned undimmed, upon the inmost shrine of her heart, and she enjoyed, in the holy hours of solitude, that communion of pure spirits, which our exalted faith can alone bestow.

SPRING.

In all climates spring is beautiful. In the South it is intoxicating, and sets a poet beside himself. The birds begin to sing; they utter a few rapturous notes, and then wait for an answer in the silent woods. Those green coated musicians, the frogs, make a holiday in the neighboring marshes. They too, belong to the orchestra of Nature, whose vast theatre is again opened, though the doors have been so long bolted with icicles, and scenery hung with snow and frostlike cobwebs. This is the prelude which announces the rising of the broad green curtain. Already the grass shoots forth. The waters leap with thrilling pulse through the veins of the earth, the sap through the veins of the plants and trees, and the blood through the veins of man. What a thrill of delight in spring time! What a joy in being and moving! Men are at work in gardens, and in the air there is an odor of the fresh earth. The leaf buds begin to swell and blush. The white blossoms of the cherry hang upon the boughs like snow-flakes, and ere long our next door neighbors will be completely hidden from us by the dense green foliage. The May flowers open their soft blue eyes. Children are let loose in the fields and gardens. They hold butter cups under each other's chin to see if they love butter. And the little girls adorn themselves with chains and curls of dandelions; pull out the yellow leaves to see if the schoolboy loves them, and blow the down from the leafless strike to find out if their mothers want them at home. And at night so cloudless and so still! Not a voice of living thing, not a whisper of leaf or waving bough, not a breath of wind not a sound upon the earth or in the air! And over head bends the blue sky, dewy and soft, and radiant with innumerable stars, like the inverted bell of some blue flower, spangled with golden dust and breathing fragrance. Or if the heavens are overcast, it is no wild storm of wind and rain, but clouds that melt and fall in showers. One does not wish to sleep, but lies awake to hear the pleasant sound of the dropping rain.

AGRICULTURE.

The American Agriculturalist for August contains the following timely and important suggestions.

WEEDS.—Now is an excellent time to destroy weeds, as the rankest and most pernicious of them are in flower, and you thus prevent their seeding your own and neighbor's land. If cut down close to the ground in full bloom, some kinds will be totally destroyed; others will not rise again that year, or if they do, so feebly as to do little injury, and there is no danger of scarce any running to seed. The most effectual means we have found to destroy the hardier weeds, such as mulleins, thistles, burdocks, &c., is to place half a tablespoonful of salt upon each stem immediately after being cut close to the ground. If there be a great number, after mowing them, scatter salt plentifully upon the land, pasture sheep there, and they will most invariably be destroyed in a season or two. The salt acts beneficially with the sheep-dung in enriching the land. To increase the feed, plaster may be sown at the rate of 1½ to 2½ bushels per acre.

PLASTER NO LONGER BENEFICIAL.—When in Putnam county, and other places the past month, we heard complaints among the farmers that gypsum (plaster of Paris) no longer acted beneficially upon their land. The reason of this is thus explained by Leibig:—

"When we increase the crop of grass in a meadow by means of gypsum, we remove a greater quantity of potash with the hay than can under the same circumstances be restored—hence it happens, that after the lapse of several years, the crops of grass on the meadows manured with gypsum diminish, owing to the deficiency of potash."

From the above extract it will be seen that nothing is wanted but the application of ashes or potash to the land, when plaster will again set upon it with its former good effects. Plaster will also be found beneficial again after manures have been used for a few years, more especially when made of an intermixture of swamp-muck or beat earth.

CUTTING BUSHES AND THISTLES.

From a time the memory of man goeth not beyond, our forefathers have recommended the "old of the moon in August" as the best time to kill bushes by cutting them. The time recommended may be a good one for this latitude, though we are not lunatics enough to believe that lunar influence has much to do with the effect of that operation. All may have noticed that there is a time in the summer when the growth of shrubs and trees stop, the wood hardens, and the buds of the next year form. According to our experience, it is at this particular juncture, when the sap undergoes a change, "turns," as the phrase is, that bushes are most likely to be killed by being cut. This change may take place earlier or later in different latitudes, or in different seasons, and hence we think it cannot depend on the position or phases of the moon.

The best mode of exterminating briars, that we have ever known, is to mow them close to the ground with a stout scythe, soon after the growth for the season has stopped, and afterwards pasture the ground with sheep. The sheep is very fond of the briar when it first starts from the ground, and if a sufficient number are turned on to eat the briars as fast as they appear, two seasons will generally exterminate them. They will not generally start much the same season they are cut, but it is important they should be fed down.

Plowing briars, we have found rather to encourage their spread. Many of the roots run below the reach of the plow, and every piece of a root will send up a new shoot, so that the more they are cut, the more they grow, unless the roots are brought to the surface and carried off or dried and burnt.

Bruising bushes has sometimes a better effect in killing them, than cutting, and for this purpose a tool called a "bush-whacker" is used. In killing whortle (or "huckle") berry bushes, sometimes troublesome in the rocky pastures of New England, this tool may be preferable to the scythe.

We have had the best success in killing Canada thistles by mowing them when they were just past full bloom. The root will then die down to a great depth, and if the land is in grass, the sward will often spread over the thistle-patch and give the next year a crop of good clean hay. We have not seen the digging of thistles (that is the Canada thistles) attended with much advantage. The roots run very deep—we have traced them three feet below the surface—and a very small piece only may throw up a new shoot. The other kinds of thistles, which are only annual, or at most biennial, are easily killed by cutting them off with a hoe, or a tool made for the purpose, just below the crown. This should be done as soon as they can be readily seen, for they often occupy the ground to the exclusion of the grass, and besides, where they are large, the grass which grows near them, cannot be eaten by stock, on account of the annoyance occasioned by their prickly branches and leaves. We have sometimes seen cattle forced to leave the best part of the pasture by these pests.—Cultivator.

GREEN CORN PUDDING.—A Louisville paper says, one of the very finest things ever brought on the table, in the pudding line, is green corn pudding, prepared according to the following receipt: "Let every wife, who would like to surprise her husband by a rare delicacy—try it. Take of green corn twelve ears, and grate it. To this, add a quart of sweet milk, a quarter of a pound of fresh butter, four eggs, well beaten, pepper and salt, as much as is sufficient; stir all well together, and bake four hours in a buttered dish. Some add to the other ingredients a quarter of a pound of sugar and eat the pudding with sauce. It is good cold or warm, with meat or sauce; epicures of the most exquisite taste declare for it, we believe, hot, with the first service."

IMPROVED PIN MACHINE.—Messrs. Brown & Elton, Waterbury, Ct., have in operation an improved machine for the manufacture of Pins, which turns out, as we are informed by a gentleman recently from that place, two barrels of pins a day. The machine is wonderfully curious—perfect and simple in its operation. The wire is run into the machine from a reel, cut to the requisite length, pointed and headed, and made a finished pin. From this machine they fall into the hopper of the Sticking Machine, as it is called, in which, by some diablerie, they are arranged and stuck upon the papers, and come out perfect, only requiring to be packed to be ready for sale. This latter machine, tended only by one girl, will do the work of thirty persons by the old hand process. We have said that two barrels of pins are made a day. A barrel contains 4,000,000 pins, consequently 8,000,000 of pins are manufactured in this little machine each day, sufficient to furnish one pin a day for every female in the United States! There are four other machines in operation in the country, but they probably do not turn out an equal number per day as the Waterbury machine.—Boston Transcript.

WOOL.—The history of the growth of Wool is very curious. Fifty years ago not a pound of fine Wool was raised in the United States, in Great Britain, or in any other country except Spain—in the latter country the flocks were owned exclusively by the nobility of the crown. In 1794, a small flock was sent to the Elector of Saxony, as a present for the King of Spain, whence the entire product of Saxony Wool, now of such immense value. Before the breaking out of the last war between this country and Great Britain, Col. Humphreys succeeded in getting a few merino sheep brought out of Spain, though their exportation was prohibited under the penalty of being sent to the galleys for life.

In 1809, during the second invasion of Spain by the French, some of the valuable Crown flocks were sold to raise money. Our Consul at Lisbon, Mr. Jarvis, purchased fourteen hundred head; and sent them to this country. Previously, however, Mr. Livingston obtained a few sheep of the Spanish breed, in 1792. A portion of the pure unmixed merino blood from these flocks is to be found in Vermont at this time. Such was the origin of the immense flocks of fine wooled sheep in the United States and Great Britain.—Galena Gazette.

SINGULAR ACCIDENT.—A singular accident occurred to a female in Brooklyn on the 4th of July last, from which she has not at this time entirely recovered. It appears she was eating a piece of cocoa nut, and forgetting that she had a torpedo in her hand, while engaged in conversation unfortunately put the small firework into her mouth instead of a piece of the nut. An explosion took place during the process of mastication, which lacerated the tongue very seriously and nearly blew a hole through the cheek.

HOW THEY DO IT IN WISCONSIN.—In travelling in Wisconsin the writer was assured that the town of Milton, Rock County, raised 70,000 bushels of wheat last year; that not a glass of liquor was ever sold in the township; and that in no one year has a Justice of the Peace ever received fees enough to pay for a barrel of salt.

A party of hardy, stout-looking Norwegians, about 90 in number, including women and children, arrived here on Saturday evening in the Boston cars, and left this morning for the West. They have just come to this country and are on their way to Wisconsin to settle. They 'kept house' in the cars over Sunday, and their appearance and manner attracted the attention of all who saw them. Good luck to them in their enterprise, say we.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The sum of $1,200 has been collected from the citizens of St. Louis, to aid the sufferers by the flood. The City Council appropriated $1,000 dollars for the same purpose.

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co. 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, (3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ⅝	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ⅝	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1½	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1½
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2½
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton, Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff, 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatara, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co, Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10, Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co. Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT
NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year; when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, AUGUST 15, 1844. NO. 8.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER SIX.

The Decalogue Unrepealed.

It is admitted by all who know any thing respecting law, that there are only two ways in which an authoritative law can cease to be binding upon all for whom it is designed. It must contain some express limitation in the first enactment, or it will require the same authority to repeal it that first enacted it. Read the Decalogue; what is there in it that limits its application or duration? Its inspired preface asserts the Almighty God to be its author, by appealing to the then most recent manifestation of his power and government; and then every word of the code is applicable to every family of man on the face of the earth—to Gentiles as much as to Jews. To repeal it would be to dissolve all the bonds of moral society; the fair face of Christendom would be broken into ten thousand fragments, and reduced to the condition of those Mahommedan hordes of bandits who rob, enslave, ravish, and murder all other families that they can subdue beyond the limits of their own clan. In the law iteslf there is no limitation or exception hinted at. In the communications of Jehovah to Moses and Israel, attending its promulgation at Sinai, there is none. And so explicit are the sacred writers in their comments upon it, that they say, whosoever transgresses one of its precepts is guilty of offending against the whole law.

Unless God, then, shall see fit to repeal one or all of its precepts, they are all binding upon man as written by the finger of God upon the tables of stone. If Protestant Christian sects may moralize away the fourth, Papists may the second, and Mahommedans the sixth, seventh, and eighth, as by the traditions of their fathers they have done. Sin must lie at the door of all who do this, unless a repealing act can be found, having the stamp of divine authority. But where is it to be found? I know of none, professing Christianity, but Antinomians and the spiritualizing Perfectionists, that pretend that any part of the Decalogue is abrogated except the fourth commandment. Why fasten their objections upon this single precept?—The force of prepossessions and the difficulties that cluster around its observance!

But to the argument.—I admit the authority of Christ and his Apostles as adequate to the change, if it had been made, because the great voice of God and the divine Shekinah, which attested the mission of every inspired prophet of God, attested theirs. To Moses it appeared at the burning bush; and in favor of the Aaronic priesthood, the pillar of a cloud upon the tabernacle; to Jesus, in the form of a dove on the day of his baptism; to the Apostles, on the day of Pentecost in divided spiral flames upon their heads.* The authority with which they spake, therefore, was equal to that which gave the law. But it is impossible to find the repealing sentence; nay, it is impossible to find a commission that includes it. Christ expressly disclaims such commission; (Matt. 5: 17;) "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled." What severer rebuke did he ever lay upon the Pharisees, than for making void the law of God by their traditions? (See Matt. 15: 3 to 9.) "Why do ye transgress the commandments of God by your tradition. . . . . Ye hypocrites! well did Isaiah prophecy of you, saying, this people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men."

It is sometimes alledged, that the Saviour justified his disciples in violating the Sabbath law; and that, in making clay, and commanding the man whom he had healed to take up his bed on the Sabbath day, he set at nought the Sabbath law, himself. This was the charge the Jews alledged against him; but this Jesus sternly repelled, declaring his disciples guiltless, not because he had abrogated or would abrogate the law; for he charges the Jews with misunderstanding it, saying, (Matt. 12: 5,) "Have ye not read in the law, how that, on the Sabbath days, the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless." They would admit it was right for the priests to labor in the worship of God in the temple; his disciples were in the service of one greater than the temple. Again, (John 7: 23,) "Ye on the Sabbath day circumcise a man. If a man on the Sabbath day receive circumcision, that the law of Moses should not be broken, are ye angry at me because I have made a man every whit whole on the Sabbath day. Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment." So also John 5: 16, "the Jews sought to slay him because he had done these things on the Sabbath day. But Jesus answered, My Father worketh hitherto and I work," i. e. God, who instituted the Sabbath, although he rested from the works of creation, has ever been pouring out his blessings of providence and mercy upon man from then until now, and I am engaged in the same work while healing this impotent man. Was there ever a more triumphant refutation of a groundless accusation? So far from their being any appearance of abrogating the law, these instances were all related to show that Jesus set at nought the traditions of the Pharisees, and restored the Sabbath to the primitive design of the law, viz: the promotion of the glory of God and the good of man. Thus, when the ruler of the synagogue answered with indignation, because Jesus healed a woman of her infirmity, the Lord answered him, and said, "Thou hypocrite! doth not each one of you on the Sabbath day loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him to watering? And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the Sabbath day? And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed," as every such accuser of the Lord Jesus Christ ought to be.

As the Lord Jesus did not abrogate the law, so neither did the Apostles. Paul takes up this accusation, Rom. 3: 31—"Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid: yea, we establish the law." He did not except the fourth commandment. Rom. 14: 5, 6: "One man esteemeth one day above another, another esteemeth every day alike," &c., is sometimes resorted to as a kind of covert to hide from a Sabbatarian argument; but none, I believe, feel any safety in it, because it makes as much against the first day as the seventh; so that it is generally admitted to refer to particular festivals. And all that can be gathered from it is, that Christians might or might not observe those festivals, as their own inclination or conscience dictated. The passage which makes the most plausible appearance of doing away the fourth commandment, is Collossians 2: 16—"Let no man therefere judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect to an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days." I am willing to give this passage all the weight it can possibly have from the text. Disconnected, it would seem to be against the enforcement of a weekly Sabbath. But we have no right so to read any Scripture, nor indeed any book. We must "compare spiritual things with spiritual," (2 Cor. 2: 13,) and thus "search the Scriptures." Taking this course, it is plain that the whole context, and every parallel passage, so fixes and limits the meaning of the passage, that it cannot be made to include the weekly Sabbath. In verse 14th, the Apostle speaks of these abrogated things, as against us, contrary to us, a shadow of things to come, but the body is of Christ. In the text, it is joined with meat and drink. In Ephesians 2: 14, 15, these things are spoken of as a partition between Jews and Gentiles, the enmity, the law of commandments contained in ordinances; and these are abolished in Christ's death upon the cross. Whatever they were, they were things that have kept Jews and Gentiles apart. The Decalogue is never so spoken of in the Scriptures. On the contrary, it is called by the same Apostle, holy, just, and good. The Sabbath is called "a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable." But in the times of the Apostles there were sacred days among the Jews besides those which the laws of Moses enjoined, all which were sometimes called Sabbaths, annual rests. And to these, I have no doubt, the Apostle refers. So far from a weekly Sabbath being now contrary to us, against us, every sect of Christians has to have one, whether they hold it in theory or not. And however burdensome they may wish to represent the holy Sabbath of the Lord our God, (nicknamed Jewish,) their self-imposed burden, the first day, is as long to observe, and much more burdensome to enforce.

S. D.

---

* And I expect it will return at the gathering in of the Jews.

THE HIGHLANDS OF ETHIOPIA.

By Maj. W. C. Harris, of the Hon. E. I. Co's. Engineers.

We gave a notice of this book some weeks ago. A friend who has leisure has volunteered to examine it with reference to the religious character of the Abyssinians—especially their regard for the Sabbath. The article which we publish this week will introduce our readers to the country and its King. A succeeding number will make them acquainted with the religious customs of the people. [Ed. Rec.

One of the fruits of the enterprise and far-reaching policy of Great Britain, has been the recent acquisition of Cape Aden. Along the entire coast of southern Arabia there is not a more remarkable feature than the the lofty promontory of Aden, rising eighteen hundred feet above the ocean, into which dip numerous bare and rugged buttresses, of width only sufficient to afford footing to a cony, and each terminating in a bluff inaccessible scarf. Rounding the stern peninsula, a magnificent western bay developes its broad expanse. Here ride the vessels of war composing the British Red Sea Squadron. Landing at Ras Marbut, a tortuous track of five miles conducts to the cantonment and town of Aden, the decayed capital of Arabia Felix, situate upon the sea shore, without either seed, water, or tree.

Aden, in its history and reverses, presents the type of many a mighty nation—it flourished and has fallen. So early as the reign of Constantine the Great, it was celebrated for its impregnable fortifications, its extended traffic, and its attractive ports. Little more than two centuries and a half have rolled away, since the decayed city ranked among the most opulent emporia of the East. The cape is hallowed to the Mussulman by the tradition that it was honored by the preaching in person of the arch impostor, Mahomet. Three hundred and sixty mosques once reared their proud heads amidst eighty thousand inhabitants. Turkey and Portugal, struggling for supremacy in the East, hotly contested its possession, until, no longer able to maintain their rivalry, Aden reverted into the grasp of its ancient masters, the Arabs, and became the retreat of the piratical hordes of the desert, in whose hands it lost its opulence and population; and the trade passed into the rival port of Mocha. At the period of British occupation, ninety dilapidated houses, giving shelter to six hundred impoverished souls, were all that remained to attest its ancient glories. Under the flag of old England, Aden has enjoyed a degree of happiness and security never previously experienced, even in the days of her greatest glory. Emigrants from the interior and exterior are daily crowding within the walls to seek refuge from the grinding oppression and galling burthen of insatiate native despots. In the short space of three years, the census augmented to twenty thousand souls, and substantial dwellings are springing up in every direction. A lucrative market to the manufactures of India and Great Britain is rapidly extending by the facilities attending communication with the opposite African coast, south of the Straits of Bab el Mandeb, from whence is exported myrrh, frankincense, precious gums, drugs, dry hides, gold dust, civet, ivory, rhinoceros horns, peltries, and ostrich feathers, besides coffee of the choicest growth. A wide field is opened for mercantile speculation, and it is not a little pleasant to contemplate the opportunity it affords for the improvement of Christian Abyssinia, and the Christianization of the more benighted and remote portions of Eastern Africa.

From Aden, now the metropolis of British Arabia, the Government determined to send an embassy on a commercial mission to Sáhela Selássie, the King of Shoa, in Southern Abyssinia, whose capital is Ankober, in lat. 9° 34′ 45″ N.—three hundred and seventy miles inland from the maratime town of Tajura, situated in lat. 11° 46′ 35″ N., which was reached by the embassy, in the Honorable Company's brig of war Euphrates after a sail of forty-four hours from Aden. After exposure to some perils, and an exceedingly tedious and trying journey, the party reached their destination with the loss of but a single life, a Portuguese sergeant, who was stabbed by a Bedouin Arab.

After some tedious delay, the Embassy was favorably received by his despotic majesty, and continued to reside at his capital for eighteen months—from August 1841, to Jan. 1843,—making frequent excursions into the different parts of the kingdom, gathering extensive scientific, geographical, and commercial information, to be turned to account by the British Government, on whose behalf a treaty of commerce was established. And from two or three references in the history, we conclude a missionary of the Church of England is already established there.

These are important facts, and will undoubtedly lead to the most beneficial results to benighted Africa. Commerce has not only forced its way, but created markets and customers in many a wilder and more inaccessible portion of the globe than Christian Abyssinia. and opened the way for their improvement and civilization. In the absence of water carriage, the experience of many years has proved that the living ship of the desert is a machine of transport adequate to the most important traffic; and if once established, that traffic would, in a few years, bind the rude tribes of Africa, rulers, traders, and people, in the strongest chains of personal interest. The commercial convention between Great Britain and Shoa contained sixteen articles, which, being written in the native language and English, were read, commented upon, and fully approved, and the royal hand of Sáhela Salássie annexed thereto. They involved the sacrifice of arbitrary appropriation by the crown of the property of foreigners dying in the country; the abrogation of the despotic interdiction, which had from time immemorial precluded the purchase or display of costly goods by the King's subjects; and the removal of penal restrictions upon voluntary movement within and beyond the kingdom, which formed a modification of the obsolete national maxim, never to permit a stranger who had once entered, to depart from Abyssinia! All of those evils had heretofore been in full force; but his Majesty declared his determination to annul them for the good of his people. This, in a kingdom where the essence of despotism pervades the land to its very core, is a great achievement of the King over the prejudices and customs of many generations' standing; and when we contemplate the extent and resources of his kingdom, a great boon to his numerous people. The hereditary provinces at this day subject to the King of Shoa, are comprised in a rectangular domain of one hundred and fifty by ninety miles, which area is traversed by five systems of mountains, whereof the culminating point divides the basin of the river Nile to the north from that of the Hawash to the south.

The Christian population of Shoa and Efát are estimated at one million of souls, and that of the Mahommedan and pagan population of the numerous dependencies, at a million and a half. Four hundred governors are appointed under the crown of Shoa; and these, with fifty guardians of the frontiers, conduct the affairs of the kingdom and its dependencies. All appointments are at the King's disposal—all rewards and distinctions come from the King's hands. In years of famine food itself is to be obtained alone from the royal granaries; it is not therefore surprising, that those over whom one so absolute presides, should be mean, servile and cringing, and that they should, in their aspirations after power and place, mould their lives according to the despot's will. The King, however has a merciful hand and his sceptre falls lightly upon the head of the offender. "I have before mine eyes the fear of God," is his frequent exclamation when passing sentence upon the culprit. Guilty of none of the cruelties or enormities which stain most of the other rulers of Abyssinia—accessible, not easily offended, eventempered, patient in his investigations, mild and usually just in his despotism—he is universally adored in his own dominions, rather through love than through fear. Wise and warlike in his expeditions, he is feared and respected by all the adjacent tribes. During the reign of Assa Woosen, grandsire to Sáhela Selássie, the independent states of Shoa and Efát were of very considerable extent. Throughout his long reign, it has been the King's favorite project to reunite the scattered remnants of the Christian population that marked the extent of the dominions of his forefathers. Swaying as he does, the destinies of millions, should his life be preserved we cannot but indulge a sanguine hope that under the influence of his new acquaintances, a great improvement will speedily take place in the social condition of his ancient Sabbath keeping people; a view of whom we propose to give our readers in a succeeding number.

DAYS OF OLD.

A Jewish paper published in London, called "The Voice of Jacob," has commenced a series of articles under the title, "Days of Old." The articles are designed to illustrate some of the most remarkable incidents in the history of that people, and to awaken a new interest by giving a vivid picture of those incidents. Presuming that many of our readers would be glad to visit, in company with a thoughtful and imaginative Israelite, some of those scenes in which Moses mingled, we shall occasionally copy from the articles. The first gives a description of

THE DEPARTURE FROM EGYPT.

The family of Merab was too little for the lamb; they made their count, and it sufficed for two households. Strangely mysterious did the scene appear to the young children, who marveled that, at the wonted hour of rest, no preparations for rest were made; but men with girded loins, and sandaled feet, and staves that trembled in the stoutest hands, at that moment of excited expectation, surrounded the board, eating in haste the smoking portions of that one pet lamb, which on yestermorn had been their own playfellow. For Merab was poor; among the flocks and herds of Goshen he possessed the scantiest portion: the spoiler's hand had fallen heavily on his substance, the task-master's scourge more heavily still on his lacerated shoulders. He was one of those who, by reason of civil bondage, had scarce lent an ear to the cheering voice of Moses; and the faint hope at one time awakened, too long deferred, had sickened his heart. Yet he obeyed; the lamb was duly slain, the lintel and the door-posts of his lowly house bore the sprinkling of a crimson dye; and leaning for very weariness of body and mind on the old staff that had supported his father's steps, he finished his portion of the mysterious meal; and in murmured accents of querulous impatience, not unmingled with discontent, was commencing a remark, when young Jabin eagerly interposed—and the tones of that voice were always music to the ear of Merab.

"Hush, father—dear father! doubt not now, nought hath failed that the sons of Amram have spoken: nought shall fail, father; for He, the Eternal One, who hath seen our affliction and heard our cry, is able to deliver us. Oh, mistrust him not!" "Thou art right, Jabin," responds the neighbor who stood beside him. "The lip of eighteen summers speaks wisdom, Merab, when encouraging trust in the God of our father, Abraham. Let now thy first-born be thy teacher." But Jabin heeded not his words: faith in that Hebrew's bosom was even strong as sight; and now, on the very verge of the midnight hour, his eye, his ear, his whole soul, were turned in one direction; towards Thebes, beneath some of whose hundred gates his frame had often bent under the heavy load of brick, while the archway echoed to the thong that rent his tender flesh. Sought he vengeance? No, no: but he longed yet more to see the glory of Israel's Great Deliverer.

Merab sought to speak; but a sudden awe enchained his tongue. Was it a rustling breeze that momentarily swept by, and gently shook the fragile dwelling? It came, and it is gone:—was it the angel's wing in his terrible mission? No time for words, no time for thought; that yell of horror, those shrieks of agony, bespeak the consummation of Egypt's woe; and from every side a crowd of frantic suppliants pour in upon the tents of Goshen—"Haste, haste!" they cry, "depart, depart! we be all dead men!"

Jabin is every where: he has caught up the kneading trough with the unleavened dough; he has rolled the garments of the household into packages, proportioned to the strength of those upon whose shoulders they shall be bound; and many a glittering ornament, and many a piece of Egyptian gold, is wildly flung into them, by the distracted women who hasten his work. Just wages of Israel's hard toil! long unjustly withheld, now forced from the grasping hand by Him, whose is the silver, and whose is the gold! Jabin heeds not the treasure, freedom is the jewel that to his eyes out-flashes the radiance of the sun: freedom, as the gift of the Eternal.

O night, much to be remembered by Israel in all generations for ever! yea, long as the sun and moon endure, shall Israel observe that night unto the LORD! Neither sun, nor moon, nor stars, shone then upon their path, as they left far behind the land of their captivity; but a majestic column of wreathed clouds, in the semblance of living fire, resting its base on the horizon, and, towering to the zenith, illumined the night; and when Israel had fulfilled the last sacred duty, by reverently lifting from their resting place the embalmed remains of Joseph, the pillar moved onward; and, laden with the little substance that had been his own, enriched by spoils which he never dreamed of gathering, surrounded by the many thousands of his fellow-bondsmen, while his wondering little ones clung to the folds of his vestment, Merab strode along; his heart drinking in the soft tones of Jabin's voice, while heavily laden, he sustained his mother's steps, and rapturously exclaimed, "Said I not truly? hath not the Eternal delivered Israel?"

CONSECRATION—DR. GRANT'S LAST MESSAGE.

A letter from Doct. Smith, giving the particulars of Doct. Grant's sickness and death, contains also an account of a very interesting conversation, in which the latter, a few days before his death, expressed his views respecting the obligations of Christians to the missionary enteprise. He was expecting to return to this country in the course of a few weeks; after speaking of the circumstances which made this visit necessary, and expressing his regret that it could not be avoided, he remarked that now the way was open for him to leave Mosul, he began to feel that his return to the United States might be blessed for good to himself and his fellow Christians. "We all need," said he, "to be more consecrated to our work; but, if I mistake not, our friends at home have little idea of pursuing their common employments with the unity of purpose which the gospel requires. They do not labor at their trades, in their counting-houses, and on their farms, with the single intention of thereby acquiring means with which to build up the kingdom of God; and they do not seem to understand the Scripture doctrine, that to extend their religion should be the first object of life. Should I succeed in bringing this view distinctly before those whom I shall address, and with whom I shall associate, may not God bless the effort, and thus lead some to devote themselves more unreservedly to his service?"

To many it will seem a mysterious providence that this beloved brother should have been cut off in the midst of his usefulness, and thus prevented from delivering to Christians in this country a message that few, alas! do not need. But "he, being dead, yet speaketh." Let us all, therefore, receive the admonition, remembering that it fell from the lips of one who stood, even while he uttered it, upon the confines of the eternal world [illegible] now, doubtless, could he address us, would urge us "to be more coscrecrated to our work," by higher motives than any which it is given to man to know. And may the Holy Spirit,—whose province it is to communicate just views of duty, as well as to inspire a willingness to do it,—give widespread and cordial reception "this last message" of our departed friend! [Dayspring.

A HINT TO HEARERS.

A few years ago, when making a preaching tour in Yorkshire, Mr. Rowland Hill paid a visit to an old friend, who said to him—"Mr. Hill, it is just sixty-five years since I first heard you preach, and I remember your text and part of your sermon." "'Tis more than I do," was his remark. "You told us," his friend proceeded, "that some people were very squeamish about the delivery of different ministers who preached the same gospel. You said, suppose you were attending to hear a will read, where you expected a legacy to be left you, would you employ the time when it was reading in criticising the manner in which the lawyer read it? No, you would not; you would be giving all ear to hear if anything was left to you and how much it was. That is the way I would advise you to hear the gospel."

EXCELLENT MORALITY—WHO WILL HEED IT?

"God has said, 'thou shalt not put a stumbling block before the blind,' and will he indeed allow you to swindle your neighbor out of his property because he is not good at a bargain? In the city of New Orleans we once witnessed the following incident. A very young girl was standing in the door of her father's warehouse with a silver pencil in her hand. A man passing by said, 'My child, give me that pencil, and I will give you this orange for it.' The offer was accepted, and the child ran to her father, and, with the utmost simplicity, reported what she had done. 'Villainous!' you exclaim: but let no person condemn this man, who holds it right to make a good bargain (as the phrase is) when an inexperienced person, or perhaps his neighbor's child falls in his way."

[Ohio Observer.

INCONSISTENCY.

"Thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal."

"Our Lord practiced all that he taught," says Cyprian, "to leave without excuse the disciple who learns but performs not." Many of the professed followers and imitators of Christ, impose duties on others which themselves do not perform, praise virtues with which their own characters are unadorned, and rebuke sins which they themselves practice. They are indeed "anxious to know the lives of others" but "slothful to amend their own." Thus they put into the hands of transgressors the very excuse which they desire for continued disobedience to all the commands of God.

When will professing Christians learn, that they ought either not to preach, or else themselves to practice what they preach? How shocking the spectacle when we hear an individual echoing the denunciation, 'Cursed be the deceiver that hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the Lord an unclean thing,' and then see him offer upon that sacred altar that very abomination. 'He that hath an ear let him hear.'

DEATH.—He that is well prepared for the great journey, cannot enter on it too soon for himself, though his friends will weep for his departure.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, AUGUST 15, 1844.

"BE WATCHFUL."

There has seldom been a time when Christian watchfulness was more needed than at present. The religious world is now in a state of fearful commotion. A strife for the mastery is going on between some of the leading ecclesiastical organizations, which must lead to important results for good or for evil. A variety of errors, wearing the garb of truth, have been promulgated for a time past, with a zeal unparalleled in the history of religious discussions. A freedom and latitude of inquiry is apparent, which portends great changes—changes which shall affect both the doctrines and practices of men. An impression pervades many communities, that we are on the eve of a conflict which shall develop things altogether new, and hasten the consummation of Jehovah's purposes. These impressions are not confined to enthusiasts or alarmists; they are felt by many of the most calm and far-seeing Christian observers. They should, therefore, be considered by all. And what should be their influence? They ought not to excite fears or discouragement among Christians; for such should know, that out of this convulsion, an overruling Providence can bring order and harmony. Truth never suffers from thorough investigation. On the contrary, its radiance and glory are increased by the trial. There must be multiplied "overturns," before He shall come and reign whose right it is. Instead of being discouraged, therefore, Christians should lift up their heads and rejoice, for their redemption draweth nigh. But there is, notwithstanding, great occasion for watchfulness. Times of change always require it; and the greater the change the more imperative the necessity. "Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord." "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching."

WHICH IS THE SEVENTH DAY?

The Vermont Religious Observer copies from our paper of August 1, an article headed, "A Short Way with an observer of the first day as a Sabbath," and accompanies it with the following remarks:—

'The foregoing we cut from the Sabbath Recorder, a paper published at New York, and which we have just placed among our exchanges. It appears to be conducted with ability and candor, and advocates the sanctity of the seventh day, as the Sabbath now to be observed.

'We are pleased with "short ways," hence we will not enter into any discussion in reference to the observance of the seventh instead of the first day of the week, until the editor will tell us which is the seventh day from creation. Let us have the truth on this point in a "short way."'

We thank the editor of the Observer for presenting his readers with the gist of the Scripture argument in favor of the sanctity of the seventh day, and will cheerfully comply with his request, by giving, in several "short ways," our reasons for believing that the day commonly called Saturday is the true seventh day from creation.

SHORT WAY No. 1.

Any mode of reckoning and naming which is universally adopted, is supposed to be correct unless there are reasons for doubting its correctness. Now all men—Jews who observe the seventh day, Mahommedans who observe the sixth day, and Christians who observe the first day—agree in calling Saturday the seventh day of the week, as if it were coincident with the original seventh day, and there is no reason to doubt the correctness of this naming. Therefore, we suppose that Saturday "is the seventh day from creation."

In regard to this species of argument, Bishop Butler, in his Analogy, says, "To us, probability is the guide of life." "In questions of difficulty, or such as are thought to be so, if the result of examination be, that there appears, upon the whole, any the lowest presumption on one side, and none on the other, or a greater presumption on one side, this determines the question, and will lay us under an absolute and formal obligation, in point of prudence and interest, to act upon that presumption." We do not make this quotation, nor use this argument, because we think it necessary in order to sustain the claims of the seventh day; but simply to show, that upon the lowest ground the seventh day is more likely than any other to be coincident with the original seventh day; and that reason, therefore, would require us to observe it.

SHORT WAY No. 2.

The language of one part of Scripture harmonizes with the language of every other part of Scripture. Now, in Genesis, "the seventh day from creation" is called the Sabbath; in the fourth commandment, the seventh day is called the Sabbath; in the Gospels and in the Acts of the Apostles, the day observed by the Jews at that time is called the Sabbath. Therefore, the day observed by the Jews at the time of Christ, the day enjoined in the fourth commandment, and the day sanctified at the completion of creation work, must be one and the same day, the seventh day of the week, the Sabbath.

SHORT WAY No. 3.

Every commandment which God has given can be obeyed. Now, God commands us to keep holy the seventh day, which can not be done if he has allowed such a confusion to take place in the reckoning of time that we can not tell which is the seventh day. Therefore, no such confusion has taken place as to excuse us from keeping the seventh day.

SHORT WAY No. 4.

For a man to say that God has given a commandment which can not be obeyed, is to charge God with unreasonableness and folly. Now, those who neglect to keep the seventh day, under a pretence that they can not tell which day is the seventh, say that God commands them to do what they can not do. Therefore, such persons charge God with unreasonableness and folly.

In conclusion, we wish to say, that our duty to keep the seventh day does not rest upon our ability to count the revolutions of the earth and decide by this means which is the seventh day. God has commanded men to observe the seventh day; most men allow that Saturday is the seventh day; and all seem to know which is the "first day of the week." In such circumstances, we fear that the plea that they could not tell which was the seventh day, will have but little weight in the day of judgment. We can not but express our sorrow to find the editor of a "religious" newspaper, who ought to be a friend and supporter of the sabbatic institution, speaking of the uncertainty and indefiniteness of the day in such a way as most effectually to weaken the hold of all sacred time upon the hearts and consciences of men. Should he hereafter conclude, that there is sufficient definiteness about which is the seventh day, to encourage him to "enter into any discussion in reference to the observance of the seventh day instead of the first day," we shall be happy to meet him on Scripture ground. We say Scripture ground, because we believe that what is not built upon that will soon all. The Bible should be our rule, and it should be so interpreted as to allow God to "be true," though it should make every man who has written on the subject, to be "a liar."

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

There has never been a time in this country when the subject of the Sabbath has received greater attention from the press than it is receiving at present. Nearly every one of our exchange papers contains some article, argumentative, hortatory, or illustrative, on the subject. These papers divide themselves into four classes, each of which deserves a notice.

One class—and it embraces most of the large and popular journals, which "receive honor of men"—is occupied in giving accounts of Conventions, notices of accidents that have occurred on Sunday, eulogies upon those who have been strict observers of the day, and anathemas against those who have profaned it. These, of course, are careful not to hint that any body doubts the sacredness of that day, excepting infidels and irreligionists. In some cases, they even prefer to lie under the charge of being inconsistent with themselves and careless about the truth, rather than to vindicate their own views, or to endeavor to instruct those who differ from them. Such journals, being altogether "non-committal," have the sympathy of those who love peace more than truth, and the approval of the multitude more than the approval of the Word of God.

A second class seem to be conscious that the first question—which is the Sabbath day?—ought to be first settled. Some papers of this class have admitted to their columns articles discussing the question. Among them, "The Rose," published at Bath, N. Y., lies before us, containing a long article in favor of the Sabbatarian view. The article is written with candor, and considerable force, and it can not fail to be useful in leading to inquiries on the subject. If all the papers that now talk so much about the Sabbath, would imitate the example of this one, we might hope that a foundation to build upon would finally be laid.

A third class of journals find it necessary to speak about the day of the Sabbath, but aim to leave an impression that no good will result from the discussion. The "Olive Branch," published at Boston, contains an editorial headed, "Which is the true Sabbath?" designed to point out some errors in the article of the Rose, to which we have just referred. The writer says, "In regard to the Sabbath, as to the day to be observed, or as to injunctions to keep sacred any particular day of the week, the New Testament Scriptures are strangely silent." After speaking of the long-continued practice of keeping the first day of the week, he says, "We cannot agree with the writer in the Rose, that any good will result from a discussion of this subject, much less that any thing will be gained by an attempt to adopt the Jewish for the Christian Sabbath." As the "Rose" will probably feel called upon to reply, we will not answer the article.

The fourth class includes those journals that deny the divine appointment of the first day of the week, and question whether the Sabbath was designed to continue under the Christian dispensation. These seem to have been aroused by the modern movements. The Liberator of August 2, contains an article from a correspondent, making some strictures on these movements, and noticing a discourse on the subject by one of the movers. Of one section of this discourse, the writer says, "The argument for the substitution of the first day of the week, instead of the seventh, was as unsatisfactory as that for the institution and authority of the Jewish Sabbath. The change was made because Christ rose from the dead on the first day of the week. That, in the middle of the nineteenth century, the divine institution of the Christian Sabbath should, by a large body of the community, be based on such a fact as that, does not speak much in favor of the progress of theology or philosophy, in these enlightened times. He admitted that there is no express command from God for the substitution; but he asserted, that the substitution was made for the reason above stated, and that this substitution was sanctioned by heaven."

We are happy to see the discussion going on, and have no fear that the truth will suffer. Though some may attempt to conceal it, and others may boldly deny it, the final result will be favorable.

BAD ARGUMENTS.

An article is going the rounds of the papers, stating that the chaplain of the Maryland Penitentiary has taken great pains to find out from the convicts what was the commencement of the downward career of each of them; and that the result is, that 99 out of every 100 of them commenced the career of wickedness which brought them to prison by Sabbath-breaking. No doubt the pious chaplain believes this to be a sound conclusion, and a good argument in favor of keeping the Sabbath. But allowing him to be correct, what shall be said of the numerous similar calculations which have been made by the advocates of other objects? It is not uncommon to hear temperance lecturers attribute the downward career of nearly an equal proportion of prisoners to the use of intoxicating liquors. A lecturer on family government will probably claim that an equally large proportion commenced with disobedience to parents. And a lecturer on chastity will be sure to account for the fall of nearly as great a proportion from cherishing bad thoughts.

Now, the result of this kind of reasoning—or rather, asserting, without reason—we believe to be extremely injurious. It leads men to overlook the requirements of God's Word, and to think upon a course of action as right or wrong according to its probable consequences—consequences, of which, in many cases, they can form not the least conception, without the aid of Revelation. Acting in accordance with this kind of reasoning, a course of wickedness is often looked upon as a game of chance; and men enter upon it, or refuse to enter upon it, simply in the light of the question whether or not they can escape from the physical evils which are often connected with sin.

But is man left to grope his way through this world, amid temptations and dangers, by such light alone. We cannot think it. God has provided better means of safety. His Word is designed to be "a lamp unto man's feet, and a light unto his path;" it contains a law which is "perfect;" and it is able to make men wise unto salvation. If the time and thought expended in gathering statistics and calculating consequences, upon which, after all, little reliance can be placed, was devoted to explaining and enforcing the simple requirements of God, we apprehend that much more good would result.

If any inquire how we explain the facts of which so much is made, our answer is at hand. A wicked man is such because he disobeyes God; and he that transgresses in one point will generally be guilty of all. If, therefore, such an one sees a prospect of pleasure or gain from breaking what he calls the Sabbath, he will break it; if his interest will be subserved by disobeying his parents, he will disobey them; in short, whatever sinful gratification he judges to be worth more than it is likely to cost, is greedily embraced. Hence, when one man asks him if he broke the Sabbath, another if he was intemperate, and a third if he was disobedient, his answer to each is in the affirmative. And here, according to the Doctors, is an illustration, that disregard for the Sabbath, disobedience to parents, intemperance, and licentiousness, have each of them brought to the prison 99 out of 100 of its occupants.

We should tremble to think that the Lord's Sabbath rested mainly upon such calculations; for we are sure that it would be a sandy and deceptive foundation. We believe that a good end will never sanctify bad means; and that the truth can not be advanced by falsehood or misrepresentation. We can not, therefore, sympathize with efforts built upon such estimates as we have here referred to. Our opinion is, that the best way to secure honor for the Bible and the Sabbath of the Bible, is for Christians themselves to honor them in practice and in theory.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

Many months since an individual from Massachusetts came to this city in search of Sabbath publications. The reason of this was, that having recently embraced Baptist views, his Pedobaptist friends suggested, that they had the same authority for infant baptism that he had for the observance of "Lord's day," and that he might as well retain the one as the other. An examination of the Scriptures led him to reject both. Having never seen an observer of the seventh day, he visited the city, introduced himself to a brother, and seemed to be greatly comforted in the truth. He carried home with him a quantity of tracts and papers, but until recently nothing more was heard of him, and fears were entertained that he might have found the way of truth too narrow, unsupported as he was by the countenance of a single Sabbath-keeper. Last week a letter was receied, from which the following extract is made:

"Our ministry here admit that the Bible is not sufficient to prove that the first day is the Sabbath, but claim that they can prove it by history, Strange proof for Protestants to use! One says he is keeping the Sabbath according to the commandment; he works six days and keeps the seventh; that God is not particular, if we keep the seventh part of time. And, says a deacon, after reading some tracts, 'I have got to be so old that think I shall not change the day. What would my children say to see me harness my team on Sunday? They would say, Why not all go on together, and not have all this confusion; God is not particular.' Oh that word particular! Yes, if God's Word told me that He was not particular, but would suffer our own convenience, I for one would keep the day that others do. But God says to Moses, 'See that you make all things as I showed you.' He did not tell him to do as he pleased, for he was not particular. But blessed be God that he is particular; and it is my earnest prayer to him that he will help me to be particular to obey him. The Address to the Baptists has been read extensively, and several of the Baptists seem to be convinced, and have openly declared that if there be any Sabbath it is the seventh day; and it seems to me that the reason for not observing it is that the cross is too great. * * * Blessed be God that he has shown me the way, that all things have so far worked together for my good, and that he is able to change the hearts of men and bring them to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus." N. M.

TIME OF COMMENCING THE SABBATH.

A correspondent asks for our opinion respecting the "commencement and duration of the seventh day." He probably is not aware, that the subject has been considerably discussed among us, and that at the last meeting of the General Conference a full report upon it was presented and adopted. Such is the case, however; and instead of giving our own individual opinion, we prefer to copy that report. Although some did not consent to be responsible for the argument here used, yet nearly all cordially united in the recommendation of the closing paragraph. The Committee reported:—

"That in their opinion, the Scriptures not only permit, but require us to regard the evening before the Sabbath, commonly called Friday evening, as the proper time of its commencement, for which the following reasons are offered.

1. We suppose that when God instituted the Sabbath at the close of his creative operations, that portion of time which he then "sanctified and blessed," included the evening before the seventh day. The form of expression used in reference to the several days occupied in creation, "the Evening and the Morning were the first day"—"the Evening and the Morning were the second day," &c., is to be considered as denoting the real order in which time was recorded. The Evening being put for the part we call night, and the Morning for that part which in popular language is called day. A little reflection will show that in the order of nature, night precedes the day. By this we do not mean to speak of that absolute darkness which rested upon the face of the deep before God began to model chaos into form, as being the night which preceded the first day. But this we mean. When God said, Let there be light, he did not bring light into existence in the form of broad daylight, as distinguished from what is called night; for the sacred narrative shows that the work of separating the light from the darkness and gathering it into broad full day, was a subsequent work. But when light was first called into existence, it was intermingled with darkness, being merely the lighting up of the gloomy absolute darkness that reigned from eternity, and constituted that phenomenon we call night. After this God divided the light from the darkness, and called the light, day; and the darkness, he called night. Hence, it appears that in the order of nature, the night precedes day. All the several days of creation appear to be reckoned in the same order. Wherefore, unless it can be shown that the seventh day was different in commencement from all the other days of the week, it would appear that the evening before the seventh day was that which received the blessing and sanctification from the Author and Lord of the Sabbath.

2. When the Sabbatic rest peculiar to the day of atonement for Israel was regulated by law, it was enjoined from even to even, &c.—Lev. 23: 32. Though this has no reference to the weekly Sabbath, but merely to an institution which was a shadow of things to come, we are not able to discover any reason why that Sabbath in particular shall be so observed unless such was the natural order of time.

3. When Nehemiah undertook to reform Sabbath profanation in Judah, he commenced by shutting the gates in the evening as soon as dark.—Neh. 13: 19. This clearly shows the practice of that people in regard to the institution. If the evening was not the proper time for beginning the Sabbath rest, it is difficult to construe the conduct of Nehemiah in this matter into anything else than an interference with the sacred rights of the people.

Such is a brief outline of the views which lead us to believe that the law of the Sabbath requires us to observe the evening previous, as a part of the holy institution; and hence we consider that the desecration of the evening is a real violation of the law. We know not whether these views will operate to the conviction of those who may differ from us. But inasmuch as they are those which are entertained by the great body of the denomination, we would affectionately entreat our brethren that, for the sake of peace and out of tender regard to those in covenant relation with them, they abstain from labor on sixth day evening, even if they cannot make these views a matter of faith."

For the Recorder.

WILLIAM TYNDALE.

The Baptist Memorial suggests that William Tyndale was a Baptist. If so, how shall the following argument be construed? It is copied verbatim from his prologue to the Book of Jonas, printed 1549.

"And when they saye that Christe hath made no satysfactyon for the synne we do after our baptyme: say thou with the doctrine of Paul, that in our baptyme we receyve the merytes of Christe's death throwe repentance and faythe, of which two baptime is the sygne. And though when we sin of frayltie after our baptyme we receyve that sygn no moar, yet we be renewed agayne throwe repentannce and fayth in Christe's bloud, which twaine, the signe of baptyme ever continued amonge us in baptisynge our young children doth ever kepe in mynde and call us backe agayne unto our profession if we be gonne astraye, and promyseth us forgevenesse."

MISSIONS IN INDIA.—Accounts lately received by the American Board from Southern India, speak of numerous renunciations of idolatry in that section. The bishop of Madras, under date of March 13, 1844, says, that ninety-six villages, in the province of Tinnevelly, have recently come forward, unsolicited, and utterly abolished their idols, requesting to be placed under Christian instruction; and one of the English missionaries says, that he had received seven hundred natives under his care, within two months.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

By a notice in another column, it will be seen that the sessions of the General Conference are to commence at Verona, N.Y. in less than four weeks from this time. It is very desirable that the churches which are not represented through the Associations, should take the steps necessary to represent themselves. Questions of great importance to our cause will undoubtedly be brought before the Conference; and it is earnestly hoped, that all who feel an interest in that cause, irrespective of their views upon some minor points, will remember the approaching meeting in prayer, and attend upon its deliberations if possible.

We are requested to state, that the most convenient rail-road depot for stopping, is "Green's Corners," at which place carriages will wait the arrival of cars during the week of the session. On the canal, New-London will be found the most convenient stopping place, being only one mile distant from the place of meeting.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—By reference to a notice in our columns, it will be seen that the fall term of this flourishing Institution opened yesterday. From an acquaintance with the past history of the school, and with those who have the management of it, we venture to bespeak for it favor, and to promise entire satisfaction to those who may patronize it.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE.—Notice has been given that the Seventeenth Annual Fair of the American Institute will be held at Niblo's Garden, in the city of New York, commencing on Monday, October 7th, and continuing until Friday, October 18. A great Silk Convention is to be held on the 9th of October. Much attention is to be paid to the department of Agriculture, and to the show of horses, cattle, and other stock. The hope is expressed that every kind of manufactures will be fully represented, and that the season will be one of uncommon interest to those who find satisfaction in viewing the progress of invention and improvement. In the conclusion of their address, the Managers say, "A cordial invitation is hereby respectfully extended to every friend of industry and improvement in the United States—to the sages, patriots, and statesmen, of every state, that each and all may come and participate, and swell the sublime gathering, and make it what it should be, the grand AMERICAN Jubilee of Industry and the Arts."

MUSIC.—An American Musical Convention is to assemble at Boston on the 26th inst., and to continue in session five days, during which time lectures are to be delivered by a number of distinguished individuals. An uncommonly interesting assemblage is anticipated.

FEMALE MISSION.—A Female Missionary Society has lately been formed in Prussia, the theatre of whose labors is to be the peninsula of Malacca. A large tract of land has been appropriated to the Society's use; and high hopes are entertained for the result of this effort to convert Hindoo women to Christianity.

MANUAL LABOR SCHOOLS.—We are glad to see that a growing interest is felt in some of those schools which unite manual with mental labor. It is manifest among the Free Will Baptists especially. This people seem alive to the importance of providing for the education of their religious teachers, and are acting upon a system which will be likely to furnish them with men having cultivated minds, to exert an influence, joined with bodies able to endure hardship, and to engage earnestly and fearlessly in labor. This is as it should be.

HOW TEMPERANCE REDUCES TAXES.—An estimate has recently been made, which shows that a few years ago, the pauper tax of Massachusetts amounted to $200,000, four-fifths of which resulted from the use of ardent spirits. This tax was reduced to $136,000 two years ago; and last year it was only $41,000. This is a pretty good commentary upon the financial results of reforming drunkards. It is said that 30,000 have been reclaimed within a few years past.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY.—The New York Evangelist is publishing a lengthy discussion respecting the course of the two rival Bible Societies. The discussion seems to have arisen from an attack upon the American and Foreign Society, in the form of a review of its last Annual Report. Dr. Brigham, Secretary of the American Society, is the disputant on one side, and Drs. Cone and Babcock on the other. The letters show that a good deal of feeling yet exists between the two Societies.

A MISSIONARY FALLEN.—Rev. Grover S. Comstock, Missionary of the American Baptist Board at Ramree, Arracan, died of the Asiatic Cholera, at Akyab, on the 25th of April.

Gov. Roberts, of Liberia, who has been staying in Philadelphia for some weeks, left that port on Saturday, in the brig Echo, for Liberia. He has made extensive purchases, both useful and ornamental, consisting of books, plate and china; he also bought the old uniforms of the State Fencibles. A lady and gentleman, of Philadelphia left with him, for the purpose of opening a literary and musical seminary at Monrovia.

The Lagrange, (Georgia,) Herald says, that an extensive revival of religion has been progressing in that village for several days.

Whittier, the poet, has become editor of the Middlesex Standard, a new weekly paper at Lowell, Mass.

General Intelligence.

LONG-ISLAND RAILROAD—FIRST REGULAR TRIP.

Crossing the South Brooklyn Ferry on the morning of the 9th inst., our party was seated in one of the comfortable cars of the Long Island Rail Road. Five minutes before eight o'clock, we commenced ascending the acclivity of Atlantic st., drawn by a tandem team of screaming engines. Rapidly the city lots, buildings, and the cultivated farms, receded from our field of vision. The chaste white dwellings of the thrifty yeomanry were soon left behind; and in their place our eyes rested on the changeless scenery of desert plains, while the gravel banks and sandy fields over which we passed, yielded a plentiful revenue of flinty dust, most annoying to our eyes. In respect to scenery we were disappointed. But concluding that the company rightly preferred cheap land for their road, rather than delightful scenery for passengers, we were content to pass along. To prevent our leaving the new road in disgust, however, the prospect changed to well-tilled farms and pleasant habitations as we proceeded eastward, betokening a better country. Sure, thought we, the enterprise of New England is manifest here. Through Southold to Greenport Landing, we saw much to admire, enough at least to relieve the tediousness of the desert path. Just three and a half hours brought us along side the noble steamer Narragansett—a name appropriate to the wildness of the harbor and surrounding landscape. A delay of 15 or 20 minutes occurred in changing from the cars to the boat; but quietly all was adjusted, and we were moving majestically toward the "Point," thirty miles distant,—passing through the "gut," with Plumb Island on the right, and rocky shores and reefs on either side. With the remembrance of wrecks, and storm, and suffering humanity, the wants of the route were quickly suggested, and why, it was asked, should not a heavy-sounding "Fog Bell" be placed on the Island's rocky promontory? It would direct the helm of the mariner when thick clouds and darkness hang over him, and sweeping race tides urge him on. Having dined on board, we landed—six hours and five minutes from the empire city, confidently expecting that in four hours more the train would reach Boston. What New Yorker, but a few years since, would have contemplated a passage to Boston in ten hours? But so space may be subdued by the hand of man. What shall yet be done by steam and the skill of the engineer? In the latter day men shall go "to and fro," and knowledge shall be increased. What a mighty Providence overrules the affairs of man and leads him to his wonderful destiny! Who may say to the march of mind "no farther?"

Passengers go alternately through Stonington and Norwich daily, leaving New York at 8 o'clock A. M. and Boston at 9 o'clock, dining both ways on the boat while crossing the Sound. X.

Great Meeting of the Tenants of the Manor of Rensselaerwyck.—The Albany Argus of Monday morning last says:—We understand that pursuant to the invitation of a Committee from eight towns in the County of Ransselaer, chosen at a public meeting of the tenants of the Manor of Rensselaerwyck, Gov. BOUCK on Saturday visited West Sand-Lake, for consultation with said Committee, and with a view to bring about, if possible, an amicable adjustment of existing difficulties between the tenants and Wm. P. Van Ransselaer, Esq.

Contrary to the expectation of Gov. B., as we farther learn, more than one thousand persons assembled in the village to greet his attendance, who in various ways demonstrated their high respect for their Chief Magistrate. These were citizens, without distinction of party; and the Sheriff of Rensselaer and several gentlemen of other parts of the county, were present.

Gov. Bouck and the Committee were in conference three or four hours. The conference was not concluded, but may be resumed hereafter, propositions having been made, which it is sincerely hoped will lead to satisfactory results.

In the course of the day, about one hundred persons appeared in the village, disguised as Indians, painted, with feathers, hatchets, bows and arrows, knives, &c. They were all mounted.—This movement was without the knowledge of the Committee, and contrary to their wishes. They, however, offered no violence, and conducted themselves civilly.

On one occasion, they surrounded the assembled citizens, who were standing in a body, having been engaged in tendering their respects to the Governor, but he had retired. They then manifested a wish to call upon him; but they were not gratified, for reasons which were explained to them; and they left the ground, and the meeting quietly dispersed.

A fatal accident occurred at the close of the day. One of the persons in disguise was accidentally thrown from his horse and killed.

Late from Guatemula.—We learn by the brig Florida Blanco, which sailed from Belize, (Honduras) on the 21st of July, that some political difficulties had occurred in the neighborhood of Guatemala city, and that an attack had been made upon that city by a force from San Salvador. It had, however, been arranged that a meeting of Commissioners was to take place in some town in the interior to settle the difficulties amicably, and it is supposed by our informant that this would be effected. [Tribune.

Later from Hayti.—By the brig Gen. Marion, from Port Republican, 31st July, we are informed that throughout the Island of Hayti it was perfectly quiet. The markets were glutted with American produce, while that of the Island was scarce and high. The President was about leaving on a visit to the North.

Later from Trinidad de Cuba.—The brig Grecian, Captain Benedict, arrived here on Saturday from Trinidad de Cuba, which place she left on the 21st ultimo. We regret extremely to find, that till just before she sailed, with but very slight exceptions, the drouth had continued in all the planting districts, of which Trinidad is the centre and shipping mark. Many of the planters have lost nearly all their cattle, and the appearance of the coming crop was forlorn indeed. At the time that Captain Benedict left, there were no freights whatsoever to be had, and vessels were leaving daily in ballast, after waiting in vain for cargoes. [Philadelphia Gazette.

From Vera Cruz.—By a vessel from Campeachy, arrived at Vera Cruz on 11th July, news was received that the Senate of the U. S. had defeated Mr. Tyler's attempt to annex Texas to the Union, which gave universal satisfaction. All the Foreign Ministers had solicited the Government's clemency toward their countrymen taken in the late expedition to Tobasco, headed by Sentmanat. The President, in reply, had expressed his determination to treat them as pirates, if on trial they were found guilty.

An army of 15,000 men was preparing to leave for Texas, and are expected to reach Matamora in November next. The Congress has not fixed upon a plan to raise the four million dollars granted for this expedition, but there was little doubt of their doing so very shortly.

Corn and Tobacco.—A gentleman informs the Norfolk Herald that an unusually severe drouth has prevailed in Charlotte, Halifax, Prince Edward, Cumberland, and several adjoining counties, in Virginia. No rain had fallen for several months, up to the 3d inst., and the corn crop would probably be curtailed one half, while the tobacco crop would suffer still more.

From St. Helena and Ascension.—Capt. Codman, of ship Sarah Parker, at this port from Batavia, touched at St. Helena, June 25, and reports that 25,000 tons Guano had passed St. Helena between Jan. 1 and June 25.

A drouth, of the severest kind, was experienced on the Island of Ascension, and many of the horses and cattle had been killed on account of the scarcity of water. H. B. M. steam frigate Penelope had towed up H. B. M. ship Tortoise from Ascension to St. Helena, on the 23d of June, and the two vessels would take 1,000 tons of water to that island. They reported that there was but 40 days' supply at the time they left. The garrison had been on allowance for three months. [Boston Advertiser.

Great Fire in Chili.—The city of San Carlos, the principal town in the Island of Chiloe, the most Southern province of the Chilian Republic, has been the scene of a dreadful conflagration, which broke out in its very center, and before it could be subdued, destroyed two-thirds of the place. One hundred and fifty houses, comprising all the magazines of provisions, fell a prey to the flames. The unfortunate inhabitants, equally destitute of food and shelter, were compelled to abandon the ruins, and fly to the interior to seek a refuge and means of subsistence.

The port of San Carlos, a recruiting place frequented by South Sea whalers, contained about 4,000 inhabitants, all of whom have suffered more or less by this deplorable calamity. At the time of the fire there were anchored in the road an American schooner, a British brig, and a French whale-ship, the crews of which, it is superfluous to add, performed all the duties that humanity imposed on them. [Jour. of Com.

Fat Pickings.—Congress, in a recent report, publishes the facts, that the cost of mail bags, from 1831 to 1841, was $336,000; that Mr. Jewett, of Ohio, contractor, was paid $68,124 13 for 4,782 bags: that in November, 1840, there were on his [Jewett's] hands, 4,020 bags not wanted, which cost $65,000; that a large overplus was in the hands of other contractors; that bags could be got for 50 per cent less than was paid in those years; that for blanks, $300,000 were paid between 1829 and 1841, generally at about 50 per cent. more than a fair price, leaving a supply on hand for twenty years to come; that the storage for these surplus articles was charged and allowed; that, by these and other frauds, the expenditures of the Post Office Department were made to exceed its revenue, one year, by $387,759 19, and another year $220,000, thus requiring special appropriations out of the revenue from customs and public lands. [Cleveland Evening Herald.

"Conduct of White Folks in the Chocktaw Nation."—A white man named John Lewis, who, with his family, was traveling on the military road—making tracks for Texas—was overtaken near Col. Kinney's by another white man named Shaw, who "lightened him" of his wagon and tilted Lewis's family—seven women and children, and one at the breast—out upon the road. The deplorable sight of his suffering family rendered desperate the ill-used father, who "borrowed a pistol," returned and retook the wagon; but he had no sooner installed his interesting family in it than Shaw returned with several armed men, and after "discharging several rounds" compelled the unfortunate Lewis to surrender his castle. He and his family are now encamped in the nation in an almost starving condition, depending on the liberality of the Choctaws for subsistence, and appeals to his white friends to "come and help him off." [Arkansas Intelligencer.

Scenes on the Mississippi.—Imagine, reader, a lake of 500 miles through a region finely improved—all one scene of desolation on either hand. Here are the comfortable quarters, sunk, fallen and dilapidated—the cattle from a thousand fields gathered in herds upon small patches of land partly dry; perhaps knee deep in water, wailing and moaning most piteously—herds of deer huddled together at the mercy of the marksmen—bears clinging to logs. And here, as in one instance we looked on, a woman, delicate and fair, carried by her husband through water a hundred yards to a shoal place, where he deposited her on a trunk until some chance opportunity should offer for her rescue. [Concordia Intelligencer.

Society for Emigrants.—A Society called the "British Protective Emigrant Society of New York," has been formed in this city, the main object of which is to protect emigrants from fraud and cheats on their landing,—to point out comfortable boarding houses, where they are not likely to be defrauded or unkindly treated; to aid them by advice in leaving New York City, and to furnish them information by maps and through agents of the best mode of travel, and as to roads, expenses, and so forth, and also by keeping up a correspondence with contractors, &c., send the worthy emigrants to work. The Society will be only protective in its character; it will not furnish money in any manner or for any object to emigrants.

A Dutchman's View of the Texas Question.—An old and respectable Dutch farmer in the Valley of Virginia, being asked his opinion of the Texas question, expounded it as follows:

"Well I don't like to own more land than my hands can work well—it is apt to get full of weeds—and I can never buy land that is in law or under incumbrance. I think our farm is large enough already for our own force—let us go to work to get that in good order, and if this Texas plantation is then out of law and free from incumbrance, I go for buying it.'

SUMMARY.

Several cowhidings have recently taken place at Philadelphia, Baltimore, etc. but we have no room for the particulars of these exceedingly interesting exhibitions. So says the Tribune.

The death of John G. Coster, at the age of 82, took place Thursday. Mr. C. was one of our oldest and most respectable citizens. He arrived here from Germany more than half a century ago, and has been, until within the last fifteen years, a most active and exemplary merchant. He acquired an immense estate, and was long known as a millionaire. He has left a large family, a good name, and ample fortune. [Express.

We have been shown a cluster of six ears of Indian corn, all growing from the same stem, and covered by one shuck. Each ear is perfectly filled with grain, except a few rows where it adheres to its fellows, in which the grains are scattering. [Norfolk Beacon.

An unhappy mistake.—The ambassadors of the great powers at Constantinople having complained to the Porte of the execution of the Christian who had renounced the Mahomedan faith, the Porte has replied, that the execution took place by mistake, and the officer who ordered it has been dismissed. [Am. Messenger.

The Merchants Bank of Boston, has now over fourteen hundred thousand dollars on deposit, to the credit of the U. States. The Merchants' Bank, New York, exceeding eighteen hundred thousand. Whole amount in banks and mints, to the credit of Government, subject to draft, $8,324,934,.18.

The amount of revenue received at this port for the month of July was $640,000. There was received during the week ending Saturday last, $240,000.

Five dollars were lately paid in Cincinnati for a lot of 50 peaches. Some of them measured 7 inches in circumference. This is an encouraging price for fruit growers.

A severe thunder storm passed over Salem and Marblehead on Thursday afternoon last, attended with a copious rain. The lightning struck the house of Asa Lamson, in Salem, doing considerable damage, but injuring no one. It also struck the windmill in Marblehead.

An extra from the Charlotte, N. C., Jeffersonian informs us that the branch mint at that place was destroyed by fire on Saturday the 27th ult, at 8 o'clock in the morning. The books, furniture, coin and bullion were saved.

Hon. Mr. Casey, late a member of Congress from Ohio, has been recently enriched by a legacy of $20,000.

The Whitehall Chronicle states that a Mr. Whitefield, an old gentleman between sixty and seventy years of age, residing in the town of Athol, Warren County, was recently murdered by his wife, who inflicted several blows upon his head with an axe. She was insane.

A steamboat of 1300 tons—the nucleus of a new line—is to be built with all possible despatch, and placed on the Hudson.

A steamboat explosion took place near Philadelphia on Tuesday, 13th inst., by which a number of persons were severely scalded, two or three of whom, it is thought, cannot survive.

The fashionble morning dress for the ladies at Saratoga, it is said, is a sort of frockcoat, buttoned snugly over a white skirt.

A wild hog has been caught in the woods near Lowell, Mass. He is said to be a ferocious fellow.

The people of Middletown, Conn., are going forward to connect their city, by railroad, with the Hartford and New Haven road at Wallingford. They also propose a railroad from their city to Norwich and Providence.

There are now thirty-nine whale ships in port at New Bedford, discharging and refitting; 13 at New London; 9 at Nantucket; 9 at Sag Harbor, and 6 at Stonington.—There are six ships now absent from New Bedford which have been out more than four years.

Chicago is much afflicted with sickness this season, particularly the children, among whom the present disease is said to be very fatal.

The New Orleans Pic. says that a duel was fought on the evening of the 2d inst. near the Metaire Course between two young Creoles of that city. The weapons used were pistols, and at the first fire one of the parties was slightly wounded in the hip when the matter was amicably arranged.

The St. Louis Republican of the 30th ult. says—"We learn at the Post Office, that there has been a sudden and very great rise in several of the streams in Illinois. Several of the creeks, it is reported, rose fifteen feet in a single night. The river here continues to rise slowly. The John Bull, from Weston, reports a rise in the Mississippi of four feet from the Kansas and Little Platte The rivers below were full."

They are pushing vigorously the scheme of a direct semi-monthly steam communication between Liverpool and Quebec.

Quite a sensation was created in Chesnut street, Philadelphia, on Saturday evening, by a gentleman showing Col. Page the sword of the late President. It was sent to be repaired. It is a beautiful sabre, and the weapon he wore at New Orleans.

The amount of duties received weekly at the Custom House in this city, continues to increase. The cash receipts last week were $975,000. This is $150,000 more than had been received during any previous week.

Govenor Corwin lies ill at Portsmouth, Ohio.

Died, at Burlington, N. J., on the 6th inst., Burr Woolmam, Esq., Surveyor General of the Western District of that State, in the 58th year of his age.

Boston exported 4,037 tons of ice in June last.

MARRIED,

In New York, on Monday, 12th inst., by Rev. Geo. B. Utter, Mr. ABRAM UTTER to Miss. SARAH LOUISA FOGGIN, all of New York.

DIED,

In Hopkinton, R. I., on Sabbath morning, August 3d, PELEG ALMY, son of Jacob D. and Elizabeth Babcock, aged 12 years. His death was occasioned by the bleeding of a wound which he received from the kick of a horse on the 28th of July. He was much beloved, and his death will inflict a deep wound upon an affectionate family. They mourn, however, not as those without hope.

In Portsmouth, R. I., on the 1st inst., LUCIUS ALEXANDER, son of Lucius and Sarah Crandall, aged one year, one month, and eleven days.

LETTERS.

A. B. Burdick, Samuel Davison, Randolph Dunham, Walter B. Gillet, Joseph Jennings, Benjamin Maxson, J. M. Letts, George P. Maxson, James Stelle, Sanford P. Stillman.

POSTMASTERS.—Pendleton, Kingsville, O.

RECEIPTS.

Pendleton—J. Fullmer. $2; A. R. Snow, S. P. Clark, $1 each.

Kingsville, O.—Ives Moss $2.

Plainfield, N. J.—Sarah F. Randolph, $2.

New Market, N. J.—Lewis Titsworth, Samuel Dunham, Isaac F. Randolph, $2 each; V. F. Randolph, $1.

Crossingville, Pa—James Stelle, $2 for Recorder, and $2 for general purposes.

Westerly, R. I.—Elias Saunders, $1.

TRAVELING AGENT.

JASON B. WELLS has been appointed a Traveling Agent for this paper, and will visit the churches in the interior and northern parts of the State of New York. He is commended to the confidence of our friends.

A CARD.

THE subscriber wishing to remove to Plainfield, N. J., offers to sell to a Seventh-day Baptist the following desirable property, situated in Shiloh, Cumberland Co., N. J., viz: A new and commodious dwelling-house, with a large store-house attached, being a good stand for country business; a new barn, wagon-house, corn-crib, wood-house, and other out-buildings, all of which have been built within six years, and are in complete order.

Also, a pretty good assortment of Store Goods, such as are generally kept in a Country Store, which are offered at such a price as will make it an object for any one who may wish to locate in this part of New Jersey, and enter into the mercantile business.

Also, a small farm adjoining, consisting of about 24 acres, some of which is in a high state of cultivation, and on which is a newly rebuilt dwelling-house, convenient for two small families, a large apple orchard of choice fruit, and other fruit trees, with a good well of water at the door, &c.

The house and lot, and the Store Goods, will be sold with or without the Farm.

If further information is wanted, address the subscriber.

ISAAC D. TITSWORTH, P. M. Shiloh, N. J.
July 22, 1844.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST GENERAL CONFERENCE will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in VERONA, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference. PAUL STILLMAN, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having already reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year. F. W. STILLMAN, Rec. Sec'y.

The Missionary Association will hold its second Anniversary, with the 1st Church in Verona, N. Y., on the Sixth day of the week, before the second Sabbath in September. A Sermon on the subject of Missions will be expected during its session from T. B. BROWN—the time to be determined by the Executive Board. It is desirable that all missionary returns may be made to the Secretary previous to that time.

W. B. GILLETT, Rec. Sec.

The Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Society will meet on fifth day, Sept. 14, at 9 o'clock A. M.

The Evangelical Board of Directors for Disseminating Religious Truth among the Jews, will meet on first day, Sept. 15, at the call of the President.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick
CONNECTICUT
Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman
NEW JERSEY
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson
PENNSYLVANIA
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones
VIRGINIA
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee
OHIO.
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN
Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA
Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS
Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

The Society has published, also, in quarto form, [$1,25 per 100, or $10 per 1000,] two numbers of THE SABBATH VINDICATOR.

NEW-YORK MARKET, AUGUST 12.

At Market 1200 Beef Cattle, 78 Cows and Calves, and 3300 Sheep and Lambs.

PRICES—BEEF CATTLE.—The market is rather dull, but prices remain the same. We continue our quotations, viz:

COWS AND CALVES—$12 a 21—all sold.

SHEEP AND LAMBS—Sheep $1 25 a 4 50; Lambs $1 a 2 50—all sold.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES,
Pot, first sort	4 12 a 4 18
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 00a24 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	7 75 a 8 62
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do. 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	– a —
Stripes, fast colors	– a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 72 @ 2 75
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	10 37 @10 50
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Buckspt do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 31 @ 4 37
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 25 @ 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	88 @ 95
Do South new	94
Rye, Northern	63 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	48 @ 47
Barley N R	@
Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A. & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4½
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@1500
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	10 0 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 7 @ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4¼ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6¼a 6
American	5 a
Spring	5¼a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8½a 9½
Do Brown	6½a 8¼
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10 a
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¼
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17½a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¾
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 97
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
n plates ⅓ X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 36
No. 1	31 a 32
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

"WHY DO THE FLOWERS BLOOM?"

BY MRS. J. E. CARPENTER.

"Why do the flow'rets bloom, mother,
Why do the sweet flowers bloom,
And brightest those we reared, mother,
Around my brother's tomb?"
"To fill the world with gladness,
My child, were flow'rets given,—
To crown the Earth with beauty,
And show the road to Heaven."

"Then why do the flow'rets fade, mother,
Why do the sweet flowers fade,
When winter's dreary clouds, mother,
Earth's brightest scenes pervade?"
"My child, those flowers that wither,
Have seeds that still remain,
That sunshine and the summer
Restore to life again."

"And shall not those who die, mother,
Come back to live once more,
E'en as the rain and sun, mother,
Those beauteous flowers restore?"
"Yes—yes my child, such powers
To human flowers are given,
Here earth's frail flowers may blossom,
But we may rise—in Heaven."
[New Monthly Magazine.

THE HARMONY OF LOVE.

Lord, subdue our selfish will;
Each to each our tempers suit
By thy modulating skill,
Heart to heart, as lute to lute.
Sweetly on our spirits move;
Gently touch the trembling strings;
Make the harmony of love
Music for the Kings of kings!

LEAVES FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTE-BOOK—NO. 4.

LIVERPOOL TO BIRMINGHAM.

A brighter morning than that on which we were to leave Liverpool, seldom dawns upon the earth. An early hour had been fixed for starting; and as we passed from our hotel to the station, although the sun had been for some time inviting man to his labor, the shop windows were closed, and the stillness was interrupted only by here and there a straggling footman. There is something solemn and soothing in the quietness of a city at rest. One thinks with sympathy of the traffic and anxiety which are now hushed, and feels his heart drawn forth towards those who are relieved from it. It was so with us; and as we passed by the public places which but a few hours before we had seen instinct with life, our thoughts were raised in devout thankfulness to Him whose beneficence provides a time for rest, but whose eye never slumbereth nor sleepeth.

On our way to the station, we fell in with one who was in search of the same place. His inquiries led to conversation and awakened interest. He had just landed in Liverpool from a New York ship, and was hastening to his home in Wales. With false impressions of America, or no definite impressions at all, he had been seeking a home in that country; but after some months spent in visiting the different sections, he had concluded to content himself to live and die in his native land. With a disappointed and heavy heart he was returning again to scenes from which he had voluntarily, and as he now thought, unwisely, exiled himself. His tale was but the echo of a thousand others.

The common route from Liverpool to London is by the Grand Junction Railway to Birmingham, and thence by the Birmingham and London Railway, to the metropolis—a distance of 210 miles. The station at Liverpool has a massive stone front, and appears designed for permanence. It contains a variety of offices, and every thing about it is kept in perfect order. Two or three conveniences, which are common to all railroads in England, "struck" us at once, and ought to be mentioned. The first is, that instead of inquiring at the office for "further information," those who wish information are furnished with a bill or programme on which may be found the times at which the different trains start, the time at which they reach each of the principal places in their way, the fare to each of these places in each of the three classes of cars; indeed, all the information which can ever be desired. By means of this, one can choose at his leisure between the different hours of starting, of which there are six or eight during the day; and if he wishes to call an hour or two at some place on the route, he has before him a chart from which he learns just the time at which he can leave again, while upon the front of the office at each station he sees the hands of a clock marking the true time. With these facts before us, it is easy to understand the accounts which are sometimes read, of individuals who travel 300 miles, and transact business at several places widely separated from each other, in the course of a single day.—A second convenience is, that at the station no one is allowed to touch the baggage except a person introduced by its owner, or the servants of the company, who may always be known by their livery. Should one wish a conveyance from the station, it is only necessary to signify it to a servant of the company, by whom his baggage is placed either upon one of the carriages ranged in order, and taken in order, according to the time of their arrival, or upon an omnibus running from the station to the principal hotels, and from the hotels to the station, on the arrival and departure of the trains.—A third convenience is, that there are classes of cars differing in expence as they differ in style—enabling those who wish to ride in a carriage fitted up in the most magnificent manner, to do so by paying for it; while those whose purses or dispositions will not allow this, can choose between two other modes, of nearly equal speed.—So much said to render "honor to whom honor is due;" now for the journey of 98 miles to Birmingham.

The station at Liverpool is a sort of antechamber to a dark damp tunnel, between one and two miles in length, through which you are drawn by a rope attached to a stationary engine at the opposite end. The train moves along this passage, (as every one would wish it to,) with great velocity, and soon introduces you to a beautiful and highly-cultivated country, studded with villages and country residences, and covered with green meadows and golden grain-fields.

The first town of importance on our route is Warrington, midway between Liverpool and Manchester. This town is on the bank of the Mersey, and is one of the oldest towns in this section, having been a Roman station. It was here that the Earl of Derby built a bridge over the Mersey to enable Henry VII. to pay him a visit with greater convenience. There is an old church here erected by the Saxons before the conquest; and the town was the scene of several severe conflicts during the civil wars. But that which gives most interest to the place, is the fact, that here the first newspaper ever issued in Lancashire was published; and that Howard's work on Prisons, most of Mrs. Barbauld's poems, the earlier writings of Thomas Roscoe, as well as the works of Drs. Ferrier and Gibson, were printed here. In the neighborhood is a Hall supposed to occupy the site of one of the Haydocks, who were so powerful in the time of the Plantagenets.

Winwick, about two miles distant from Warrington, is said to possess the richest rectory in the kingdom. Tradition says that Oswald, King of Northumbria, resided here, and fell fighting against the Pagans, in 642, on a spot near the church. The piety of pilgrims who visited the spot, led to the formation of St. Oswald's Well here; and to this day the earth and water are supposed to be possessed of peculiar sanctity, so much so, that all the Roman Catholic chapels in the neighborhood are supplied with holy water from the place.

Leaving Warrington, we pass a number of places rendered interesting by their associations.—Within two miles of our track is Eccleshall, in the church of which Queen Margaret was concealed after her escape from Mucklestone. Stafford, the capital of a county of that name, the castle of which after having been several times demolished and rebuilt, was destroyed during the Parliamentary war, is on our way. Wolverhampton, 14 miles from Birmingham, is a populous town of great antiquity. It has an ancient Gothic church containing a curious font, and a stone pulpit, more than 800 years old, cut out of one block. Locks and keys, and japanned ware, are the principal articles of manufacture. Near by is the house where King Charles was concealed after the battle of Worcester.

Soon after passing Wolverhampton, the smoke of Birmingham's thousand high chimneys begins to be seen, and almost before one is aware of it he finds himself rushing by the miserable buildings in its suburbs, and into its imposing and commodious railway station.

THE TOILS OF THE PRESS.

A gentleman of distinguished attainments, who formerly conducted a weekly paper with much ability and success, but who is now traveling in Europe, writes to a friend in this country, who has recently assumed the charge of a daily paper, as follows:

"You must live in and for the paper. There is no escape from this voluntary, and yet life-long slavery. For now nearly ten years, I have known the willing, voluntary, unbroken service which the true servant of a free press must render. My weekly charge has been more than I can bear; and often, like the slave described with such pathetic eloquence by Job, I have 'longed for the shadow' which tells the hour of rest. Feeling thus with respect to the weekly press, how can I but fear for you, my brother, my friend, when you bind yourself in six-fold bonds? How little do the majority of readers of newspapers know of the expenditure of thought, of the labor of the head and brain, and hands, which goes to make up that which ministers to their highest wants! and, also, how many truths, thought out with brain-throes, pass unnoted, unobserved, even if not received with relentless hostility!—Nevertheless, the true MAN must work, and work, too, in the martyr spirit; contented even with the thought that his mere relics, when he has laid him down in the dust, will constitute a kind of superstructure and basement upon which the glorious and eternal temple of truth shall stand."

THE SPHERE OF WOMAN.

Great is the task indeed assigned to woman. Who can elevate its dignity?—who can exaggerate its importance? Not to make laws, not to lead armies, not to govern empires, but to form those by whom laws are made, armies are led, and empires governed; to guard from the slightest taint of possible infirmity the frail yet spotless creature whose moral no less than physical being must be from her; to inspire those principles, to inculcate those doctrines, to animate those sentiments, which generations yet unborn, and nations yet uncivilized, should learn to bless; to soften firmness to mercy, chasten honor into refinement, to exalt generosity into virtue; by her soothing cares to allay the anguish of the body and the far worse anguish of the mind; by her tenderness to disarm passion; by her purity to triumph over sense; to cheer the scholar sinking under his toils; to console the statesman for the ingratitude of a mistaken people; to be the compensation for hopes that are blighted, for friends that are perfidious, for happiness that has passed away. Such is her vocation; the couch of the tortured sufferer, the prison of the deserted friend, the cross of a rejected Savior—these are the scenes of woman's excellence, these are the theatre on which her greatest triumphs have been achieved. Such is her destiny—to visit the forsaken, to attend to the neglected; amid the forgetfulness of myriads to remember—amid the execrations of multitudes to bless; when monarchs abandon, when counsellors betray, when justice prosecutes, when disciples and brethren fly, to remain unshaken and unchanged, and to exhibit on this lower world, a type of that love—pure, constant and ineffable—which in another world we are taught to believe the best reward of virtue. [Blackwood.

One hundred bales of North River hay have been purchased in New York for shipment to Great Britain. This, says the Shipping List, is we believe, the first shipment of hay ever made to Great Britain from this country. To France parcels have been sent occasionally for a year or two past.

PRACTICAL RECIPES.

BURNT RHUBARB IN DIARRHÆ.—It may be useful to know the value of burnt rhubarb in diarrhæ. It has been used with the same pleasing effects for more than twenty years. After one or two doses the pains quickly subside, and the bowels return to their natural state. The dose is from five to ten grains. The manner of preparing it is to burn the rhubarb to powder in an iron pot, stirring it until it is blackened; then smother it in a covered jar. It loses two-thirds of its weight by the incineration. It is nearly tasteless. In no one case has it failed where given. It may be given in port wine, milk, and water.

TOMATO CATSUP.—Bake your tomatoes, ripe and peeled, in a brown earthen pan, in a cool oven; then press out the juice and pulp through a sieve. Next, to each quart of juice and pulp add 1-4 lb. of salt, 2 oz. of shallots, (or onions,) 1 oz. of ground black pepper, quarter of an ounce mace; the same weight of allspice, ginger and nutmeg. Pound the spices together and boil them with the tomato pulp half an hour; then pass the mixture through a sieve, and when cold bottle it. This will keep good for years.

TOMATO SAUCE.—Take ripe tomatoes, cut them in two, press out the pulp and separate the seeds; then put them into a skillet with some savory sauce and a little salt. When the thickness of pea-soup, run it through a coarse cloth, boil it to the consistence of marmalade, put it into jars, and in a day after pour over it lard or butter, and tie down with oiled paper.

RASPBERRY SYRUP.—To every quart of fruit add a pound of sugar, and let it stand over night. In the morning boil and skim it for a half an hour; then strain it through a flannel bag, and pour it into bottles, which must be carefully corked and sealed. To each bottle add, if you please, a little brandy, if the weather is so warm as to endanger its keeping.

RASPBERRY JAM.—Take one pound of loaf sugar to every pound of fruit; bruise them together in your preserving pan with a silver spoon, and let them simmer gently for an hour. When cold, put them into glass jars, and lay over them a bit of paper saturated with brandy; then tie them up so as carefully to exclude the air.

SELF ADVICE.

Command thyself; no sudden answer give;
With zeal do good, for that alone you live,
To know the worth of time, remember death;
Thy life is short, and passing is thy breath.
Be sober minded; wear a look serene;
Act before God, altho' by men unseen;
Speak not in vain, nor foolishly depart
From gentle words, and purity of heart;
To truth, and chastity, and peace inclined,
With caution censure or applaud mankind;
Seek knowledge fair, but shun insipid mirth;
There is no time for folly while on earth:
Feed no ill will—no sudden friendship make;
Betray no trust—no obligations break.
Whatever you neglect, to this attend—
Pity the poor, and be the strangers' friend.
Promise with heed—weigh every action right,
And scan the conduct of each day and night.
Instructed by past failings to be wise,
Let every wish from purest fountains rise.
In talk sincere, pursue one steady plan,
For actions show the noblest part of man.
Act with relation to a future state,
Retort no slander—render love for hate.
Christian devotion, true philosophy,
Shall conquer death, but thou shalt never die.
Death cannot hurt, but grant thee sweet release,
From pain and trouble to eternal peace.
And hast thou read? Oh! vain, inconstant man,
Read it once more, and fault it if you can.
Now calmly lay thine hand upon the heart
And say, "from this I never will depart."

FALL OF MINISTERS.

A good deal has been said of late, in some religious papers, about the causes of the fall of ministers, some charging it upon their efforts for reform, and others upon something else. The following, from the Boston Recorder, presents as common-sense a view of the matter as we have seen.

The editors of the N. Y. Observer have recently noticed ("what they call") a fact in the history of efforts for moral reform, which should command attention on the part of the Christian church, and lead every minister of the Gospel to consider his duty. The fact to which I allude is, that a number (how large a number I cannot say) of those who have advocated the cause of moral reform, have proved to be sad delinquents, and in need themselves of a thorough reform, and that the editors of two papers, noted for their bold and almost violent opposition to licentiousness, and their adoption of stringent measures for the removal of the evil, have proved to be thoroughly dissolute. These cases have fallen upon my ears in notes of thunder; and after the paroxysm of excitement, I ask for an explanation.

The editors above mentioned, tell me that this result is the effect of the measures they adopted, and that their fall has been produced by their familiarity with the subject; then of course the policy for every Christian to adopt is, to do nothing to stop the tide of moral corruption which is rolling through the land. To this explanation I have serious objections. The fall of advocates of moral reform has been the special, not the common rule. No man would probably venture his reputation upon the assertion, that the majority of those engaged in the moral reform movements of the day have been themselves of vicious habits, or even of vicious desires, and yet he would freely say it of the frequenters of a certain class of theatres, and of a certain class of novel readers.

This mode of explanation carries us too far; for in most, if not in every case, it will be as applicable to other sins as to this. One of these editors was guilty of repeated acts of theft, and the other of drunkenness, and of attendance upon theatres. Shall we say that they have addicted themselves to these high-handed crimes, because their papers struck the highest key upon these subjects? Another objection I have is, that it savors too much of the cant of infidels. It is too near related to that spirit which takes occasion from every such case of defection to reproach religion. When an Orthodox man falls, especially if he is a minister of the Gospel, the cry rings through the land, that it is the effect of Orthodoxy—and in other quarters it is the effect of Christianity. The Observer's mode of accounting for these apostacies I think therefore is illogical, unfair and injurious, and of it I could only say, to any sect or denomination of Christians, to any school or doxy, let those who are innocent cast the first stone.

What explanation then can be given? The fact, as it seems to me, is, that these men either formed wrong principles in morals, or, having right principles, resisted them, and fell by a sacrifice of conscience. Men have besetting sins, and some are easily led off in a particular direction. I have known those who had such a propensity to steal, that they could not safely go in the way of temptation. Some too have an unaccountable propensity to lie, and others cannot go within sight or smell of ardent spirits, but the "appetite" will be kindled to a rage. Analogous to this is the case of those who cannot meddle with the subject of "moral reform," without becoming contaminated. They are ruined beforehand; they have no moral principle, and no protection against vice, and when such reformers fall, their defection is chargeable to what they are in themselves, and not to the cause they are engaged in. It only shows that the cause has been unfortunate enough to have bad men engaged in it, and infidels have as good a right to taunt and revile Christianity for any case of apostacy from her ranks, as the Observer, or any one else has, to charge inherent wrong on the "moral reform" enterprise, because bad men have been connected with it. A man's creed or profession, be it ever so orthodox, will not save him from temptation and sin. He must have more than this,—a new heart, and the fear and love of God shielding him on every side, and a principle of moral integrity, which, through grace, will make him proof against any assault. Thus prepared and protected, he will advance and honor any cause; without these qualities, he may be expected to betray any religion he may profess, any church to which he may belong, any moral enterprise in which he may engage. A PASTOR.

BETROTHALS IN GERMANY.

A letter from Germany, published in the Congregational Journal, says:

"Since I have been in Mentz, the beau and belle of Meldnick (a town as large as Concord,) became engaged to each other. It made as much sensation as if the town had been burned down. As is usual, notice was immediately given to all the neighbors, and the next day the engaged pair commenced making their calls in their new relation of bride and bridegroom. For you must know, that, when an engagement takes place, the gentleman is called the bridegroom and the lady the bride. The parties speak of each other always in this way. When you meet the gentleman you inquire after his bride, as you inquire in America of a husband after his wife. The next week, as is usual, a notice appeared in the Berlin paper, to the effect that Max Beelitz and Johanna Herman were engaged."

How it has come to pass that our English notions and practices, in regard to these matters, are objectionable, we do not know. The plan of keeping matrimonial engagements secret, (happily going somewhat out of fashion,) seems to us exceedingly wrong in itself, and pernicious in its consequences.

1. Young persons ought not to appear in society in a false position. A lady secretly engaged may, without intending it, seriously occupy the attention and thoughts of another, to his injury, and perhaps to the injury of her companions. When a person no longer is at liberty to make or to receive offers, it is wrong to appear at liberty.

2. The practice diminishes the impression that ought to prevail, of the sacredness of a matrimonial engagement; and thus leads, on the one hand, to hasty and ill-considered engagements, and on the other, as a natural consequence, to the violation of such pledges. An engagement to marry ought to be considered as sacred as marriage itself. We mean what we say. Such an engagement can not be rightly made, without such a state of the mind and the affections as must often render its fulfilment essential to the well-being of one of the parties; nor can it be made, or at least long continued, in most cases, without interfering seriously with other plans of life and prospects, which the parties might otherwise have embraced. The engagement ought to be considered as the solemn mutual avowal, before God, of a union for life. Were engagements always to be made public at once, and with such a public sentiment respecting them, we should be rid of suits of breach of promises, sustained by circumstantial evidence, and often involving the exposure to scoff and ridicule, of things that ought to be held sacred.

2. Private engagements are made use of by unprincipled men to deceive and ruin the unsuspicious. In how many cases of seduction it is found that a promise of marriage has played its part! The German custom would be a great barrier to the use of that means.

4. We add one other consideration, which, though it may appear trifling when compared with the preceding, is yet important in itself. It is this:—the temptation that a private engagement lays the parties, and sometimes their friends, under, to practice deception and falsehood. In fact, as remarked in the outset, the parties necessarily appear in society in a false position—which tends of itself to operate injuriously upon them. They are also tempted to the use of various arts of conduct and language, if not to absolute lying, to produce a false impression. This cannot be practised without injury to that character of open truth and frankness, which ought to be cherished.

NEATNESS.

"Mary, which of your friends do you like best to visit, Caroline or Lucy?"

"I like them both, mamma; Lucy is a good-natured girl, but I don't like to go and see her."

"Why, my dear?"

"Because every thing is in such confusion. Her doll, and books, and playthings, are all scattered about the floor; and if we want to make dresses for the doll, needle book, and thimble, and scissors, must be looked for, and perhaps not found after all. The very last time I was there, we were going to take a walk, but it was so long before Lucy could find her gloves, that it was too late."

"You think, then, that Lucy would be happier, and make her friends happier, if she were more attentive to neatness?"

"Yes, mamma, I am sure of it, but why do you ask?"

"Would you be very much surprised if I should tell you I think another little girl of my acquaintance in danger of acquiring the same habits?"

"You do not mean me, mamma?"

"Yes, dear, I do."

"Why, mamma, I did not know that I was at all like Lucy."

"I do not think your offences against good order are so flagrant as hers, but I think they will become so, unless you guard against them. For instance, do you recollect what you did with your hat and gloves this morning?"

"Yes, mamma," (blushing.)

"You know the natural progress of such habits is from bad to worse, and therefore I think it important that you should begin now to correct them. Are you willing to try?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Well, then, I will endeavor to assist you; and as the first step towards your good habits, I advise you to have a particular nail for your bonnet, where it shall be hung."
—Madallion.

ATTENTIVE BOYS.

There was a little boy named John Smeaton. He would often leave his play to watch men at their work. He would ask how one part was to be fitted to another, and how the thing was to be used when it was done. If money was given to him to buy cakes or playthings, he chose rather to spend it on tools, and tried to do what he had seen done with them.

Once he was seen at the top of his father's barn, fixing something like a windmill. At another time he saw some men fixing a pump, and took great notice of all they did. They had a thick piece of wood with a hole bored through it. It was longer than they wanted, so they cut off a bit. The little boy asked if he might have the bit. It was given to him, and with it he made a little real pump, with which he could raise water. When John Smeaton became a man, he contrived many very clever and useful things. He found better ways than had been known before, of making mills to be turned by wind or water; and he built a tall light-house on the top of a rock in the sea, which serves as a lantern to show sailors the way they should go, and warn them where there is danger. By this means many lives have been saved, and many people have had reason to be glad that John Smeaton was not a careless, idle boy.

Another boy, named Isaac Newton, lived at a farm, and was often set to mind the sheep and cattle, or to assist in driving them to market; but, while he did what he was told to do in this way, he tried also to get learning, and was much pleased when he was sent to school. He amused himself by making a windmill and a wooden clock; and was once found in a hayloft, trying to do a very hard sum. Once he saw an apple fall from a tree in the garden. Many boys would only have picked it up and eaten it; but Isaac Newton was set thinking how and why it was, that when the stalk broke the apple fell to the ground. Did you ever think why this is? If you wish to know, ask your papa and mama to explain it to you. It is well worth knowing. By thinking about this common thing, Isaac Newton was led to find out more than was ever known before, about how the sun, and moon, and stars, and earth, kept their right places, and move about in such beautiful order. This led him to admire the wisdom and goodness of God, who rules the whole. As you grow older, it will be very pleasant to you to learn what this great man found out, and the use of the knowledge he gained by minding what he saw.

One little boy, named Benjamin West, was set to mind a little baby in its cradle. He looked at it kindly, and felt pleased to see it smile in its sleep. He wished he could draw a picture of the baby; and, seeing a piece of paper on the table, and a pen and ink, he tried what he could do. When his mother came in, he begged her not to be angry with him for touching the pen and ink and paper—and he showed her the picture he had made. His mother knew at once what it was meant for. She was much pleased, and kissed her little boy. Then he said, if she liked it, he would make pictures of some flowers she held in her hand; and so he went on, trying to do better and better, till he became one of the finest painters in the world.—London Child's Magazine.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "TEXAS."—It has exceedingly puzzled many persons to determine the real meaning of the word Texas. It originated in the couplet used by the earlier emigrants to that "land of promise!"

"When every other land rejects us,
That is the soil that freely takes us."

The word Texas is a corruption of the phrase used in the last line.

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅝ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ⅝	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ⅝	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2½
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton, Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co. 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff. 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff. 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52, Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatars, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10, Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, AUGUST 22, 1844. NO. 9.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER SEVEN.

The Sabbath enjoined by Christ.

"Go ye, therefore, and disciple all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." This is called the great commission. It is worthy of inquiry what these "all things" were, which Christ had commanded his disciples, and which they were to teach all nations to observe. The four Evangelists are supposed to furnish a sufficient account of all "that Jesus began both to do and to teach, until the day that he was taken up after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen." Every attentive reader of the New Testament must surely have observed, that besides the rites that Jesus instituted, and the particular moral and social precepts he delivered, he repeatedly and frequently enforced the laws contained in the Decalogue. Indeed, a great part of his teaching seems to have been designed to enforce the law in all its length and breadth, reaching to the thoughts and intents of the heart. From the days of Cain and Abel downward, the world has been divided into the formalist and spiritual worshipers of God; and a great part of the preaching of our Lord was to reprove the world of this sin, and inculcate still more clearly the purity of that homage which the Father requires of his people. The following passages afford very clear evidence of this fact. "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law until all be fulfilled. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven. For I say unto you, except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." And he immediately instances the mere purposes of sin formed in the heart, as violations of the sixth and of the seventh commandments. Again, what is now called the Golden Rule is based upon the perpetuity and spirituality of the moral law. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets," i. e. this is what they enjoin. His answers to certain individuals who inquired of him what they must do to inherit eternal life, show the same binding authority and perpetuity of the Decalogue. When a lawyer thus inquired of him, he immediately cited him to the law which required that the whole heart be given to God. When a rich man came and inquired of him, he is cited to the same immutable standard; and when he pleads performance, the reality of his profession is immediately tested: "Go and sell all that thou hast, and give to the poor, and come and follow me." Again the Scribes and Pharisees are rebuked and denounced with the heaviest woes, because while they had observed the externals of the law, they had neglected its weightier matters of judgment, mercy, and faith. Matt. 23: 23. And so, through all the teaching of the Saviour, he magnified the law and made it honorable. If, then, the obligations and spirituality of the law contained in the Decalogue were among the things that Jesus had taught his disciples, the same must have been among the "all things" which they were to teach all nations. Accordingly we find the Apostles, in the epistles, declaring that their doctrines established the law as holy, just, and good. (Rom. 3: 31.) And while they show that the condemnation of the world is, that it knoweth not God, they show likewise that wherever the law was known it worketh wrath upon all that had sinned against it, saying, "Sin is the transgression of the law." (1 John 3: 14.) In all the passages that enforce the obligations and perpetuity of the law, not a single exception is made of one of its precepts. Who, then, is the man who dares except the fourth commandment?

I recently heard a preacher, in a sermon upon Sunday-keeping, say, "Christ has enjoined, in his discourses with his disciples and the Jews, every precept of the Decalogue but the fourth commandment; and he has thus purposely degraded that, because it was no longer to be in force after his death." My heart was moved with pity for the man who could so misrepresent his Lord and Master! What Christian can bear the thought of charging Christ with degrading the fourth commandment? So far from making the Sabbath an exception, he explicitly avows it to be one of the laws of his own kingdom. "The Son of man is Lord of the Sabbath day." "The Sabbath was made for man." We are told (Luke 4: 16) that it was his custom to worship in the synagogues or the temple on the Sabbath day. Six different instances are mentioned by the evangelists, and on six different occasions do we find him, by miracles and doctrine, rescuing the Sabbath from Pharisaic restrictions, and teaching its original benevolent and spiritual design. All, therefore, that we know of the example and doctrine of Jesus Christ on the subject of the Sabbath, plainly enforces its perpetuity and obligation.

The same may be observed of the Apostles.—For thirty years after the resurrection, we find they were strictly Sabbath-keepers, and that not only at Jerusalem and in Judea, but afar off among the Gentiles. In Acts 17: 2, we are told that at Thessalonica, "Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three Sabbath days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures." In chap. 18, we are told that Paul reasoned in the synagogue at Corinth every Sabbath for a year and six months. At Antioch in Pisidia, Paul having preached to the Jews on the Sabbath day, the Gentiles besought him that he would preach the same things to them the next Sabbath day, and on the next Sabbath day came almost the whole city together to hear the word of God. (Acts 13: 44.) The same thing is said of his being at Philippi, (Acts 16: 13.) All these Sabbaths are well known to be the seventh day of the week, God's holy rest; for no other one day of the week is ever in the Scripture called the Sabbath. Why, then, is no more regard had to apostolic example? It is all in favor of the holy Sabbath that God blessed and sanctified at the beginning. It appears strangely contradictory, to me, to suppose that Paul or any of the Apostles taught the observance of the first day of the week as a Sabbath, and yet in these four chief cities of the Gentiles, every seventh day of the week, for years together, assembled and taught both Jews and Gentiles; and in neither instance any thing be said about the change or abrogation of the Sabbath.

It is a perplexity to some Sunday-keepers, that there should be, as they suppose, no command to keep the Sabbath day, in the evangelists or the epistles! What but a veil of tradition over their eyes, can have prevented them, while reading the Scriptures, from observing that when Jesus said, "Keep the commandments;" "One jot or tittle of the law shall in no wise fail, till heaven and earth pass away;" the fourth commandment was included, and consequently the obligation to hallow the Sabbath day. How strange, that when they read James enjoining the fulfilling of the royal law according to the Hebrew Scriptures, and Paul declaring that the law is holy, just, and good, and that his doctrine established the law; it should never occur to them, that the Sabbath of the fourth commandment was thereby enjoined.

"Search the Scriptures," said our Lord and Master, and this belongs to Gentiles as well as Jews; the opportunities for so doing were early afforded them, for we are informed, Acts 15: 21, that "Moses of old time hath in every city, them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every Sabbath day," a passage that strikingly agrees with the writings of Josephus, who says, "There is no city of Greeks, or barbarians, or any other nation, where the religion of the Sabbath is not known." And when the Apostles and Elders were gathered together at Jerusalem for to determine whether the Gentiles should be required to circumcise, and keep the law of meats and drinks; James assigns the fact that Moses' writings were thus generally known and taught, as a reason why they should write unto them briefly, that they were required only to abstain from pollutions of idols, from things strangled, and from blood; upon which it is plain, that all the great moral duties taught in the writings of Moses and the prophets, were considered obligatory upon Gentiles as well as Jews, and that the Sabbath was among the observances that Gentiles did regard and keep.

S. D.

THE HIGHLANDS OF ETHIOPIA.

Compiled for the Recorder, from a work
By Maj. W. C. Harris, of the Hon. E. I. Co's. Engineers.
[Continued.]

Ethiopia is the classical appellation for Abyssinia, or Hábesh, the most ancient as well as the greatest monarchy in Africa; and the limits of the Christian empire formerly governed by the sovereigns of Axum, extended over wide tracts of country now peopled by heathen and stranger nations. As literature has never been theirs, whatever revolutions may have taken place among them are buried in oblivion or wrapt in the fogs of fable, and claim no station of eminence in the history of the world. In their chronicles styled "the glory of the Kings," Ittopia is modestly stated to have divided with Romia the dominion of the world, their rulers to have descended from Shem, the son of Noah, and all the globe north of Jerusalem to have belonged to Romia, and all south to Ittopia. It is known to have extended its dominion along the coast of the Indian ocean, and by means of vicegerents to have reigned as far south as Sofala, beyond the tropic of Capricorn, to Nubia on the north and the province of Yemen in Arabia. This empire continued down to the Mahommedan conquest of Arabia, and most of it to the tenth century, when a division took place, which has undergone several changes since. The lineal descendants of the ancient imperial family occupy the throne of Shoa, and boast their descent from the Queen of Sheba, who visited the court of Solomon, whose name was Maqueda, and who is said to have had a son by him, named Menilek, from whom the present and past generations of the royal family take the style "of the house of Solomon." The ancient Ethiopic empire is still not entirely dissolved; and notwithstanding the "King of Kings," has dwindled to the mere spectre of imperial dignity, his name at least is deemed essential to render valid the titles to the government of all the dependent provinces of Abyssinia. To this, however, the King of Shoa forms an exception. The Kingdom of Shoa, which was formerly a portion of the empire, still continues, in general estimation, to form an integral part thereof; and Sáhela Selássie is therefore, but in name only, regarded as a vassal of the present Emperor of Gondar, for he is, de facto, an independent monarch. Maqueda's royal son is said, in due time, to have been transmitted to his august sire, and duly instructed in all the mysteries of Jewish law and science, and being anointed King under the name of David, returned to his native land, escorted by a band of the nobles and learned elders of Israel, under Ascarias, the son of Zadock the high priest.

If these legends be correct, and they are universally believed by the court, the priesthood, and the common people, it were readily to be expected that Jewish customs would be prevalent in this ancient Kingdom. Hence on one occasion the present King is said to have compelled all the inhabitants of a conquered province of pagans to be circumcised and baptized; and in some of the provinces the rite of circumcision is universally observed. The distinction of meats, clean and unclean, as directed by the Mosaic law, still rests heavily upon the neck of the Ethiopian; and the Abyssinian Christian will neither eat with the Jew, nor the Mahommedan, nor the Pagan, lest he should thereby participate in the delusions of his creed; and the church yard and the church are sternly closed against all who commit this deadly sin.

Whether the baptism of the Ethiopian eunuch by the Apostle Philip, while returning through the desert towards his home, had any important bearing upon the introduction of Christianity into the empire, we have no means of ascertaining, nor do we remember at present to have met with any thing on the subject. But our author says, Christianity became the national religion of Abyssinia early in the fourth century. Meropius, a merchant of Tyre, having undertaken a commercial voyage to India, landed on the coast of Ethiopia, where he was murdered by the barbarians, and his two sons carried as slaves before the Emperor. The ability, the information and peaceable demeanor of the two brothers gained them high office in the court. The work of conversion soon followed with wonderful rapidity and success, and a thriving branch was shortly added to the great Eastern church. Frumentius, one of the brothers, was sent to the Patriarch of Alexandria, who received him and his good news with open arms, and loaded him with honors, and consecrated him first Bishop of Ethiopia. This friendly relation, thus begun, has continued through fifteen centuries to the present day, and the high office of Patriarch of the Ethiopic church is still bestowed upon a Captish priest, who is appointed and consecrated by the Patriarch of Alexandria who resides at Cairo. The present primate, Abba Sabama, is a young man, possessed of superior abilities, whose mind has been expanded by a liberal education at Cairo, under a pious and learned Missionary of the church of England, Rev. Dr. Leeder.

In the year 481 the celebrated council of Chalcedon lighted up the torch of misunderstanding regarding the two natures of Christ. The Eastern church split and separated in mortal feud. The Abyssians denounced the council as a meeting of fools, and concurred in the opinion of the patriarch of Alexandria. The Saracens, about the same time, pouncing upon Egypt, and after them the Mahommedans subduing all the adjacent countries, Ethiopia became isolated from the rest of the world for ten centuries. But about the commencement of the sixteenth century rumors were whispered abroad of a Christian nation established in the centre of Africa; and the happy news was brought to the papist court of Portugal, that a Christian church still existed, which had for ages successfully resisted, among the lofty mountains of Abyssinia, the fierce attacks of the sanguinary Saracens. The most extravagant accounts were soon circulated respecting the extent and opulence of this newly-discovered Christian Kingdom. A mission from the church of Rome was fitted out on a grand scale—the journey was safely accomplished—and excited fancy rioted for a time in the description of palaces and fountains which never existed, and pomp, riches and regal power, utterly unknown in the land. For a hundred and twenty-six years the Roman hierarchy endeavored, by flatteries and costly presents, cruel stratagems and crafty measures, to impose upon them the yoke of the haughty successor of Saint Peter at Rome. But they could never induce the people to abandon their faith, though thousands were slain in the attempt, until at length the Jesuit and the Roman creed were banished from the land. Since then, until the present embassy, Abyssinia has held but little intercourse with the Christian part of the world. Betwixt 1768 and '70 James Bruce, a Scotsman, sometime British consul at Algiers, visited Abyssinia, and published his narrative in 1790. In this there was such an appearance of romance that the work was severely criticised. The present account, however, seems likely to confirm some things called in question at that time.

The archbishop is the spiritual chief of Ethiopia, and resides at Gondar. The second place in spiritual dignity is filled by the Etchegue, the grand prior of the monks of Debra Libanas; his authority extends only to granting admittance into the monkish order, and to granting absolution for minor offences of evil thought, and prescribed fast neglect. The Comus, or bishop, who ranks above the priest, is without diocese or even authority over the inferior members of the church; and his peculiar office is to bless and purify the sacred ark; to repeat the prayer of admission, and sign the cross on the skull cap of the candidate for monastic seclusion; and to afford absolution for trivial offences against the conscience. Twelve thousand clerical drones are treated with the highest respect and veneration, and are fed and caressed by high and low, and invariably addressed as father. Every Abyssinian being ignorant of his own age, it is essential to the reception of priestly orders, that the beard should have appeared, and then he is consecrated by the archbishop breathing on him the breath of the Holy Ghost. The clergy are distinguished from the laity by a beard, and by a monstrously large white turban, and their sacred persons are usually shrouded in a black woollen cloth, studded with emblems of the faith, and furnished with a peaked hood; and a silver or brazen cross, and a slender crutch are never failing companions of the priest. The father confessor is bound to the strictest secrecy; and it is believed that on this point a dread oath is taken before ordination.

There are perhaps more churches in Abyssinia than in any other part of the world; and he who has erected one believes that he has atoned for every sin. But the best are only miserable edifices of wattle, plastered with mud, only distinguished from the surrounding hovels by a thin coating of whitewash; circular in form, with a door to each quarter of the compass, and a conical thatch; the apex is surmounted by a brazen cross, which is usually adorned with ostrich eggs. The walls are bedaubed with paintings of the patron saint and the blessed virgin. Like the Jews, the Abyssinians invariably commence the service with the trisagion, "Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of Sabaoth." They have a liturgy, and the lessons are partly taken from the Scriptures, and partly from the miracles of the holy virgin and other saints. In every clerical conclave the King possesses the supreme authority, and the despotic monarch may, in Shoa, be regarded as the head of his own church.

THE GENERAL BAPTISTS OF ENGLAND.

An article lately published in the London Baptist Magazine, contains a number of suggestions respecting the General Baptist Churches, which deserve to be thought of by all Christians. It is well known, that those churches have been greatly reduced in numbers; and the question as to the cause of this, has been deemed important enough to elicit considerable discussion. We copy the following expressions of opinion upon the subject.

"The appellation, General Baptists, comprehends all Baptists who disavow the doctrinal system technically called Calvinism. The words General and Particular relate to redemption; and the statement which has been most common is, that the one class are believers in general redemption, and the other class believers in particular redemption."

Here follow the reasons given by the writer:

SOCINIANISM.

"1. It is manifest that the introduction of Arianism and Socinianism, has wrought the destruction of many churches. This cannot be reasonably doubted or denied. It is an undeniable fact, that the churches which have imbibed these sentiments, have regularly declined. Not all alike; peculiar circumstances may have retarded, and even prevented the final catastrophe. It might be pleaded in bar of these remarks, that the sentiments in question are not of so deleterious a nature, if any churches could be found which, after their adoption, have improved in spirituality, zeal for the salvation of souls, or even in the numbers of worshipers. On the contrary, just in proportion as churches have forsaken evangelical principles, they have declined in real Christianity, and generally in numbers. We would not withhold the meed due to some men of these sentiments. Some Socinians have been useful members of society and better moral characters than some professors of the genuine gospel. The gospel is not the cause; 'tis hypocrisy, and an assumption of the Christian's character, by the unworthy.

But we are still out at sea, and appear as if we were afraid to grapple with the confounding inquiry, 'Why have so many General Baptist churches sunk unto Socinianism? Why have more of our churches fallen into decay, than the churches of the Independents and Particular Baptists?' Will the reader be able to exercise patience, and wait for some explanation, if I answer, it has arisen from their hatred of Calvinism? They have been justly disgusted with the supralapsarian schemes and antinomian errors of the Calvinists. And when they have held forth the truth, the General Baptists have been unable to receive it at their hands, because they have been so prejudiced against its defenders. The young readers, and especially young ministers, will forgive a reference to a poor man at Derby, Francis Thorp. He had been brought up a Catholic; when a young man he wandered to London, and was awakened under the ministry of Mr. Romaine. He settled afterwards in Derby, and was a member of our church when we had only five brethren in the town. He kept meeting for us when in want of a preacher, and spoke very affectionately and usefully. As he was advanced in years and experience, I took a pleasure in his conversation. One of his remarks I cannot forget; 'The General Baptists,' he said, 'are so afraid of Calvinism, that they get from it as far as they can; whereas they ought to keep as near to it as possible, without embracing its errors.' Where this antipathy prevails, it has always led to the derogation of grace. In proportion as the grace of God is undervalued, pride and self sufficiency gain ground. Prayer is oft only a form; and earnest looking to God alone for salvation, seldom practiced. Reason has been enthroned above revelation, the writings of so-called rational dissenters have been regarded more than those of Paul or John. The fundamental doctrine of the General Baptists, that Christ died for all and rendered salvation possible to all, has been perverted into universal restoration of all, without faith or repentance in this world.

ENDOWMENTS.

Another reason for the declension of our churches will be found in the endowments which have been attached to many of our places of worship in former times. This circumstance speaks loudly in praise of our forefathers. They were zealous in support of the cause whilst living, and liberal beyond the grave. They had experienced great difficulties in supporting the cause and maintaining their ministers. They fondly hoped to prevent the recurrence of these difficulties in future, by leaving lands and houses for the support of their ministers for ever. Vain hopes! Their for ever has proved a short eternity in many instances. The temptation of an annual income independent of the subscriptions of the people, has often been too strong; and wicked men have crept into many endowed places to obtain an idle living; regardless of the welfare of the cause, they have sought their own ends. The laws of the land have generally protected them in the enjoyment of their ill-gotten goods; religion has suffered; the care of the church has been neglected; sin has assumed a more daring aspect; the Spirit has fled; and Satan triumphed. If even a good man has obtained an endowment, it generally has corrupted him. When every one but himself has seen the propriety of his laying aside an office for which he was never very fit, but has become manifestly more so, he cannot do it; he has no other means of obtaining his bread. He cannot remove; no church will employ him. Old age and infirmities, the sure attendants of life, render the incumbent an incumbrance; and, before death releases the church from its pastor, much of the life and vigor of religion have declined. Two or three ministers of this description serve to extinguish a cause; and then the property is seized and held by some trustee, or relation, or robber; and both religion and riches lost to the General Baptists.

NEGLECT OF MINISTERS.

In the ruin of churches, much blame attaches to the ministers. The clergy, in all ages and in many instances, have been injurious to real religion. At the same time it must be allowed that they have been the principal supporters of Christianity. Where no error has been allowed in the minister's creed, even the most evangelical ministers have not always been successful. The minister's head and notions may be right, when his heart and affections are wrong. Pride and idleness have eaten out the vitals of religion. A minister has connived at the sins of a rich lord brother, on whom he has depended, and all discipline has fallen; for except it be impartial, it cannot be effectual. One fault of weak ministers is seldom noticed; they are very backward to encourage young men in preparatory exercises for the ministry. Hence they have none to assist or enliven their devotions, when old age creeps on. They seem afraid of a rival, and therefore have no helper. Declension is the necessary result."

MAR YOHANNAN, THE NESTORIAN.

A letter from Dr. Perkins speaks in the following language of this Prelate of the Nestorian Church, who visited this country in 1842—3:

Since Mar Yohannan's visit to America, his ideas of Christianity appear to be very different from what they were before. To-day he gave a brief account of what he saw in America, to a church full of people. He described the arts of life as being far in advance of the arts in Persia. He then asked why it was so; and said in reply, "They have the Bible there and read it; it is all from the Bible." His account of the state of the arts in America was such as to fill his hearers with wonder.

He spoke of the labors of ministers there as being exhausting in the extreme. They become gray very early, in consequence of excessive toil, are pale, thin, and emaciated, and in general find an early grave. They often lose their voices, and are unable to preach. He drew a contrast between them and the ecclesiastics of his own people; the latter being given to wine and excess, and most of them not preaching at all; the extent of their work being to bury the dead, perform the marriage ceremony, and read a form of daily prayers in the church, baptize, and administer the Lord's Supper.

He said he had attended meetings where scores of sinners were in tears on account of their sins, and that a multitude of pious people were weeping and agonizing in prayer for them. The account was affecting, and was calculated to show the people that true religion is something more than a mere observance of forms.

FRUITS.

We have seldom read a more happy illustration of the ever-widening and ever deepening current of Christian influence, than the following. How careful should such considerations make the Christian in his intercourse with the world! How faithful should it make him in presenting the truth wherever opportunity offers!

The 31st of January, 1841, when Mr. Jay, of Bath, England, completed fifty years of his ministry, it was observed by his people as a jubilee. On that occasion the Rev. Timothy East, of Birmingham, stated, that a sermon Mr. Jay preached in London in the early part of his ministry, was blessed to the conversion of a thoughtless and dissolute young man, who became a minister. A sermon preached by that minister thirty-nine years ago, was the arrow of the Almighty that brought Mr. East to repentance, just as he had determined to leave his native country forever. And a sermon preached by Mr. East, twenty-seven years ago, in London, was the means of the conversion of a careless, gay and dissipated young man, who was John Williams, the late missionary to the South Seas.

Afflictions are the same to the soul as the plough to the fallow ground, the pruning-knife to the vine, and the furnace to the gold.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, AUGUST 22, 1844.

EDUCATING MINISTERS.

There are many persons who acknowledge themselves opposed to "educating ministers." This opposition is in some cases from sincere, though mistaken views of the subject, and ought, therefore, to be met with candor and seriousness. It will generally be found to arise either from false impressions of the influence of education upon the minister himself, or from a misunderstanding of the teachings of Scripture.

In regard to the influence of education upon the minister himself, fears are often entertained that it will set him apart from his brethren, fill him with pride, and unfit him for self-denying labors. But neither facts nor reason justify these fears. It is true, that some who have been connected with schools, and have really made a little progress in the cultivation of their minds, do put on airs which are unbecoming and disgusting. It will generally be found, however, in such cases, that these airs are only the expressions of long-cherished feeling, or expedients adopted to cover up ignorance. And in proportion as the education of such persons progresses, in that proportion will their feelings and expressions of self-importance diminish. It is reasonable to expect that the educated man will be a humble man. For he, if any one, will have just views of the vastness of the unexplored regions of thought around him, and of his own insignificance; he will understand that his responsibilities equal his advantages; he will perceive the wants of his fellows; and he will find pleasure in administering to those wants. We will go farther than this, and say, that what reason teaches us to expect here, facts abundantly illustrate. Who have been the men to sacrifice themselves for the general good in cases of great emergency? Who have been the pioneers in those reforms which at first required self-denying advocates, and afterwards brought rich blessings to man? In nearly every instance, they have been educated men—men whose minds were disciplined by close study or extensive and observing intercourse with mankind, and who, by this means alone, were prepared to do and endure for what they deemed to be truth. So far are we, then, from sympathizing with the fears to which we have alluded, that we expect in a really educated minister to find one who feels for his brethren, carries with him a humble heart, and is ready to engage in the most arduous labors to advance the interests of religion. The absence of this disposition indicates a defective education, or a want of the ministerial spirit.

Another class of persons object to educating ministers, under an impression that the apostles were uneducated men, and were designed as patterns for all ages. Peter and John, say they, were ignorant fishermen, yet powerful and successful preachers; why may not other ignorant men be equally powerful and successful? But two things are overlooked in this supposition, each of which it is important to remember. The first thing is, that these men had miraculous assistance to an extent which is not vouchsafed to the minister of the gospel at the present time. The power of God was with them in an extraordinary manner, to give force to the truth, and to awe the hearer into solemnity in view of it. Undoubtedly God could extend the same power to every preacher now. But when we see that he does not, it would be as great presumption to rely exclusively upon such power, as it would be to expect a miraculous supply of food, or protection against deadly poisons. The second thing overlooked is, that it is by no means certain that the apostles were uneducated men. We know that Paul, who did more than any other one to build up the feeble churches, was an educated man, having been brought up at the feet of Gamaliel. The other apostles enjoyed for a considerable time, probably three years at least, the instructions of the Great Teacher, who "spake as never man spake." Who would exchange this three years for twice that number of years spent in the best colleges and under the best teachers? Surely, if the world could not contain all the books which would be written in giving a full account of His words, those who attended upon his person must have received instruction sufficient to qualify them fully for the work of preaching the gospel. We cannot think, then, that the opinion is correct, that the apostles were uneducated men. Though they were not learned in the wisdom of the world's schools, they were learned in all the wisdom of the school of Christ. Each of these objections rests upon overlooking important considerations; both ought, therefore, to be abandoned.

Now, if we compare those churches under the instruction of educated ministers, with those churches in which education is neglected, it will be seen that in one case harmony and efficient action are secured, while in the other discord and confusion are for ever witnessed. By this it is not meant to say, that discord and confusion will always follow the labors of those who have not pursued a certain course of studies; far from it. Many persons are better qualified for teaching without the aid of a certain course of studies, than others are with its aid. But this is meant, that for a man to "take care of the church of God," he must be "not a novice," but one who knows, from observation and the teachings of Scripture, how "rightly to divide the word of truth."—Where the necessity of this is overlooked, evil consequences always have resulted, and always will result.

RELIGIOUS DECLENSIONS.

From every part of our country, and from every denomination, we hear complaints of the low state of religious feeling. It becomes Christians, in such circumstances, to be on their watch, and to inquire for the cause. There is nothing in the nature of the gospel to require such seasons of barrenness. Its power and sufficiency are ever the same, and God is ever ready to attend with divine influences the sincere and earnest preaching of it. He has said his word shall not return unto him void, but shall accomplish that whereunto it is sent. Let each Christian, then, take his proper position, and do his duty, in reliance upon the fulfilment of this promise, and we shall see the state of feeling gradually yet surely improving.]

There are, however, several influences at work, which serve to draw off attention from the simple truths and claims of the gospel. The excitement connected with important religious changes which have taken place during the past year, together with the present excited state of the public mind in regard to political interests, have combined to produce the results which we witness. Such excitements are to be expected, both in the religious and political world. But they should not be allowed to interrupt the efforts of individuals to live a pious and consistent life, and to exert a healthful influence upon the mass of sinful and perishing men around them. Seasons of declension are no excuse for neglect of duty. On the contrary, they require greater diligence on the part of such as have an eye to see the wants of Zion, and a heart to weep over her desolations. If from each Christian heart the prayer should ascend, "Lord, revive thy work," and if in each Christian heart the work of revival should commence, light would soon shine upon Zion, and joy and gladness would be found within her gates.

SUBJECTION TO THE POWERS THAT BE.

It is a trick of the great Deciever, to endeavor to turn the good and true from their integrity, by quoting and misapplying Scripture. Satan attempted to influence Jesus to command that stones should be made bread, or to cast himself from a pinnacle of the temple, by stating how many promises were written in his favor. But in this case he was put to silence by the assurance that there were other things "written" likewise. Christ here gave an example, which it were well for his followers to imitate, of replying to misinterpretations of Scripture by quoting it aright in return.

One of the much abused passages, is the Apostolic injunction, "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers." If tyranny and oppression wish to strengthen their bonds by adding a sense of duty to the dread of their own power, it is common for them to put on a sanctimonious face, and drawl out these words with as much apparent solemnity as a parish clerk would read a funeral service. If a vender of alcoholic drinks would shut the mouth of one who is disturbing his conscience by pointing out his sin, the "license" is produced, and the duty of submission to higher powers is feelingly enforced. If a trafficker in the bodies and souls of men is pressed with the duty of doing as he would be done by, he points to the constitution and the compact, speaks of them as if equal in authority to the law of God, and wonders at the impiety of those who refuse to submit. If a man who lives by usury and grinding the faces of the poor, feels troubled on account of his course, the law comes to his support, and encourages him by the assurance that he is only rendering due obedience to the powers that be. By such means, a particular precept, or the general spirit of the law of God, is made of none effect through the misapplication of a single sentence of Scripture, irrespective of its connection. It is bad enough, surely, to "frame mischief by a law," but to apologize for that mischief by quotations garbled from a book which condemns all mischief, is unjustifiable, and ought to be unendurable.

But while many allow, in theory, that when human law conflicts with divine law, it may be disobeyed, there is one case in which such disobedience seems to be considered a mortal sin. It is this: The divine law says, "The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." Human law says, that the first day of the week is the Sabbath, or day of rest, and forbids work therein. Now almost all of the doctors in divinity decide that this law of man ought to be obeyed; they preach long sermons in favor of obeying it; and earnestly exhort their hearers to "sustain the laws,"—while they say not one word about obedience to the divine law which forbids labor on the seventh day. True, some of them claim to have such reasons for a change of the day as gives to the first day the authority of the seventh. But many others, seeing no proof of this position, acknowledge that they keep the first day simply because the law requires it. In this class some of the early reformers are included, who positively declare, that we are no longer to keep the Sabbath, but such days as the "magistrates do ordain," including Sunday and the other holidays of the church. Thus the law of God is laid aside, and we are taught "for doctrine the commandments of men."

Now we think the apostle Paul did not mean to enjoin obedience to man at the expense of disobedience to God. We cannot believe, therefore, that those who refuse to obey laws that oppose the requirements of the Bible, will finally be condemned for not being "subject unto the higher powers." We know of no higher power than that which gave the fourth commandment. And those whom men condemn because of their obedience to that commandment, God will justify in that thing. If they carry out this obedient spirit into all the departments of human obligation, instead of being ranked finally among the "disobedient and gainsaying," who trouble the peace of community, they will stand with such spirits as Elijah, who could say, "I have not troubled Israel; but thou and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord."

ADDRESS OF THE HARRISBURGH CONVENTION.

This Convention to promote the observance of Sunday, which was held at Harrisburgh, Pa., on the 30th and 31st of May last, sent forth an address to the public, containing some important suggestions, in connection with some most unimportant and illogical conclusions. Our readers may feel interested in perusing the address, and we therefore copy the more important parts of it. Like the addresses of all similar Conventions, it abounds in the indiscriminate use of the terms Sabbath and Lord's day, and carries with it an impression that the terms describe one and the same institution. Of course we cannot subscribe to any such impression, believing that to make this impression is unscriptural, unjustifiable, and impolitic. The Sabbath and 'Lord's day' are two altogether different insitutions; the one, given by God in Eden, and enforced by the fourth commandment; the other, appointed by the church, enforced by its authority alone, and never called by the name Sabbath for a thousand years after the commencement of the Christian era. We are sure that efforts made in denial or neglect of the distinction between the two institutions, will end, as they have heretofore done, in disappointment and failure. But we will not longer detain the reader from the address itself:

FELLOW CITIZENS:

The Convention, embracing delegates from all parts of the Commonwealth, representing almost every Christian denomination and every profession and occupation in life, make no apology for thus addressing their fellow-citizens. That the Sabbath is of Divine origin and coeval with the race, and that its observance for sacred purposes is required by the command of God, and enforced by the highest considerations of public benefit, civil, social, and religious, few will question. That it has been and is so fearfully desecrated in our land, as to jeopard alike the purity and progress of Christianity, as well as that public morality on which depend the peace and order of families, and the perpetuity of our free institutions, is painfully evident. Who does not know, that the grand improvements of the age have started half a thousand steam-boats, north, south, east, and west, freighted with 10,000 immortal souls, to course our harbors, lakes and rivers, on the Sabbath—the evidence and the means of wide-spread moral corruption? Who is not aware that our canals and rail-roads open the sluices from our great cities, through which is poured the weekly tide of Sabbath desecration, upon remote and peaceful villages, to furnish time, place, and excitement, for the collection of a rabble, who fear not God nor regard man? Who does not know, that to the utmost limit of western migration, is sent at the public expense, the Sabbath stage with its open testimony that the Lord's day is not worth observance? Are not these public, wholesale exhibitions of Sabbath profanation, but the type of that individual moral recklessness and impiety, in which they have their origin and sustenance? How many thousands of captains and crews, stage-drivers and passengers, collectors and lock-tenders, grocers and bar-keepers, post-masters, agents and clerks, are drawn into this vortex of sin!

What baleful elements are here thrown with a broad cast over the youthful mind! How lamentable the depravity which has grasped the proudest discoveries and inventions of the age, and degraded them into instruments of Sabbath violation!

And when we turn from the vast and migratory machines for moral corruption, do we not find in the permanent habits of society, much to call forth our anxiety? Thousands of halls of dissipation thrown open on the Sabbath, ostensibly to meet the wants of the traveling public; but in fact, collecting young men "in the dew of their youth," to associate with the confirmed inebriate, and to meet the fascination of the same cup which has made him an outcast from society! What multitudes are driven to Sabbath desecration, by the Monday-markets and Monday newspaper-press of our great cities!

What crowds are led to our wharves, by the habit always too common of selecting the Sabbath for starting our ships and steamboats on their outward voyages! How many hackmen, draymen, and porters, are demanded to meet the convenience of Sabbath travelers! How slight the apology that leads thousands of merchants to their books, mechanics to their shops, and agriculturists to their fields on the Sabbath! What masses select the Sabbath for pleasure excursions, social visiting and feasting, while their children and youth are left to roam at large without religious instruction, guidance, or restraint.

One-half the adult population of our cities, and of our country at large, almost never enter the sanctuary. Where are they on the Sabbath? What are their occupations? Can it be assumed, in the absence of all testimony, and against all probability, that they are hallowing the day of the Lord in their own dwellings? Is it not more reasonable to suppose, that the same causes which insulate them from the sanctuary, also separate them from communion with the Bible, and from the influence of serious reflections, and leave them to vagrant sauntering and idleness, worldliness and sin?

It is admitted, that by the blessing of God upon the efforts of good men, there has, within the last few years, been substantial and most grateful improvements in Sabbath consecration; but that the painful facts to which we have adverted still exist, in a degree adapted to excite just alarm, is too obvious for proof.

What then shall be done? Shall we give up the Sabbath and leave this beautiful land, the rich inheritance of our children, to the darkness of spiritual ignorance, the degradation of sensuality, the madness and anarchy of unregulated passion, and the final curse of Almighty God? Your answer is NO.

"Long be our fathers' Sabbath ours,
Cursed is the age in which it falls—
Ten thousand angels guard its towers,
Ten thousand blessings line its walls."

* * * * *

Assuming that the friends of God and of their country throughout this Commonwealth, are willing to engage in this work, this Convention would aid their efforts, by suggesting some considerations adapted to awaken increased regard for the holy Sabbath.

Marriage and the Sabbath were the only institutions that a wise God saw best to ordain in the creation of our race. To the Sabbath, for our sake, to aid our estimation of its value, he lent the sanction of his own sublime example, in its first consecration. It was designed and adapted to constitute hours of heaven on earth, when man might rise from animal gratifications and the contemplation of "things that are seen," to assert his noble claim to the relishes and joys of pure spirits. Hence its reiteration on Mount Sinai, and its enduring record by the finger of God on the tables of stone.

The early institution of the Sabbath in Eden, by the solemn precept and example of the Most High, its subsequent incorporation into the Decalogue, among the permanent moral statutes,[*] which lie at the foundation of all pure religion and social order;—the reiterated appeals, rebukes, and warnings of inspired prophets to dissuade from Sabbath violation;[†] the sanction lent to the day by the Saviour, who not only religiously observed the Sabbath, but said "it was made for man," as a race, of all times and nations; the apostolical example of setting apart the first day of the week, or seventh portion of time,[‡] that portion which commemorated the end of a new moral creation, in the glorious resurrection of Jesus from the dead—the corroborating testimony of the Christian Church for twenty centuries,[‖] all these combined, show the earnestness of Heaven's legislation for the Sabbath, and impose universal obligation to its observance, which no one can rebel, without most aggravated and heaven-daring sin.[§] If the great Law-giver has prohibited Sabbath desecration in the same Decalogue which forbids idolatry and profaneness, filial impiety, theft, licentiousness, and the shedding of human blood, who has a right so to separate what God has joined, as to infer that Sabbath-breaking is not before Heaven a most heinous sin to be avoided as we would avoid the frown of God and woes of perdition.

We call your attention specifically to this point, which we would fasten on the entire conscience of this people, that there is great guilt in Sabbath desecration.

And where there is guilt, there is prospective retribution. And when this guilt is so obvious, so widely diffused, so cumulative by perpetuated transgressions, when it so settles down on a nation as it now rests on ours, have we not reason to fear the just judgments of God?

As individuals, as families, and as a nation, we have a broad surface exposed to danger. If we dwell safely and in comfort, it is because "the good hand of our God" is upon us. Can beings so dependent and so endangered, afford to outrage the author of all their days by desecrating the one in seven claimed for his own service?

We might here rest our appeal. If God has spoken, who will not obey? If He has denounced sin, who will not fear?

But the claims of the Sabbath rest not alone on Divine authority. In the exigencies of our nature and condition, such a day is urgently demanded.

We have only room for the heads of the argument from "the exigencies of our nature and condition." It maintains that without the consecration of the Sabbath the Gospel can not and will not exert its saving power over the minds of men; that Sabbath consecration promotes human purity and happiness; and that if the Sabbath be not consecrated to religion, it will become an occasion of increased moral corruption.

The address appeals to Christian professors, to men in authority, to capitalists, and to citizens in general, for their countenance and support, in view of the dangers which beset the sabbatic institution, and the inducements which are presented to sanctify the day.

In conclusion, it speaks with gratitude of the success of past labors; expresses the opinion that no aid can be derived from human legislation which is not sustained by a healthy public sentiment; and invites all, "by example, by conversation, by the tract and newspaper press," to exert their influence in favor of the object of the Convention.

REV. ISAAC P. LABAGH.

This gentleman, formerly a minister of the Reformed Dutch Church, and late a missionary to the Jews in this city, has recently connected himself with the Episcopal Church, and applied to be received into her ministry. Mr. Labagh has been considerably known among our people as a friend and observer of the Sabbath, in respect to which his opinion and practice remain unaltered. In regard to church government, however, his views have differed from our own, he having held that the primitive organization of the church was episcopal, and that this system is better adapted than any other to the well-ordering of the church. He believes that the Abyssinian church is a branch of the great Christian family which has varied less in its principles than any other section of Christendom, and that this people have always observed the seventh day as the Sabbath, and maintained episcopal government. His interest in the welfare of the Jews is unabated, and he hopes that in his new connection a door will be opened of the Lord for his increased usefulness among them. Their conversion and restoration he regards as an event which will produce a deeper moral impression upon the Gentile world than any thing which has occurred since they were broken off from the good olive tree, and the Gentiles grafted in. When they shall be restored to their ancient possession, and as a holy and righteous people occupy again the land given in covenant to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their seed for ever, then, it is his opinion, that all the nations will return to the observance of the Sabbath of the fourth commandment, as the prophet Isaiah seems to intimate, when, speaking of this period, he says, "From one new moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me, saith the Lord."

OBSERVANCE OF SUNDAY.—On Sunday, 11th inst., in this city, a considerable number of persons were taken up for gambling and selling spirituous liquors. But most of them were not of the "first class," and the matter attracted but little notice. On Sunday last, however, several persons connected with the first public houses in the city were found guilty of the same practice. Among them are Francis Blancard, of the Globe Hotel, Jonathan Lovejoy, of Lovejoy's Hotel, John P. Howard, of Howard's Hotel, Chester Jennings, of the City Hotel, Morton Hays, of the Franklin House, Joseph W. Howard, of Tammany Hall, John Florence, jr., of Broadway, Joseph Murphy, of No. 3 Chatham street, and Charles W. Vultee, of the corner of Chatham and Orange streets. They were cited before the police to show cause why they should not be fined.—Counsel on the part of some of the individuals having demurred on the ground that the proceedings were illegal, the cases stand over until the 29th inst.

Speaking of the observance of Sunday reminds us of an article which appeared in one of the very religious newspapers last week, as follows:

"It is getting to be fashionable with the steamers, railcars, passage boats, &c. to observe the Sabbath. The fashion has been growing on us for some years; and as it is a good fashion, and altogether in accordance with the spirit of the age, it will undoubtedly become universal. Lines just commencing may now very safely begin right. It will be easier and more reputable to anticipate the fashion a little, than to be driven by it when it becomes irresistible."

Very safely begin right, and anticipate the fashion! We are old-fashioned enough to think it was always safe to do right, and always unsafe to follow the fashion of the world. But this is another phase of that miscalled piety which is very anxious to serve God when it is fashionable, and very careful not to serve him for nought.

BAPTISTS IN WISCONSIN.—The Baptist Association of Wisconsin held its anniversary June 26th, at which were reported 29 churches, 73 baptisms, and 1174 communicants.

A CHALLENGE.—The Watchman of the South says, that Dr. R. J. Breckenridge, Revs. N. L. Rice, and William L. Plumer, offer to meet at any convenient time and place, any three Roman bishops, archbishops, cardinals, priests, or deacons, and discuss with them the question, "Is the Romish Church the Church of Christ?" This they make as a standing proposal.

"THE ROSE."—We have received the second number of a semi-monthly paper with this title, published at Bath, N. Y., by J. S. Vincent. It is "devoted to literature and the arts, and embellished with engravings."

REVIVALS.—The Christian Index, published at Penfield, Ga., contains a notice of three or four revivals in that vicinity, during which about fifty persons have connected themselves with the churches.

---

[*] A large class of influential religious writers deny that the fourth commandment is a moral statute, because, say they, if this be allowed, then we must keep the seventh day. We will refer only to the opinion of Dr. White, Lord Bishop of Ely, who spoke the opinion of the whole Episcopal church two hundred years ago. He says, "If the fourth commandment be moral and perpetual, then it is not such in respect of the first day, but of that one only day which it specifieth in the commandment." Thus the observance of the first day leads thousands to deny the morality of the fourth commandment.

[†] Supposing one of the Jews had determined to keep the first day instead of the seventh, would these rebukes have reached him?—We think they would; and for proof that our opinion is correct, we refer the reader to the case of Jeroboam, as recorded in the 12th chapter of 1st Kings.

[‡] Where is the evidence that the Apostles set apart the first day of the week as a Sabbath? Not one word of such setting apart can be found in the New Testament. On the contrary, we find that they strictly kept the Sabbath, the seventh day, and that it was their "custom" to preach regularly upon that day. Read, for proof, the account of what took place at Antioch, or at Philippi, or at Corinth, or at Ephesus, or at Thessalonica, in each of which places the Apostles are spoken of as having kept the Sabbath. Not one of those places commonly referred to as showing a regard for the first day, speak of the Sabbath, or narrate a transaction exclusively appropriate to the Sabbath.—As to the notion about the "seventh portion of time," it is altogether unwarranted and uncalled-for. The Scriptures speak of sanctifying the seventh day, but never a seventh part of time. For one to talk about the inviolability of the Sabbath, the seventh day, until he comes to the commencement of the Christian dispensation, and then to change his expression to a seventh portion of time, is illogical, unscriptural, and deceptive.

[‖] This is a sweeping declaration, and is very far from being a true one. The history of the Sabbath shows, that the seventh day was observed both in the Eastern and Western churches for three hundred years after the death of Christ; that the observance of Sunday was at first only partial, being no more strict, and no earlier, than the observance of Good-Friday and Holy-Thursday, in commemoration of the events happening to Christ upon those days; that from the time of Constantine to the Reformation, a large portion of the church regarded Sunday as only a festival of the church, instituted by its authority and changeable at its will; that when the Reformation commenced, many of the leaders of it denied that Sunday was to be kept for the Sabbath, or could properly be called by the name Sabbath, or could be enforced by the fourth commandment; that the notion of Sunday's being equal in authority with the Sabbath originated with the Puritans only a little more than two hundred years ago; and that wherever the divine authority of Sunday has been asserted, there have been found more or less advocates for the Sabbath. Instead of the first day of the week, now called Sabbath by these reformers, having had "the corroborating testimony of the Christian church for twenty centuries," it has been entirely rejected by many during the whole of that period, and its introduction, without a text of Scripture to support it, has led thousands to deny the perpetuity of the sabbatic institution. It is a hazardous experiment for a large convention to attempt to give importance to a day by such assertions, which very many know to be untrue.

[§] "Sin is a transgression of the law." Now the law says, "The seventh day is the Sabbath; in it thou shalt not do any work." We presume that the writer of this address, and nearly every one who voted for its adoption, worked on the seventh day before and after its adoption. What is this but sin? It is a "transgression of the law." This should be thought of in passing sentence upon others.

Sabbath be not consell become an occasion of ruption.
Christian professors, to pitalists, and to citizens in ntenance and support, in beset the sabbatic insti-cements which are presented to speaks with gratitude of the ; expresses the opinion that rived from human legislation ned by a healthy public senti-ally, "by example, by conversand newspaper press," to exert avor of the object of the Con-

ISAAC P. LABAGH.
formerly a minister of the hurch, and late a missionary city, has recently connected piscopal Church, and applied her ministry. Mr. Labagh ably known among our people erver of the Sabbath, in respect on and practice remain unalter-church government, however, ered from our own, he having ive organization of the church, that this system is better adapt-to the well-ordering of the ves that the Abyssinian church great Christian family which its principles than any other dom, and that this people have seventh day as the Sabbath, scopal government. His inof the Jews is unabated, and new connection a door will be for his increased usefulness conversion and restoration ent which will produce a deep-upon the Gentile world than s occurred since they were good olive tree, and the Gen-hen they shall be restored to ion, and as a holy and right-again the land given in cove-Isaac, and Jacob, and their t is his opinion, that all the o the observance of the Sabommandment, as the prophet ate, when, speaking of this om one new moon to another, h to another, shall all flesh ore me, saith the Lord."

DAY.—On Sunday, 11th inst., able number of persons were ing and selling spirituous li-them, were not of the "first ter attracted but little no-however, several persons ir public houses in the city the same practice. Among ucard, of the Globe Hotel, of Lovejoy's Hotel, John P.
's Hotel, Chester Jennings,
Morton Hays, of the Frank-
Howard, of Tammany jr., of Broadway, Joseph hatham street, and Charles ner of Chatham and Orange cited before the police to ey should not be fined.—
of some of the individuals the ground that the pro-
the cases stand over until observance of Sunday re-which appeared in one of spapers last week, as fol-

be fashionable with the age boats, &c. to observe tion has been growing on d as it is a good fashion, ordance with the spirit of ubtedly become universal.
may now very safely easier and more reputa-ashion a little, than to be omes irresistirle."
ight, and anticipate the fashioned enough to think right and always unsafe f the world. But this is iscalled piety which is God when it is fashionato serve him for nought.

—The Baptist Associits anniversary June ported 29 churches, 73
municants.

Watchman of the South
ckenridge, Revs. N. L.
mer, offer to meet at any ace, any three Roman minals, priests, or dea-tend the question, "Is urch of Christ?" This proposal.

ve received the second
y paper with this title,
by J. S. Vincent. It and the arts, and em-

Index, published at ce of three or four which about fifty emselves with the

General Intelligence.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The steamship Acadia reached Boston on Sunday afternoon last, bringing English news to the 4th inst. The news is not very important.

The weather has been such as to cause the most sanguine expectations of a speedy and abundant harvest.

The accounts from the manufacturing districts are of a cheering nature; business wears a healthy aspect.

The most gratifying accounts have been received, relative to the state of Wheat, and other principal crops, in almost all agricultural sections of the kingdom. From the British North American Colonies, there has been received a large quantity of Flour recently. The favorable condition of the home crops will check imports, at least for the present.

It is well known that King Louis Phillippe has promised to pay Her Majesty a visit this autumn. It is now understood that his Majesty will embark at Treport, in the month of September, for this country. His Majesty will be accompanied by two ships of 74 guns and four or five steamers, and will land at Portsmouth, whence he will proceed by Railway to the station nearest to Windsor. His Majesty will remain eight days at Windsor, and will not visit London.

Lord Heytesbury was duly installed Viceroy of Ireland on Thursday, under such circumstances as were calculated to make a pleasing effect upon him.

The Assizes now proceeding in Ireland give token of a diminution of crime to a considerable extent.

The state prisoners have been allowed to have a gymnasium erected in their prison; and on each Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, Mr. O'Connell and his companions amuse and exercise themselves therein.

The North of Ireland has been rejoicing with illuminations and speeches on the passing of the Dissenters' Chapels Bill.

There have been some terrible earthquakes in Persia. Tabriz, Tehran, and Ispahan equally felt them. Kiashar, Mana, and various other cities, towns, and villages, were more or less overthrown, leaving the inhabitants buried under the ruins.

On the 25th of July, at the moment when the King of Prussia was about to set out on a journey, an assassin named Tscheck, burgomaster at a little village some leagues from Berlin, fired a pistol. The ball glanced off the King's breast, without doing him any mischief, and he continued his journey. The assassin was arrested.

The Iowa Indians have arrived in London.

Some of the Liverpool people are in ecstacies with American ice, a cargo of which recently arrived there from Boston.

Among the recent converts to the Catholic faith, is the lady authoress of Harriet Piget.

DEATH OF COL. WM. L. STONE.—The death of this gentleman took place at Saratoga Springs, on Thursday last. Col. Stone has long filled an important station, and a large circle of friends will lament his removal. The Express gives the following sketch of his public life:

"He was born in Otsego county, in this State, and served his apprenticeship in the office of the Freeman's Journal, at Cooperstown. During the war, and before he became of age, he contributed largely to the editorial columns of that and other political papers. His habit of writing was begun early in life, and it is to this habit we are indebted for his constant and useful labors. Soon after, or during the war, Col. Stone removed to Hudson, where he conducted with great efficiency a paper in that city. Immediately after the war, Theodore Dwight, the venerable editor of the Connecticut Mirror, one of the best papers in New England, removed to Albany and commenced the publication of the Albany Daily Advertiser. Col. Stone became his successor in conducting the Mirror, at Hartford, and continued the high reputation of that paper for two or three years. In 1817, Mr. Dwight relinquished the Albany Daily Advertiser and removed to this city, and with one of the editors of this paper, commenced the publication of the New York Daily Advertiser. Col. Stone was again Mr. Dwight's successor in the Albany Daily Advertiser, a paper which he continued to edit with great ability, during a fierce and violent political contest, and at the period when such mighty men as De Witt Clinton, Ambrose Spencer, Elisha Williams, Judge W. W. Van Ness, D. D. Tompkins, and a host of similar minds, guided the political destinies of the State. It is no small compliment to Mr. Stone's talents and acquirements, that amid this galaxy of talent, he was relied on with others to sustain his political friends. Col. S. continued in Albany until about the year 1820 or 1822, when he, with its present proprietor, Francis Hall, purchased the Commercial Advertiser and Spectator of the late Zachariah Lewis, and since that time he has been the able and efficient editor of that paper. For more than twenty years he has filled the editorial chair of a Journal that was established by that extraordinary lexicographer, Noah Webster, and it is no slight credit to his talents, that this Journal, which has always stood high, has, under his labors, increased in circulation and in repute.

PREJUDICE AGAINST COLOR.—A mournful illustration of the power of prejudice against color has recently been exhibited in Boston. It seems that a wealthy and educated colored man from Hayti, visited that city on business. The mercantile gentlemen to whom he was introduced, sought lodgings for him at the Tremont House, and twenty other hotels and boarding-houses, before a place could be found where his color was not objected to. He was taken by his mercantile friends to the Merchant's Exchange to dine, and was refused a seat at the table. Fear of offending southern customers was the reason given for such indignities. The gentleman sailed for England by the last steamer.

A JUBILEE.—A grand jubilee of the natives of Berkshire county is to be held at Pittsfield on the 22d and 23d inst. A great gathering is expected of the living worthies who have gone forth from that county.

DEATH OF MISSIONARIES.—We have had occasion to notice the death of a number of missionaries within a short time past. The Wesleyan Missionary announces the death of several others—Rev. Wm. Cross and Rev. David Cargill, at the Friendly Islands; Rev. A. H. Steele, of Montserrat; Rev. Samuel Symons, at Macarthy's Island, Gambia; Mrs. Cryer, in India; and Mrs. Badger, at Sierra Leone. The London Missionary announces the death of Mrs. Clarkson, wife of Rev. W. Clarkson, missionary in India.

"COMMUNITISTS."—Several societies taking to themselves this title, have recently been organized in Ohio, claiming to maintain the strict equality of all individuals among them, rich or poor; that human law has no authority; that Christ came not to die for us, but to live for us; that what a man does, and not what he believes, is the measure of his religion; and that there is no distinction of days, all being alike holy.

CHURCH TROUBLES.—The Presbyterian Synod of Canada, in connection with the church of Scotland, has been greatly agitated of late by the questions which have produced a rupture in the parent Church. After a long and very exciting debate, the Synod, at its meeting in Kingstown, resolved the 9th inst. by a vote of 56 to 40, to maintain its connection with the Church of Scotland. The minority thereupon entered a Protest, in which they declared it to be their conscientious belief, that, in respect of the premises, sin, in matters fundamental, had been done by the Synod; and that, while they continued to adhere to the Confession of Faith, and other standards of the Church, they could yet no longer, with a clear conscience, hold office in the Presbyterian Church of Canada, in connection with the Church of Scotland. They also declared that they held themselves entitled to all the property and emoluments of whatsoever kind, of which they are now in possession.

Drunkards shall not Marry.—The Government of the principality of Waldek, in Germany, have given public notice that no license to marry will hereafter be granted to any individual who is addicted to drunkenness; or if, having been so, he must exhibit full proofs that he is no longer a slave to this vice. The same Government have also directed that in every report made by the ecclesiastical, municipal, and police authorities upon petition for license to marry, the report shall distinctly state whether either of the parties desirous of entering into matrimonial connection, is addicted to temperance or otherwise.

Sale of Indian Lands.—The sale of the Ogden Company's Lands, situated on the Buffalo Creek Reservation, commenced yesterday morning. A large number of purchasers appeared, and the sales were quite brisk. The lots situated near the city line sold at from seventy to a hundred dollars per acre, and that more distant, in proportion. Quite a large quantity was sold.

The Indians having previously given notice that they should protest against the sale, on account of alledged fraud in the acquirement of the title by the Ogden Company, appeared, by their counsel, G. W. Clinton and Eli Cook, Esqrs., and protested against the sale, and avowed their determination not to relinquish their premises until compelled by the final action of the law.

[Buffalo Gazette, Aug. 16.

Torrey's Case.—Our readers are aware that Mr. Torrey, who formerly edited a daily abolition paper in this city, has been arrested and is now in jail at Baltimore, on a charge of felony in aiding the escape of some slaves. The Boston Chronicle says that Torrey has engaged Reverdy Johnson, and the Committee have sent Gen. Fessenden as counsel. Governor Seward has kindly promised any aid in his power. The habeas corpus, to test the validity of his imprisonment, is set for the 22d, before Chief Justice Taney.

[Albany Advertiser.

Indian Relics.—On opening the cellar under the south-west corner of the new house belonging to the estate of Col. S. Pickering, No. 51 Congress street, about six feet from the surface, the bones of two or more individuals were discovered; also, buried with them, two clay smoking pipes and an old-fashioned axe. There is no doubt but that these are Indian relics. The house which had just been taken down, had been standing over two hundred years, and as there has probably been no Indian burial within what is now the compact part of the town for more than two hundred years, these relics must be of that age at least.

[Portsmouth Journal.

Linseed Oil.—The Cincinnati Gazette states that there are five Linseed Oil mills in that city, and another one in course of erection. They are capable of making, in the aggregate, 900 gallons of oil per day. Cincinnati supplies the whole West, including New Orleans and Mobile, with the article. The manufacture of linseed oil for export is a new business in the West. It is only a few years since it was obtained from the East in large quantities, for Western consumption.

Two Silver Pitchers, costing about three hundred dollars, have been manufactured in Albany, to be presented to Robert H. Morris, by the principal sufferers in the extensive robbery of Pomeroy & Co.'s Express, last winter, for his energetic, unwearied and successful exertions in their behalf.

Counterfeits.—10's on Quinnebaug Bank, Norwich; 5's Bank of Lansinburgh; 10's altered from 1's on Mechanics' and Manufacturers' Bank, Trenton, N. J.; 5's and 20's on Freeman's Bank, Bristol, R. I.; 3's and 100's on Union Bank, N. Y.; 5's Hagerstown Bank, Md.; 1's Phœnix Bank, Hartford, Ct.

Three Romish Priests, subjects of Austria, have recently embraced Protestantism in Breslau; and a prevailing antipathy to Jesuitism is reported in Tyrol. Clearer views of religion are demanded by multitudes, and they are longing for liberation from Romish oppression of conscience.

Two Romish Bishops in Hungary have lately joined the Greek or Oriental Church, and many others are ready to do the same, and a large portion of the Hungarian population also. Changes of this sort, though not all that is prayed for, by those who look for the kingdom of Christ, are yet indicative of the declining power of Romanism.

Snow fell last week on the White Mountains, Canada.

Brick Making in Albany.—An old "boss" brick maker informs us, that there are fourteen millions of brick manufactured annually in Albany! and that this immense quantity finds a ready home market—is "used up" for building purposes in this city. This is an interesting fact, and gives a strong evidence of the improvement and growth of Albany.

Bricks sell at an average price of $3,50 per thousand—about $50,000 for $14,000,000. [Citizen.

Seneca Lake.—A correspondent of the Journal of Commerce, writing from Geneva, N. Y., tells some marvelous tales respecting the famed Seneca Lake. He says first, that this lake has a regular tide; in other words, that it rises seven years and falls seven years. Also that frequent attempts to ascertain its depth have proved unsuccessful. In 1840, several gentlemen went out for this purpose, and found to their astonishment, upon letting down a bottle filled with fresh water, corked and sealed, on examination after it was drawn up, that the water was salt; although the cork was not moved nor the seal broken. He was subsequently shown a piece of salt that had formed in one of the boilers of a steam-mill where they used the water. And lastly, that this lake never freezes excepting in extreme cold weather, so that the steamboats run all winter.

Boundary Monuments.—Ninety-nine castings in iron were landed yesterday from on board the Boston packet brig Acadian. They were consigned to Wier, to be forwaded to Canada, for the purpose of making the long disputed Boundary line between her Majesty's possessions and those of the United States, as concluded by the late treaty. Each casting is about six feet in length, of a square form, similar to that of the Bunker Hill Monument, and having the following inscriptions on the four sides; 'Treaty of Washington,' 'Boundary, August 9, 1832,' 'Lieut. Col. I. B. B. Estcourt, H. B. M. Commissioner,' 'Albert Smith, U. S. Commissioner.' The Monuments have been re-shipped on board the schooner Mary Ann, for Qubec.

[Halifax Herald, 7th inst.

Helderberg Troubles.—The Albany Atlas says that on Tuesday, 13th inst., Sheriff Batterman left that city in a wagon, accompanied by Deputy Leonard, for the Helderberg, to serve process on the tenants of the Manor of Rensselaerwyck. He was, we understand, refused admittance into the taverns and private houses on the road, and was forced to sleep that night in the barn of Mr. Van Leuven, a tavern-keeper of Berne. Attempts were made during the night to enter the place, but the Sheriff, who was armed, threatened to punish the first man who should enter, and so kept his castle safe till morning. In the morning he proceeded on his route, and about noon his horse was shot twice, once with small shot and once with bullets, by men disguised as Indians. He subsequently, in the day, captured two of the persons engaged in the outrage, but they escaped. He returned to the city last night. One man, with whom he had a conflict during the day, had the Sheriff arrested this morning, for assault and battery!

SUMMARY.

Died, at his residence at the Cherokee Mission, in the Cherokee Nation West, JESSE BUSHYHEAD, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Cherokees. He was enjoying excellent health on the 12th of July, when he was attacked with the fever of that climate, which continued, with but slight changes of improvement, until the 17th, when he exchanged his earthly habitation for that of immortality. The subject of this notice was a person of great distinction among his tribe. He was in his acquirements a self-made man. He obtained, in his youth, a very limited English education, which he improved to enable him to be a good English speaker, as well as an able orator in the Cherokee. He was a correct interpreter and translator, and at his demise was extensively engaged in translating English into Cherokee. He has occupied many public stations, which he discharged with fidelity and for the good of his people. His name will live as long as his tribe, while his exulting spirit has joined the righteous in heaven. [Nat. Intel.

Rev. George Shepherd, of Bangor, has been elected president of Amherst College in the place of Dr. Humphrey, resigned.

About 9 o'clock on Monday evening a violent shock was felt all along the Sound shore of Connecticut, West of New Haven, which made the windows rattle and the people to jump upon their feet. Some said it was thunder, some a powder mill, some a big gun; but as the signs were against all these, it was charged to an earthquake. So says the Journal of Commerce.

The waters of the Mississippi and its tributaries, at the last accounts, were not subsiding—indeed the Mississippi was rising slowly.

The sugar crop of the south is almost uniformly promising.

The caterpillar is said to be injuring the cotton crop on Bayou Bœuf, La.

The Liverpool packet ship New York took out $8,000 in specie.

Mr. PEET, principal of the New York Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, is traveling in the Western part of the State with a class of pupils from the institution, and gave an exhibition to a large audience at Rochester on Thursday evening last.

On the 15th of June, at Montevideo, turbulence and anarchy reigned supreme, without any hope of an immediate dissipation. Business was completely suspended, owing to a project of a law which was in force, imposing a tax on all articles of consumption sold in that place.

A company of boys in Baltimore on Sunday afternoon were playing practical jokes upon a drunken man by the name of Thomas Andrews, when he suddenly drew a large butcher knife, and drove it into the head of one of the lads named John Breman. The knife entered just above the eye, and the boy died in about two hours. Andrews was arrested and committed for trial.

Gen. W. S. Murphy, late Charge d'Affaires to Texas, died at Galveston, Texas, on the 13th ult., of yellow fever.

Hon. ABBOTT LAWRENCE, of Boston, has contributed $2,000 to the English High School of that City, towards the establishment of a permanent fund, the interest of which is to be applied to the bestowment of prizes among the pupils who may excel in the various branches of learning taught in that valuable institution.

The Steam Saw Mill near Camden, N. J. owned by Jacob Froth, was destroyed by fire on Thursday.

The Caledonia carried out 47 passengers, a mail of about 23,000 letters, and a mass of other matter.

A box of goods was recently seen upon a sidewalk in Boston, marked for 'Nove Skoshe.' It is supposed that the schoolmaster was out of town when the box was marked.

A College is to be erected at Marion, Perry county, Miss., to be called the Howard College.—It is to be built of brick; four stories high; one hundred and twelve feet in length, and forty in width.

By an arrangement effected with the Long Island Railroad Company, letters and papers despatched from Baltimore by the mail which goes to Philadelphia by the morning train of cars at nine o'clock, will reach Boston the evening of the next day at six o'clock.

The Maine Methodist Conference commenced its annual session in Bangor last week. The venerable Bishop Hedding presides.

LETTERS.

Thos. S. Alberti, Sanford P. Stillman, John I. Tanner, D. Benedict, I. P. Labagh, A. W. Davis, John Whitford.

POSTMASTERS—Edinboro, Pa., Mystic Bridge, Ct., Sackett's Harbor, West Clarksville.

RECEIPTS.

Plainfield, N. J.—Abram Runyan, $2.
Sackett's Harbor.—John Utter, Jr. $2.
Edinboro, Pa.—Calvin Waldo, $2.
Mystic Bridge, Ct.—Joseph Cottrell, $2.
Petersburg, Va.—John I. Tanner, $2.
Gravesend, L. I.—I. P. Labagh, $1.
Berlin—Mrs. B. Saunders, $2.

A CARD.

THE subscriber wishing to remove to Plainfield, N. J., offers to sell to a Seventh-day Baptist the following desirable property, situated in Shiloh, Cumberland Co., N. J., viz: A new and commodious dwelling-house, with a large store-house attached, being a good stand for country business; a new barn, wagon-house, corn-crib, wood-house, and other out-buildings, all of which have been built within six years, and are in complete order.

Also, a pretty good assortment of Store Goods, such as are generally kept in a Country Store, which are offered at such a price as will make it an object for any one who may wish to locate in this part of New Jersey, and enter into the mercantile business.

Also, a small farm adjoining, consisting of about 24 acres, some of which is in a high state of cultivation, and on which is a newly rebuilt dwelling-house, convenient for two small families, a large apple orchard of choice fruit, and other fruit trees, with a good well of water at the door, &c.

The house and lot, and the Store Goods, will be sold with or without the Farm.

If further information is wanted, address the subscriber.

ISAAC D. TITSWORTH, P. M. Shiloh, N. J.
July 22, 1844.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

The Society has published, also, in quarto form, [$1,25 per 100, or $10 per 1000,] two numbers of THE SABBATH VINDICATOR.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen — Sobeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London — Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville — Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT
Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson

Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre — Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN
Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA
Fredonia, Louisa Co — M Wheelock

ILLINOIS
Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST GENERAL CONFERENCE will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in VERONA, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference.

PAUL STILLMAN, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having already reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year.

F. W. STILLMAN, Rec. Sec'y.

The Missionary Association will hold its second Anniversary, with the 1st Church in Verona, N. Y., on the Sixth day of the week, before the second Sabbath in September. A Sermon on the subject of Missions will be expected during its session from T. B. BROWN—the time to be determined by the Executive Board. It is desirable that all missionary returns may be made to the Secretary previous to that time.

W. B. GILLETT, Rec. Sec.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 12 a 4 18
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 00a24 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	7 75 a 8 62
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 25 a 5 25
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	— a —
Stripes, fast colors	— a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14¾
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1¼a 1
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 36
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS.
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS.
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 72 @ 2 75
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	10 37 @10 50
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT.
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 31 @ 4 37
Troy	4 37 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 25 @ 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 @
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	88 @ 95
Do South new	94
Rye, Northern	63 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	48 @ 47
Barley N R	@
Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A & Rio Grand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng. & Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do Russ PSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4¾
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 25
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 25
Pork mess bbl	10 0 @ 8 50
Do prime	6 7 @ 6 50
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5½
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10¼ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13½
Trieste in boxes	6¼a 6
American	5 a
Spring	5¼a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8¼a 9½
Do Brown	6⅜a 8¼
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack 1 10	a
Do do fine 1 35	a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¾
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17⅛a 17¼
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6½a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¼
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 38½
Souchong	21¼a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
I Do E. India	16 a 17
n plates ⅛ X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 38
No. 1	31 a 33
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

HYMN OF THE HEBREW MAID.

When Israel of the Lord beloved,
Out from the land of bondage came,
Her father's God before her moved,
An awful guide in smoke and flame.
By day along the astonished lands
The cloudy pillar glided slow;
By night, Arabia's crimsoned sands
Returned the fiery pillar's glow.

There rose the choral hymn of praise,
And trump and timbrel answered keen,
And Zion's daughters poured their lays,
With priests' and warriors' voice between.
No portents now our foes amaze,
Forsaken Israel wanders lone:
Our fathers would not know thy ways,
And thou has left them to their own.

But present still, though now unseen,
When brightly shines the prosperous day,
Be thoughts of thee a cloudy screen,
To temper the deceitful ray.
And oh! when stoops on Judah's path,
In shade and storm the frequent night,
Be thou long-suffering, slow to wrath,
A burning and a shining light!

Our harps we left by Babel's streams,
The tyrant's jest, the Gentile's scorn;
No censer round our altar beams,
And mute are timbrel, trump, and horn.
But thou hast said, "The blood of goat,
The flesh of rams, I will not prize;
A contrite heart, an humble thought,
Are mine accepted sacrifice."

SIR WALTER SCOTT.

LEAVES FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTE-BOOK—NO. 5.

BIRMINGHAM.

Birmingham is a large commercial and manufacturing city, about equidistant from Liverpool and Bristol, and nearly in the centre of England. It has long been renowned for its manufactures of plate and plated wares, ornamented steel goods, jewelry, japannery, cut-glass ornaments, steel pens, buckles, buttons, guns, steam engines, and an endless variety of curious articles, never heard of and consequently unneeded by a large portion of the people. This trade has greatly increased of late, and is now carried on to an extent elsewhere unequaled. The city is connected with London and most of the important places in the kingdom by means of canals or railroads, and it will probably hereafter form the centre of railway communication with every part of the country.

The appearance of Birmingham has been pronounced bad by almost every visitor. The clouds of coal smoke that overhang the city and often settle down upon it, the everlasting rumbling of machinery, and the plainness of the houses inhabited by the laboring class, have contributed to make this impression. There is, however, a great difference in the appearance of the different sections of the city. It would be difficult to find residences exhibiting better evidences of plenty and taste than do some of the dwellings of the opulent manufacturers. But these are, alas, comparatively few, and in most cases at some distance from the places of business to which travelers are introduced. And then much depends upon the hour of the day at which one sees the city. So great is the proportion of workmen, that the streets are almost deserted during the hours for labor, and appear actually lonesome. But when evening comes, and the toils of the day are past, the people rush forth into the open air, and swarm every street or public place. Our first evening in Birmingham was a mild and beautiful one, after a sultry day. Men, women, and children, thronged the streets, in search of fresh air or amusement. We sat in a high window overlooking a public square, and listened to the sound of a thousand voices or the tread of a thousand feet. The bells of a neighboring church were chiming a cheerful tune, as if to soothe all anxious spirits and prepare them for worship and rest. In such circumstances, though far away from familiar scenes, and surrounded by strangers, the deepest emotions of the soul were moved, and all selfish anxieties gave place to a feeling of sympathy and oneness with mankind.

During our stay in Birmingham, we attended the ceremony of laying the corner stone of a Hebrew National School. The ceremony was preceded by a religious service at the synagogue, consisting of readings, prayers, and hymns, in the Hebrew Language. At the close of the service, a procession was formed, and proceeded for a considerable distance to the site of the building, through streets crowded with spectators. The exercises at this place were full of interest, and exhibited in a striking manner the growing interest among the Jews in the subject of education, and the change which is taking place in their feelings towards other people. The opening address referred to some circumstances in the past history of the Jews, showing how their present condition and treatment differed from that which they had known in former times, and closed with thoughts which do honor to any nation, and deserve to be remembered. "May all," said the speaker, in conclusion, "feel as I do, that we are children of the same God: that one FATHER hath created us. May you all, as I do, acknowledge that religion and virtue are the universal blessings of mankind, and that they ought not to be confined to sect or lineage, but that even as our HEAVENLY FATHER lets the sun shine to illumine the world, so you acknowledge that virtue and religion ought to unite all mankind in one bond of sacred brotherhood." After the corner stone had been laid, Sir MOSES MONTEFIORE, the champion of the Jewish people all over the world, whose labors on their behalf in foreign countries and at home, as a statesman and a scholar, have endeared him to every member of that community—came forward and said, "We have this day, with due ceremony and solemn prayer, laid the foundation stone of a building now to be raised and hereafter dedicated to the instruction of our youth in the principles of our most holy religion, and in all the sciences and arts fitted to render them useful members of society, good citizens, and loyal subjects. If ever there was a time when knowledge could be withheld from the people, that time has passed away, happily for ever. Not only do the natural cravings of the mind lead it after knowledge, but the circumstances of the time, and all parties and sects join in enforcing the divine precept, 'that it is not for the soul to be without knowledge.' It is, therefore, not only in obedience to the divine command that we determine to raise this building, but in compliance with the wishes and feelings of mankind. I trust that we shall live to see this building completed. [Here Sir Moses became so deeply affected that he could not proceed for some minutes.] Gentlemen, (he continued,) I wish it was in my power to express what I feel on the present occasion. The few words which I had intended to say, I regret to find myself unable to address to you. I regret that I cannot do so; my feelings overpower me, and I must conclude." The effect of these remarks, and of the feeling which was exhibited in offering them, can not be described. It was seen in the tearful eyes, and solemn, yet grateful demeanor, of all present. A prayer in English, followed by the singing of a psalm in Hebrew, closed the services, when the assembly dispersed.

This was the first celebration we had seen in England, adapted to draw the populace, in any considerable numbers, into the street. It was painful to behold the thousands who lined the streets through which we passed. Scarcely one could be seen among them who was well dressed and appeared to be in comfortable circumstances; while here and there were specimens of poverty and destitution seldom exceeded. Those who belonged to the procession were perfectly free from interruption or annoyance, since they were under the guardian care of a hundred policemen, who with their rods kept the passage clear, and gave satisfactory demonstration of their strength and resolution. But though free from actual annoyance, he must indeed be "used to it," who could look upon that collection of poverty and wretchedness without being moved.

In strange contrast with this, we visited, on the following day, the largest establishment in the city for the manufacture of plate. On our way to it, we passed an ancient church, the steps and yard of which seemed to be a resort for mendicants. Even as we entered the building, which was a fine specimen of architecture, beggary stared us in the face and made its petition. But how the scene changed when we entered! We saw before us a saloon fitted up with great magnificence, and filled with show cases and tables, on which were displayed gold and silver plate enough to supply a festal board for all the sprigs of nobility in the country. One apartment after another was thrown open before us, each presenting some new style of ornament, until we were bewildered with the number and dazzled with the richness of the articles exhibited. But the remembrance of what we had just seen without, went with us into this place dedicated to wealth and luxury, and forced upon us reflections which it was painful to encourage.

Birmingham possesses but few public buildings worthy of notice. The town-hall and grammar-school are the best edifices. There are several free schools and charitable institutions, most of which are in a flourishing condition. It may be a good town for business; but it can never be a very desirable place to inhabit.

A GREAT DISCOVERY.

In D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, we have a great graphic account of the discovery which Luther made of the Bible, at the time when Providence was preparing him to be the grand instrument of a resurrection of the religion of the Bible. He had been two years at the University of Erfurth, and was twenty years of age. One day he was opening the books in the library, one after another, in order to read the names of the authors. One, which he opened in its turn, drew his attention. He had not seen any thing like it, till that hour. He reads the title; it is a Bible, a rare book, unknown at that time. His interest is strongly excited. He is filled with astonishment at finding more in that volume than those fragments of the Gospels and Epistles which the Church has selected to be read to the people, in their places of worship. Till then he thought that they were the whole word of God; and here were many pages and many books, of which he had no idea. His heart beats, as he holds in his hand all the Scriptures, divinely inspired. With eagerness and indescribable feelings he turns over the leaves of God's word. He returns home with a full heart. Oh, thought he, if God would give me such a book for my own! He soon returned to the library to find his treasure again; he read and re-read, and then in his surprise and joy he went back to read again. The first gleams of a new truth then arose upon his mind.

This event had a sublimity in it, because that the impulse which the discovery gave to Luther's mind was to be communicated to the millions of other minds; because the whole Reformation lay hid in that Bible. This book, on the unknown shelves of a dark room, was, through his mind, to become the book of life to nations. It had now fallen into the hands of its translator, who was about to give it tongues to speak to all Europe.

EVILS OF THE CHEAP PRESS.

We have lately seen it stated, that the bishops of Belgium have issued a manifesto against the swarm of books of bad tendency, daily re-printed, (chiefly from the French,) by the Belgian press. The extraordinary cheapness of these books has given them a wide circulation, and the evil is said to be increasing. The bishops call upon the clergy of the country to form libraries for free circulation among the people. One library which has been already formed for this purpose in Brussels, is said to have lent, during the past year, upwards of thirty thousand volumes.

A cheap press, if not a positive evil, is at least an equivocal blessing. A vast majority of its productions are of a vicious character. It is the depraved appetite which is so craving as to create the demand which a cheap press is designed to supply. Were the literary tastes and desires not vitiated, the cheap press would more than meet the demand

What a torrent of contaminating influences is now flowing over the land from the fountain of the cheap presses. We are almost tempted sometimes to wish that a censorship of the press could be established, or that it were the province of some Pope to anathematize and annihilate the worthless and corrupting issues which are pouring like a continual rain from the cheap press.

The religious newspaper press—we take occasion to say—affords ready and efficient means of counteracting these pernicious influences, of creating a healthful literary taste, of enlightening the mind, and of promoting sound morality and true religion. The suggestion of the Belgian bishops, however, as to free libraries, is a good one, and may be profitably imitated here and every where.

[Boston Recorder.

A COLORED BOY'S HEAD-WORK.

Philip Hicknesse says that a slaveholder in the West Indies had a boy, whom he found to be so apt and amusing, that he frequently conversed with him for pastime. Whenever Job committed a fault, his master would give him a note, and send him to the overseer, who would punish him. One day he asked his master why it was that, whenever he sent him to carry a bit of paper, the overseer beat him so.

'Oh,' said his master, 'the paper talks so and so to the overseer, because you are lazy.'

'Well,' said he, 'master, I never see you work.'

'I work with my head, which is much harder than your work with your hands,' said his master.

Not long after, Job was sent to the overseer with a note again, but on the way, he stopped, tore it into pieces, and threw it in the grass.

When he came back, his master asked what the overseer did to him.

'Nothing,' he said.

'Did you give him the paper?'

'No sir; I threw it away. I worked with my head, too, this time.'

AN ANCIENT PLOW.—The Glasgow National records the recent discovery of a rude implement of agriculture, being a plow of a very simple but original construction, and dug out of some peat moss in the island of Liel, near Eskdale, Scotland. It consisted entirely of one piece. The lower part or trunk of the tree was formed into a stilt, with a handle cut out of the solid timber, wide enough to receive both hands, something similar to a garden spade, only very coarse and clumsy. The handle was horizontal, while the plough was upright in working position. The beam was a branch of some length, and the share was the stump of another, as the tree had branched into two, something like the y, with one of the branches lengthened. It did not appear to have any iron about it. It is evident, from its simple form, that it could never turn over the soil, but merely stirred it like a cultivator or grubber. It was so decayed that, on exposure to the air, it crumbled into fragments.

AGUE AND FEVER.—As the season is approaching in which this disease generally prevails, we deem it our duty to lay before our readers a recipe, or prescription, which we have used in more than 100 cases, with but one solitary failure, and that in the case of a very aged patient.

In case the stomach is very foul, commence with an emetic of Lobelia—if not, with a tolerably active vegetable cathartic.

Now take of the Rattle Root, or Black Cohosh, (the root) a handful, bruise it fine, put it in a bottle and add as much Alcohol as will cover it—let it stand in the sun several days, frequently shaking it. Then press it through a fine cloth. Of this tincture, take a tea-spoonful three times a day on an empty stomach. For children, from 15 to 22 drops at a dose. Every family exposed to this disease should keep the above preparation on hand, so as to have it ready for use. It will save much suffering and many a doctor's bill. Try it for yourself, and you will soon prove its virtue.

FACTORY GIRLS.—The Editor of the Middlesex Standard, at Lowell, (J. G. Whittier,) says: "We had the pleasure of attending the 'Improvement Circle,' formed among the girls in the mills, a few evenings since, and listened with pleasure to the reading of several well-written articles. We know half a dozen Congressmen, who if they were promised as a reward the New York Custom-House, or the office of Minister to the Court of St. James, could not write with so much point, beauty and good taste as these 'Factory Girls.'"

ENGLAND'S POOR.—Professor Wright, in his letters from England, says the farms held by the aristocracy and gentlemen rent to the farmers at from $9 to $24 an acre!—so great is the competition in bidding, there being about 50 applicants, for every farm advertised to rent. A week's wages of a stout laboring man will only buy one bushel of wheat! They feed their children who "are quite plenty," on bread and pea soup—"meat seldom." After all (says Mr. Wright) they are farther above our slaves in their condition than he had supposed.

FEAST OF LANTERNS.—Of all the numerous occasions of pomp and splendor, among the eastern nations, none exceed, in magnificence and brilliancy of effect, the Chinese national ceremony of the "Feast of Lanterns." It is computed that when this ceremony takes place, there are no less than 200,000,000 lanterns blazing at the same moment throughout the empire.

Boots and shoes are advertised in Cincinnati, with iron soles, which can be put on and taken off at pleasure—being very light, and at the same time beautiful and durable. This is a queer invention. 'Iron-hearted' is a common expression, but iron-soled people are a novelty indeed.

The incredible rapidity with which space can be traversed by means of rail-roads is well known. In England, the distance of 118 miles, from London to Bristol, is passed in ninety minutes; and a Newcastle engineer has offered to construct machines capable of going one hundred miles an hour!

It is stated that Crockford, of gambling notoriety, has left £350,000 to his widow. He once kept a fishmonger shop near Templebar, London.

Lieut. H. T. Porter, of the U. S. Schooner Flint, died at Charleston, S. C., on the 11th ult. of yellow fever. He was a son of Com. Porter.

CITY AND COUNTRY.

"The voice of singing birds—the fragrant kiss
Of the flower-scented breezes—sun and sky,
Wild flowers that blossom in the wilderness,
And wither there unseen by human eye—
How do our fettered spirits sigh for these,
Prison'd within a city's naked walls,
Where to the brow may come no forest breeze,
And on the ear no forest music falls;
Turn wheresoe'er we may, our eyes behold
The wan, pale cheeks of sad and care-worn men;
No leaf is green—no blooming flowers unfold,
Like those whose hues are bright in vale and glen."

TO A GOOD WIFE.

Companion of my calmest, happiest hours,
Dear partner of my home-felt joys and cares,
For thee, in silent thought, my spirit pours
Its glad thanksgivings and incessant prayers.
Thou art my world. What once to me were snares,—
Wealth, emulation, fame,—are now disarm'd;
But love's light load my heart contented bears;
By pleasing conjugal enchantment charm'd;
And only by the fear of future loss alarm'd.

When travelling far, in sickness or in grief,
Of strangers weary, lonely and depress'd,
The thought of thee administers relief,
The progress homeward soothes my heart to rest;
Arriving, I'm unutterably bless'd;
Thy tender welcome banishes all care;
Pain, sickness, sorrow, leave my lighten'd breast;
Peace, confidence and joy re-enter there;
All things appear transform'd, all good, serene, and fair.

While conquerors climb the summits of renown,
O'er mounds of dead, through slaughter, flood and flame,
And, from their stormy eminences, frown
On half the wasted world; while others aim
At wealth, or office, or a titled name;
Our choice be love, and meek, domestic peace,
Obedient faith, and conscience void of blame,
Joys that may grow as health and strength decrease;
And in full vigor last when selfish pleasures cease.

Oft bows my soul before a Father's throne;
Its prayer—Me from idolatry defend,
And keep, O jealous God, my heart thy own;
Yet stil thy dearest, dangerous boon, O lend;
Spare her thou gav'st me till my sojourn end;
Instruct our babe thy saving truth to know;
Let thy pure influence on our hearts descend;
Our spirits purge of love of things below;
Our strength in weakness be, our bliss in worldly woe.

While God upholds us in this dying world,
The cares of love be still our sweet employ;
When death's approach with shadowing wings unfurl'd,
Shall warn us to resign terrestial joy,
Despair shall not our parting hour annoy;
Hope, strong, exultant, shall the mourner cheer,
Through HIM who died that He might death destroy,
Our mingled dust the archangel's call shall hear,
And live, in love and joy, through heaven's eternal year!

A DARK PICTURE.

A writer in the Advocate of Moral Reform, speaking of the efforts now making to purify the streets of New York from a crowd of miserable creatures who are accustomed to throng them nightly, uses the following language:

We are informed by credible authority, that more than 60 abandoned females were taken up in one evening by the Mayor and his posse in and about Broadway. The public are so much accustomed to hear these poor creatures spoken of by scores, and hundreds, and thousands, that the enormity of the evil is lost sight of in its very extent, and the heart that would recoil with horror from the sight of one of these moral ruins, can read or hear of them in the mass, almost unmoved. There is a strong tendency in the human mind to lose itself in vague generalities; were it not for this, the facts constantly transpiring around us, and to which we cannot refuse credence, would stir our souls to their lowest depths, and compel us to vigorous action. Sixty abandoned women taken up in one evening, each one of whom is an immortal being, made in the image of God, and destined to live for ever in bliss or woe unutterable, inconceivable! Each one of them, gifted with noble powers, warm affections, capable of receiving and conferring happiness, and designed to become centres of social and moral influence to some hallowed domestic circle! How happy, how useful, how blest, might each one of them have been, under other circumstances, as a daughter, a wife, or a mother, shedding around her the light of a holy example, and winning others by the force of goodness, to follow in her steps! Who can tell, how many germs of intellect, of thought, of feeling, lie crushed beneath this dreadful wreck of all that is fair, lovely, and of good report! Who can estimate the public loss thus sustained, or guage the dimensions of an evil which thus degrades and brutalizes immortal mind!

Let us now turn from the contemplation of what these unfortunates might have been, and look for a moment on their actual condition. Painful as this is in the contemplation, what must be the sad reality? They have lost in their fall from virtue, all that could make life desirable, or eternity an object of hope. They have lost the approbation of conscience, and are condemned to listen night and day to its accusing voice, reminding them of the past, and warning of the terrific future. They have lost the affection and esteem of their own dearest friends, they are aliens from the beloved domestic circle, cast off even by the mother who bore them, and whose love watched over their infancy and childhood. Their very name is a forbidden sound in their once happy home, and their existence considered a foul blot on the escutcheon of relatives and friends. They have lost the means of obtaining an honest livelihood by reputable industry, for few indeed there are, who will extend to them a helping hand, even when penitence and a desire to reform are undoubted They have lost liberty and the power of choice, and are in most cases the veriest slaves to the most cruel and infamous task-masters and mistresses in the world.—Could the facts in reference to their actual state of bondage and oppression, be brought out before the community, they would make the ears of every one who heard them to tingle. But the walls of their prison-houses are thick, and the sighs and groans wrung out from crushed and bleeding hearts within them, die away without finding a single echo. They have lost health, strength, energy, purpose, the very life of life is gone. Nothing remains for them but to drag out a few, a very few years of miserable existence, and then, while the loathsome body is thrown into the pauper's grave, the poor trembling spirit is summoned before the bar of Jehovah to give an account of the deeds done in the flesh. What an aggregate of guilt and wretchedness is here! Did we contemplate it now for the first time, and in a single instance, we should feel its appalling force, but the picture is so frequently presented to our view, that most seem to look upon it as a matter of course, with which they have nothing to do. It were to be wished that those who regard this as "a necessary evil," might go to the poor wretches who have sacrificed themselves for the public safety, and whisper consolation in their ear, or if this mission is too revolting, let them at least visit the dwellings made desolate by licentiousness, and bind up the hearts writhing with anguish there, by the assurance that they are to be considered in the light of public benefactors, who have given up their choicest treasures for the common good.—Who would dare to utter such mockery as this? Away, then, with a plea which is worthy only of him who is the father of lies from the beginning, and who has entrenched himself behind the strong-holds of this monster vice, for a final conflict with the kingdom of light. Let all who are on the Lord's side, know assuredly, that these poor ruined souls are all remembered by Him who made and redeemed them, and that they will be inquired for another day, at the hands of a Christian community, who have stood by, and calmly looked on their destruction.

Who are these nameless, houseless, friendless beings, taken up in their career of crime, and sent to the watch-house, the Tombs, and the Penitentiary, to atone for their offences against society? Some among them are young, and have not yet lost all traces of better days. Something of humanity, of decency, still lingers about them, which appeals strongly to the heart of the benevolent, and prompts the wish, that an influence might still be exerted over them that should save and bless. Each of them has a history to relate—short, perhaps, and common-place, but full of deep interest to all whom it concerns, both for time and eternity. It is generally a story of the foulest treachery and guilt on the part of man, and of thoughtlessness, ignorance, and confiding affection on that of woman. When, oh when, will the warnings so long sounded and reiterated, sink into the hearts of those to whom they are addressed, through the length and breadth of our land! When will the long night of prejudice and ignorance pass away, and the morning star appear that shall usher in the glorious day of holiness and peace to bless this ruined world!

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½ to ⅝	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½ to ⅝	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2½
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2½
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 30, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff. 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff. 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Phila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatara, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10, Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co, Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches, Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense; and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.

"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."

PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I.

NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, AUGUST 29, 1844.

NO. 10.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER EIGHT.

The Sabbath peculiar to no Dispensation.

For the sake of arrangement, it has been found convenient to divide the history of religion into a number of different dispensations, as the paradisaic, the antediluvian, the patriarchal, the Mosaic, and the Christian. This, like all other human devices, has been turned to bad account in the popular perversions of divine truth, it having been used to convey the impression, that each dispensation succeeded and displaced another. This appears to me untrue in fact, and mischievous in its influence upon the investigations of divine truth. The temple of truth is one, whatever may be the time occupied in its erection. Its whole architecture is formed upon the one great design of the Infinite Mind. To suppose that he would give one dispensation of religion subversive of another, appears to me like an aspersion of his wisdom, and a detraction from the glory of his government. Its influence seems to be, to dissipate the reverence and fear of God, which particular institutes were designed to concentrate and impress upon the human mind. That there have been different epochs in the progress of the building of the grand temple of truth, none can question; but they have succeeded each other as each stage of a building succeeds another from the foundation. It was this delightful harmony in the works and ways of God, that led the Apostle to write to the Ephesians, [ch. 1: 8—12,] "He hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence, having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath proposed in himself, that in the dispensation of the fullness of times, he might gather together in one, all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and which are on earth." This wisdom and prudence in which God has abounded towards man, is undoubtedly in providing for the moral necessities of his nature. This was the design of all those great institutes which God at the beginning gave to our first parents, and of those which were added as the state of society required in succeeding times.

I cannot conceive of a single moral necessity of man, which our great progenitors, Adam and Noah, possessed, which is not equally urgent in all their descendants to this day. Was it necessary for the family compact to be instituted? Through every age it has been guarded and sanctioned by every following revelation from heaven. Was it requisite for the seventh day to be hallowed and blessed as a Sabbath, for man to reverence and observe it unto the Lord? This has likewise continued a part of the moral code in every succeeding age, and we know of no more reason for this being abrogated, than that the family compact should be dissolved. If, when permission was first given for man to eat of flesh, it was requisite, to guard against its blunting effects upon his moral sensibilities, to forbid eating the blood thereof, this also was prohibited alike under the Mosaic laws and the New Testament precepts. Enough is said in the history of all the great epochs of religion, to show that all the great moral duties have been continued and enforced, and that generally in each successive revelation by additional solemn considerations. It appears plain to me, that each successive revelation had for its design the perpetuation and enforcement of the great moral duties that God enjoined at the beginning. It is evident from the Scriptures, that sacrifices were instituted immediately after man's transgression, and were continued until the offering of Christ for sins; and that, they cease now only because Christ our passover is slain for us. These never were intended to be in the lieu of the daily obedience due unto God's holy law; for when they were offered by persons who lived in the violation of his law, they were regarded as an abomination and a weariness to God; as he saith in Isaiah 1: 10, 11, "Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom; give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah; to what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me, saith the Lord. I am full of burnt offerings of rams, and the fat of fed beasts, and I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he-goats." The design of sacrifices was to present in a striking figure, the justice and mercy of God mingled together, to perpetuate before man the deserving of his sin, and awaken in his bosom the hope of divine mercy. And so far from relaxing his sense of obligation, its tendency and design were to enforce the claims of God's government upon his conscience and his heart. And thus it is with the death of the Lord Jesus Christ; it does not nullify the law, but ratifies and confirms it.

The design of all the covenants which God established with Noah and Abraham, and other of the patriarchs, was to engage and encourage them in the keeping of his commandments. And the choice of Abraham and his seed was the preservation of true religion in the world. Ye are my witnesses, said God to the Israelites. And thus Moses to the men of Israel, [Deut. 28: 9, 10,] "The Lord shall establish thee a holy people unto himself, as he hath sworn unto thee, if thou shalt keep the commandments of the Lord thy God, and walk in his ways. And all people of the earth shall see that thou art called by the name of the Lord." Repeatedly Israel is reminded that it was not for their sakes alone that God showed mercy unto them, but for his holy name's sake, and that it might be sanctified among the heathen. [Ezekiel 36: 22.] In order to the perpetuation of the name and the word of the Lord in the earth, when men multiplied and spread abroad upon the earth, God saw fit for some location to be chosen, where, by the special protection of his providence, the institutes of his worship should be maintained, and a people selected and kept distinct from all others, to whom he would reveal himself, for the enlightening and admonition of all mankind. That place was Jerusalem, and that people Israel. Hence their sons were the Lord's prophets unto all nations; of them came the Messiah, who was for salvation to all the ends of the earth. His apostles chosen and sent to preach unto all nations, were all of this chosen race. On not a single Gentile was this peculiar honor conferred. There is not a single inspired book from a Gentile pen; not a single inspired precept of religion, but is of Israelitish origin, as much as the Sabbath? Why, then, is the Sabbath said to belong to the old dispensation? Did not all the law belong to that dispensation as much as the fourth commandment? Did not Jesus command to search the Jewish Scriptures? And did not they belong to the old dispensation? His rebuke of the woman of Samaria is applicable to many of the present day, who indulge the same prejudices that she did, [John 4: 22,] "Ye worship ye know not what; we know what we worship, for salvation is of the Jews." I sometimes tremble for those who seemingly stigmatize the Sabbath as a "Jewish Sabbath;" and in their dislike of those who among the Gentiles observe the seventh day of the week as the holy Sabbath unto the Lord, nickname them Jews and Jewish Christians. When God separated Abraham and his seed from all other families, that they might be a people unto him, He said, "I will bless him that blesseth thee, and curse him that curseth thee," [Gen. 12: 3.] And in Deut. 30: 7, Moses says, "The Lord thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee." We have reason to expect there will soon be another signal distribution of these blessings and these curses.

S. D.

THE HIGHLANDS OF ETHIOPIA.

Compiled for the Recorder, from a work
By Maj. W. C. Harris, of the Hon. E. I. Co's. Engineers.
[Continued.]

But the Abyssinian possesses no idea of the more salutary doctrine of Christianity. Polluted faith is here reflected in the mirror of depraved manners, and long severe fastings constitute the essence of his degenerate religion. The idol worship of the saints has made rapid progress in the land; and the ignorance of the clergy is only to be equaled by the impurity of the lay classes. Their belief in Christianity, if that term can be applied, is strange, childish, and inconsistent; and bigoted to the faith of their ancestors, they abhor and despise all who refuse acquiescence in this their absurb confession:

"That the Alexandrian faith is the only true belief.

"That faith, together with baptism, is sufficient for justification; but that God demands alms and fasting, as amends for sin committed prior to the performance of the baptismal rite.

"That unchristened children are not saved.

"That the baptism of water is the true regeneration.

"That invocation ought to be made to the saints, because sinning mortals are unworthy to appear in the presence of God, and because if the saints be well loved they will listen to all prayer.

"That all sins are forgiven from the moment that the kiss of the pilgrim is imprinted on the stones of Jerusalem; and that kissing the hand of a priest purifies the body from all sin.

"That sins must be confessed to the priest—saints invoked—and full faith reposed in charms and amulets, more especially if written in an unknown tongue.

"That prayers for the dead are necessary, and absolution indispensable; but that the souls of the departed do not immediately enter upon a state of happiness, the period being in exact accordance with the alms and prayers that are expended upon earth."

All ideas regarding salvation are thus vague and indefinite; and vain, foolish doctrines have taken possession of the shallow thoughts of the Christian of Ethiopia. Born amid falsehood, and deceit, cradled in bloodshed, and nursed in the arms of idleness and debauchery, the national character is truly painted in the confession of one of her degenerate sons:—"Whensoever we behold the pleasing ware, we desire to steal it; and we are never in the company of a man we dislike, that we do not wish to kill him on the spot."

* * * * * *

The Jewish Sabbath is strictly observed throughout the kingdom. The ox and the ass are at rest. Agricultural pursuits are suspended. Household avocations must be laid aside, and the spirit of idleness reigns throughout the day.

Abolished by order of the great council of Laodicea, the Oriential churches were, after the observance of centuries, freed from this burden; and men gladly availed themselves of the ecclesiastical license to work on Saturday. Here, however, the ancient usage agreed too well with the laziness of a people systematically trained to indolence; and when, a few years ago, one daring spirit presumed, in advance of the age, to burst the fetters of superstition, his Majesty the king of Shoa, stimulated by the advice of besotted monks, delegated his wardens throughout the land, and issued a proclamation, that whoso disturbed the original dreamy stillness of the Jewish Sabbath should forfeit his property to the royal treasury, and be consigned to the state dungeon.

Every day in the Abyssinian year is appointed by their calender, to the honor of one or more of their saints; but by far the greatest holiday of the year is held on the Epiphany, styled Temkat, i. e. baptism, when the baptism of our Lord by John in the river Jordan is commemorated with extraordinary pomp; and males and females without any of our regard to modesty, are immersed in a large reservoir prepared for their reception.

* * * * *

One hundred and ten volumes comprize the literature at this day extant in Abyssinia; but tradition records the titles of other works, which were deposited for security in the Island of the lake Zooai, at the period of the Mohammedan inroads. Of the accumulated lore of ages, four manuscripts only are written in the language at present spoken and understood; and, with the exception of the Holy Scriptures, the whole is little more than a tissue of absurd church controversy and lying monkish legend.

Four monstrous folios, styled Senkesar, which are to be found in every church, briefly record the miracles and lives of the countless saints and eminent persons who receive adoration in Abyssinia; and on the day recorded by the calendar for the service of each, his biography is read for the edification of all those of the congregation who comprehend the Ethiopic tongue. A host of pious worthies thus preside over every day of the entire year; and fables of the most preposterous kind, detailed with scrupulous minuteness, are vouched for upon unexceptionable authority.

Idle legends form the delight of the people of Shoa. The Ethiopic saint is nothing inferior to his western brethren. He performs yet more marvellous miracles, leads a more ascetic life, and suffers even more dreadful martyrdom; whence he is proportionably adored in the native land of credulity, superstition, and religious zeal. Between apocryphal and canonical books no distinction is made. Bell and the Dragon is read with as much devotion as the Acts of the Apostles, and it might be added with equal edification too; and St. George vanquishing his green dragon is an object of nearly as great veneration as any of the heroes in the Old Testament.

But the store of literature being thus bound up in a dead letter, few excepting the priests and defteras can decipher them, and many of these learned men are often more indebted to the memory of their early youth than to the well-thumbed page in their hand. The ignorance of the nation is indeed truly deplorable; for those children only receive the rudiments of an education who are designed for the service of the church; and the course of study adopted being little calculated to expand the mind of the neophyte, a peculiar deficiency is presented in intellectual features. The five churches of Ankóber have each their small quota of scholars, but the aggregate does not amount to eighty, out of a population of from twelve to fifteen thousand.

Abyssinia, as she now is, presents the most singular compound of vanity, meekness, and ferocity—of devotion, superstition, and ignorance. But, compared with other nations of Africa, she unquestionably holds a high station. She is superior in arts and in agriculture, in laws, religion, and social condition, to all the benighted children of the sun. The small portion of good which does exist may justly be ascribed to the remains of the wreck of Christianity, which although stranded on a rocky shore, and buffeted by the storms of ages, is not yet wholly overwhelmed; and from the present degradation of a people avowing its tenets may be inferred the lesson of the total inefficacy of its forms and profession if unsupported by enough of mental culture to enable the spirit and its truths to take root in the heart, and bear fruit in the character of the barbarian. There is, perhaps, no portion of the whole continent to which European civilization might be applied with better ultimate results; and although now dwindled into an ordinary kingdom, Hábesh, under proper government and proper influence, might promote the amelioration of all the surrounding people, while she resumed her original position, as the first of African monarchies.

IT IS ONLY A CENT.

Now, my little lad, don't spend that cent for candy.

'Why, didn't my father give it to me?'

Certainly he did, but that is no reason why you should spend it. If you run over to the candy shop and buy a roll, in five minutes you will be no better off for having the money; now save your money (and your health) and put it in a box.

'But it is only a cent!'

A hundred of them will make a dollar and if you never save the cents you will never be worth a dollar.

'But papa gave me this to enjoy it. I do not want to lay it up.'

Well, I will tell you how to enjoy it. Not by throwing it away for unwholesome sweetmeats; but keep it until you have six, and then go to the baker's and buy a nice loaf of bread.

'Why, what do I want to do with bread? Mother gives me all I need.'

Stop a moment, and I will tell you.—A poor old widow lady lives down the alley below your house, and all she has to live upon is what kind neighbors bring in.

'O, I know who you mean. Old Widow Brown. Mother has sent me there a great many times.'

Well, do you take your loaf of nice bread, and get your mother to put a white napkin round it, and then carry it down to her house and say—'Here, Mrs. Brown, is a present from a little boy, will you please accept of it?'

'Well, I'll do it! I know just what she will say. She will cry, and then put her hands upon my head, and say—God bless you my little boy! And I shall feel so happy! I wish I had the money now. But I won't spend a cent until I get it.'

Then indeed you will enjoy your money. "It is more blessed," Jesus says, "to give than to receive."

From the "Voice of Jacob."

"DAYS OF OLD."

No. 2. The Red Sea.

"Because there were no graves in Egypt, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness?" Such was the cry, as the heads of those weeping families pressed upon Moses, in the wrathful anguish of utter despair; and the shrill voices of agonized mothers, clasping their babes to bosoms that well nigh burst with the heavings of sorrow, took up the reproachful wail,—"Wherefore hast thou dealt thus with us, to carry us out of Egypt?" Alas! those afflicted ones were looking around them, at the rocks on either hand, at the swiftly advancing chariots and horsemen, who pursued to close them in, at the waves of the sea that rolled and rippled even to their feet, and again, half drowned in the screams of terrified children, the lowing of perplexed herds, the smothered thunder of martial music, and the hoarse murmur of a rising wind that swept the darkening deep, peeled forth the bitter cry, "It were better for us to serve the Egyptians, than that we should die in the wilderness."

Was young Jabin's voice distinguishable in that tumultuous current? No, for Jabin looked not to to the right, nor to the left; to the pursuing foe, nor to the opposing flood. His eye was fixed immovably upon that tall column of cloud, the mysterious vanguard of their host, which, as night began to close, assumed a glow, faint as yet, but to which the softest glory of the setting sunbeam was dull, and heavy and earthly. Whilst that pillar shone light, Jabin saw no darkness in any accompanying dispensation; whithersoever that pillar led, Jabin was content to follow, not inquiring whether the next step would plant his foot on earth, or flood, or flame. He thought on the wonders that were past; his faith stretched forward to the promise of what was to come; and though his cheek was pale, and his knee trembled, the only fear that agitated his bosom, was fear lest Israel's doubts and murmurings might prevail over the long suffering patience of the Eternal.

See, terror hath overcome the young Hebrew, and a cry escapes from his lips also, for, suddenly the object of his hopes retreats; it rises high, it floats far above the heads of the people, and approaches the ranks of their enemies. Is Israel then at length forsaken? No, a burst of radiance brighter than the noon-day sun, sheds joyous day upon their host, while beyond, the very blackest darkness enwraps the Egyptian army; proving that He who gave light in Goshen, is still with his people—still against their oppressors. Wherefore does Moses advance to the very brink of the sea? Why stretch that wonder-working hand towards the distant shore? The Lord hath communed with him, and given the word, "Speak to the children of Israel, that they go forward!"

Forward! the sea is there, rolling in its undiscovered depths. Nay, but if God says forward, what barrier shall oppose? It was a fearful and a glorious and a beautiful sight, when those waters heard and obeyed, and rolled themselves on either side, and heaped their glittering stores, curling into lofty battlements, and sparkled in the fiery glow that dried in a moment their evacuated caverns. Oh then, indeed, "the deep lifted up their hands, he lifted up his hands on high," and the pinions of the Lord were heard among his billows. Go forward, Israel, for before thee is dry land, and the waters are a wall on the right hand, and on the left. Tears burst from the eyes of Merab, as, among the foremost, he stepped down into that strange path, shamed and humbled, and heartstruck by this new miracle: but Jabin hastens not; the rapture of triumphant faith pervades his soul, to the exclusion even of all that filial and fraternal love endear. He stands upon a jutting ledge of rocky ground, to gaze upon the scene, while, calm and confiding under the overpowering influence of the light that penetrated to their very souls, the immense multitude descended into the bed of the sea, and laughing babes essayed to touch the bright walls of water; and the little kids sported beside their dams, and the observant camel looked around, conscious that he was journeying through untrodden paths. But while Jabin gazed, fierce tumult rose among the Egyptian host; perplexed in darkness, maddened by rage, onward they came, and Jabin heard the voice of hot pursuit. He heard, and shouted an exulting farewell to the oppressors whom Israel was never more to behold; then bursting into a song of praise, he bounded lightly over rock and reef, for the first and last time visible to mortal eye, and was again by the side of his father, who in smothered accents greeted him, "Bless thee, my son! The glory of the Lord is terrible; but His mercy endureth for ever!"

PROXY CHRISTIANS.

Not one of the least remarkable features of the present age is the system of doing those things by deputy, which our forefathers did for themselves. Provided a man has plenty of ready money, he may recline on the sofa, or loll in the easy chair the greater part of the day, and still be a most active Christian, by deputy. Does his heart yearn to provide for the orphan, or to comfort the widow, to clothe the naked, and feed the hungry, he has no longer to seek them out as of old; he is not compelled to visit the scenes of destitution and misery; he has but to subscribe a few guineas to some half dozen institutions to qualify himself a 'life governor,' and for the remainder of his days he is freed from the obligations of Christian benevolence by discharging the mere peppercorn rent of signatures to tickets and proxy paper.

A SALUTARY HINT.

The people of one of the out parishes in Virginia, wrote to Dr. Rice, who was then at the head of the Theological Seminary in Prince Edward, for a minister. They said they wanted a man of first rate talents, for they had run down considerably and needed building up. They wanted one who could write well, for some of the young people were very [illegible] They wanted one who could visit a good deal, for their former minister had neglected that, and they wanted to bring it up. They wanted a man of very gentlemanly deportment, for some thought a great deal of that. And so they went on, describing a perfect minister. The last thing they mentioned was—they gave their last minister $350; but if the Doctor would send them such a man as they had described, they would raise another $50, making it $400. The Doctor sat right down and wrote a reply, telling them they had better forthwith make out a call for the elder Dr. Dwight, in heaven; for he did not know of any one in this world who answered this description. And as Dr. D. had been living so long on spiritual food, he might not need so much for the body, and possibly he might live on $400.

[Boston Recorder.

THE TOMB.

The empress Maria Theresa, says Zimmerman, caused her own mausoleum to be erected, and frequently, accompanied by her family, visited with serenity and composure, a monumental depository, the idea of which conveys such painful apprehension to almost every mind. Pointing it out to the observation of her children—"Ought we to be proud or arrogant," says she, "when we here behold the tomb, in which, after a few years, the poor remains of royality must quietly repose?" Such a contemplation is appropriate alike to all the children of mortality. It had, no doubt, a salutary effect upon the distinguished empress and her family; it will have a salutary effect on all minds. In the busy scenes and the varied duties of life, we are prone to forget God and our own future destiny; the tomb, the visit to the grave yard, the death of our friend will turn our thoughts inward upon ourselves, onward toward eternity, and upward toward our God. Let the mind often contemplate such scenes, and linger among them, that we may grow better as life wears away.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

I remember, on one occasion, traveling in this country with a companion who posessed some knowledge of medicine; we arrived at a door near which we were about to pitch our tents, when a crowd of Arabs surrounded us, cursing and swearing at the "rebellers against God." My friend, who spoke a little Arabic, turning round to an elderly person, whose garb bespoke him a priest, said, "Who taught you that we were disbelievers? Hear my daily prayer, and judge for yourselves:" he then repeated the Lord's Prayer. All stood amazed and silent until the priest exclaimed, "May God curse me if ever I curse again those who hold such belief; nay more, that prayer shall be my prayer till my hour be come. I pray thee, O Nazarine, repeat that prayer, that it may be remembered, and written among us in letters of gold."—Mr. Hay's Western Barbary.

THE POWER OF MUSIC.

It is well known what a great share Luther's powerful, soul-stirring hymns and chorals had in the success of the reformation;—so much so, that the famous Cardinal Cajetan said; "By his songs he has conquered us." The native city of the writer, Lubeck, furnishes a striking example of it. In the time of the struggle between Popery and Protestantism, mass had been held on Sunday at St. Mary's Cathedral, in that city, and the people were preparing to leave the church, when two boys began to sing one of Luther's chorals, which had then just become known all over the country:—

"Ach Got vom Himmel, sieh darein!"
"O God of Heaven, look to it!"

And immediately the whole congregation joined in the singing, as though the choral had been regularly given out from the pulpit. The next day the Catholic clergy had to leave the city, and Lubeck stood redeemed to Protestantism.

A FIXED POINT.

A German drawing master once told of a lad who wished to sketch landscapes from nature. The teacher told him that the first object was to choose some fixed point of view. The sagacious pupil chose a cow grazing beneath a tree. Of course his fixed point soon began to move hither and thither, as she was attracted by the sweetness of the pasturage; and the lines of his drawing fell into strange confusion.

This is a correct type of those who choose public opinion for their moral fixed point of view. It moves according to the provender before it, and they who trust to it have but a whirling and distorted landscape.

The Last Question.—A little boy on his death bed was urging his father to repentance, and fearing he had made no impression, said, "Father, I am going to heaven; what shall I tell Jesus is the reason why you won't love him?" The father burst into tears: but before he could give the answer, his dear boy had fallen asleep in Jesus.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, AUGUST 29, 1844.

LECTURES ON THE INSTITUTION OF THE SABBATH.

By the Rev. John S. Stone, D. D.

In a former number, we promised our readers some account of this book of Dr. Stone; and we now proceed to redeem that pledge.

The book consists of a somewhat lengthy apologetic Preface, and eight Lectures, "originally prepared," as the author informs us, "not for the press, but for the pulpit." It is designed to show that the Sabbath is an inseparable part of that divine system of arrangements, under which God has organized his Universal Church; and having done this, to make a practical use of the argument, and urge the proper sanctification of the day.

The Preface, after stating that the Lectures "are now given to the press at the urgent solicitation of many friends," is wholly occupied in replying to the argument of the Seventh-day Baptists. The following extract contains the substance of what is said:

"The series of tracts published by 'The Seventh-day Baptist General Conference,' and devoted to the work of reversing the change which has been made in the day, and of thus bringing the Christian Sabbath into coincidence with the Jewish, was begun long after the contents of this little volume were written. These Lectures, therefore, cannot be considered an attempt to answer the argument of those Tracts. And yet, what is said in the fourth of the series may be regarded as an outline of what such an answer would require. The truth is, the argument in the Tracts referred to, labors against a great FACT. The day has been changed. The Church Universal, for 1800 years, has been witness to the change. We are, therefore, pressed at once with this serious alternative; either Christ, the Divine head of the Church, designed and sanctioned the change which has taken place; or his Church, after having received the promised Comforter, and the assurance that Chist himself would be with her to the end of the world, began, in her very first movements, to defeat his intention by introducing this change; for 1800 years, has continued to defeat it; and through this long period has seen that defeat crowned with manifold tokens of the Divine approbation."

Here, then, we have Dr. Stone's objection to the argument of the Tracts. It is the "great FACT," that "the day has been changed," and that "the Church Universal, for 1800 years, has been witness to the change." Now, we are not ready to say, that this "fact," if it could be shown, would certainly prove that Christ "designed and sanctioned the change," since a number of acknowledged errors are of equally long standing. But for the sake of the argument we will allow that the fact would prove the divine sanction of the change; will the Doctor, on the other hand, allow, that if this fact (so-called) can be shown to be a mere fiction, then the change has no divine sanction? Candor will certainly require him to allow this. Let us, then, look a little at the history of the matter. In doing this, instead of giving our own opinion alone, or disputing with him about who belongs to the church universal, we will answer him mainly in the language of members of his own Episcopal Church.

In regard to the views entertained of the change, and of the sacredness of the first day, during the first three centuries of the Christian Church, we will quote the language of Dr. FRANCIS WHITE, Lord Bishop of Ely, in his "Defence of the orthodoxal doctrine of the Church of England." This book was written by direction of "the most reverend father in God, William, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury," in 1635, and was approved by the leading bishops of the English Church in that day. He says, "It cannot be proved out of the Scriptures, either that the Apostles constantly observed this day in all churches; or that they commanded every Christian church to observe it; or that they commanded any one church to observe it according to the old rule of the fourth commandment. The Apostles, and likewise many of the successors of the Apostles, for many ages, at least three hundred years, kept holy the Saturday of every week in some of the churches, as well as the Sunday." "The Catholic Church, for more than six hundred years after Christ, permitted labor and gave license to many Christian people to work upon the Lord's day." Dr. PETER HEYLYN, who wrote in 1636, under the direction of his majesty king Charles, says, that during these three centuries, Good-Friday, Holy-Thursday, the feast of Easter and of Pentecost, were "accounted holy, and solemnized with no less observation than the Sundays were." EDWARD BREREWOOD, Professor in Gresham College, London, in 1611, says, "The ancient Sabbath did remain and was observed three hundred years and more after our Saviour's passion." Dr. RICHARD WHATELEY, Archbishop of Dublin, subscribes to the truth of these assertions, without qualification, in his recent Essay on the Sabbath. Such is the testimony of some of the leading authorities in the English Church—a church which Dr. Stone will undoubtedly regard as a part of the "Church Universal," to say the least. It shows clearly enough that the church universal has not been witness to the change.

The question may now be asked, When did the first day of the week begin to be regarded as the Sabbath? In answer, we will say, that until the commencement of the Reformation, no branch of the "church universal" ever taught, that the first day of the week had been substituted for the seventh by divine authority. Early in the Reformation, there were those who took this view; but their number was small, and they were opposed both by the leaders in the Reformation, and by those who taught the duty of keeping the seventh day. The first book written in English advocating that notion, was written by Dr. Bound, of Portsmouth, and appeared in 1595. The notion was for a long time confined to the Puritans; and was severely denounced by the established church. It has since, however, been adopted by many members of that church. For proof of this, read any one of the numerous works on the subject which appeared during the first half of the seventeenth century.

What, then, shall be said of the assertion that "the church universal, for 1800 years, has been witness to the change?" Nothing less than this can be said, that it is plainly and unequivocally denied by history. And if no better reply can be given to the argument of the Sabbatarian Tracts than this "great fact," Christian men ought to yield to the force of that argument.

As to the question whether the Church has "defeated the design of Christ," it is only necessary to say, that to do what Christ did not design, is quite a different thing from defeating what he did design. If one were to carry out the Doctor's mode of reasoning, he might with equal propriety say: 'Christ did not design the ruin of the sinner; therefore every sinner who has rushed upon ruin has defeated the design of Christ.' We do not believe the sabbatic institution needs the support of any such logic.

But to return to the Lectures. The first maintains that the Sabbath was instituted at the creation of man; the second answers the objections against its early institution; the third gives further proof of its early institution, and of its perpetual and universal obligation.

The fourth Lecture is devoted to the "argument for the change of the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week." This is the longest lecture of the eight, and is acknowledged to involve an important "difficulty," because, as the writer says, "the change has furnished one of the most plausible of the reasons urged by the opponents of the perpetuity of the institution." The argument is managed according to the long-established, stereotyped manner; and need not, therefore, be repeated. Having gone through it, and acknowledged that there is no express precept for the change, a question of difficulty is presented and disposed of in the following summary manner:

"Why, if there was to be a Sabbath in the Christian dispensation, and if the day for its observance was to be changed from the seventh to the first day of the week, why is there no mention of this in the writings of the New Testament; no precept either enjoining or justifying the change? To this question, which really presents the whole difficulty of the case, I reply: No precept enjoining the change was given, for the very reason, evidently, that Divine Wisdom saw it was not best to issue such a precept."

And we think, with our author, that the reason why no express precept was given, was "because Divine wisdom saw it was not best." But we do not think, as he seems to, that it it is best for us to attempt to improve upon what Divine Wisdom has given us. Is it left for man to mend the work of God? Is man to sit in judgment upon the Inspired Word, to say wherein it is deficient, and to make the necessary additions? What else is this than to add to or take from that Word? And yet the notion that a change may be made without any express precept, certainly implies this. We believe it is sufficient for the servant that he be as his Master. If the Master has not seen it best to issue any such precept, the servant has no right to issue it for him. True, it is said, in the way of apology for our Lord, that if he had come out in direct opposition to the seventh day, and in favor of the first, even through his Apostles, it would have excited the opposition of the Jews. But surely there was no more occasion to court the favor of the Jews at that time than there has been ever since. And if it would have been wrong, on this ground, for the Lord of the Sabbath to announce the change, it can not be right for his followers to do it.

Near the close of the lecture, and as a sort of conclusion from what had been said, we meet with the following remarkable language: "Instead of finding matter for difficulty and doubt, then, in the absence of express precept on this point, I find in it the strongest reasons for satisfaction. I see in this withholding of precept the very hand of God." What can such language mean? Is the fact that God has not enjoined a given duty, the best reason for believing he requires it? We own ourselves unable to feel the force of such reasoning. Indeed, much of the lecture on the change is made up of pointless suggestions and illogical conclusions.

The remaining four lectures of the volume are devoted to what the author calls the more practical consideration of the whole subject. They treat of the duties of the Sabbath, its benefits, the sinfulness of its violation, and the measures urged for the proper sanctification of the day.

In conclusion, we must acknowledge ourselves disappointed in perusing the volume. It is a dry compilation of thoughts which have heretofore been much better presented. As a specimen of typography, it deserves credit, being neatly printed, and illustrated with "numerous engravings." But as a disquisition upon a theological question, it exhibits neither acumen, research, nor earnestness of inquiry after truth.

THE BEST REASON.

"The Bible says so," was a mother's reply to her child's inquiries. What better reason for believing an assertion or discharging a duty? Religion and wisdom shine through that reply. How soon would discord and wrangling cease, if all would ask in simplicity and with an obedient spirit, What says the Bible? But alas! the Bible is often interpreted by the Fathers, and the Fathers by the philosophy of their day. What shall the simple-hearted Christian do in such circumstances? He must either pin his faith upon a teacher's sleeve, or wade to a conclusion as to duty through the mire of biblical or metaphysical distinctions. This should not be so. It confuses the mind, dampens ardor, and eats out the vitals of religion. Let us return to the "good old way," of telling what the Bible says, rather than what is taught by Reason and the Fathers. Let the parent instruct the child in this way; so let the believer answer the sceptic; and let theological disputants bring their questions of difficulty to this touchstone; how soon would the mists of night flee away, and a bright day dawn upon us. "The entrance of thy words giveth light."

FOURTH COMMANDMENT.

"We should bear in mind that this command [the fourth] was not spoken merely to the Jews to regulate the Mosaic Sabbath, but it is found in the law of the ten commandments, which, as Dr. Wayland remarks, 'is always referred to in the Scriptures, as containing the sum of the moral precepts of God to man.' Hence, it is given also to regulate the Christian Sabbath."

[Morning Star.

Does the writer of that article allow the fourth commandment to "regulate" his keeping of the "Christian Sabbath?" Let us see. The day required by the fourth commandment is the seventh day, on which "God ended his work which he had made;" yet the writer keeps the first day, on which God began his work. Again, the reason given in the fourth commandment for keeping the seventh day is "For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day;" yet the writer keeps the first day, probably, because that on it (as he supposes) Christ rose from the dead. Here then, both the day and the reason for its observance are changed. How, in such a case, does the fourth commandment "regulate the Christian Sabbath?"

"GOING AHEAD."

"The Vermont Observer is going ahead nobly under the labors of Br. Angier. To a paper advocating the observance of the seventh day as the Sabbath, Mr. A. says: 'We will not enter into any discusion in reference to the observance of the seventh instead of the first day of the week, until the editor will tell us which is the seventh day from creation. Let us have the truth on this point in a 'short way.'' That, Br. Angier, is a dangerous promise. It will bind you not to enter such discussion to the day of your death."

[Zion's Advocate.

Does the Advocate really call this "going ahead?" We call it going aback, and believe that the universal adoption of such a mode of treating the Sabbath on which God rested, would annihilate all regard for the sabbatic institution, and open a way for the darkness of heathenism to come in. The Bible speaks of some who "put darkness for light" and "multiply words without knowledge." We fear that class of persons is represented on the earth at the present time.

"THERE REMAINETH A REST."

Remarks on the Fourth Chapter of Hebrews.

The advocates of Sunday-keeping have labored hard to make this chapter say something in their favor, contending that verse 10 refers to the rest into which Christ entered after having finished the work of redemption. Let us look at this matter.

The Apostle evidently regards the language of the Holy Spirit in the 95th Psalm, as exactly adapted to his purpose. That Psalm clearly speaks of a rest, which the Israelites were cautioned not to despise by hardening their hearts against the voice of Jehovah. Whatever was the rest to which the Psalmist refers, that same is the rest to which Paul refers. The Apostle therefore inquires, in the chapter under consideration, what that rest was. Was it the rest of the weekly Sabbath? It could not be, for that was a rest which God's people had enjoyed from the foundation of the world, His works being finished from that time, [verses 3, 4.] But the language of the Psalm is applicable only to something yet in the future, and could not, without incongruity, be applied to any thing of which they had already obtained possession, as the Apostle reasons in verse 7. Was it then the earthly rest which they enjoyed in the land of Canaan? The same objection lies here, as in the former case. They already possessed it, when David addressed them, which was a long time after Joshua had conducted them into it. Hence Joshua did not give them the rest spoken of; otherwise, after so long a time, David would not have said, To-day if ye will hear his voice, [verses 7, 8.] David's language was in no way applicable to the past, and therefore the rest of which he speaks remaineth, or is reserved, for the people of God, as their future inheritance, verse 9.

Now, shall we suppose, after all this labor of the Apostle to justify the Psalmist from any incongruity of language, that he heedlessly pitches into the same blunder himself? Yet upon the mode of interpretation employed by many observers of the first day, he certainly does. For they suppose that the rest which is such a prominent topic in this chapter, is either the so-called Christian Sabbath, or first day of the week, which Christ entered into after finishing his redemption work; or, that it is the rest which all believers now enjoy under the new and better covenant. Well, if it be the "Christian Sabbath," would not Paul be guilty of the same inaccuracy of language and reasoning from which he seeks to defend David? Would not his language be just as inapplicable to that rest, even admitting that such a rest had been established, as David's was to the old Sabbatic rest? Or if, on the other hand, it be the gospel dispensation, would not the Apostle's language be just as wanting in appropriateness, as David's would be to the earthly rest in Canaan? Unquestionably it would.—The primary reference, therefore, of the Apostle, must be to some rest in the future, of which his brethren had not yet obtained possession. Otherwise, why exhort them to labor to enter into it? [verses 1, 11.] The rest is, without doubt, the heavenly state, typified by the earthly rest of Israel in the land of Canaan.

Now if the Apostle thus certainly refers to the heavenly rest, it must be the desperation which results from the consciousness of a bad cause, that leads our opponents to put this chapter to the rack, in order to extort from it some testimony in favor of Sunday. What is the reason that the plain and obvious sense of Scripture must be set aside, and a construction put upon it that violates all propriety of language? How long before the attention of our brethren can be arrested to the wickedness of this thing? If any of them think they can overthrow, by fair argument, the interpretation we have here given, we hope they will try.

*

LORD'S SUPPER—CHURCH MEMBERS' DUTY.

Is it right for church members to neglect the stated ordinance of communion in the church of which they are members, when they can conveniently attend it? INQUIRER.

To this question, in its simplest form, we should say without hesitation, No. But as there are several considerations which at times serve to keep Christians from attending upon the communion, we will venture to speak somewhat of them separately.

1. Some persons are detained by a fear of performing so sacred an action in an unworthy manner. Persons of this class, though they may be in error, are yet to be treated with great caution. But if this be a good reason for neglecting one religious exercise, it would be equally good for neglecting every other; and so one might give over the discharge of all the duties of piety. He who refuses to use the means of grace, which were designed to assist him, until he feels himself to be strong and worthy without them, will be in danger of never using them at all. It is as though a man, for fear of eating or drinking intemperately, should refuse to eat or drink at all.

2. There are other persons who neglect the ordinance, because they feel no interest in the discharge of any of the duties of religion. Where this is the case, it indicates the worst possible condition, and calls for immediate repentance and thorough reformation. The Scriptures describe such as being dead while they have a name to live. Instead, therefore, of excusing themselves from attending upon the stated ordinances of the church, they ought to humble themselves, make confession of their carelessness, and seek for an increase of interest in the things of religion.

3. A third class of persons may be prevented from attending upon the communion by the calls of duty in another direction. It is well known that the Scriptures do not determine how frequently, nor with what external circumstances, the ordinance is to be celebrated. It should not, on the one hand, be treated as though it were of no value, by celebrating it so rarely as almost to forget it; nor should it, on the other hand, be magnified as above every other ordinance, or represented as indispensable on every occasion. The feast was designed to impress vividly upon us a most interesting and trying scene in the life of our Saviour; to bring to remembrance his sufferings for us, and our relations to him; and thus to prepare us for more faithful imitation of his example. It is not merely to awaken feeling, but to lead likewise to action. Now, if the question should at any time be, as it often is, between attending upon this celebration, or discharging some active Christian duty, we should decide for doing the duty, in full confidence that thus communion with Christ would be insured. But if a church member, without some such reason for it, should habitually neglect to attend upon this ordinance, we should think him out of the path of duty, and in need of reviving influences.

DEATH OF DR. UZIGLIO.

Some of our readers have probably seen accounts of Dr. Uziglio, a Jewish physician of great worth at Corfu, who became a Christian, and was a valuable friend of the Baptist mission in Greece. The following account of his death, and of the disease by which he was taken off, is given by one of the missionaries, and published in the Missionary Magazine for August.

"An uncommon, and hitherto unknown disease, has appeared in Corfu, and carried away many to their long home. It is neither plague nor cholera, but equally fatal in its effects.

"The individual is seized with pain in the head, which increases until delirium ensues, and the patient raves until he dies. This is a period longer or shorter, according to the violence of the disease or the constitution of the person. Some are cut off in twelve hours, others in twenty-four, and a few have continued a week; but death, up to the present time, has been the inevitable consequence of every attack. No one has escaped, at least so far as I have heard. I have lost three of my scholars, and others are ill, and the mothers of two more are at this hour in dying circumstances.

"But of all the deaths which have occured, none has affected me like that of Dr. Uziglio; oh! this has fallen like a weight upon my heart. It is felt as a public calamity; all classes lament him, and all now honor him. But he is gone, never more to 'examine the Bible as to the great question of the Messiah.'"

"Some time since, when the deaths were most numerous among the Jews, the Rabbi called a meeting and proclaimed a fast. And among other causes of the judgment of God upon them, he mentioned particularly Dr. Uziglio's school and the doctor's defection from the Jewish faith. But now when our dear friend has fallen a victim to the disease, which among the people is called 'The sword of Jehovah,' what will be the consequence? Ah, my brother! my heart faints at the prospect."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—We hope no correspondent will suppose his communication has been overlooked, because it does not appear immediately after it is received. We have on hand several articles which shall appear as soon as time can be found to prepare them, and room to insert them.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM OF THE GREAT IMAGE. By George Bush, Professor of Hebrew, New York City University. New York: Harper and Brothers.

Daniel's predictions have always been regarded as most interesting and important portions of sacred Scripture. But many have been deterred from the study of them by an impression that they, like the disclosures of St. John in the Apocalypse, could not be understood or elucidated. We are glad to see that Prof. Bush has engaged in the work with a belief that the present is a peculiarly favorable time for profound and hopeful study of the inspired prophecies. His thoroughness as a biblical scholar, his acumen as an interpreter of Scripture, and his enthusiasm in the pursuit of whatever he undertakes, are a pledge that much original and valuable information will be embodied in the work. The number before us is the first of a series of ten or twelve, to be issued at intervals of a few weeks. It contains a variety of curious and interesting suggestions, and well sustains the character of the author.

NEW TRACT.—The New York City Sabbath Tract Society has just issued another Tract of eight pages, being No. 7 of the series. It is entitled "PLAIN QUESTIONS," and asks for the questions a plain answer. Its directness will make it valuable for distribution among those who are accustomed always to answer a different question from that which is asked them.

REVIVAL AMONG THE KARENS.—Intelligence has recently been received at the Baptist Missionary Rooms, of a most interesting work of grace among the Karens. It seems that at Pyer Kha, in January last, a protracted meeting was held, which continued three weeks, and received manifest tokens of the divine approbation. During the last week of the meeting, about twenty expressed a hope in Christ; and on the closing day, forty-three were baptized. This is said to be the first season of the kind ever enjoyed in that country. When the meetings commenced, many looked upon them with surprise. They afterwards engaged in them, however, and evidently derived great benefit from them. Some interesting cases of conversion are mentioned, showing how powerfully, and often mysteriously, the Spirit of God operates upon the heart. It is cheering to receive such intelligence from a far country.

"LORD'S DAY CONVENTION."—At a Convention held in Baltimore in January last, "a National Lord's Day Convention was recommended," and the time for holding it was referred to an Association in Baltimore. This Association, through its Executive Committee, has issued a Call, fixing on Wednesday the 27th of November next, as the time for holding the Convention at Baltimore, and inviting the "friends of the Lord's Day, of every Christian denomination, throughout the length and breadth of our land, to hold preparatory meetings and appoint delegates from all quarters of the United States, to attend said National Convention, and co-operate in devising such means and proposing such measures as in their judgment will be most likely, with God's blessing, to promote the proper observance of the Christian Sabbath in all the various relations of life."

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY.—Great efforts have been made among the Methodists, within the year past, to endow this institution. The Maine Conference, a few days since, resolved to raise $5,000 within five years for the object. During the year past, nearly $40,000 has been subscribed; and efforts will be made to increase it to $75,000, and to found several additional professorships. This movement speaks well for the interest of that people in the subject of education.

An individual was baptized into the fellowship of the First Baptist church at Columbus, Ohio, on the 4th inst., who went, for that purpose, 25 miles from a neighboring county, where there is no Baptist church.

MUSIC IN BOSTON.

We gave notice some weeks ago of a National Musical Convention to be held at Boston during the present month. It is said that there are at present three hundred persons in that city, who meet daily for the purpose of hearing lectures and practicing singing, under the direction of competent professors. It is impossible to estimate the value of that impulse which this will give to musical knowledge. A correspondent of the Tribune furnishes the following account of the origin of it.

"In the early part of the year 1834, the officers of the 'Boston Academy of Music,' wishing to extend the usefulness of the institution, gave public notice in several of the Eastern papers, that during the month of August thereafter, a course of Lectures, adapted to the wants of Teachers of Music, would be delivered by Professors Mason and Webb. All who desired to hear such a course of lectures were invited to attend. Accordingly, about the 20th of August, quite a large number of gentlemen and ladies, principally from Massachusetts, assembled at the Odeon, for the purpose of hearing the lectures, which continued for ten days. At the close of the course, they were so highly pleased that they passed a vote of thanks to the Academy and its professors, and at the same time requested that the course might be repeated again the next year. This request was complied with, and the number that attended was much larger than before. This increase of numbers and interest induced the Academy to make a permanent thing of it, and accordingly the 'Teachers' Class' has met annually ever since. The number has been constantly increasing from year to year, and now the Class numbers about three hundred members. Some who formed the first Class have attended every subsequent year; but each year, thus far, has brought many new faces. And the matter now has become so generally known, that Teachers come from a number of different States. Last year I met at this Class men from New Hampshire, Maine, Georgia, South Carolina, Connecticut, New York, N. Jersey, Illinois, and Montreal. But the ladies belonging to the Class are principally living in Boston and some of the adjacent towns."

General

MARINE DISASTER.—
Capt. Berry of the ship at New York on Thurs
87° 46', an object hav boat was discovered abo the weather beam. Th diately altered toward i hove to. The boat was persons received on boar captain and crew of the on the voyage from Jam
McDonald, master; Wi
Cook, Richard Evans,
William Rozeve, ordin
Wilkinson, cook. They boat 14 feet long, they w in a weak and critical had to be lifted on board
(Wm. Rozeve) was mo insensible; and although to restore him, he only su at sunrise his body was Grave with the solemn a the Protestant Episcopa night the mate was deliri
the rest almost regained desire for water was very was at first used in admi
it was not until the third satisfied, at which time ea gallons of water.
Capt. McDonald stated
A. M. when about in lat
W. the schooner was sudd squall from the Eastward weather rigging were cut having shifted, and the the water, all hope of righ
Fortunately at the time the boat, being stowed bottom turned over, and all hands and got clear of the vessel same moment disappeared at the mercy of the waves or, even an oar to g seat was broken off and boat, which was kept befor
During the day the lining torn off and converted into spread the captain's shirt fo steered to the Southward w in with the land, and in seen standing to the We them, and when about fou short time, then filled away for about half an hour, and steering to the Westward being no appearance of lan altered to the Westward, be hope of falling in with som
From this time to the 25
ued from the Eastward, an Westerly. On this day fo for about two hours, and shoes, (which were all the their clothes, they succeede of water each. From this they continued without see out water. On this day an about four hours, and to quench their thirst fo time to the 6th of August
East, and the boat's course and no water was obtaine their sufferings were very days a bamboo was picked tain four small fishes abou were divided, and consider had while in the boat. On of August three ships passe posed the boat was not seen tressed voyagers were, ho with the sight of the ship th lief.

YALE COLLEGE.—The 1844 is just published, care of Professor James L
last made its appearance, been added. The class year numbers 103, being graduated from the College
1842, which contained the total number which have the college is 6439. The graduates is 5387. This i uates since the first class years; the number of gra vary from 1 (in 1703) to 10 average, to a very small fra
Of the whole number of all gymen, of whom 612 are st
Williams is the oldest living only member of his class, [1
1776, the only one of his cl the Rev. Ashbel
lar graduates, nearly one h another world, 2774 still liv their own age and country

FROM NAUVOO.—We ha
Nauvoo to the 5th inst. Al pears the reports of the appoi and the appointment of Ri false, and originated in a des mons abroad. Sidney Rigd Nauvoo from Pittsburgh, and inst. In consequence of th
Smith, Joe's brother, since the et, Sidney Rigdon will be the Mormon flock. He is their m make a shrewd and energetic five widows of the Smith fa
Nauvoo; the mother of all,
Joe, Hyrum, and their two b to Mormon strength conti
In Nauvoo the usual activ
the Temple is rapidly going and shape. Its style of archi Mormon order.

SPORT EXTRAORDINARY.—
Opelousas Gazette, that fou gentlemen residing on the Ba parish, went out one Saturda day the result of their sport killed, of which one wei other five about half one of the party, killed sport. The hunt was a ver any of the Northern men their shooting, bagged, more than four ti

The whole amount expend Sandwich Islands, by the been civilized, is not equal year's cruise of a 74!

General Intelligence.

Marine Disaster—Thrilling Narrative.—Capt. Berry of the ship Vicksburg, which arrived at New York on Thursday last from New Orleans, reports that on the 6th August, in lat. 27° 26′, long. 87° 46′, an object having the appearance of a boat was discovered about three points forward of the weather beam. The ship's course was immediately altered toward it, and on reaching it was hove to. The boat was taken alongside and seven persons received on board who proved to be the captain and crew of the Br. schooner Orange, lost on the voyage from Jamaica to Matanzas, Alex. McDonald, master; Wm. Young, mate; Edward Cook, Richard Evans, John Brown, seamen; William Rozeve, ordinary seaman, and Robert Wilkinson, cook. Having been 13 days in a boat 14 feet long, they were all as might be expected in a weak and critical state, and three of them had to be lifted on board. The youngest of them (Wm. Rozeve) was much emaciated and totally insensible; and although every means was used to restore him, he only survived three hours, and at sunrise his body was deposited in the Sailor's Grave with the solemn and impressive service of the Protestant Episcopal Church. During the night the mate was delirious, but has since with the rest almost regained his usual health. Their desire for water was very great, and much care was at first used in administering it to them; and it was not until the third day that their thirst was satisfied, at which time each person had used three gallons of water.

Capt. McDonald stated that on 24th July at 2 A. M. when about in lat. 22° 45′ N. long. 85° 4′ W. the schooner was suddenly capsized in a heavy squall from the Eastward. The lanyards of the weather rigging were cut away, but the ballast having shifted, and the sails and masts being in the water, all hope of righting was at once lost. Fortunately at the time the vessel capsized the jolly boat, being stowed bottom up on the long boat, turned over, and all hands succeeded in getting in and got clear of the vessel, which at almost the same moment disappeared. Thus they were left at the mercy of the waves without provisions or water, or even an oar to guide the boat. Part of a seat was broken off and made use of to steer the boat, which was kept before the sea till day-light. During the day the lining and foot-boards were torn off and converted into a mast, on which was spread the captain's shirt for a sail. The boat was steered to the Southward with the hope of falling in with the land, and in the afternoon a bark was seen standing to the Westward directly toward them, and when about two miles off hove to for a short time, then filled away and steered Southerly for about half an hour, and before sunset was again steering to the Westward. On the 25th, there being no appearance of land, the boat's course was altered to the Westward, before the sea, with the hope of falling in with some vessel.

From this time to the 28th ult. the wind continued from the Eastward, and the boat was steered Westerly. On this day, for the first time, it rained for about two hours, and by using two pairs of shoes, (which were all they had,) and wringing their clothes, they succeeded in getting about a pint of water each. From this date until the 31st ult. they continued without seeing any vessel and without water. On this day and the next it rained for about four hours, and sufficient water was obtained to quench their thirst for the time. From this time to the 6th of August the wind was South-East, and the boat's course was to the North-West, and no water was obtained—during which time their sufferings were very great. On one of these days a bamboo was picked up, and found to contain four small fishes about two inches long, which were divided, and constituted the only food they had while in the boat. On the morning of the 6th of August three ships passed them, but it was supposed the boat was not seen from them. The distressed voyagers were, however, soon gratified with the sight of the ship that afforded them relief.

Yale College.—The triennial catalogue for 1844 is just published, under the indefatigable care of Professor James L. Kingsley. Since it last made its appearance, 301 new names have been added. The class which graduated this year numbers 103, being the largest class ever graduated from the College, with the exception of 1842, which contained the same number. The total number which have received honors from the college is 6439. The number of the regular graduates is 5387. This includes all the graduates since the first class in 1702, a period of 142 years; the number of graduates in each class vary from 1 (in 1703) to 103 (in 1842–4), which average, to a very small fraction, 38 each year. Of the whole number of alumni, 1385 were clergymen, of whom 612 are still living. Rev. E. S. Williams is the oldest living graduate, and is the only member of his class, [1775]. Of the class of 1776, one, the Rev. Ashbel Baldwin, is still living, the only one of his class. Of the 5387 regular graduates, nearly one half, 2613, have gone to another world, 2774 still live to adorn and bless their own age and country.

From Nauvoo.—We have intelligence from Nauvoo to the 5th inst. All was quiet. It appears the reports of the appearance of Joe Smith, and the appointment of his son as Prophet, are false, and originated in a desire to injure the Mormons abroad. Sidney Rigdon had returned to Nauvoo from Pittsburgh, and preached on the 4th inst. In consequence of the death of Samuel Smith, Joe's brother, since the death of the Prophet, Sidney Rigdon will be chosen Patriarch of the Mormon flock. He is their master spirit, and will make a shrewd and energetic leader.—There are five widows of the Smith family now living in Nauvoo; the mother of all, and the late wives of Joe, Hyrum, and their two brothers.—Accessions to the Mormon strength continue to be quite large. In Nauvoo the usual activity is apparent, and the Temple is steadily going up in its unique form and shape. Its style of architecture is of the pure Mormon order. [St. Louis Organ.

Sport Extraordinary.—We learn from the Opelousas Gazette, that on the 28th ult. three gentlemen residing on the Bayou Waxie, in that parish, went out on a hunt, and in less than one day the result of their excursion was six panthers killed, of which one was a grown female and the other five about half grown. Mr. John Rider, one of the party, killed four for his part of the sport. The hunt was a very exciting one. Can any of the Northern men, who brag so loud about their shooting, produce a sportsman who has "bagged" more than four tigers in one day's hunt? [N. O. Picayune.

The whole amount expended in Missions to the Sandwich Islands, by which a whole people have been civilized, is not equal to the expense of one year's cruise of a 74!

Crops in Virginia, the Drouth, and Navigation.—The Richmond Whig gives the following picture of the state of crops, &c. in Virginia:

"The drouth above the falls of James River, except in neighborhoods favored by partial showers, has been most afflictive, and, for the period of its duration, severe beyond example. The crop, until it got into the roasting-ear state, as promising of a superabundant harvest as it could be, has been, in various quarters of the great region between the head of tide and the Blue Ridge, immensely curtailed—possibly one-half, and in many cases three-fifths or even three-fourths—leaving it questionable if a crop which in July promised to bring Corn down for the first time to $1,25 per barrel, will now make bread for the country. This is more especially, according to our information, true of the South of James River; perhaps equally true of the North side, after entering 20 miles above this, the region which Volney predicted, when he passed through it, would one day or other, from drouth, become another Arabia Deserta.

The Tobacco crop through all the Tobacco Region, save as before in neighborhoods favored by thunder showers of limited extent, we learn is extremely unpromising; the drouth proving too rapid and severe even for that hardiest of Plants. But there is time enough for the recovery of the Tobacco crop. The Corn, we fear, from the forwardness of the year, is either already made or unmade.

The navigation of the James River Canal from Richmond to Lynchburg is almost suspended by the insufficiency of the water in the Canal.

We regret to learn of the prevalence of much sickness on the banks of James River above the Falls, the invariable consequence of a low state of water in the River. The type is generally intermittent, but there are some instances of neighborhoods running into bilious fever of a malignant character.

Southern Factories.—They are beginning to discover that they can manufacture at the South, and therefore that they will not always be dependent on the Yankees. They have already learned enough to make their own mouse-traps and door-hinges, and in some places have even gone farther. We learn by a Southern paper that an Iron Factory has recently been established in Benton County, Alabama, where they make castings of every description, which are said to be equal in every respect to any brought from elsewhere. They can be sold at seven cents a pound and yield a handsome interest on the amount invested, while those from abroad sell at twelve cents. [Bost. Transcript.

Mexico and Texas.—The New Orleans Bulletin of the 16th inst. says:—"We have no belief in the sincerity of Santa Anna's pretended preparations for an invasion of Texas, and we think it quite possible that while he is amusing his countrymen with formidable preparations for war, he is seeking elsewhere an apology for delaying active hostilities. If the report that Gen. Woll has suffered a defeat from the Rancheros and Federalists west of the Rio Grande, and been thrown back on Matamoras, be true, it would appear that Santa Anna will likely have enough to do within his own dominions."

Washington Irving.—A letter from this gentleman, dated Barcelona, July 13th, in reference to the Life of Washington, which he had intended to write during his residence in Spain, says:—"My own state of health has obliged me, for nearly eighteen month past, to suspend all literary occupation, other than what is connected with my official duties; and though I am nearly freed from the herpetic malady which has so long harassed me, I propose to devote the residue of this summer to a tour of health, and not to resume my pen until the autumn."

Imposition.—The community are cautioned against a fellow who is peddling off a liquid for the transformation of brass and other metals into silver. With this wash a brass knocker may be made, for the moment, to shine with the lustre of silver, but anon it turns as black as your hat. It is called silver water, and an ounce vial is sold for three shillings. The thing is a regular nutmeg shave. The imposter applies the wash, pockets his three shillings, jumps into his wagon, and by a free use of the lash gets out of sight before the discoloration takes place. [Norwalk Gaz.

Low Water.—There has been of late an extraordinary scarcity of water in the Schuylkill Canal. The Norristown Register of Wednesday last says, the water in the Schuylkill at this place is unusually low. The Navigation Company's dam was literally crowded with boats a few days since, being unable to proceed for want of sufficient water—a circumstance, we believe, hitherto unknown in this quarter, at least to the same extent. The water, we are told, was drawn off from the upper dam to enable the boats to move. The number of boats in the dam, at the time, was considerably over a hundred. The mills at this place were ordered to be stopped.

Founding a Bishopric.—The St. Johns, N. B. Courier, publishes an address from a committee of archbishops and bishops of the English Episcopal church, to the members of the church of England in that province, on the subject of founding a bishopric there, in which they state that a sufficient endowment for that purpose would be £30,000, invested in good security! Of this amount, nearly £27,000 have been raised.

Rev. Laurens P. Hickok, of Hudson, Ohio, now a theological professor in the Western Reserve, was on the 26th ult. invited to fill the professorship at Auburn, vacated by the death of Dr. Richards.

A Very Old Man.—There is now in Madrid, says the Castellano, a man named Collor, aged 136 years. His habits are simple and regular. He rises every day with the sun, and takes a long walk before breakfast. He has all his teeth, with the exception of his molar teeth, and nearly the whole of his hair, but it is quite white. He stands very straight, and every thing about him indicates extraordiny vigor. He does not smoke, and only uses spectacles to read and write. His appearance is that of a man of seventy.

President Tyler, says the Journal of Commerce, has saved enough from the salary of his office to pay off all his debts, which he has done in an honorable manner, including a number which had stood so long as to be outlawed, and besides, has purchased a plantation upon which he may hope to spend the remainder of his days in competency.

The Key West Light of the Reef states that on the 5th inst. two Americans and five negroes were hung in Havana for being implicated in the recent slave revolt. Where are these diobolical scenes to end.

Myrrh has been discovered in Alachara county, Florida.

SUMMARY.

An accident occurred on the Long Island Railroad Wednesday morning, just after the train going to Boston had passed Westbury, when it came in contact with a wagon crossing the track, in which were two persons, one of whom, a woman named Southard, was instantly killed, and the other, a man named Halleck, was very dangerously wounded. The engineer was blowing his whistle at the time, which for some reason or other was not heard by the persons in the wagon.

The Cincinnati Chronicle gives some tables which show that in forty-four years the United States have bought of the Indians four hundred and twenty millions of acres of land, and paid them eighty-two millions of dollars.

It is stated in a Cincinnati paper that arrangements are making to extend the system of Private Mails betweed New York, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

The Eufaula (Ala.) Shield, of the 14th inst. announces the death of Mr. Joseph Watford, of Dale County, a Revolutionary soldier, in the 105th year of his age. He resided in North Carolina during the war for Independence.

Amos Lawrence, Esq. of Boston, has recently made another donation of $5000 to Williams' College—making, with his previous donation last spring, the sum of $10,000.

Counterfeit notes on the Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank of Wheeling, said to be admirably executed, are in circulation in the West.

There are in circulation ten dollar counterfeit bills on the Onondaga County Bank, Syracuse.

Since the robbery of Mr. Stetson, at East Bridgewater, (Mass.) he has received a letter enclosing a fifty dollar bill, which the person says he could not conveniently dispose of.

The English Admiralty have issued an order against dueling, which in effect leaves no room for a dishonorable imputation in refusing to accept a challenge.

The editor of the Cincinnati Commercial has seen a cabbage, rounded in the usual shape, which, on being cut open, was found to consist of twenty-three little heads, each distinct and perfect in itself.

There is a young lady living at or near Flemingsburg, Ky., who has, it is said, attained to the height of seven feet four inches. "The lovely Marcia towers above her sex."

The steamer Empire recently built at Cleveland, and now in active employment, is of 1220 tons burthen—the largest steamer on any inland water in the world. She is as elegant as she is capacious.

The St. Thomas Standard of the 10th inst. states that a serious riot had been and was still raging at Wardensville, Canada, on the new Chotha road, between the laborers and the inhabitants, on account of some disorderly conduct of the laborers towards two females.

Tobacco is manufactured in all the States except Vermont and Wisconsin. In this branch of business 8,384 persons are employed, and $3,437,191 of capital invested. The value of the product is $5,819,598, nearly one-half of which is in Virginia.

Henry Strong, a German mason, while at work on the German Evangelical Church, in Buffalo, on Thursday, slipped from the scaffolding, and falling a distance of 25 feet, was so much injured that his life was despaired of.

The Philadelphia county prison is fuller than it ever was before. There are 540 prisoners within its walls.

A letter from Gibraltar Bay states, the operations against the wreck of the American steam frigate Missouri, are going on well, and it is expected that she would be afloat in two or three weeks from the 21st of July. The work was a most arduous one, operations having to be conducted under a burning sun, with the thermometer at 125, and in the shade varying from 95 to 100.

The Berkshire Jubilee was held at Pittsfield on the 23d and 24th inst. It was a numerously attended and grand festival. May it encourage other counties to imitate.

A Portland fishing schooner, with 225 quintals fish, was seized at Sidney, C. B., a short time since, for violation of the treaty regulations.

James Young, of the Philadelphia police, has succeeded in obtaining about $10,000 in spurious $20 notes, purporting to be on the Mechanics' Bank of Baltimore; also the plate from which they were struck off.

The iron, sleepers, &c., on twenty-two miles of the Nashville Railroad were sold at New Orleans, on the 15th inst., at public auction, for the sum of $34,600. The three engines, cars and tenders, brought $10,000, and the nine slaves attached to them $8,670—total $53,580. The sale was made on account of the interest held by the state in the Nashville Railroad.

The Richmond Whig states that the great case of the Bank of the United States, against Col. Andrew Beirne, of Monroe, as endorser for his son-in-law, Mr. Steenbergen, (now of New York,) involving some $650,000 has been decided in Col. Beirne's favor, by a special Court of Appeals, at Lewisburg.

There is a woman living near Taunton, Mass., a Mrs. Leonard, who is more than a hundred and one years old. She is in good health, possesses her faculties, and can see to read without spectacles. She has always lived in one spot, which is very low, damp, and swampy—a peculiarly cold, clayey soil.

Isaac Harris cradled two acres and eighty rods of wheat in two hours and ten minutes, and John Salisbury raked and bound it in the same time, in the town of Gorham, Ontario county, recently.

The following is said to have been the contents of a hawk's nest recently found on a large pine tree, nearly 100 feet from the ground, on the farm of Liberty Partridge, in Westminster, Mass:—One black snake, 3½ feet in length; two large adders; two green snakes; one striped racer snake; five striped snakes; six chickens; five sparrows; one striped squirrel; two mice; one toad; one frog; two young hawks, nearly half grown.

Mrs. Moreland, the wife of a respectable citizen of Clay county, gave birth, r few days since, to three infants, two boys and a girl. One of the boys she named Henry Clay, the other Theodore Frelighuysen, and to the girl she gave the name of Lucretia Clay, after the worthey lady of Ashland. Of course the children are all hearty and "doing as well as could be expected." God bless them and their patriotic mother. [Richmond (Ky) Chronicle.

MARRIED,

In Hopkinton, R. I., on the 5th inst., by Eld. John Green, Mr. Henry B. Manchester to Mary E. Cundall, of Hopkinton. Also, Mr. Gilbert Crandall to Miss Ruth Perry, of Westerly.

DIED,

In Plainfield, Otsego Co., N. Y., on the 4th inst., Mrs. Sally Bassett, wife of Mr. Henry Bassett, and daughter of Dea. Alfred Maxson, aged 23 years. Mrs. B. was a member of the first Seventh-day Baptist church in Brookfield, with which she connected herself in early life. She was much beloved as a Christian by all who knew her. In her sickness, which was pulmonary consumption, she was supported and comforted with the presence of her Lord, with whom we trust she is at rest.

LETTERS.

Jason B. Wells, William Maxson, Sanford P. Stillman, Samuel Davison, Geo. H. Perry.

Postmasters—De Ruyter, Portville, Petersburgh.

RECEIPTS.

Hopkinton, R. I.—Lester Crandall, Simon Kenyon, Clark Saunders, Jared Barber, Nathan F. Chipman, Wm. C. Burdick, Samuel F. Babcock, $2 each.——The following names were returned some weeks since, credited on our books, and the receipts forwarded, but were accidently omitted in the published receipts: Benj. F. Chester, Isaac C. Burdick, Robert Langworthy, Thomas Lewis, $2 each.

Newport, R. I.—John Congdon, $2.
Jamestown, R. I.—Wm. A. Weeden, $2.
Brookfield,—Joseph Clark, $2.
Plainfield, N. J.—Edgar F. Stelle, $2.

Jason B. Wells has been appointed a Traveling Agent for this paper, and will visit the churches in the interior and northern parts of the State of New York. He is commended to the confidence of our friends.

A CARD.

THE subscriber wishing to remove to Plainfield, N. J., offers to sell to a Seventh-day Baptist the following desirable property, situated in Shiloh, Cumberland Co., N. J., viz: A new and commodious dwelling-house, with a large store-house attached, being a good stand for country business; a new barn, wagon-house, corn-crib, wood-house, and other out-buildings, all of which have been built within six years, and are in complete order.

Also, a pretty good assortment of Store Goods, such as are generally kept in a Country Store, which are offered at such a price as will make it an object for any one who may wish to locate in this part of New Jersey, and enter into the mercantile business.

Also, a small farm adjoining, consisting of about 24 acres, some of which is in a high state of cultivation, and on which is a newly rebuilt dwelling-house, convenient for two small families, a large apple orchard of choice fruit, and other fruit trees, with a good well of water at the door, &c.

The house and lot, and the Store Goods, will be sold with or without the Farm.

If further information is wanted, address the subscriber.

ISAAC D. TITSWORTH, P. M. Shiloh, N. J.
July 22, 1844.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on Wednesday, August 14th, under the care of W. C. Kenyon, as Principal, and Miss Caroline B. Maxson, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

Tuition, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50, to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath Tract Society publish the following Sabbath Tracts, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

The Society has published, also, in quarto form, [$1,25 per 100, or $10 per 1000,] two numbers of The Sabbath Vindicator.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK
Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sobeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND
Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT
Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY
Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA
Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA
Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.
Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN
Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN
Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA
Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS
Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the Seventh-day Baptist General Conference will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in Verona, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference.

Paul Stillman, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having already reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year.

F. W. Stillman, Rec. Sec'y.

The Missionary Association will hold its second Anniversary, with the 1st Church in Verona, N. Y., on the Sixth day of the week, before the second Sabbath in September. A Sermon on the subject of Missions will be expected during its session from T. B. Brown—the time to be determined by the Executive Board. It is desirable that all missionary returns may be made to the Secretary previous to that time.

W. B. Gillett, Rec. Sec.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES,
Pot, first sort	4 12 a 4 18
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 00a24 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	8 50 a 9 50
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 50 a 5 50
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	- a —
Stripes, fast colors	- a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 50 @ 2 62
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	10 37 @10 50
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 25 @ 4 31
Troy	4 18 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 25 a 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 a
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	88 @ 95
Do South new	94
Rye, Northern	63 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	48 @ 47
Barley N R	@
Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A. & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@1500
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES:
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
TurptW'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS:
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS:
Beef mess bbl	5 25 @ 5 62
Do prime	3 25 @ 3 50
Pork mess bbl	9 75 @ 9 87
Do prime	8 12 @
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS:
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7½
RICE:
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS:
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13
Trieste in boxes	6½a
American	5 a
Spring	5¾a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8¼a 9½
Do Brown	6⅝a 8¾
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¼
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17⅜a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6⅜
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¼
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
In plates ⅛ X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 36
No. 1	31 a 32
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

LESSON OF THE SEA.

BY MRS L. H. SIGOURNEY.

Go down unto the sea,
Where white-wing'd navies ride,
Whose mighty pulses heave so free
In strong, mysterious tide—
Within whose coral cells,
Where sunless forests creep,
So many a wandering child of earth
Hath laid him down to sleep.

Go forth unto the sea,
And at the break of morn,
Teach its young waves, the words of prayer
Before the day is born,—
And when the night grows dim,—
Beguile the billows wild,
With the holy hush of thine evening hymn,
As the mother lulls her child.

Go—bow thee to the sea,—
When the booming breakers roar,
And a meek-hearted listener be,
To all their fearful lore,—
And learn, where tempests lower,
Their lesson from the wave,—
"One voice, alone, can curb their power,
One arm alone can save."

Go,—homeward, from the sea,—
When its trial hour is past,
With deeper trust in Him who rules
The billow and the blast,—
And when the charms of earth,
Around thy bosom creep,
Forget not, in the time of mirth
The wisdom of the deep.

☞ We publish the following article by the particular request of its author. We are disposed to give the freest scope to inquiry, but do not become to any extent responsible for the success of the proposed plan.

SEVENTH-DAY SOCIETIES.

MR. EDITOR:

Deeply lamenting, as I do, the difficulties under which I labor from my every-day associations with worldly connections in business, I beg leave to call the attention of your readers to the following Plan for the establishment of a "SEVENTH-DAY INDUSTRIAL COMMUNITY," or "Township," in some good location; and I am free to think, that there are many who now labor in bonds like myself, and who are smarting from their unavoidable entanglements, who would readily join a Community where the present hindrances would be wholly done away with, as in the Society I propose.

I would particularly and respectfully call the attention of the ensuing GENERAL CONFERENCE to this subject, as I am fully impressed with the necessity and importance of some decided measure of this nature by the Conference in its approaching deliberations—an impression daily gaining strength, when I look upon the "signs of the times."

 Any one who may wish to confer with the writer may do so through the editor of this paper, in every case post paid, when the same will meet with respectful attention. ACTUS.

New York, Aug. 16, 1844.

PLAN

For the establishment of a Seventh-Day Industrial Community or Township.

In the preliminary features of a Plan for the foundation of a Society of this nature, the sketch must necessarily be condensed; but the subjoined heads will give the leading ideas of a general plan for remedying the numerous and truly discouraging difficulties and hindrances under which many of the believers in the seventh-day Sabbath are now laboring.

Of the business advantages it is not necessary to say one word here, as from the operations of collective and united industry, they are manifest and decided.

The principal and most important benefit desired, and which can be fully conferred by an establishment of this nature, is the free and untrammeled observance of the Sabbath of Jehovah, the holy day which He has appointed, the only day which He has directed, unmolested by difficulties, entanglements, hindrances, and the numerous annoyances under which the seventh-day brethren worshiping in cities are now unavoidably laboring, and which a secession from the connections of their present business operations would obviate, annul, and forever do away.

I. To form a Seventh-Day Industrial Association, in some good and healthy location, in which all the members and residents shall be enabled, by their separation from the uses and customs of the world and the first-day people, faithfully to observe the Sabbath of the fourth commandment.

II. The payment of fifty dollars (more or less) shall constitute a right of membership to each party signing the Constitution hereafter to be formed, of which the first and leading article is the observance of the seventh-day Sabbath.

III. The Society to be governed by a Council elected by ballot, and to consist of a President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and six or more Directors of financial and business operations, who shall, &c.

IV. The Society to be supported by their farming and business operations, the profits arising from which, after all expenses have been liquidated, and the reservation of the contingent fund, to be equally divided among the members, on balancing the books every three or six months, as may hereafter be determined.

V. The books of the Society at all proper times to be open for the inspection and examination of the members.

VI. The education of the children of members, and instruction in useful industry.

N.B. This branch may be rendered of considerable profit by the Society receiving children of non-members, to be educated with their own classes, but which children must observe the seventh day while in the establishment!

VII. Trades and mechanical labors, and operations of every lawful kind, deemed beneficial by the Society, shall be carried on by the residents of the community.

VIII. A general store will be necessary for the disposal of all surplus produce, and for the further accommodation of the surrounding farms, villages, &c. The store, (with good profit to the Society,) can supply groceries, dry goods, hats, clothes, shoes, hardware, cutlery, tools, leather, harness, seeds, stationery, farming apparatus, furniture, &c.

IX. Any member may draw from the general store any additional article he may require for self or family, the same to be placed to his debit, and the amount deducted from his share of the proceeds when the books of the Society are balanced.

X. Every family to possess undisturbed right in their own apartments, during membership.

XI. In the boarding department, a source is opened to the Society by the reception of transient boarders and visiters, (with whom the observance of the seventh day shall be imperative,) which may be rendered very profitable, by the accommodations afforded during the summer season.

XII. The formation of a Library of the best works on religion, science, arts, and general literature, together with maps, globes, philosophical instruments, newspapers, magazines, &c.

In the By-Laws and Addenda may be specified the notice to be given by all members who may wish to leave for other settlements, &c., with the mode of adjusting their debit and credit account—particulars of election for Council—duties of officers—hours of labor—educational and health departments—boarding regulations—public kitchen—private apartments, baths, gardens, orchards, factories, general store, agencies, &c.

THE ROBIN.

In the latter end of the year 1834, a robin flew into the cottage of Mrs. Wilkinson, in the neighborhood of Overton near Lancaster; being winter season, it was kindly treated, and did not offer to leave its quarters; it was without hesitation accommodated with bed and board. When spring time came, it resumed its free denizenship of the air, but not ungratefully, for it was always seen about her garden, and even came fluttering around its kind mistress when she went out. Being the male bird, it chose for itself a mate; a nest was built in a hawthorn bush, wherein four little ones were fairly on wing. A gentle tapping was heard one evening at Mrs. Wilkinson's casement window. On being opened, to her surprise, in flew her favorite robin, with his family. They all received a hearty welcome, and remained there until the spring. This conduct has been pursued every year since, to the present year; and no less than eight robins have taken their winter quarters in Mrs. Wilkinson's kitchen.—If the window be not opened, the old robin will perch upon the latch of the door, and, fluttering with his wings, jingle it until he is let in; he perches upon her shoulder or her hand, if she holds it out to him, and will sing his merry song as if in grateful acknowledgement of the hospitality shown to his co-mates and himself. The fact is well known to every one in the neighborhood.

[London Garden Chronicle.

LONG HAIR.

In 1640, the following agreement was entered into by the Governor, Deputy Governor, and Magistrates of New Hampshire, to discountenance the sinful practice of wearing long hair!

"Forasmuch as the wearing of long hair, after the manner of ruffians and barbarous Indians, has begun to invaide New England, contrary to the rule of God's word, which says it is a shame for a man to wear long hair, as also the commendable custom generally of all the godly of our nation until within this few years:—We, the magistrates, who have subscribed this paper (for the shewing of our innocency in this behalf) do declare and manifest our dislike and detestation against wearing of such long hair, as against a thing uncivil and unmanly, whereby men do deform themselves and offend sober and modest men, and do corrupt manners: We do, therefore, earnestly entreat all the elders of this jurisdiction (as often as they shall see cause) to manifest their zeal against it in their public administrations, and that the members of their respective churches be not defiled therewith, that so, such as prove obstinate, and will not reform themselves, may have God and man to witness against them.

ROTATION OF CROPS.

The following principles are laid down by Chaptal for a rotation of crops:

I. All plants exhaust the soil. They are partly supported by the earth, the juices from which constitute an important part of their nourishment.

II. All plants do not exhaust the soil equally. Air and water help to nourish them; different kinds of plants require the same nourishment in different degrees.

III. Plants of different kinds do not exhaust the soil in the same manner. Plants with spindle or tap roots draw nourishment from layers of soil in contact with the lower part of the root, while those whose roots are spread near the surface exhaust only that part of the soil.

IV. All plants do not restore to the soil either the same quantity or the same quality of manure. The grains exhaust a soil the most, and repair the injury the least. While some leguminous plants restore to the soil a great portion of the juices they receive from it.

V. All plants do not foul the soil equally.—Plants are said to foul the soil when they promote or permit the growth of weeds. Plants which have not large leaves, fitted to cover the ground, foul the soil.

From the above principles the following conclusions have been drawn:

1 That however well prepared the soil may be, it cannot nourish a long succession of crops without becoming exhausted.

2. Each harvest impoverishes the soil to a certain extent, depending upon the degree of nourishment which it restores to the earth.

3. The cultivation of spindle, or tap roots, ought to succeed that of running and superficial roots.

4. It is necessary to avoid returning too soon to the cultivation of the same, or analogous kinds of vegetable, in the same soil.

5. It is unwise to allow two kinds of plants, which admit of the ready growth of weeds among them, to be raised in succession.

6. Those plants that derive their principal support from the soil, should not be sown excepting when the soil is sufficiently provided with manure.

7. When the soil exhibits symptoms of exhaustion from successive harvests, the cultivation of those plants which restore most to the soil should be resorted to.

FRUIT TREES.—An excellent plan for preventing young trees from becoming hidebound and mossy, and for promoting their health and growth, is to take a bucket of soft soap, and apply it with a brush to the stem or trunk, from top to bottom; this cleanses the bark and destroys the worms or eggs of insects; and the soap becoming dissolved by rains, descends to the roots, and causes the tree to grow vigorously.

MAGNETIC TELEGRAPHS—NEW PROJECTS.—The improvements which are in contemplation, and which have already been perfected by Professor Morse, show that his newly invented Electro-Magnetic Telegraph, although apparently perfect at first, is yet in its infancy: and there is very little doubt that before long a detailed and minute communication can be made by it with the same rapidity that an ordinary letter can be written.

Some experiments have recently been made, which have been attended with great success, the results of which will be given to the public as soon as they are tested to be of undoubted utility.

We learn that a project is in contemplation to establish immediately a line of magnetic communication bewteen Boston and New York, and that the funds necessary for this undertaking are nearly all subscribed. It is not impossible that the line may be completed before the winter sets in. The principal object in contemplation is to receive in New York the earliest news by the English steamships; and in order to effect this desirable object with the greatest possible despatch, an improved mode of telegraphic communication of great simplicity is to be adopted on board the steamers, so that as soon as the steamer approaches Boston, signals, either by sight or by sound of cannon, will be made to the telegraphic station on the coast, and the news immediately transmitted to New York. Thus, before the arrival of the vessel in Boston, the news brought by her will be known in New York.

A project has also been started to erect a line between New York and Philadelphia, but we learn that very little has been done to carry out the plan. [Baltimore American.

COMET.—A comet has been visible, we learn from Manilla and Singapore, since the beginning of last month, but during almost all which time the weather here has been so unsettled, and the sky so continually overcast, that it was first beheld here on the night of the 28th. The comet itself is barely visible to the naked eye, but its tail is of great extent, say about 40 degrees, and quite straight. At present it sets at about half past ten in the South West, and when first seen disappeared soon after night fall; it is probable, therefore, that it will remain visible a long while. We believe this to be a comet hitherto unknown. As may be supposed, the Chinese are in great consternation about it, believing that it forebodes evil.

[Canton Press, April 1.

A CURIOSITY.—We yesterday had an opportunity of reading a manuscript letter, written by William Penn, in Philadelphia, on the 30th of July, 1680. It is in excellent preservation, the style of penmanship is bold and easy, and the tone Christian, benevolent, and cheerful in an eminent degree. We annex a passage, which will afford the reader some idea of our city in the olden time:

"I have laid out a town a mile long and two deep, on each side of which is a navigable river, the least of which is as broad as the Thames at Woolwich. We have eighty houses in our town, and about three hundred farms near it, to supply it with provisions."

What a change has taken place in our city since the above was written! [Phil. Inquirer.

It is said of the hydropathic patients under the care of the celebrated Priessnitz at Graffenberg, that they are so grateful for relief from the burdensome feelings of sickness and languor, which is the salutary effect of the cold water system, and of the continued perspirations which throw off the impurities of the body, that instead of the usual salutation, "how do you do?" they greet each other with the question, "how do you perspire today?" They consider the perspiring process one of great importance toward the cure of diseases.

TO PRESERVE GREEN CORN.—For those who are fond of green corn, and desire to have it fresh at all seasons, we give the following recipe from the Franklin Banner. The present opportunity should be improved: "Pack the corn down in clean, tight casks, with a pickle sufficiently strong to preserve cucumbers. It should be put down in the husks, and kept secluded from the air by the brine, so as to prevent fermentation or decomposition." Corn so prepared, it is said, will keep for any length of time, and will be sufficiently fresh for the table when it is boiled.

CURIOSITY—There is a drawing of the head of Charles I., in the library of St. John's College, Oxford, wholly composed of minute written characters, which, at a small distance, resembles lines of an engraving. The lines of the head and ruff are said to contain the Book of Psalms, the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.—I have heard some very extraordinary cases of murder tried.—I remember, in one where I was counsel, for a long time the evidence did not appear to touch the prisoner at all, and he looked about him with the most perfect unconcern, seeming to think himself quite safe. At last the surgeon was called, who stated that the deceased had been killed by a shot, a gunshot, in the head, and he produced the matted hair and stuff cut from and taken out of the wound. It was all hardened with blood.—A basin of warm water was brought into Court, and, as the blood was gradually softened, a piece of printed paper appeared—the wadding of the gun, which proved to be half a ballad. The other half had been found in the man's pocket when he was taken. He was hanged.

[Lord Eldon's Note Book.

SPEAK PLEASANTLY.—Don't speak so cross to that boy. What if he is an apprentice? He has feelings as well as you. Tell him pleasantly to do that job, and he will go about it immediately, and do it as soon and as well as he can. If you look cross and snap at him, he will not care how much time he takes, and how bungling the work is done. This may be wrong in the boy—but it is human nature. You can coax, but you cannot drive.

[Portland Express.

POWER OF IMAGINATION.—Carlyle tells the story of a ghost, which haunted a house in Scotland, occupied by credulous people, but which on investigation proved to be a rusty old meat-jack, next door, which in its creaking, jerking revolutios, gave forth tones which a fertile imagination twisted into "Once I was hap-hap happy; now I'm meeserable!"

"Beautiful is it to see and understand that no worth, known or unknown, can die even on this earth; the work an unknown man has done, is like a vein of water flowing hidden under the ground; it flows and flows—it joins itself with another vein and veinlets—one day it will start forth a visible, perennial well." [Carlyle.

From Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico."

ADVICE OF AN AZTEC MOTHER TO HER DAUGHTER.

Translated from Sahagun's 'Historia de Nueva Epana,' Lib. 6, chapter 19.

[The author says, "I have thought it best to have this translation made in the most literal manner, that the reader may have a correct idea of the strange mixture of simplicity, approaching to childishness, and moral sublimity, which exist together in the original. It is the product of the twilight of civilization."]

My beloved daughter, very dear little dove, you have already heard and attended to the words which your father has told you. They are precious words, and such as are rarely spoken or listened to, and which have proceeded from the bowels and heart, in which they were treasured up; and your beloved father well knows that you are his daughter, begotten of him, are his blood, and his flesh; and God our Lord knows that it is so. 'Although you are a woman, and are the image of your father, what more can I say to you than has already been said? What more can you hear than what you have heard from your lord and father? who has fully told you what it is becoming for you to do and to avoid; nor is there any thing remaining, which concerns you, that he has not touched upon. Nevertheless that I may do toward you my whole duty, I will say to you some few words.

The first thing that I earnestly charge upon you is, that you observe and do not forget what your father has now told you, since it is all very precious; and persons of his condition rarely publish such things; for they are the words which belong to the noble and wise—valuable as rich jewels. See, then, that you take them and lay them up in your heart, and write them in your bowels. If God gives you life, with these same words will you teach your sons and daughters, if God shall give you them.

The second that I desire to say to you is, that I love you much, that you are my dear daughter. Remember that I bore you, and brought you up in my arms. I placed you in your cradle, and in my lap, and with my milk I nursed you. This I tell you in order that you may know that I and your father are the source of your being; it is we who now instruct you. See that you receive our words and treasure them in your breast.

Take care that your garments are such as are decent and proper; and observe that you do not adorn yourself with much finery, since this is a mark of vanity and folly. As little becoming is it, that your dress should be very mean, dirty, or ragged, since rags are a mark of the low, and of those held in contempt. Let your clothes be becoming and neat, that you may neither appear fantastic nor mean. When you speak, do not hurry your words from uneasiness, but speak deliberately and calmly. Do not raise your voice very high, nor speak very low, but in a moderate tone. Neither mince when you speak, nor when you salute, nor speak through your nose; but let your words be proper, of a good sound, and your voice gentle. Do not be nice in the choice of your words. In walking, my daughter, see that you behave becomingly, neither going with haste, nor too slowly; since it is an evidence of being puffed up to walk too slowly, and walking hastily causes a vicious habit of restlessness and instability. Therefore, neither walk very fast nor very slow; yet, when it shall be necessary to go with haste, do so—in this use your discretion.

When you are in the street, do not carry your head much inclined or your body bent, nor as little go with your head very much raised; since it is a mode of ill breeding; walk erect, and with your head slightly inclined. Do not have your mouth covered, or your face, from shame, nor go looking like a near-sighted person; nor on your way make fantastic movements with your feet. Walk through the street quietly and with propriety. Another thing that you must attend to, my daughter, is, that when in the street, you do not go looking hither and thither, nor turning your head to look at this or that; walk, looking neither at the skies nor on the ground. Do not look upon those whom you meet with the eyes of an offended person, nor have the appearance of being uneasy, but of one who looks upon all with a serene countenance; doing this, you will give no one occasion of being offended with you. Show a becoming countenance, that you may appear neither morose, nor on the other hand, too complaisant. See, my daughter, that you give yourself no concern about the words you may hear in going through the street, nor pay any regard to them, let those who come and go say what they will. Take care that you neither answer nor speak, but act as if you neither heard or understood them; since, doing in this manner, no one will be able to say with truth that you have said any thing amiss. See, likewise, my daughter, that you never paint your face, or stain it, or your lips with colors, in order to appear well; since this is a mark of vile and unchaste women. Paints and coloring are things which bad women use—the immodest, who have lost all shame, and even sense; who are like fools and drunkards, and are called rameras (prostitutes.) But, that your husband may not dislike you, adorn yourself, wash yourself, and cleanse your clothes.

My daughter, this is the course you are to take; since in this manner your ancestors from whom you sprung, brought us up. Those noble and venerable dames, your grandmothers, told us not so many things as I have told you—they said but few words, and spoke thus; "Listen, my daughters; in this world, it is necessary to live with much prudence and circumspection. Hear this allegory, which I shall now tell you, and preserve it, and take from it a warning and example for living aright. Here, in this world, we travel by a very narrow, steep, and dangerous road, which is a lofty mountain ridge, on whose top passes a narrow path; on either side is a great gulf without bottom, and, if you deviate from the path, you will fall into it. There is need, therefore, of much discretion in pursuing the road."

My tenderly loved daughter, my little dove, keep this illustration in your heart, and see that you do not forget it—it will be to you as a lamp, and a beacon, so long as you shall live in this world.—Only one thing remains to be said, and I have done. If God shall give you life, if you shall continue some years upon the earth, see that you guard yourself carefully, that no stain come upon you; should you forfeit your chastity, and afterwards be asked in marriage, and should marry any one, you will never be fortunate nor have true love—he will always remember that you were not a virgin, and this will be the cause of great affliction and distress; you will never be at peace, for your husband will always be suspicious of you. O, my dearly beloved daughter, if you shall live upon the earth, observe what I now tell you as a strict command. When it shall please God, that you receive a husband, and you are placed under his authority, be free from arrogance, see that you do not neglect him, nor allow your heart to be in opposition to him. Be not disrespectful to him. Beware that in no time or place you commit the treason against him, called adultery. See that you give no favor to another; since this my dear and much loved daughter, is to fall into a pit without bottom, from which there will be no escape. According to the custom of the world, if it shall be known, for this crime they will kill you, they will throw you into the street, for an example to all the people, where your head will be crushed and dragged upon the ground. Of these says a proverb: "You will be stoned, and dragged upon the earth, and others will take warning at your death." From this will arise a stain and dishonor upon our ancestors, the nobles and senators from whom we have descended. You will tarnish their illustrious fame, and their glory, by the filthiness and impurity of your sin. You will, likewise, lose your reputation, your nobility, and honor of birth; your name will be forgotten and abhorred. Of you it will be said, that you were buried in the dust of your sins. And remember, my daughter, that, though no man shall see you, or your husband, ever know what happens, God, who is in every place, sees you, will be angry with you, and will also excite the anger of the people against you, and will be avenged upon you as he shall see fit. By his command, you shall either be maimed or struck blind, or your body will wither, or you will come to extreme poverty, for daring to injure your husband. Or, perhaps he will give you to death, and put you under his feet, sending you to the place of torment. Our Lord is compassionate; but, if you commit treason against your husband, God, who is in every place, shall take vengeance on your sin, and will permit you to have neither contentment nor repose, nor a peaceful life; and he will encite your husband to be always unkind towards you, and always to speak to you with anger. My dear daughter, whom I tenderly love, see that you live in the world in peace, tranquility, and contentment, all the days that you shall live. See that you disgrace not yourself, that you stain not your honor, nor pollute the lustre and fame of your ancestors. See that you honor me and your father, and reflect glory on us by your good life. May God prosper you, my first-born, and may you come to God, who is in every place.

AMERICAN ICE.—William Dean, agent, 3 Baltic street, Liverpool, calls the attention of "the nobility, gentry, and others, to a tremendous quantity of ice from Wenham Pond, Massachusetts, which he will send to any part of the United Kingdom, and construct ice-houses therefor, whenever demanded.

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with that institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference; and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally, price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most River bks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Hallowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 35, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52, Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatara, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10. Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co. Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT
NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, SEPT. 5, 1844. NO. 11.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER NINE.

The Sabbath law is not disannulled.

"There is verily a disannulling of the commandment going before, for the weakness and unprofitableness thereof." [Heb. 7: 18.] But who could say this of the Sabbath, which God has taught us to call a delight, the holy of the Lord, honorable? No; this is said of the law of the Aaronic priesthood. There is great confusion in the minds of the Christian world at the present day, as to what part of the Mosaic laws were abolished; some holding that all the Old Testament, law and ritual, was entirely abrogated, and that all it contained is of no more obligation than the laws contained in an obsolete statute book; others, that a part only is disannulled, but are not agreed what parts. To me, it appears, as remarked heretofore, that the grand design of that dispensation was to show to the world the great system of morality [i. e. holiness] which God required and approved; and that there has been no one general formal repeal of all things there enjoined. Indeed, in the very nature of things, this would have been impossible without destroying all moral obligation. What morality is there that is not contained in the Mosaic laws? Some things were allowed under that dispensation that are forbidden by Jesus Christ. But all the ten commandments were expounded and enforced, in their length and breadth, reaching to the thoughts and intents of the heart; and he professes to give us one new commandment, which is contained in John 13: 34: "A new commandment give I unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another." This I suppose he must have said in reference to the Decalogue as also obligatory. Many of the prospective regulations of the Mosaic code were designed to keep and guard Israelites from falling into the immoral practices of the heathen around them. And some of them, Christian nations adopt as sound precepts of morality; as, for example, the laws of consanguinity contained in Levit. 18th ch. No doubt it is in such things, that "all Scripture given by inspiration of God is profitable for doctrine and for instruction in righteousness." When they were given, God himself said they were to keep them from the abominations of the heathen, the doings of the land of Egypt, which considerations are as applicable to us as to the Israelites. And this seems to be the rule which the Apostle gives in another Scripture, [Phil. 4: 8,] "Whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think of these things."

Surely the standard by which these things are to be estimated, is what is written aforetime in the Scriptures for our learning. Hence the reason for no one general formal repealing act. The Mosaic code contained all the morality by which the world is bound to the government of God.

As it appears to me, the plenary powers which Jesus said should be upon his disciples, after that the Holy Ghost was given, so that what they bound on earth should be bound in heaven, and what they loosed on earth should be loosed in heaven, had immediate reference to this very subject; for we never find them instituting new rites; never making new laws; never originating new festivals; but frequently appealing to the Old Testament Scriptures, and saying what is obligatory and what is not; and hence it is to the gospels and the epistles we must look to learn what is abrogated and what is not; and what belongs peculiarly to the Jews, and what is common to both. Among the THINGS ABOLISHED is the great national covenant made with Israel in the wilderness, soon after they came out of Egypt, with the pains and penalties it was authorized to inflict; for God wills to make of twain, i. e. Jews and Gentiles, one new man. Heb. 8: 13. "In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." Hence, Eph. 2: 15, "Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances; for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace." Hence the distinction of meats and drinks is done away. Acts 10: 11 to 14. Likewise the divers washings for ceremonial pollutions. Heb. 10: 1 to 17; and 9: 1 to 14. Yet so long as the temple stood, and the service was continued, when the Apostles wished to worship therein, they observed the national laws, not for conscience sake, but to live in peace with all men. But there is no intimation that they ever brought any more offerings for sacrifices, for they said, Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, having obtained for them eternal redemption. The national feast days, annual and monthly Sabbaths, i. e. rests, were altogether optional with all out of Judea; as is taught Romans 14: 5, Col. 2: 16. SOME THINGS PECULIAR TO JEWS were not abrogated; as circumcision, which God gave not to Moses first, but to Abraham, a sign of the covenant that he made with him to be a God to his seed after him for ever. Hence the Apostle writes [2 Cor. 7: 18,] "Is any called being circumcised? Let him not become uncircumcised." That rite made a mark on a man's flesh which he could never lose nor lay aside, so long as he lived, so that the meaning of the Apostle was, let not a Jew who embraces Christianity renounce his natural distinction, for there is a blessing connected with it to his posterity, that belongs not to the Gentiles. But a Gentile was never required to be circumcised, except in becoming a proselyte to the Jewish national religion. Hence Paul says above, "Is any called in uncircumcision, let him not become circumcised." And the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem decided with the Holy Ghost, that Gentile believers should not be circumcised; but Jewish believers continued it; for Paul took Timothy, whose mother was a Jewess, and circumcised him, this being required by the national laws. It was in these things that Paul said, "Unto the Jews I became as a Jew." 1 Cor. 9: 20.

Things common to Jews and Gentiles were whatsoever the Mosaic laws said, which were profitable for instruction in righteousness. [2d Tim. 3: 16.] Hence the Apostle saith, [2d Tim. 1: 8,] "We know that the law is good if a man use it lawfully." Of the manner in which the Apostle used the Mosaic laws for instruction in righteousness, we have a striking instance in 1 Cor. 9: 7 to 11: "Who goeth a warfare at any time at his own charges? Who planteth a vineyard and eateth not of the fruit thereof? Or who feedeth a flock and eateth not of the milk of the flock? Say I these things as a man. Or saith not the law the same also? For it is written, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen? Or saith he it altogether for our sakes? For our sakes, no doubt, this is written; that he that ploweth should plow in hope, and he that thresheth in hope should be partaker of his hope. If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?" Thus he saith also, 2d Tim. 5: 17, 18, "Let the elders that rule well be accounted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine. For the Scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn; and the laborer is worthy of his reward." These examples are sufficient to show, that although the natural covenant of Israel is abolished, with its authority to inflict pains and penalties upon transgressors of its laws, and the rites and ceremonies peculiar to its ritual, superseded by the coming and sacrifice of Messiah; yet the Jewish Scriptures are still our instructors; and all the morality, honesty, justice, purity, benevolence, and kindness, they inculcated, is obligatory upon all who would serve God in sincerity and truth. The summary of the law and the prophets, given by our Lord Jesus Christ, with the manner in which he enforces them, shows the same thing, Matt. 22: 37 to 40. Jesus said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; this is the first and great commandment: and the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: on these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." In Luke 10: 28, he said, "This do, and thou shalt live." It is impossible to put these things together, and not see that the Sabbath is included in them, unless it be annulled by a special law of God. S. D.

For the Recorder.

ORIGIN OF THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

The ancient pagan nations were nearly all of them of one mind in the chief objects of religious worship. The hosts of heaven were their gods—the sun, the moon, the stars. They gave not equal reverence to the planets; neither were the days appropriated to them observed as alike sacred. They worshiped them by course; every one on his day had some peculiar rites. But they had the Sun in greatest honor, and adored him as their chief deity; and second to him was the Moon, and next Saturn. The chief festival was consecrated to the Sun. Nearly all the ancient nations agree in this; among them, the Assyrians, Persians, Egyptians, Grecians, and Romans. The Assyrians esteemed Mars, Venus, Mercury, and Jupiter, as interpreters of the gods, and called them Mercuries. Their names were placed on the walls high in the temples—Mars on the right and Venus on the left, next Mercury on the right and Jupiter last on the left hand.

The Pantheon at Rome was a temple dedicated to all the gods, wherein were placed on high their images. When the Church of Rome had obtained some power over these pagan institutions, the Popes suppressed the idolatrous worship, and instead of these images placed those of the Virgin Mary and the Saints, calling the day appropriated before to the temple, "All Saints' Day," which day was by Pope Boniface called a holy day. Thus when the Romish Church abolished heathen rites and worship, they set up something resembling that which they put down; and this was done to avoid the reproach of the heathen, or the better to win them to the Christian religion. So, instead of heathen Patrons and Protectors for different people, as Jupiter for Rome, Bacchus for Thebes, &c., were saints substituted, as St. James for Spain, St. Dionysius for France, St. Andrew for Scotland. For some occasions the heathen had gods and goddesses, to whom they prayed for help, as Belona in time of war, Cunina for infants, Torculus to keep the doors. So the Roman Church allowed them to retain their heathenish customs, the better to get them by degrees converted to Christianity; only in place of demi-gods, saints should be invocated—St. Anthony for pigs, St. Gregory for scholars, St. George for soldiers, &c.

The Planets being chiefly in esteem among the pagan nations, they had week days appropriated to them; Sunday to the SUN, Monday to the Moon, Saturday to Saturn, &c. The Sun and Moon being chief, were called King and Queen, and were worshiped in the forms of men and women, styling the Sun Phœbus, and the Moon , and sometimes the one King of Heaven, and the other the Queen of Heaven. In worshiping the officers of the Sun on his day, it was thought they honored the Sun, who was lord of them all. And there was no nation but worshiped the Sun, and honored it as their chief god upon its appropriate day. Bonaventum informs us how Christians spoiled the day of the Sun of its idolatrous worship, and so transferred it to the honor of Christ!—as if a day thus universally dedicated to heathenish superstition and idolatrous worship, would be more honorable to GOD than the day of his own appointment. Had the early Christians been more solicitous for the honor of God's holy day, they had not yielded to the prejudices of idolators, to the desecration of the SABBATH, and the consecration of the day of the Sun by human authority in its stead. But to show what reason there was for the adoption of Sunday by the Church of Rome, we copy from a work on the subject of the Sabbath, published about 1650, by Rev. T. Chafie, an observer of the first day, and recommended by Dr. Bates and Mr. John Howe for republication forty years afterward:

"It is true that all the week-days were abused to the idolatrous worship of the planets, though not in the like degree as was the Sunday. And that one day, in itself, was no more holy than another; yet Christians should not have done well in changing, or in their endeavoring to have changed their standing service-day, from Sunday to any other day of the week; and that for these reasons:—

1. Because of the contempt, scorn, and derision they thereby should be had in among all the Gentiles with whom they lived; and toward whom they ought by St. Paul's rule to live inoffensively (1 Cor. 10: 32) in things indifferent. If the Gentiles thought hardly, and spake evil of them, for that they ran not into the same excess of riot with them, (1 Pet. 4: 4,) what would they have said of Christians for such an innovation as would have been made by their change of their standing service-day? If, long before this, the Jews were had in such disdain among the Gentiles for their Saturday-Sabbath, insomuch that Jeremy lamenteth the same, (Lam. 1: 7,) how grievous would be their taunts and reproaches against the poor Christians living with them, and under their power, for their new set sacred day, had the Christians chosen any other than the Sunday?

2. Most Christians then were either servants or of the poorer sort of people; and the Gentiles, most probably, would not give their servants liberty to cease from working on any other set day constantly, except on their Sunday.

3. Had they changed their seventh day from their Sunday to another day, there must have followed an insufferable confusion in the count of the week-days with whom they lived.

4. Because had they assayed such a change, it would have been a testimony against them of slighting the glorious resurrection of our Lord and Saviour.

5. It would have been but labor in vain for them to have assayed the same; they could never have brought it to pass. For,

1. They had no authoritative specification of any set day, either by Jesus Christ or by his Apostles, on which they ought to keep the Lord's day. Had there so been, St. Paul would never have prest the indifferency of days, as he did, (Rom. 14: 1, 2; Col. 2: 16,) nor would he himself have with the believing Jews kept the Saturday, (Acts 13: 14, 42; 17: 2; 18: 4,) and with the Christians, [by Christians I mean the Gentiles converted to Christ,] have kept the Sunday, (Acts 20: 7; 1 Cor. 16: 2,) neither would the believing Jews have remained so obstinate, but would have kept that day for their Sabbath, which was so pointed out unto them, if there had been such. Whereas they, for the generality of them, would never be withdrawn to keep any other than their Saturday for their Sabbath, hundreds of years after the Apostles' days.

2. They had no coercive power to draw refusers to the observation of any other day for the Lord's day, had they been so disposed to set any other.

3. Christians were not all of one city, or of one country, or of one nation, tongue, or government. It would have been even a miracle to have gotten all Christians in all parts of the world to have observed one and the same day for the Lord's day with them all, which should be chosen, not by a general meeting, or by a general consent, but by some of them only, had they chosen any other than the day of the Sun, which they were generally before their conversion accustomed to keep.

These reasons, if there were no more, may suffice to show, that although all days be in themselves indifferent, yet Christians should not have well done, had they endeavored to have changed their seventh sacred day, from Sunday to any other week-day; no, not to Thursday, though it was the day of Christ's glorious ascension; nor to Friday, though it was the day in which Christ paid our ransom: but better to retain the same day as they did; and which the Church of Christ hath since that kept, even to this present time, and by God's grace will so do unto the end."

THE HIGHLANDS OF ETHIOPIA.

[Continued.]

EXISTING REMNANTS OF AFRICAN CHRISTIANS.

On both sides of the river Gochob, there exists in various quarters, isolated communities professing the Christianity of Ethiopia, who for a long period of years have successfully held their position among the mountain fastnesses in the very heart of the now Pagan and Mohammedan country. One of the most remarkable of these seats is in the lake Zooai, where in the church of Emanuel are deposited the holy arks, umbrellas, drums, gold and silver chairs, and edifices of Southern Abyssinia; which, with numerous manuscripts no longer extant, were here deposited by Nebla Dengel at the period of Graan's invasion.

Five rivers empty themselves into this lake. It is described to be a noble sheet of water teeming with hippopotami, which frequently destroy the frail bamboo rafts employed in maintaining communication between the shore and the Five Islands. These are covered with lofty trees, and contain upward of three thousand Christian houses, constructed of lime and stone. In religion the population are said by the clergy of Shoa to have sadly degenerated; but although destitute of priests, the churches are preserved inviolate, and monks and monasteries abound.

In Gurágueê, the population are almost exclusively Christian. Twelve isolated churches, previously unheard of, were discovered a few years since, on the conquest of Yaya by Sáhela Selássie; and between Garro and Metcha, where the forest commences in the south of Shoa, is a small tract peopled by Christians, who reside entirely in caves among the mountains, as a measure of security against the heathen, by whom they are compassed in on every side.

Eight days' journey from Aiméllele on the frontier of Gurágue is Cambát, a small mountainous province, due east of Zingero. With the exception of a few Mahommedan rovers, this independent state is inhabited solely by Christians, who have fifteen churches, and numerous monasteries, but, like the people of Rooai, are without priests. The capital, Karembaza, is constructed on the summit of a lofty hill of the same name, and Degóyey, the king, who is extremely advanced in years, is represented as a just and upright ruler, very hospitable to strangers, and a great warrior. But between Aiméllele, which is a dependency of Sáhela, Selássie, and Cambát, the road passes through the Adeea and Alaba Galla, the latter governed by a queen, whose notorious treachery renders the passage unsafe.

Wollámo is another Christian province under an independent sovereign, lying below Cambat, to the southeastward of Zingero, and in constant war with both these states. The country is extremely mountainous, and the inhabitants, who are purchased for twenty pieces of salt, and frequently brought by slave-dealers to Shoa, are of a fair complexion, and speak a distinct language. Wofana is the capital, and the province is watered by a considerable river termed the Ooma—the surrounding tribes being the Kooloo, Woradda, Assoo, and Jimma. Eight days journey beyond Zingero is the country of Mager, the king of which, by name of Degaie, is represented to be a very powerful monarch. Korchassie, which is famous for the great river Wabi, is peopled by Christians, as is Sidama also, and both are surrounded on all sides by the heathen.

But of all the isolated remnants of the ancient Ethiopic empire to the south of Abyssinia, Susa would appear to be the most important and the most powerful. This kingdom is situated beyond Caffa, and extends to the head of Gitche, which rises in Chara-Nara, and is one of the principal sources of the Gochob. The rains are violent during three months of the year, and the climate is excessively cold, the elevation being much greater than that of Shoa, while beyond are mountains which "seem to touch the skies, and are covered with perpetual snow."

Sugga Surroo was king over Susa. He was a Pagan; but wore a "mateb," as many of the heathen tribes are wont to do. Hoti and Beddoo were his sons; and on his death-bed he bequeathed the sceptre to the former, who after a reign of ten years marked by the most galling tyranny, was deposed by the people, and Beddoo elevated to the throne Turning his attention to Christianity, which has greatly degenerated, he revived the custom of bathing the holy cross on Christmas-day, in the river Gitche, where all the surrounding Galla tribes perform the same ceremony without knowing why.

Hoti was exiled in Goma; and having contrived to raise three hundred cavalry, he set out to recover his throne; but was pursued and slain by Abba Rebo. Beddoo his brother to Balee, the queen of Caffa; and it is now six years since he gave his daughter Shash in marriage to the king of Enarea, through whose country a constant traffic has since been carried on with Northern Abyssinia—numbers of muskets and matchlocks being annually imported, and exchanged for civet, ivory, and gold-dust, horses, and slaves.

The road being thus opened, the priests proceeded to Gondar, to the patriarch of the Abyssinian church, who blew the breath of the Holy Ghost into a leathern bag, which was safely conveyed back to Susa, and hung up in the cathedral. Ecclesiastics in great numbers have been since ordained by the process of opening this bag, and causing a puff to pass across his face. They are distinguished by antique robes and silver mitres, and the churches and religious observances would appear to be similar in every respect to those of Shoa.

The king of Susa is described as a tall, fair, and very handsome man of five-and-thirty, without beard or mustaches, and wearing the hair in the bushy wig-like form of the Amhara. He carries state umbrellas of yellow silk, surmounted by golden globes, wears a sword with a massive golden scabbard, and bears a shield decorated with radii and crosses of the pure metal! The government is not despotic. No subject can be put to death unless condemned by the judges. Property is free; and there is no restriction upon dress save in the article of gold, to wear which is the exclusive privilege of royalty.

Bonga is the principal town and capital of Susa; and there the king principally resides, in a stone house of two stories. His queen is Meytee, but he has besides "concubines as numerous as the hairs of the head." The banqueting hall is a long building similar to those of Sahela Selassie. and it is the scene of similar revels. His Majesty presides daily at the feast, but is concealed from the gaze of his carousing subjects by an intervening curtain, while the dech agafari, styled "Gubburchu," acts as the master of ceremonies. Public audience is daily given, when the decisions of the judges are confirmed or annulled from a raised throne of solid gold concealed by velvet draperies.

The costume of the male portion of the population consists of a robe of striped red and blue cotton in alternate bands, with tight trowsers and a loose kilt of the same colors and material. The hair is worn en "goferi," as in Shoa, unless after the slaughter of a foe, when it is braided in long tresses like the ancient Egyptians. Copper and ivory bracelets decorate the successful warrior; and a ring of silver is worn in the ear of those who have slain the giant among mammalia.

Marriage is celebrated without the intervention of priesthood, and polygamy is universally exercised at the discretion of man according to his worldly substance. The contracting parties simply pledge fidelity, and in the event of subsequent separation, the lady carries off her portion. Every house possesses its slaves; but those of both king and subject are permitted to work for themselves one day out of the seven. All occupation is interdicted on the Sabbath, as well as on the festivals of Gabriel, Michael, and George, which are the only saints' days observed in Susa.

What a field is here opened for foreign missionary efforts, for which our denomination is better adapted than any other in Europe or America. Are we prepared as a people to go into this opening vineyard of the Lord?

THE ALARM WATCH.

A lady who found it difficult to awake so early as she wished in the morning, purchased an alarm watch. These watches are so contrived as to strike with a very loud, whirring noise, at any hour the owner pleases to set them.

The lady placed her watch at the head of the bed, and at the appointed time, she found herself effectually aroused by the long, rattling sound. She immediately obeyed the summons, and felt better all day for her eraly rising.—This continued for several weeks. The alarm watch faithfully performed its office, and was distinctly heard so long as it was promptly obeyed. But after a time, the lady grew tired of early rising; and when she was wakened by the noisy monitor, she merely turned herself, and slept again. In a few days the watch ceased to arouse her from slumber. It spoke just as loudly as ever; but she did not hear it, because she had acquired the habit of disobeying it. Finding that she might just as well be without an alarm watch, she formed the wise resolution, that, if she ever heard the sound again, she would jump up instantly: and that she never more would allow herself to disobey the friendly warning.

Just so it is with conscience. If we obey its dictates, even to the most trifling particulars, we always hear its voice, clear and strong. But if we allow ourselves to do what we have some fears may not be quite right, we shall grow more and more sleepy, until the voice of concience has no longer any power to awaken us. [The Child's Gem.

HAPPY HE.

Leighton thus wrote on hearing of the death of a child: 'Sweet thing, and is he so quickly laid to sleep? Happy he! Though we shall have no more the pleasure of his lisping and laughing, he shall have no more the pain of crying, nor of being sick, nor of dying. Tell my dear sister, that she is now so much more akin to the other world; and this will be quickly passed to us all. John is but gone an hour or two to bed, as children used to do, and we are undressing to follow. And the more we put off the love of this present world, and all things superfluous beforehand, we shall have the less to do when we lie down.'

AN INTERESTING FACT.

"It is a remarkable fact, which we state on good authority, that the descendants of Rogers, [the martyr in bloody Mary's reign,] are still living in New England, and that at least one son out of every one of the ten generations of his posterity has been actively and faithfully engaged in the duties of the gospel ministry. So marked has been God's approval of the constancy of his faithful witness."

THE JESUITS.—Boileau said of the Jesuits, that they were men "who lengthened the Creed, and shortened the Decalogue."

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 5, 1844.

STATE "CHRISTIAN SABBATH" CONVENTION.

This meeting derives an artificial importance from the fact, that it takes the name of a State Convention, and will be regarded by many as expressing the general feeling upon the subject throughout the State. We have thought it best, therefore, to publish a full account of its doings, especially of that part of them in which the spirit and aim of the leaders were most clearly exhibited. The two letters which follow, were prepared by the delegates from the New York City Sabbath Tract Society, who were appointed agreeably to the request made to "all Sabbath Associations," but who were denied a seat in the Convention, unless they would sign a recantation of their own principles. The letters state the facts, and the facts are a sufficient and mournful commentary upon the character of the present reformatory movements.

LETTER FROM THOMAS B. BROWN.

SARATOGA, Aug. 29, 1844.

The Convention assembled in this place to promote the observance of the Christian Sabbath, as it is called, adjourned this day at about half past 11 o'clock. A brief notice of some of its doings may be interesting to your readers.

The Convention was organized yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, Judge Doe, of this county, in the chair. After the formalities usual in such cases, a committee to nominate officers, and prepare rules of business, was appointed; also a committee to prepare such business, by whom all matters were moulded into a shape most pleasing to themselves.

Upon report of the Nominating Committee, the Rev. Dr. Nott was chosen President, who filled the office with much ease and dignity. Seven Vice-Presidents, and three Secretaries, were likewise chosen.

As soon as possible after our arrival, Bro. Lucius Crandall and myself introduced ourselves as delegates from the New York Sabbath Tract Society, and after stating that we were the representatives of a denomination holding the seventh day to be the Sabbath of the Bible, requested to be informed whether we could be allowed to participate in their deliberations. The Rev. Dr. Edwards, who seemed to be the master spirit of the assembly, arose and said, that a sufficient answer to that question was contained in the Call of the Convention, which was to the friends of the Christian Sabbath, or Lord's Day. Of course, in Dr. E.'s estimation, the day which we keep is not the Lord's "holy day," although so called in the book of inspiration. [Isa. 58: 13.] It was replied, that we did not consider ourselves to be strictly embraced in the call, yet as we claim to be friends of the Bible Sabbath, we supposed there might be some common ground upon which we could meet, without rendering it necessary to depart from the great object which the Convention was designed to promote. The members of the Convention were evidently embarrassed a good deal, but thought it best to defer the matter for the present. So the matter rested until the afternoon session.

AFTERNOON.

The Convention assembled at 3 o'clock. While there was much noise and confusion through the house, the delegates not having generally taken their seats, and, if my recollection serves me rightly, before prayer was offered—although one of the rules required that each session should be opened with prayer—an item of business was brought up, and hurriedly disposed of, the nature of which we could not distinctly understand, although from a word or two which accidentally struck the ear, Brother Crandall suspected that it related to us. For my own part, I heard not a word of it; and I should judge, from the manner in which it was accomplished, and from subsequent occurrences, that it was not intended that either of us should hear it, but that they intended to dispose of the perplexing matter as quietly as possible, as people generally do when they go about perpetrating an act which makes them feel rather uncomfortable. However, Bro. C., as soon as a suitable opportunity occurred, inquired what disposition, or whether any, was made of our case. It was then discovered, that the Convention had violated their own rules, by acting upon a resolution which had not been reduced to writing! Of course, the illegality of the proceeding rendered it necessary to have it all done over again. Whether they would ever have amended their proceeding, if it had not been for our inquiry, is a problem for those to work out, who are skilled in jesuitical movements. Be that as it may, the matter was amended by the adoption of the following preamble and resolution:

"Whereas, Rev. Thomas B. Brown and Rev. Lucius Crandall, delegates from the New York Sabbath Tract Society, have requested to be informed whether they can consistently sit as members of this Convention; therefore, Resolved, That the said delegates be invited to sit and deliberate with this Convention, provided, that in their own apprehension they can unite with us in sustaining the sanctity of the Lord's day as the Christian Sabbath, and preserving that day from desecration, according to the spirit of the call for this meeting."

This broad hint that we were not very welcome, we had no difficulty in understanding.—As we did not come here to make a renunciation of our principles as Sabbath-keepers, we could do no more than sit as spectators of the Convention's doings, and distribute our publications among the people.

The afternoon was principally taken up in speeches upon resolutions reported by the business committee. In these speeches many excellent sentiments were advanced, in regard to the great principle of nature upon which the Sabbatic institution is founded. But as the application of all these sentiments had to be made to the first day of the week, to the perversion of the law of God, they became unavoidably encumbered with much reasoning that was very illogical. This was particularly manifest in their constant attempts to show, that the desecration of the Sunday is marked by the special disapprobation of God's providence. One of the speakers declared, that the true policy of advancing the institution, is to proclaim constantly the facts, in which the curse of God is seen to rest upon the profanation of the day. Subsequently, however, they seemed to feel that they had been a little too fast, in assuming to understand God's mysterious providence so well, and moderated their tone somewhat.

EVENING SESSION.

It had been announced, that the Hon. Mr. Berrien, of Georgia, would be present, and address the Convention in support of one of the resolutions. He was, however, too unwell to make his appearance. But the Hon. B. F. Butler was present, and entertained the audience with a lengthy address upon the importance of the Sabbath to professional men. This, with a few minor speeches, took up the whole of the evening.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The Convention again met at 9 o'clock. The principal thing of importance that was done, was the adoption of a report made by the business committee, presenting the draft of an address to the Presidents and Directors of railroad companies, in regard to running their cars on Sunday. Judge Berrien, who was unable to appear last evening, was present, and made a few remarks.—Other gentlemen sustained the report with a good deal of earnestness. One member of the Convention, however, objected to it on account of its great length, rightly supposing that a document so prolix, would not be read by those for whose benefit it was intended. Doctor Edwards, however, remarked that the document was intended for general circulation among the people, in order to produce effect—a remark which seemed like an admission, that the design was not so much to impress the Presidents and Directors of railroads with the exceeding sinfulness of their course, as to turn popular odium against them, and in that way break up their profits. The Address was adopted, and will probably be in circulation before long, to produce its intended effect.

A resolution was also adopted, to respond to the call for a National Sunday Convention, to be held at Baltimore on the 27th November, by appointment of delegates. Quite a formidable list of names was made out, consisting of Reverends and Honorables. Of course, when high sounding titles are enlisted in the support of a cause, it has a wonderful effect in bringing it forth to victory and honor.

A few other unimportant matters were attended to, and after prayer by the President, the Convention adjourned sine die.

CONCLUSION.

To this brief sketch, I cannot forbear adding a remark or two in reference to the general character of the Convention, and the spirit manifested. As to the treatment given to us, as delegates from the Sabbath Tract Society, I need say nothing; for the bare statement of the facts presents the matter in a light sufficiently mean, without any comment of mine.

According to my own views, the Convention was quite a failure. From remarks made in my hearing by persons who appeared to be respectable, and friends to religion, I find that I am not alone in my view. The meeting was held in the Presbyterian church, which is a building capable of seating 700 or 800 people. Yet at no time was there an assembly large enough to cover the lower part of the house, including men, women, and children. The number of delegates was very small, and the interest manifested by the people of the village, was nothing to speak of. It appeared as if the leaders of the movement felt it, and every thing seemed to drag with a heaviness, that must have disappointed them in no small degree. Instead of a large, overwhelming delegation, from the various Christian denominations throughout the State, it was small, and composed, for the most part, so far as I can learn, of Presbyterians. At least this was the case with those who took an active part in the proceedings, who were not more than ten or twelve in number. All the speaking was done by these few, who were called out over and over again. Indeed, the whole thing seemed rather a stereotyped affair, controlled by Doctor Edwards and a few others of kindred spirit. Others, if they had any real sympathy in the proceedings, were silent, except in giving their votes.

No measures were taken to invoke legislative aid. They seem to have discovered, that, for the present, it is bad policy. Yet in refraining from this, it was evident, that it was policy, and nothing else than policy, that governed them; and that so soon as they can be sure of a majority to bear them out, they will call in the aid of the civil law most rigidly. In an allusion to the laws of this State, Doctor Edwards, in an evident tone of exultation, remarked, that they expressly prohibited all persons from secularizing the Lord's Day, except those who conscientiously believed in the sanctity of another day, and that they were not permitted, by carrying on their work, to give any disturbance to the observers of the first day. "Mark it," said he, "THEY are not permitted to disturb us in the enjoyment of our day." The fact that we are perpetually disturbed by them, so far as the pursuit of their secular business can disturb us, and that we have no other protection from the law in the enjoyment of our Sabbath meetings, than that common protection which it gives to religious meetings on any and every day of the week, seemed to find no sympathy in his breast. And were we subjected to his tender mercies, I opine we should not find them very extensive. The Lord deliver us from the intolerant spirit of such men.

T. B. B.

LETTER FROM LUCIUS CRANDALL.

CALDWELL, Saratoga Co., N. Y., Sep. 1, '44.

MR. EDITOR,—A few particulars for your readers touching the late "Christian Sabbath" Convention at Saratoga.

Our credentials, as representatives of the New York Sabbath Tract Society, having been presented to the Convention by Bro. Brown, the same having been given to the business committee, and also informally reported upon as stated by Bro. Brown, I suggested to Bro. B. the propriety of waiting a while, and (if nothing more should be done about the matter,) then asking an explanation of the affair; and thus we determined to do.

At length there was a pause in the business of the Convention, and the list of members' names was read. We found that our names were not on the list. I then rose and asked what had been done in regard to our case. We were briefly informed what had been done, and that it WOULD be written and handed to us. The substance of what had been done being, that we could have seats in the Convention on the condition of supporting the first day of the week, I supposed a response from us would be in order, that the clerk might know whether to add our names to the list or not. Indeed, I supposed that in reality the question had been put to us, to all intents and purposes, whether we were ready to renounce our openly-avowed opinions, for the sake of seats in the Convention. At this juncture of affairs, I asked if it would be in order to reply, as I understood a question to be asked. We were told, that there had been no question asked; all which was accompanied with an air that plainly signified their choice, that we should keep silence. Thus we, and the subject, were shoved aside, and other business taken up.

Soon after this, a member of the Convention came to me—(for I had taken a seat nearer the Chairman, that he and others might the better hear what I had to say, if I should be permitted to add any thing)—with the preamble and resolution found in Bro. Brown's communication, and opened a conversation with me. I shall not attempt to give this conversation verbatim, but will give the substance of it, as near as I can.

In presenting me the paper, this man gave me to understand, that the Convention did not wish any thing in relation to it! I replied, that there was a condition proposed to us, on compliance with which we were to be admitted to have seats, and take part in the doings of the Convention; and that of course we must be expected to say whether we would comply with their proposition and take seats in the Convention, or not, that they might know whether to add our names to the list. But he said, No—they did not want any answer from us—that there was nothing to be done, only, if we put our names to that paper, we could take seats in the Convention; but that they did not want us to do that. I had no doubt he had made himself perfectly understood by me, and yet he appeared to evade saying to me openly, that they had intended to deny us seats in the Convention, or that we had no business there. Without affecting, however, so to understand the man, I told him they had asked too much; that there were points in the subject upon which we were agreed, and which we could jointly labor to support and defend; and that it was therefore uncourteous and unreasonable, to propose to us such a condition of membership. Besides this, I told him, we agreed, that they had a right, by the rules conventional, and according to the call they had given for that meeting, to exclude the discussion of the point of difference between them and us in regard to the change of the Sabbath, and every thing else foreign to that call; and though we should like to have the point in dispute openly discussed, yet we claimed no such right, but simply asked seats in the Convention according to the rules of courtesy. To this he replied, that he did not know as the course that they had taken was the best one, for we were all liable to err; but appeared to think it was all they could do. Notwithstanding all this, he told me that Dr. Nott wished to speak to me.

About that time the adjournment came, and I went forward to hear what the Doctor wished to say to me. He immediately opened the conversation in a very candid and friendly manner, and the substance of his remarks was, that he wished the matter to be disposed of amicably, and without a controversy on the disputed point between us—because, in his opinion, it would be likely to do harm. He also said, that he had a friendly acquaintance with seventh-day people, and appeared to desire not to do them any injury, or to hurt their feelings. I stated to him my views of the case, substantially as I did to the individual above alluded to. Dr. Nott appeared to think I took a correct view of the affair, and that with such a view we might properly take part in their deliberations, although Dr. Edwards, whose opinion he asked on the subject, answered, in effect, that from the nature of the call for the meeting, we could have no place there. That we ought to have no place or part in the Convention, by the way, was the doctrine of Dr. E. from first to last; and his efforts to secure that result were worthy of his avowed principles. Finally, I suggested to Dr. Nott, that if he thought proper, we would take the preamble and resolution, and present such an amendment as probably would be acceptable. To this the Dr. agreed, and I took the paper and retired.

Next morning we were in attendance before the Convention went into business, and I handed to the Dr. the amendment proposed. He looked at it, and seemed to think it was right, and said he supposed it embraced what was intended by the resolution passed. I said to him, that if they saw fit to reconsider the case, we should be gratified. The Dr. observed, that as he was in the chair, he could not act on the subject. I signified to him that I was aware of that, but that it would be necessary for some one to move a re-consideration of the subject. So, after free and open exchange of thoughts with the Dr., I retired to my seat, with the understanding that some one would move to re-consider, and so bring up the amendment, and see whether it would suit.

When the Convention had been opened, the Chairman stated, that the business committee were yet in session below, and that there was no business before the Convention, when some one arose and commenced making some remarks, which he continued until the committee came in. When the speaker gave way, the report of the committee was called for, and Dr. Edwards, their Secretary, commenced to report. By this time I began to think that it was determined, that no more attention should be paid to us, or our wishes, and that though we might have seats in the house, we should have none in the Convention. I did not think, however, that such was likely to be the result, from any backwardness on the part of Dr. Nott to do justice to us; for so far as I could judge from the visibles in the case, this reverend and venerable gentleman, from first to last, acted in a manner worthy of his station and profession.

Time passed on, but no more was ever heard or seen, by our eyes or ears, of our amendment; though we looked and listened, with all the eyes and ears we had, until about half-past 7 o'clock, when lo! the Convention adjourned!

L. C.

P. S. The substance of our amendment, referred to above, was, that we should not violate the rules of the Convention, by discussing the question between us as the observers of the seventh day, and them as the observers of the first day; omitting, of course, the provision in the resolution as passed by the Convention, that we were to co-operate with them in sustaining the sanctity of the first day.

"THE LORD'S DAY."

We have received, in advance of the day of publication, a copy of the "Midnight Cry" for Sept. 5. It contains an editorial article, headed "the Lord's Day," and occupying five columns in that paper. As a reason for its publication, the writer says, "Many persons have their minds deeply exercised respecting a supposed obligation to observe the seventh day." After a variety of suggestions and quotations designed to show that the law has been done away, the article concludes as follows:—

> "We feel borne irresistibly to the conclusion, that there is no particular portion of time which Christians are required by law to set apart, as holy time. If the Scriptures, and the considerations presented, do not convince our readers of this, then we think there is another conclusion to which they must come, viz. The particular portion of time which God requires us to observe as holy, is the seventh day of the week, that is, Saturday.
>
> We regret to leave the argument at this point, but space fails, and we must beg our readers to search the Scriptures, to see if these things are so. They have learned to bow to no authority but God's, and having that, to treat the decisions of men as utterly worthless."

We are glad to have this candid concession; and we think, with the writer, that if there is any particular portion of time which Christians are required by law to set apart as holy, it is the seventh day of the week. Encouraged by the assurance that "they have learned to bow to no authority but God's," we shall endeavor, in a future number, to answer the objections to the perpetuity of the law, and to show that God's authority is all in favor of the seventh day.

SECTARIANISM.

A distinguished writer has said, that nothing is more common than to find religious societies taking for themselves names which indicate precisely the attributes of character of which they are destitute. This assertion may seem paradoxical at first view, but it has been illustrated too frequently to be successfully denied. Another remark, perhaps equally paradoxical, and equally well illustrated, may be added to this, viz., That nothing is more common than for men to stigmatize others with names which indicate exactly the things which characterize themselves. Hence it happens, that whenever one is heard habitually to denounce his neighbors or his opponents as sectarians, it is only necessary to listen to him for a while, to discover that he is himself a most violent sectarian.

But what is it, after all, that is denominated sectarianism? It is, in most cases, nothing else than faithfulness in advancing the interests of that people with whom one is connected. If that people be few in number, and hold doctrines opposed to the popular belief, earnestness and zeal in their defense will invariably be called sectarian, and pronounced inconsistent with Christian character. But if, on the other hand, that people be numerous and popular, the same course of action is often eulogized, and commended to the imitation of others. Really enlarged minds, it is true, do not make such distinctions between the labors of one who is connected with a small denomination, and one who is connected with a more numerous people; such can see and acknowledge excellence in either case. It is only small, narrow minds—alas, that they are so many—that make this distinction, and pronounce faithfulness in vindicating unpopular truths to be sectarian and unchristian.

If the rule by which these men judge were carried out, to what conclusions would it drive us. It would make Moses, who chose to suffer affliction with his people, a sectary. It would make Jesus, who went himself and sent his disciples first to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, a sectary. And Paul, who compassed sea and land, that he might strengthen the brethren and bring men to Christ, it would make a sectary of the first class. Yet these are the men through whom God has seen fit to convey the richest blessings to earth. Would it not be well, then, to review this matter, and see if we are not refusing to render honor to whom honor is is due?

"ENTER INTO THY CLOSET."

This was the advice of the Lord Jesus to his disciples. How appropriate and needful at all times! That is the place to commune with God; to deepen impressions of spiritual things; to enjoy a foretaste of heaven; and to obtain help to overcome the world. It is the place to examine one's own heart; to sorrow for its evils; and to determine on keeping it with greater diligence. The Christian who delights to enter into his closet, will find pleasure in all his religious duties; he will be sure to exert a good influence upon those with whom he is connected; he will be preserved from temptation; and his path will grow brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. Those Christians who have had the clearest manifestations of God's love, and whose labors have been crowned with the most signal success, have often visited their closets. Thanks for the invitation to pray to the Father in secret; and thanks for the promise, that he will see in secret, and reward openly. Christian, if thou wouldst be useful here, and blessed hereafter, seek often this audience-chamber of the Court of Heaven.

THE SABBATH MADE FOR MAN.

"The Sabbath was made for man," the last of God's creation. The completion of the work of creation, and God's cessation from labor, would necessarily lead to rest, or a Sabbath. It need not, therefore, be referred alone to the command of God, but would originate from the nature of things. Such being the case, it must be immutable and unchangeable, so long as the nature of things continues the same.

After the history of creation, the Sabbath is not spoken of directly for more than 2000 years, or until the giving of the manna. It is then spoken of, however, as a thing perfectly understood by the people; which affords a strong proof that it had always been remembered by the fathers.

The Apostle Paul testifies to the sacredness of the Sabbath, the seventh day of the week, in the fourth chapter of Hebrews, gives some account of the awful consequences which came upon those who rebelled in the wilderness, and exhorts to beware lest any should fall after the same manner of unbelief.

P.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.—It will be noticed that the sessions of this body are to commence on the fourth day of next week. We solicit on its behalf the prayerful remembrance of every friend of the cause, and hope that especially in the public services of the intervening Sabbath it will not be forgotten.

REV. BILLY HIBBARD, a superannuated Methodist minister, died at his residence in Canaan, Columbia county, N. Y., on Sabbath, the 17th ult., in his 74th year. He will be remembered by many as the man who urged with much assurance the Astronomical Hypothesis, that the present seventh day is coincident with the original sixth day, and consequently, that Sunday is the Paradisaic Sabbath—a system which he admitted was the only one by which the sacredness of Sunday could be defended, and for which his opponent, Dea. Wm. Stillman, in his exposition of it, admitted him to be fully entitled to "letters patent."

THE JEWS.—The London Society for the conversion of the Jews supports sixty-four missionaries and agents, at twenty-three different stations, who reported last year about two hundred Jewish converts. The Society has four hundred auxiliary associations in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, whose contributions last year exceeded $100,000.

ODD FELLOWS.—We notice that a number of religious bodies have discussed with considerable interest the expediency or inexpediency of allowing their members to become Odd Fellows. In most cases they have decided against it, on the ground that things are required which cannot be granted without sin. It is contended, likewise, that the benevolent design of such societies, (which is the general plea in their favor,) is altogether exclusive, and inconsistent with the spirit of the Gospel. Sufficient light has been thrown upon the subject by these discussions, to make it the duty of every Christian to consider well the consequences before giving his influence to any such organization.

MISSIONARY CONTRIBUTIONS.—The Missionary Herald for September, states that the receipts of the American Board for the financial year which terminated July 31st, amounted to $236,394; the expenditures during the same period, together with the debt of the previous year, have been $257,393. The debt of the Board, therefore, on the 1st of August was $20, 999.

The receipts for the year ending July 31, 1843, were $244,224; for the year ending July 31, 1842, they were $318,396, for the previous years they averaged $239,265. It will be seen, therefore, that the returning prosperity of our country has not increased our contributions for the support of foreign missions.

General Intelligence.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Since the publication of our last, two steamships have arrived from Liverpool—the Great Western at New York on Saturday evening, and the Hibernia at Boston on Sunday afternoon. They bring dates to the 20th ult.

The commercial news is not of much importance. The cotton market was firm, and the demand steady for the legitimate buisiness of the trade. In the manufacturing districts there was a gradual increase of buisiness, and constant employment was found for all branches of production. The only solicitude was as to the result of the harvest, continued wet weather having caused some apprehension as to the result, and caused an advance in prices.

The great event in the English news is heralded with the usual pomp and display upon such occasions. It is announced that, on Thursday morning the 6th instant, at ten minutes before 8 o'clock, the Queen was safely delivered of a Prince, at Windsor Castle. The event was celebrated by the firing of guns, the ringing of bells, an illumination at Windsor, etc., etc.

Several forms of prayer and thanksgiving for the occasion are published. The best we have seen, is that of the Jews of London, which closes as follows:—"May the supreme King of Kings, through his mercy, grant Queen Victoria life, preserve her from all sorrow and grief, save her from all danger, subdue nations under her feet, cast her enemies down before her, and cause her to be successful whithersoever she may turn. May the supreme King of Kings, in his mercy inspire her heart and those of her counsellors and nobles, with benevolence towards us and all Israel! In her days and ours may Judah be saved, Israel dwell in comfort, and the Redeemer come unto Zion. Oh! may such be the Divine will! And let us say Amen."

The proceedings in Parliament present little that is interesting on this side of the water.

It is said that the government of England exhibits a disposition to be conciliatory towards O'Connell. At the weekly meeting of the repealers Mr. D. O'Connell, jun. announced the receipt of various subscriptions, and proceeded to give his usual weekly return from the prison. He was happy to be able to inform the association that the imprisoned martyrs were in good health and most excellent spirits, enjoying the glorious fact of the perfect tranquility of Ireland throughout its entire extent. They were likewise rejoiced to find that the spirit of perseverance, in looking by legal and constitutional means for the repeal of the union, still pervaded Irishmen of every class and persuasion.

FRANCE.—The Journal des Debats of Aug. 15, gives the following account of the bombardment of Tangier:

"The answer of the Ultimatum sent to the Emperor of Morocco by the Prince commanding the French fleet not having been satisfactory, his Royal Highness the Prince de Joinville commenced firing against the advanced works which protect the fortress of Tangier.

"These works were altogether destroyed. The European quarter of the town has been spared.

"The English Consul-General, Mr. Hay, took refuge on board the vessel of the French admiral."

A Princess has been born in France—daughter of the Prince de Joinville. This event took place on the 14th of August, the 27th anniversary of the birthday of the Prince, her father.

EGYPT.—The most important news is of the abdication of Mehemet Ali. A writer under date of July 27, from Alexandria says:—His Highness, the Viceroy, has just suddenly left Alexandria, declaring that he renounces for ever Egypt and public affairs, and that he retires to Mecca.

The announcement that the Pacha intended "to retire to Mecca" looks as if the old man had thoughts of preparing for his final pilgrimage. But all our most recent accounts state that his health and his intellect were yet unimpaired, and it is well known that although Mehemet Ali had a great respect for the Holy Cities, as a source of tribute, and as affording by their possession, unbounded influence over the faithful, yet by his opinions, his conduct, and his associations, the Pacha was a living scandal to all true believers.

The young Queen of Spain was ill at the last accounts. Her sister also was indisposed. The disease of the Queen is said to be confirmed dropsy.

DEATH OF JOSEPH BONAPARTE.—Letters from Florence, of the 30th ult., mention the death of Joseph Bonaparte, once king of Naples, and afterwards of Spain. He died on the 28th ult. after a long illness. His brothers, Louis and Jerome, were with him in his last moments. Louis is now the head of the family, but his health is also very bad, and his successor is prince Louis Napoleon, the prisoner at Ham. The Romagna is stated to be still in a very disturbed state. It is said, too, that the Pope is dangerously ill.

Mr. Washington Irving has arrived in Paris on leave of absence for two months from his diplomatic duties in Spain. After a short stay he will pay a visit to London.

The Prince Royal of Prussia is now on a visit to England. Great Britain is this year overrun with foreign nobility.

In a case of tobacco smuggling, recently investigated at the Mansion House, London, it was stated that 20,000 pounds of tobacco had been lately cleared out of the Custom House in Dutch cheeses!

The vicar of Enfield, Middlesex, has been detected in using the grave stones in the village cemetry to pave his stable yard!

A fearful gale occurred off Jersey on the 1st of August. A sloop with eighteen persons on board was driven on a sunken rock, and fourteen of them perished.

The four days' sale of the manuscripts from the library of the late Duke of Sussex produced nearly £2,900.

There are 80,000 laborers employed in the mines of Prussia. The annual revenue arising from them amounts to about 130,000,000f., 32,500,000 thalers.

THE BURNS FESTIVAL AT AYR.—This was one of the greatest incidents of the day, and was made the more interesting from the fact of the presence of Burns' three sons, and of his sister, and the presidency, upon the occasion, of Lord Eglinton, and Professor Wilson.

In England there are 1,075 cotton factories, employing 183,243 hands; in Scotland 159 factories, and 32,580 hands; and in Ireland 28 factories, and 4011 hands.

On Tuesday, the 13th ult., at Liverpool, a consignment of forty tons of ice, just arrived from the United States, was offered in lots of five tons each.

At the Wesleyan Conference recently held at Birmingham, it was announced that the Rev. H. Moore, the surviving executor of John Wesley, had bequeathed to the Conference the pocket bible used by the founder of Methodism in field preaching, and presented to him by Mr. Wesley.

It is stated in the Berlin papers that great preparations are making at Koningsburg to celebrate the 300th anniversary of the founding of that university. The King will be present at the ceremony.

The trade of nearly all the nations of Europe with China, appears to be increasing at a rapid rate. The German League are exporting large quantities of manufactured goods to that country, which are said to pay a good profit.

A large quantity of tobacco, about 3,000 lbs., was lately seized, by information, from a cave in a slate quarry at Aberpwill, near St. David's Head, and taken to Plymouth. The tobacco was landed by a notorious French smuggling cutter.

There has been a great fire at Gelas, in the electorate of Hanover, which destroyed about a dozen houses, and a church containing an organ famed for its immense size all over Europe.

Mr. Robert Owen, father of Robert Dale Owen, sailed from London in the packet-ship Victoria for this port, with the intention of spending the remainder of his days in this country. A portion of the working classes of London gave him a public breakfast, and escorted him to the ship on the morning of his departure.

GREAT FLOODS IN VENEZUELA.—The following vivid description of the effects, of the disastrous floods of the present season, is given by a correspondent of the United States Gazette, under date

San Fernando July 30, 1844.

San Fernando may now be said not to exist! The river began to rise in May last, and continued until it covered the entire surface of the land, and in spite of our most efficient, active and constant efforts to save ourselves, by opposing barriers and dikes to the force of the water, the Apure has at last reached the height of two yards above the general level of the land, and has inundated the entire community. The houses have also been flooded in all parts, and notwithstanding we exerted our individual endeavors to oppose the advance of the waters by new entrenchments; they have been filled to the height of two, four and six feet; some have wasted away and fallen, while those that remain, although they still resist the dashing of the waters, must eventually submit to their power and fall.

The streets are so many rivers in which the rapid current is scouring and penetrating deeper and deeper; already deep wells and ditches are formed, which, after the waters have retired to the bed of the river, will require much earth, much time, and many thousands of dollars to obliterate and level.

Some of the families had formed under their roofs large hammocks, in which they thought to remain in safety during the violent tempest; others gathered themselves in the highest places that remained above the water, judging that the deluge would last but a few days. The rise of the waters, however, continued, and every thing has been covered for some weeks, excepting only a few houses which were defended by high dikes and parapets; at last, the population, en masse, resigned the city to its fate, and resolved to emigrate.

The Municipal Council met, in conjunction with the principal inhabitants, at 8 o'clock in the evening of the 16th of July, and then determined to remove the families to San Juan de Payara; they put in requisition all the barges and small vessels, and the day following began the movement. San Juan and Carmaguan have been filled with the emigrants from our devoted city, and there now remain but very few families, and these are enduring a thousand sufferings and privations; some of them have taken refuge in anchored barges.

It is frightful to see the few that yet stop in their houses, surrounded as in a seige; they appear at their windows contemplating the waves of the river as they roll impetuously more than a yard in height over the saturated land on which they had been accustomed to walk. But what do I see? there is now no such river as Apure: it embraces in its course the Potugueza, the Guarico, the Payara and the Aranca: it stretches 24 leagues in width, reaching from Banco Largo, in the Province of Caracas, to beyond the Cunaviche in the Apure. And in this ocean of fresh water there are only to be seen some small islands on which man and beast, cattle and dogs, wild beasts and reptiles closely press, flying from the fatal element which threatens to devour them. We caught two tigers in the very centre of the population, and have also killed many snakes; a caïman was encountered and killed in that which was once one of the principal streets of the city.

There are now no houses, no estates, no seedtime; all has been leveled and destroyed by the fury of the inundation. Nor have we even a place in which to bury the dead. Should the flood continue a month longer, we shall see the dead bodies of men, women and children, with those of the wild beasts of the mountains and domestic animals, all floating together upon the devastating waters. May Providence look on us with eyes of mercy, and may the Government of our country not suffer to perish the last remains of a province that has afforded such important services in the disastrous war of Independence!

MEXICO.—Our dates from the city of Mexico are to the first instant. La Hesperia of the 31st ult. states that letters have been received from Acapulco, which give information of the establishment of a colony of Americans, composed of six hundred persons, who have fixed their residence upon the banks of the Sacramento, with the apparent design of usurping the lands of the republic. The fact was made known to the Government by the commandant of the Department, who demanded reinforcemeuts that he might hold in check the intruders. It is altogether probable, the Hesperia thinks, that these six hundred men are the same party who so greatly disturbed the Government some months since, through the exaggerated report of their numbers. We are much of the same opinion. [N. O. Pic.

There are rumors of bloody doings in Shelby and Harrison counties, Texas, near Louisiana line. The "Moderators" and "Regulators," as they term themselves, are arrayed against each other, and number about two hundred each. Several persons have been killed, houses burned, and plantations destroyed. This is truly a horrible state of things.

Since writing the above we learn, verbally, that one Davis, the leader of the "Regulators," has been shot, with twelve or fifteen others. It is further stated, that Gen. Henderson was about to leave Shreveport to use his influence to bring about an arrangement of the difficulties [N. O. Pic.

FURTHER OUTRAGE ON THE HELDERBERG.—We learn that Sheriff Battlerman, while on his way through the western part of Rensselaerville, on Saturday morning, about four miles west of the village, was set upon and badly treated by a large party of Indians. We have some particulars which we give as related to us.

The Sheriff was accompanied by three of his deputies, Leonard, Esterhout, and another, having some legal process to serve. He was himself armed with two of Colt's revolving pistols, and his deputies had arms—two rifles and three pistols. Unexpectedly, the usual signal was heard, (the blowing of a horn) and immediately several men disguised as Indians, arrested his progress, and demanded to know his business. The Sheriff declined giving them any information, but told them to go about their own.

There was some farther parley, when the Sheriff, being resisted in his efforts to get on, put his hands behind him to get at his pistols, when he was seized by the gang, which had now increased to sixty men, and disarmed, as were also his deputies. They then secured the Sheriff by tying his hands behind him—and gave him a coat of tar and feathers. His deputies were at first threatened with the same treatment; but upon consultation it was determined that if they would solemnly promise to take the Sheriff back to town precisely in the condition he was, they would release them from punishment or harm. The promise was made, of course, and the party returned—the Sheriff being relieved after coming some three miles.

It is stated, that upon their departure, the chief of the gang called for the arms that had been taken from the party, in order to restore them to their owners; but they could not be found, save one pistol, which was returned.

The Sheriff, we understand, knows the person who gave the signal blast that drew the Indians about his wagon; and is determined to pursue the matter to a conviction.

[Albany Argus, Sep. 2d.

DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY AT NIAGARA FALLS.—There was a sad accident at the Falls on the Canada side on Saturday, August 24th, which resulted in the death of Miss MARTHA K. RUGG, a young lady belonging to Lancaster, Mass. She was in company with a party of friends and relatives, and while attempting to gather some shrubs growing on the brink of the precipice near the Museum, lost her balance, and with a loud shriek fell. When taken up she was alive, but insensible. Able medical aid, which was promptly rendered, was unavailing; and she died in about three hours. The body was brought to Buffalo the same evening, and has been taken for burial to Detroit, where her sister, Mrs. G. W. Howe, resides.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT.—A shocking accident occurred on Monday night upon the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, about two miles above the borough of Reading, during the terrific storm with which that part of the country was then visited. The boiler of the tremendous engine, of which so much has been said in praise by the newspapers lately, burst, and the two firemen, the engineer and conductor, were killed. The cause of the accident is a matter of dispute among men of science. It is confidently asserted by some, that it was caused by lightning entering the boiler; and as steam is known to be a conductor, it is a fair presumption that the accident occurred in this manner—and what renders it more probable is, the fact that the train attached to the locomotive was empty, and therefore very light; besides, the bursting of the boiler of a locomotive is almost the rarest thing in the world.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 3.

Another grand wedding party has come off at Hartwell's Hotel, so celebrated for affairs of this nature.

John Ross, the celebrated Cherokee chief, was married in the President's parlor of this hotel last night, to Miss Mary B. Stapler, of Wilmington, Delaware. He is about 55, and she is only 18 years of age; she is a very beautiful girl, and highly accomplished; and belongs to the Society of Friends, or did. Her father was formerly a highly respectable Quaker merchant of this city.

She was given away by her brother, and attended by her sister and a niece of John Ross as bridesmaids. He had collected several of his daughters and nephews from boarding-schools, &c. in New Jersey to be present at the wedding; and after the ceremony a family party of 20 of the Rosses (all half-breed Indians,) sat down to a most sumptuous banquet, for the preparation of which he had given Hartwell a carte blanche, and a most elegant affair it was.

Ross is considered to be worth half a million of dollars. He purposes sojourning with his beautiful bride at this excellent hotel for a short time; after which he goes straight to his wild home in the South Western prairies. [Tribune.

FRIENDS IN ENGLAND.—The yearly epistle of the Society of Friends in Great Britian says, "The amount of the sufferings of our members in the support of our testimony against ecclesiastical demands, including the expenses of distraint, is upwards of eleven thousand one hundred pounds," or over $55,000.

REVIVAL AMONG THE OJIBWAYS.—A missionary among this people reports that considerable religious interest had been awakened, and several individuals added to the church.

The commencement exercises of Hamilton Literary and Theological Institution took place on the 18th, 19th, 20th, and 21st of August. They are highly commended by those who were present. It was stated that arrangements had recently been made by which Columbian College is to confer the degrees upon approved graduates.

In Philadelphia, Wm. H. Dunn—brother of the Priest—was bound over in $500, to answer the charge of illegally arming the Church of St. Philip de Neri, and creating a riot.

Mr. James Tooley, Jr., late of Philadelphia, one of the most accomplished Miniature Painters in the country, died at Natchez, Miss. on the 12th ult.—which city he was visiting in the hope to re-establish his health.

Yesterday afternoon, during the storm which arose about 1 o'clock, large flakes of snow fell at intervals. Let it be remembered that it snowed on the 27th day of August, 1844, a thing which has never happened in this city before during the summer months, at least, unknown to the oldest inhabitants. [Cincinnati Times, Aug. 28.

Madder is now cultivated on the Vermillion river, Ohio, in large quantities.

The letter carrier between this city and Philadelphia had 310 warrants served on him by the Post Office department on Friday last, at the latter place.

The American passengers who came over in the last English steamers, are of the opinion generally, that there will be a war between France and England before a great while.

Mr. C. Perry, of this city, was thrown out of a wagon at Bridgeton, N. J., on Saturday last, and so severely injured that it is thought he will not recover.

A Reformed Gambler named Green has visited New York with the intention of lecturing upon the subject of gambling, and if possible organize an anti-gambling society among the young men.

Alexander Hoag, who lately escaped from prison in New York, has been re taken, sentenced to the State Prison for five years, and has already entered upon his duties there.

We learn from the Green Bay Republican, that a tremendous hurricane has done great injury at that place and its vicinity. Houses were unroofed and dams and bridges everywhere swept away. Loss estimated at $20,000.

On Sunday about mid-day, Medway, (Mass.) was visited by a tremendous storm of wind, hail and rain. Vegetation was mowed down as by a scythe, and window glass broken by the hailstones, some of which, it is stated, measure 9 inches in circumference! The quantity of rain which fell during the storm, which did not exceed thirty minutes, was 1 7-8 inch. The hail storm did not last more than fifteen minutes. The amount of damage done to the window glass in one establishment was a little more than 400 lights. Fortunately most of the houses had blinds that secured the glass, and only about 1500 were broken in all the village.

MARRIED,

In Westerly, R. I., on the 2d inst. by Eld. Alexander Campbell, Mr. SAUNDERS SISSON to Miss MARY S. PROSSER, both of Hopkinton. Also, Mr. SAMUEL S LARKIN of Westerly, to Miss MARY A. POTTER of Richmondtown.

On the 4th of July, Mr. SAMUEL C. HEAD, to Miss JULIA ANN BURDICK, both of Dane Co., W. T.

On the 18th of July, by Rev. Giles M. Langworthy, Mr. ICHABOD WILLIAMS, of Verona, to Miss TACY BABCOCK, of Brookfield.

On the 26th of August, idem, Mr. HENRY B. BABCOCK to Miss ANGELINE LANGWORTHY, all of Brookfield.

On the 1st inst., idem, Mr. HENRY C. BABCOCK to Miss HARRIET M. CRANDALL.

DIED,

In Milton, W. T., on the 30th of April last, after a short illness, SYLVESTER PALMITER, son of Silas and Sarah Palmiter, aged 17 years.

LETTERS.

Thomas B. Brown, Lucius Crandall, Joseph Goodrich, A. Babcock, Samuel Russell, Alexander Campbell, M. D. Randolph, Giles M. Langworthy, Dennis Hardin.

POSTMASTERS—Petersburgh, Cowlesville, Pennsboro, Va., Mystic Bridge, Ct.

RECEIPTS.

Westerly, R. I.—Samuel Saunders, $2.

Mystic, Ct.—Thomas Avery, $2.

Brookfield.—Welcome Babcock, Wm. Simmons, Ethan Stillman, $2 each; Silas Bailey, $1.

Alfred.—David Rose, $2.

Milton, W. T.—Duty J. Green, Henry W. Green, $2 each; Joseph Goodrich, $1.

Petersburgh.—Aaron Coon, Sophronia Fisher, Polly Randall, $2 each.

Leonardsville.—Wm. A. Babcock, $2.

Mystic Bridge, Ct.–Wm. Keeney, Nathan F. Dennison, $2 each.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The Fortieth Anniversary of the SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST GENERAL CONFERENCE will be holden with the 1st S. D. Baptist Church in VERONA, Oneida Co., N. Y., commencing on the fourth day of the week, Sept. 11, 1844, at 11 o'clock A. M.

The central location of this church, and its proximity to the Utica and Syracuse Railroad and the Erie Canal, offer facilities for a general representation, which is earnestly requested.

It is hoped that before leaving home the friends will make provision for the printing and more general distribution of the Minutes of the proceedings of the Conference. PAUL STILLMAN, Rec. Secretary.

The First Anniversary of the General Sabbath Tract Society will be holden at the same place on the first day of the week, Sept. 15, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Auxiliary Societies or churches that have taken action to aid the Society, and Agents not having already reported, are requested to do so with the least possible delay, that the Board of Directors may be able to make a full report for the year. F. W. STILLMAN, Rec. Sec'y.

The Missionary Association will hold its second Anniversary, with the 1st Church in Verona, N. Y., on the Sixth day of the week, before the second Sabbath in September. A Sermon on the subject of Missions will be expected during its session from T. B. BROWN—the time to be determined by the Executive Board. It is desirable that all missionary returns may be made to the Secretary previous to that time.

W. B. GILLETT, Rec. Sec.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.

No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.

No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.

No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

NEW-YORK MARKET, SEPT. 2.

Beef Cattle.—The market last week was unusually dull, and on prime qualities a decline of 50 cents per hundred on the quotations of the previous week took place. The prices now are, for inferior $4 25; for prime $5—with a very limited demand. About 400 left over.

Cows and Calves—$13 a $21, a slight reduction.

Sheep and Lambs.—Sheep $1 75 a $4: Lambs $1 a $2 37½.

FLOUR AND MEAL.—Genesee is rather heavier today and some lots have been picked up at $4 18¾. Generally, however, the transactions are at 4 25. Michigan and Ohio, which are comparatively in less supply, are 4 12½ a 4 18¾. All the Rye Flour on the River was picked up to-day, some 500 bbls, at 2 94 a 3 00. An extra article is held at 3 50. Jersey Meal is 2 50 for good with sales 200 to 300 bbls. Brandywine 2 62½, hhds 12 00.

GRAIN.—Nothing doing in Wheat. Good North Carolina would probably bring 85 a 86c. Corn is in good supply and dull. Sales 3000 bushels Southern at 44c measure, and 75c weight, delivered. At auction on Saturday 8000 bushels inferior New Orleans sold at 40c measure. A sale of 1500 bu. Long Island for Madeira was made at 53c. Oats are rather better without much activity. Sales 3500 to 4000 bushels Southern at 23 a 24c. A lot of 1500 bushels 6 rowed barley sold at 56c. Rye is 67c delivered without sales of importance.

PROVISIONS.—The transactions in Pork are light. A sale of 100 bbls. Prime was made at $7 94. Mess is nominal at $9 37½. Beef is very quiet. Prime $3 a $3 25; Mess $5 12½ a $5 25 for Country and $5 62½ a $5 75 for City. Lard is firm. Sales 100 bbls. good at 6¼c.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 12 a 4 18
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 00a24 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	8 50 a 9 50
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 50 a 5 50
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4 4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	- a —
Stripes, fast colors	- a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul,	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12½a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 50 @ 2 62
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
Smoked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	10 37 @10 50
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 25 @ 4 31
Troy	4 18 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 25 a 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 a
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	88 @ 95
Do South new	94
Rye, Northern	63 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	48 @ 47
Barley N R	@
Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A.& RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a ——
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a ——
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	——a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a ——
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 46
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.]
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14¼
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 25 @ 5 62
Do prime	3 25 @ 3 50
Pork mess bbl	9 75 @ 9 87
Do prime	8 12 @
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	2 a 5½
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7½
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13
Trieste in boxes	6½a
American	5 a
Spring	5½a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8½a 9½
Do Brown	6½a 8½
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9¼ a 9½
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17½a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6¾ a 7¾
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 52½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
Tin plates ½ X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a [illegible]
No. 1	31 a [illegible]
No. 2	24 a [illegible]

Miscellaneous.

A CITY STREET.

BY MARY HOWITT.

I love the fields, the woods, the streams,
The wild flowers fresh and sweet,
And yet I love no less than these,
The crowded city street!
For haunts of men, where'er they be,
Awake my dearest sympathy.

I see within the city street
Life's most extreme estates;
The gorgeous domes of palaces,
The prison's doleful gates;
The hearths by household virtues blessed,
The dens that are the serpent's nest.

I see the rich man proudly fed,
And richly clothed, pass by;
I see the shivering, homeless wretch,
With hunger in his eye;
For life's severest contrasts meet
For ever in a city street!

And lofty, princely palaces—
What dreary deeds of wo,
What untold, mortal agencies
Their secret chambers know!
Yet is without all smooth and fair,
As Heaven's blue dome of summer air.

And e'en the portliest citizen,
Within his doors doth hide
Some household grief, some secret care,
From all the world beside;
It ever was, it must be so;
For human heritage is wo.

Hence is it that a city street
Can deepest thought impart;
For all its people, high or low,
Are kindred to my heart;
And with a yearning love I share
In all their joy, their pain, their care!

THE EVENING CLOUD.

[By Professor Wilson, Editor of the Edinburgh Review.]

A cloud lay cradled near the setting sun,
A gleam of crimson tinged its braded snow;
Long had I watched the glory moving on
O'er the still radiance of the lake below.
Tranquil its spirit seem'd, and floated slow!
Even in its very motion, there was rest;
While every breath of eve which chanced to blow,
Wafted the traveler to the beauteous West.
Emblems, methought, of the departed soul:
To whose white robes the gleam of bliss is given
And by the breath of mercy made to roll
Right onward to the golden gate of Heaven,
Where to the eye of Faith, it peaceful lies,
And tells to man his glorious destinies.

LEAVES FROM A TRAVELER'S NOTE-BOOK—NO. 6.

BIRMINGHAM TO LONDON.

On the day we were to leave Birmingham, we found our way to the station some time before the hour for the departure of the train. This gave us an opportunity to examine somewhat the construction of the road through the city. Nothing excites one's astonishment more in this country, than the enormous sums of money expended in its public works. Railways are seldom constructed without a good prospect of business; and where this is found, whatever is necessary to durability, safety, and speed, is easily obtained. There is an appearance of solidity and permanence, which shows that they were made to last for ages. England has nearly 2000 miles of railway, for the construction of which, companies have been authorized to raise not far from $300,000,000. The first road built was between Liverpool and Manchester, in 1830—only 14 years ago. Since that time, the investments have been enormous, yet have never, it is said, produced any considerable fluctuation in the finances of the country. Illustrations enough of the lavish manner in which money is expended, may be seen on the road between Birmingham and London. It passes through some half-a-dozen tunnels, two of which are more than a mile long, and one of which, (being 1 mile 640 yards in length, 24 feet wide, and 22 feet in height,) cost $1,500,000. The consequence of this liberal outlay at first, is, that the roads are perfectly safe, and easily kept in repair. Perhaps it is good economy in the long run.

The ride from Birmingham to London gives one a delightful view of the material aspect of England. Every traveler who has written about it, has spoken of the beauty of its landscapes, and the perfection of its cultivation. In this respect it undoubtedly exceeds any existing country, and probably any that ever has existed, on the earth. A freshness and richness characterizes the scenery, which it is delightful to behold. And when to this is added the art and labor of man, it produces a view exceeding description. In many cases, the numerous country houses of the noble and rich, are so disposed as to add to the effect which a view of the whole produces. There are two distinct sets of emotions excited by these things. On the one hand, the sight of such developments of taste and industry, which are always the first indications of progress and elevation, must excite admiration and satisfaction in the mind of a lover of his race. On the other hand, the evidences which he here sees of the controlling influence exerted by a very few individuals, excites his sympathy for the many who labor only to gratify those who claim to be their superiors. This consideration of the subserviency of the mass, urges itself upon one wherever he goes in England. The class of persons who perform the labor do not possess a legal right to the soil; their right extends only to the cultivation of it on stipulated conditions, which are often most unjust and oppressive. A common reply to the inquiry, who owns the land over which you are passing, is, that it belongs to such a lord, or earl, or marquis, or gentleman; and the same name is often given for the owner of all within the limits of your view. Where the ownership is entailed in a family, from whose hands it cannot pass, and the oldest member of which is sole possessor, aristocratic insolence and cringing servility, are certain consequences. It is said, that while about 10,000,000 people in Great Britain, or 2,000,000 families, live by agriculture, the bulk of landed property is held by less than 50,000 families. What a field is here for the exercise of the worst feelings of human nature, and with the worst possible results! Agriculture must be, in all countries, and at all times, the source of subsistence for a large majority of the people. And if the ground to be cultivated is monopolized by a few individuals, they have it in their power to create such competition as will give them enormous rents, and compel the laborer to toil his life long for a mere pittance sufficient to support animal existence in its lowest forms. It does not matter how this monopoly was secured, whether, as in England, by military leaders taking possession of as large a tract as they could get, and then entailing it upon their children; or by some more quiet and business-like means—the result will be the same, extortion on the one hand, and servitude on the other.

Leaving Birmingham, with its beautiful environs, our way is through a section of country, almost every hill, or stream, or village of which, is hallowed by interesting historical associations. Old battle-fields, ruined castles, and gray church towers, are passed with such rapidity as scarcely to allow of rehearsing their history. We pass within a short distance of Kenilworth, a little farther from Warwick Castle, and twice cross the quiet Avon. On our right, 40 miles from Birmingham, is Ashly St. Ledger, in the church of which is a monument to Sir W. Catesby, beheaded after the battle of Bosworth Field. A little farther on, is Stowe Nine Church, where Elizabeth, daughter of Lord Latimer, was buried.

Tring is a very ancient place, of Roman origin. It is on an elevated ridge of ground, called the Chiltern Hills. The place was formerly infested with banditti, and for their suppression, an officer was appointed by the Crown, called the Chiltern Hundreds. Although all occasion for the office has long since ceased, yet the office is still retained.

Berkhampstead, the birth-place of Bishop Ken and the poet Cowper, contains the remains of a castle which was formerly the residence of the Kings of Mercia. Three miles distant is the seat of the late Duke of Bridgewater, occupying the site of an ancient monastery. After it became a seat of royalty, it was the frequent residence of Queen Elizabeth. The ancestors of the present owner have possessed it since 1602.

Harrow-on-the-Hill, 12 miles from London, occupies one of the highest places in the country, and commands an extensive and delightful view. It was of a church on this hill, that Charles II. once waggishly said, "The church of Harrow-on-the-Hill must be the 'Visible Church,' since it can be seen by all the country around."

It was evening when we approached London. A sort of mist enveloped it, which its thousands of lamps made luminous. As we entered the grand excavation, through which the carriages were drawn by means of a rope connected with stationary engines, our attention was not attracted to that wonderful rope, weighing 12 tons, and measuring 10,950 feet in length; it was wholly occupied with that world of London before us, the outside of which thousands live and die without seeing, the wealth of which would purchase a continent, and the poverty of which leaves some hundred thousands to feel the pangs of hunger daily.

TO SUBDUE TEMPER.

Fenelon, a French Archbishop, took in hand a difficult case, and pursued the following course, it is said, with success:

The Duke of Burgundy, grand-son of Louis XIV., and heir to the crown, a spoiled child, of an outrageous temper, about fourteen years old, who had got the better of all his tutors, was committed to the Archbishop, with full power to do as he pleased, and he tells us how he proceeded: "When the young prince," says he, "gave way to those fits of passion and impatience to which a temper, naturally hot, made him but too subject, the tutor—the masters—all the attendants and servants of the house, were instructed to keep the most profound silence in his presence. They were not permitted even to answer his questions. If they served him, they turned away their eyes, as if afraid to approach a creature whose passion had overpowered his reason. Any attention they paid him was no more than what was necessary to preserve his existence, and that as if in compassion to a person deranged. His lessons were suspended—his books were put aside, as if of no use to one so wild, and he was left to himself—to his reflections—to his sorrow—to his remorse." These are the feelings which a parent ought to put in action whenever he has to deal with passion of any kind: and the earlier the better.

CHRISTIANITY.

Christianity, like a child, goes wandering over the world. Fearless in its innocence, it is not abashed before princes, nor confounded by the wisdom of synods. Before it the blood-stained warrior sheaths his sword, and plucks the laurel from his brow; the midnight murderer turns from his purpose, and like the heart-smitten disciple, goes out and weeps bitterly. It brings liberty to the captive, joy to the mourner, freedom to the slave, repentance and forgiveness to the sinner, hope to the faint hearted, and assurance to the dying. It enters the hut of the poor men, and sits down with them and their children; it makes them contented in the midst of privations, and leaves behind an everlasting blessing. It walks through great cities amid all their pomp and splendor, their imaginable pride and their unutterable misery, a purifying, ennobling, correcting and redeeming angel. It is alike the beautiful companion of childhood and the comfortable associate of old age. It ennobles the noble; gives wisdom to the wise; and new grace to the lovely. The patriot, the priest, the poet, and the eloquent man, all derive their sublime power from its influence.

[Mary Howitt.

TEMPERANCE ITEMS.

Three years ago there were 469 inmates of the poor house of Worcester, Mass. Last year the number was reduced to eleven! In consideration of this great reduction of their pauper tax, the town voted $500 to be paid annually to the Washingtonian Society, together with the use of a large Hall, and oil and fuel to warm and light it. This is economy worth studying.

A police magistrate in Baltimore states, that since the 1st of March last he has set in judgment on 160 criminal cases, all of which but twelve might be traced to the groggeries! Their support in the jail and almshouse is a large item in the heavy tax imposed on the citizens.

The gin drank in England and Wales annually amounts to nearly £20,000,000 sterling.

Congress, at ther last session, passed a law prohibiting the purchase of wines for the President's Cellar. This is laying the axe at the root of the tree of intemperance.

LUDICROUS POLITENESS.

Insincerity and extravagant adulation often betray people into uttering the most ridiculous absurdities, quite unintentionally. A great man, addressing the House of Lords, said, "It is my most painful duty to inform your Lordships that it has pleased the Almighty to release the King from his suffering." This was equivalent to saying that he was sorry the King's sufferings were over. A maid of honor being asked the hour by her royal mistress, obsequiously replied, "What your Majesty pleases;" an answer even less definite than that of the cow-boy who, after looking up to the town clock, said it was "only an inch past eight." A nurse wishing to give a polite answer to a gentleman who inquired after the health of a sick baby intrusted to her care, said, "Oh, sir, I flatter myself the child is going to die."

WOMEN IN FRANCE.

A correspondent of the National Intelligencer, writing from Paris, says: "In France, the employment of woman in mines is forbidden by law, and children under ten years of age cannot be listed for them legally, but this interdict is commonly infringed or evaded. I have seen women toiling in slate quarries, and they are everywhere engaged in tillage and the work of drudgery of the fields and the farmyards. It is enough to witness the cleansing any morning of the streets of this capital, to know the last extremity of degradation and hideousness to which the sex can be reduced."

MARRIAGE RATHER THAN LAW.

A certain widow lady placed her child at nurse in one of the foundling hospitals of Germany, and intending to leave it there until it should be old enough to begin receiving an education, paid the stipend for four years. About the same time a gentleman placed his child in the same institution, and it was consigned to the same nurse. The gentleman then made a voyage to South America, where he had some business of importance that needed his attention. At the end of the four years the lady returned to take away her child; and by a somewhat singular coincidence, the gentleman arrived at the same time, with the same object. But in the interim one of the children had died, and the nurse could not declare positively whether it was that of the widow or the other; the widow claimed the survivor as her own; the gentleman insisted as strongly that his was the living child. The dispute waxed warm, and a resort to the legal tribunals was threatened on either side, when a worthy clergyman interposed and with such effect that the disputants soon agreed to consolidate their claims to the surviving child by marriage. So says a French paper. [Com. Adv.

"LO! THE POOR INDIAN."

Joc-o-sot, the Walking Bear, a famous Sauk Chief, of stalwart frame and noble bearing, was, says the Cleveland Herald, a twelve month or more ago, persuaded by some speculating Yankee to abandon his wild retreats and simple savage life, and submit to exhibitions of himself in the principal cities. At Cincinnati he was introduced on to the theatrical boards, and in a class of plays got up to represent Indian life, he enacted the principal character with considerable success. From thence he was taken with other red men to the East, and finally across the ocean to "astonish the natives" of the Old World. Joc-o-sot became a lion in the court of royalty, was presented to the Queen, and wherever he moved, clad in his grotesque and fanciful adornments of person, was the observed of all curious eyes. His lithograph in full Indian costume was taken in London by the lithographers to the Queen, and is a beautiful specimen of the art, as well as a striking memento of the race fast fading from existence.

But unfortunately, Joc-o-sot in forming an acquaintance with the pale-faces, learned some of their vices, and his change of habits and free use of the poisonous fire-water appear to have given disease a death-grasp upon his powerful frame. He is now lying in the chamber of a kind and benevolent family on the pier, in the last stages of consumption, having been landed here about a week since on his way from Europe to Fort Leavenworth, Mo., without money, friends, or a single voice to cheer him in his native tongue. Still he submits without a single murmur to the directions of the physician and nurse, and with patient resignation points to the dwelling of the Great Spirit and remarks—"Joc-o-sot die—go up."

HARD FATE.

A man named Jonathan Walker, who took off seven slaves in his boat to give them freedom, is now confined in Pensacola, "where," says he, "I remain secured to a large ring-bolt by a chain made of half-inch iron, and a shackle round my ancle, which weighs about five pounds, so that I have to lie or sit down all the time. If I could walk the room it would afford me great relief. I have for four or five days recovered my health quite fast, but from the 25th of June until the 23d of July, I was not able to sit up three hours in a day, and nearly all the time very much exposed. I cannot say when I shall have my trial, nor what the result will be. The regular term of the court does not come on until November, but the Judge does not know but that he shall appoint a special term before that time."

YOUTH AND MANHOOD.

BY RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES.

Youth, that pursuest with such eager pace
Thy even way,
Thou pantest on to win a mournful race;
Then stay! oh, stay!

Pause and luxuriate in thy sunny plain;
Loiter—enjoy;
Once past, thou never wilt come back again
A second boy.

The hills of manhood wear a noble face,
When seen from afar;
The mist of light from which they take their grace,
Hides what they are.

The dark and dreary path, those cliffs between Thou canst not know,
And how it leads to regions never green,
Dead fields of snow.

Pause, while thou may'st, nor dream that fate thy gain,
Which, all too fast,
Will drive thee forth from this delicious plain
A man at last.

PIOUS INTELLIGENT FATHERS.

Those fathers who have a few external advantages for training their children, have often been observed to have virtuous, sensible and useful families. Indeed, a pious, devoted, sensible, intelligent father, whatever be his property or difficulties in life, has every reason to persevere; for the success of such means as he uses has been proved by thousands of cases. While the wealth and splendor of the richest inhabitants of our cities are frequently dissipated in a single generation, virtue often entails comfort, health, respectability and happiness on the descendants of the good, whether in the town, the village, or the hamlet.

PEACH PICKLES.

One of the most delicious pickles ever tasted is made from ripe Clingstone Peaches. Take one gallon of good vinegar and add to it four lbs. brown sugar; boil this for a few minutes and skim off any scum that may rise; then take Clingstone Peaches that are fully ripe, rub them with a flannel cloth to remove the down upon them, and stick three or four cloves in each; put them into glass or earthern vessels and pour the liquor upon them boiling hot. Cover them up and let them stand in a cool place for a week or ten days, then pour off the liquor and boil it as before; after which return it boiling hot to the peaches, which should be carefully covered up and stored away for future use.

New Stereotype Process.—It is stated in a late British paper, that a most important improvement has been made in the art of stereotype printing, which bids fair to work a complete revolution in the book-making world. The procuring of a cast of moveable type by the method hitherto adopted with plaster of Paris has been attended with great difficulty and loss of time, objections so entirely removed by the substitution of some other substance by the new plan, that a perfect mould, free from all defects, may be obtained in half an hour. Under the old process the work occupied a day, and then frequently had to be done over again. Specimens, in which passages of Hebrew, Arabic, and other oriental languages are given, have been seen, and the stereotype is a perfect fac-simile of the original. The saving in the expense of stereotyping effected by the new process will be seventy or eighty per cent, and the public will no doubt benefit by it by and by, in the reduced cost of standard works.

A Picture of War.—A lecture on the horrors of war was lately delivered in London, in which the lecturer, alluding to the various wars in which Great Britian had been engaged, stated to the effect that from the commencement of the war of the British revolution, to establish William the Conqueror on the British throne, down to the war against Napoleon for the restoration of the Bourbons, the sum of £1,437,000,000 had been spent, and 3,910,000 human beings sacrificed; that out of every shilling earned by the poor man, six-pence went to pay the national debt, which was for the purpose of carrying on war!

Commercial Integrity.—The firm of George O. Crocker & Co., of New Bedford, Mass., which suspended payment and made an assignment two years ago, have given notice that, in consequence of success in business, they are ready to meet the deficit of said firm, principal and interest, amounting to $30,000. Such men are eminently worthy of success.

Curious Fact.—If England paid her national debt, it would take £46 6s. 2d. from each person to pay it; it would take £11 6s. 6d. from each Frenchman to pay the debt of France; it would take £55 8. 4d. from each Dutchman to pay the debt of Holland.

A bill is now before the British Parliament, and which will become a law this season, entirely abolishing imprisonment for debt upon all debts under twenty pounds. All persons at present in custody for such sums are to be released.

Spots made black by writing ink, may be removed by washing them with a solution of oxalic acid in water. In this way the writer has easily removed fresh ink and left the page white, and old spots have been nearly obliterated.

The Potsville (Pa.) Gazette states that a company of Irishmen, after quarreling with certain citizens in a drinking house at Tamaqua, burning with heated blood, and a desire to revenge, attacked the Lutheran Church at the upper end of the borough, and before they were checked, had succeeded in breaking in a number of the sashes, and demolishing the glass.

A farm on Cape Island, N. J., containing about 150 acres, was offered twenty years ago for $1,200 On last Saturday, the sum of $18,000 was offered for one eighth of an acre of the same farm, which was refused.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK

Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND

Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT

Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY

Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA

Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA

Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.

Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN

Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN

Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA

Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS

Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo 25, Commercial of Oswego 35, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatars, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10, Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.

"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."

PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1844. NO. 12.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER TEN.

The Sabbath honored alike with the whole Decalogue.

The following parallelisms will show how the law was regarded by our Saviour and his Apostles:

MOSES.	CHRIST AND HIS APOSTLES.
"The law is holy, just, and good."	"The law is spiritual."
PREFACE.	PREFACE.
Exodus 20: 1–17, "And God spake all these words, saying, I am the Lord thy God which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, and out of the house of bondage."	John 12: 49, "I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, gave me a commandment what I should say and what I should speak."
I.	I.
"Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Deut. 5, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might."	Matthew 4: 10, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." John 4: 23, 24, "The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."
II.	II.
"Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself to them nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me: and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments."	Acts 15: 20, "Abstain from pollutions of idols." 2 John 5: 21, "Keep yourselves from idols." 2 Cor. 10: 14, "Flee from idolatry." Col. 3: 5, "Covetousness, which is idolatry."
III.	III.
"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."	Matthew 5: 34, "I say unto you, swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne; nor by the earth, for it is his footstool." Mat. 23: 22, "He that sweareth by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God and by him that sitteth thereon." Mat. 15: 19, "For out of the heart proceedeth evil thoughts . . . . blasphemies."
IV.	IV.
"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy man servant, nor thy maid servant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the Sabbath day, and hallowed it."	Mark 2: 27, 28, "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath. Therefore the son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath day." Mat. 12: 11, "He said unto them, What man shall there be among you that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it and lift it out? How much better then is a man than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days." Luke 4: 16, "As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, and stood up for to read." Mark 6: 2, "And when the Sabbath day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue." Luke 23: 56, "The women also . . . rested the Sabbath day according to the commandment."
V.	V.
"Honor thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee."	Ephes. 6: 1, 2, "Children, obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right. Honor thy father and thy mother, which is the first commandment with promise."
VI.	VI.
"Thou shalt not kill."	Matthew 5: 21, "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill, and whosoever shall kill, shall be in danger of the judgment. But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment, and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council, and whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire."
VII.	VII.
"Thou shalt not commit adultery."	Mat. 5: 27, "It was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery. But I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart."
VIII.	VIII.
"Thou shalt not steal."	Ephes. 4: 28, "Let him that stole steal no more; but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth."
IX.	IX.
"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."	Col. 3: 9, "Lie not one to another, seeing ye have put off the old man with his deeds." Rev. 21: 8, "All liars shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone."
X.	X.
"Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his man servant, nor his maid servant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbor's."	Luke 12: 15, "Take heed and beware of covetousness, for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

The above passages are the most direct references to the law which I could find in the New Testament, and are selected to show in what light Christ and his Apostles regarded the Decalogue. There is no formal transferring of them from an obsolete code to a new one, with a new authority; but such comments upon them, incidental references to them, and quotations from them, as show that they were regarded as a common obligatory standard, by which all men were bound to the government of God. They were not delivered on one special occasion, in the manner of an arranged code; but just as the character and circumstances of their auditors required them. It is remarkable that in all our Lord's recorded discourses, which were confined to the land of Palestine, and chiefly to Jews, not a word is said about idolatry. I suppose this was because at that time the Jews had so just and universal an abhorrence of it, that they needed not any special injunction upon the subject. Butjust as soon as the Apostles went among the Gentiles, they gave the most solemn warnings against it, because there the converts were in danger of relapsing into their old habits; and because it being surrounded with all the wealth and fashion of the countries in which they dwelt, they were bound by example and precept to condemn it in their fellow men. The Jews, however, carried their hostilities to paganism so far that they hated Gentiles, and accounted them as dogs; and nothing was viler in their estimation than Samaritans, who were descendants of idolators. This our Lord rebuked by showing mercy to Gentiles, and by such instructions as the parable of the man who fell among thieves.

In like manner, at that time the Sabbath was strictly observed throughout all Judea, so that there was no need for a new injunction to observe it. But the Lawyers, Scribes, and Pharisees, had so encumbered it with traditional restrictions, that they had lost sight of its original elevating and benevolent designs; hence our Lord's discourses on it, and his example, were designed to correct and remove these formal, withering restrictions, and show for what purpose God had originally instituted the Sabbath day. This, too, is the reason why all our Lord's discourses on the Sabbath law were addressed to the rulers of the Jews; they were the authors and perpetuators of those restrictions. It looks to me like a wicked perversion of our Lord's words and works, to accuse him of violating or setting aside the great original Sabbath Law, because he declaimed against the unhallowed restrictions of the Pharisees. It would be as just to accuse him of favoring idolatry, because he did not directly say any thing against it, and showed mercy to Gentiles, and eat with the Samaritans. He said the whole law was binding as long as heaven and earth should endure; and then corrected their mistakesupon each precept; and on none more seriously, explicitly, or frequently, than that which enjoined the observance of the Sabbath day.

S. D.

For the Recorder.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

With what consummate subtlety are some of the secret societies of the present day got up—a subtlety worthy of the arch deceiver himself. Witness the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, whose blasphemons principles are extending their influence over our country. Are not their principles blasphemous? Do they not say that the Word of God is insufficient of itself to enforce the duties of charity and brotherly love? Do they not vainly attempt to invent something which, by their actions, if not by their words, they call better and stronger? We are obliged by our oath, say they, to assist our brethren, when they are suffering—thus virtually making the Word of God, which says, "thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself;" "whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them," of no effect through their oaths. For, they say, there must be something more binding. What then, is the principle of selfishness a more powerful stimulant to urge Christians (for there are many professing Christians belonging to this order,) to deeds of charity, than the express command of God? The very foundation on which the institution stands is self, after all their professions of brotherly love, for they assist but those who are obliged to assist them when they require it, thus setting at nought the instructions of Christ, to help the poor, the lame, and the blind.

Their initiatory ceremony is a direct violation of the Scriptures; for the Scriptures say, "thou shalt not forswear thyself." Now I would ask, if it is not a violation of this command, to swear to perform certain ceremonies, and to keep certain secrets, before one knows the nature of those ceremonies and secrets?

The Society is got up on such a plan as to work upon curiosity, the most vulnerable point in the disposition of man, until the oath is taken. Then pride comes to the aid of the cause; for what man will admit that he has been gulled? Even if he would admit it, he cannot, as he is made to believe, without perjuring himself, being bound by an awful oath.

But lest there should be some who would escape through the meshes of selfishness and curiosity, the watchword of charity and brotherly love is raised. To the inquiry, Why place your light under a bushel? they reply, "When thou doest thine alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." Notwithstanding this, every deed of charity is sure to be trumpted abroad, while the deeds of darkness are screened from the searching eye of truth, by an oath stronger than the judicial oath, and stronger, it is to be feared, than even the oath to God. Witness the case of the murder of Morgan, in the investigation of which, nothing could be done, because the Masonic oath entirely neutralized the judical oath. Yet Odd-Fellowships and the order of Rechabites belong to the same class with Free-Masonary, and will, it is feared, unless checked, come to be even stronger and more formidable than that. Indeed, Free-Masonry is reviving under their fostering care and influence. I think, therefore, that it becomes the duty of every true friend of Christianity, to raise a warning voice against secret societies in all their various shapes.

"DAYS OF OLD."

The Manna.

It was but a poor covering that overspread the household of Merab, encamped among the many thousands of Israel, in the wilderness of Sin; but the faces which in that tent clustered around the homely board, were radiant with smiles; and though no greater variety was there than the difference that baking or seething might impart to the same materials, still abundance crowned the feast. 'How very sweet it is!' said little Rachael, as she closed her pretty mouth on the portion that her mother's hand conveyed to it. 'But it is not cloying,' remarked another of the children. 'The mercies of the Eternal are always sweet, but never do they cloy,' replied the smiling Jabin. 'Oh, what are the flesh-pots of Egypt, what the unhallowed dainties of a royal table, compared with this heavenly food, this portion from the bounteous hand of Israel's King.'

'Be wise, Merab,' half whispered a kinsman who had now strolled in: 'put not by that portion for the morrow, or your soul will loathe the crawling mass of worms, and your sense will sicken at the unearthly stench of the corrupted thing. Cast it away, bury it in the ground, and go forth betimes to seek the supply that has not failed as yet.' Merab answered gravely. 'The rest of the Holy Sabbath hath commenced; we shall not find, neither may we seek the Manna on the morrow.' His kinsman smile in scorn, 'Then, believe me, ye will fast; for there is no preserving principle in this light food; and we have only the word of Moses for the coming day's meal.'

'And when yet, I pray thee, hath the word of Moses failed?' asked Merab, bending his dark brow upon the unbeliever; 'thou wast forbidden then to keep until the morning what now thou art commanded to put by; and the corruption that nauseated is but an earnest of the wholesome freshness in which, in the morning, I shall find my Sabbath's sweet supply.' So saying, he rose, to place in a recess the half of what had been gathered at early dawn; and Jabin, as his father passed him, caught his hand, and pressed it to lips that trembled with the murmured blessing on that poor Israelite's strengthening faith.

Then arose the song of praise; the song that Moses had taught them when, standing beside the foaming sea, they felt that they were indeed freemen, and saw the fragments of Egypt's martial pride tossed in a thousand glittering fragments on the wave. The hymn arose, in the single mellow tone of one manly voice, "I will sing unto the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously;" and then another and another joined; and gradually the whole camp caught up the strain; and like rolling thunder it pealed along, "The Lord shall reign forever and ever: Sing ye to the Lord, for He hath triumphed gloriously, the horse and his rider hath He thrown into the sea."

With what an echo that peal of praise reveberated through the cells of young Jabin's heart. It was to him as though the goodly land were already gained, so realizing was the faith with which he grasped the promise. He stepped to the door of the tent, and looked abroad, and reveled in the freedom of Egypt's rescued bondsmen, reposing in perfect peace beneath the mellow radiance of their wondrous guide; for, keenly as it blazed when penetrating light was needed to conduct them along a venturous path, the column's evening glow fell softer than tender moon-beam on the tents of sleeping Israel; and bathed in calm beauty the expansive fold where rested their herds and flocks, their camels and asses. No burdensome piles of luggage had they to keep watch over; the raiment then upon their bodies was strengthened to outlast a forty years' pilgrimage; and for magazine, their store-house was the heaven above their heads, now locked in Sabbath sanctity, to teach them at once a lesson of obedience and of trust. As Jabin gazed upon the scene, his bosom swelled with gratitude that found no words for utterance; but its secret language was even that of the prophet, "Happy art thou, O Israel; who is like unto thee, O people, saved by the Lord!"

Again the sun is rising, and again Jabin reclines at the entrance of his father's tent, to watch the gradual waning of pure light on the mysterious pillar, and the gathering of a darkness even more beautiful than morning's beam; for it was the darkness of heaven contrasted with the light of earth. Gracefully wreathed, even in motion, but never breaking its outline, the purple clouds now mantled the column; but returning noon brought not back the scenes of wonted activity. It was the Sabbath still; and Israel abode in the camp. But see, a human form moves warily along; the kinsman of Merab, bearing an empty measure in the folds of his robe, is about to seek the manna; and Jabin loudly hails him, "O go not forth! The Lord hath commanded, 'Abide ye every man in his place:' tempt not the Eternal."

"Keep thy counsel, boy, for those who ask it," was the surly reply; and Jabin covered his head, and breathed a prayer for the offender. Yet a little while, and he returned, passing with quickened step and averted face, and still hiding the vessel which Jabin knew was empty. Other stragglers also who had left their tents, were stealthily returning, shamed and confounded; and then Jabin fell prostrate, for a sudden tremor shook the earth, and the light of day faded, and the heart of man quailed, for the voice of the Most High was in the air. It came to Moses, saying, "How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws?" Then, gentle, gracious, long suffering compassion prevailed against kindling wrath, and mildly as the breath of spring came once more the cautionary admonition. "See, for the Lord hath given you the Sabbath; therefore He giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place; let no man go out of his place on the seventh day." Israel's faithful leader repeated the command; and all throughout that wide spread camp was still as the calm that broods upon a summer sea.

A WORD IN SEASON.

One day as Felix Neff was walking in the city of Lausanne, he saw, at a distance, a man whom he took for one of his friends. He ran up behind him, tapped him on the shoulder, and asked him, "What is the state of your soul, my friend?" The stranger turned; Neff perceived his error, apologized, and went his way. About three or four years afterward, a person came to Neff and accosted him, saying he was indebted to him for his inestimable kindness. Neff did not recognize the man, and begged he would explain. The stranger replied, "Have you forgotten an unknown person, whose shoulder you touched in a street in Lausanne, and asked him, 'How do you find your soul?' It was I; your question led me to serious reflection, and now I find it well with my soul."

A HOLE IN THE HEART.

When Whitefield was preaching in Boston, a certain minister went to hear him merely, as he said, "to pick a hole in his coat," (to find fault.) But contrary to his own expectation, he was greatly impressed, and remarked afterwards, "God picked a hole in my heart, and healed it by the blood of sprinkling." Ministers often preach in discouragement, but it is only when they preach in unbelief. They see before them the sleepy and careless scoffers, gospel-hardened sinners, and they think they might as well preach to the dead. They forget that by the very truth which they utter in conscious feebleness, God may be intending to pick a hole in some sinner's heart, perhaps the heart of that sceptic or caviler, who came to pick a hole in the preacher's coat. Whitefield found this true more than once, for when he preached in Exeter (England,) on one occasion a man came prepared to knock him on the head with a stone. He stood with the stone in his hand, but the sermon soon interested him so that he dropped the stone; then his heart melted. After the service he went to Mr. Whitefield and said with tears, "Sir, I came to break your head, but God has given me a broken heart." Divine truth is more than a match for the stoutest hearts. But the minister should remember that it is God's instrument, not theirs. They should remember too that God will work by this very instrument, and not by something which they may manufacture out of base materials. Thus honoring God and his truth, they may preach with the utmost boldness and courage, though half the congregation should come with hearts of flints and stones in their hands. The Holy Spirit can strike an arrow into these flinty hearts, and unclench those hard fists, and make them drop their weapons of rebellion. What greater joy than for a minister to hear such sinners testifying with tears, "I came for the worst of purposes, but God has picked a hole in my heart, or broken it with the hammer of his word, and healed it with the blood of sprinkling?"

[Boston Recorder.

GOD AND MAN.

The motive power of the cataract of Niagara exceeds by nearly forty-fold all the mechanical force of water and steam power rendered available in Great Britian, for the purpose of imparting motion to the machinery that suffices to perform the manufacturing labors for a large portion of the inhabitants of the world; including also the power applied for transporting those products by steamboats and steam-cars, and their steam-ships of war, to the remotest seas. Indeed, it appears probable that the law of gravity, as established by the Creator, puts forth, in this single waterfall, more intense and effective energy than is necessary to move all the artificial machinery of the habitable globe. Yet at Niagara, the river does not fall more than one hundred and forty feet. Be it recollected, however, that it is here a quarter of a mile wide, and deep enough, both above and below the fall, to float a frigate. 'All thy works praise thee, O Lord. They show the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power.'

[Stillman's American Journal of Science.

THE POWER OF EXPRESSION.

Dr. Johnson, as reported by Boswell, observes, that from his earliest years he had inwardly resolved to excel in conversation; and to this end he had never uttered a sentence without first endeavoring to make it as significant and correct as it was in his power. His unrivaled skill as a converser, is undoubtedly to be attributed to this habit.

Sir. Samuel Romilly had a somewhat similar practice. He says: "I was anxious to acquire a great facility of elocution, which I thought indispensable to my success. Instead, however, of resorting to any of those debating societies, which were at that time much frequented, I adopted a very useful expedient, which I found suggested in Quintilian, that of expressing to myself in the best language I could, whatever I had been reading; of using the arguments I had met with in Tacitus, or Livy, and making with them speeches of my own, not uttered, but composed, and existing only in thought. Occasionally, too, I attended the two houses of Parliament, and used myself to recite, in thought, or to answer the speeches I heard there. That I might lose no time, I generally reserved these exercises for the time of my riding or walking, and before long I had so well acquired the habit of it, that I could think compositions as I was passing through the most crowded streets."

PRESENCE OF MIND.

The following incident, which occurred in England during the reign of Queen Anne, furnishes a remarkable instance of presence of mind:

"A gentleman was driving post to London, over Hounslow heath, when his chaise was stopped by two highwaymen, who with dreadful imprecations called out to him to deliver his money. The gentleman happened to have in the chaise at the time, cash, &c., to a very great amount, the loss of which would have been his utter ruin. He had not a minute to reflect, and yet with astonishing composure and presence of mind, he instantly hit upon an expedition which extricated him from his danger.

He told the robbers that his life was doubly in their hands, as they might take it themselves, or deliver him into the hands of justice, out of which he could not be released but by death, as he was the unfortunate General Macartney, for the apprehending of whom, on the account of the death of the Duke of Hamilton, the Queen had, by proclamation, offered so great a reward!—he implored, therefore, their compassion, and entreated them not to take his money, as by being deprived of the means of escape, he must unavoidably be apprehended.

The robbers consulted for a few minutes, and then informed him that they had agreed to grant part of his request, namely, not to take his money from him, but on the other hand, as money was absolutely necessary for them, and as they could get more by apprehending than by robbing him, they said he must submit to be carried before some magistrate, as they were determined to deserve and claim the reward offered for his apprehension. The gentleman rejoiced at hearing the intelligence, and having been carried before a Justice of the Peace, who happened to know the person of Gen. Macartney, he was discharged, not being the person, but the two highwaymen were, on his story, committed."

A Land where is no Sickness.—As a gentleman eminent for his happy mode of introducing religious conversation among young people was one day going in the stage coach, he was accosted by a fellow passenger in the following terms: "Sickness, sir, is a very uncomfortable thing. I have been running all over London to find out a physician to attend my sister, but I have been unable to meet him, and I am so fatigued that I am compelled to take the stage." "Yes sir," replied the gentleman, "Sickness is a very uncomfortable thing; but I know a land where there is no sickness." "Do you, indeed," rejoined the young man, "I have traveled nearly all over the world and never heard of that land yet."—See Isaiah 33: 24.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 12, 1844.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

By Rev. L. Coleman, Instructor in Ecclesiastical History, Auburn Theological Seminary.

The "Bibliotheca Sacra and Theological Review," for August, contains an article with the above title. It is, for several reasons, one of the most important articles which has lately appeared in any religious journal. The fact that it comes forth in a review conducted by Profs. Edwards and Park of Andover, with the special co-operation of Dr. Robinson and Prof. Stuart, will give it great weight. The fact that several papers are making extracts from it, in order to prove that the prevailing theory about the Christian Sabbath "is a modern heresy, not countenanced by the ancient church, by the Reformers, or by Christendom generally," will give its doctrines a wide circulation, and a powerful influence for good or for evil. And written, as it evidently is, for the purpose of aiding the present movements in favor of enforcing the legal observance of Sunday, it is impossible fully to estimate its importance. We propose, therefore, to make such extracts from the article, as shall enable our readers to judge for themselves of its probable influence.

After some allusion to the low views entertained by many German scholars respecting the Sabbath, and to the attention which the subject is now receiving in this country, Mr. Coleman proceeds directly to speak of the relation which the economy of the Old Testament sustains to that of the New. He contends that they are "one and the same," and that Christ "is the Mediator between the covenants, the connecting medium between them, by whom both are united as the different parts of the same continuous plan of salvation."

From this he naturally, in a history of the Sabbath, comes to speak of the practice and teaching of Christ, where he uses the following language:

"It is particularly observable that Christ, who came to fulfil all righteousness, being himself made under the law, established the law of the Sabbath both by his instructions and his example. He sanctified the day, religiously obeying the spirit and the letter of the fourth commandment, though far from conforming to the requirements of pharisaical austerity. Being Lord also of the Sabbath, he neither annulled nor modified the existing ordinances of God respecting it; but explained and enforced them. In these expositions, not one iota of the law is abated. Its spirit and extent are rather explained and enforced."

"The law of the Sabbath is also part of the moral law, and as such is of perpetual obligation." "The law of the ten commandments remains in full force under the new dispensation." "It [the law of the Sabbath] was given, not to Abraham and his seed, but to Adam and all his posterity."

So much for the practice and teachings of Christ. Now what said the Apostles and the early Christians? Here is our author's opinion:

"The apostle and the converts to Christianity from the Jews considered themselves adherents still to their people and to their own national religion. Finding in Christ the fulfilling of the law and of the prophets, they continued in the spirit of the gospel, the worship of the Old Testament. They seem not to have been conscious when or where or how the ancient economy was abrogated, and the gospel dispensation introduced. But, in process of time, the one was gradually discontinued and fulfilled in the other. The observance of the Lord's day as the first day of the week was at first introduced as a separate institution. Both this and the Jewish Sabbath were kept for some time; then the Christian began to take precedence of the Jewish Sabbath; finally the latter passed wholly over into the former, which now took the place of the ancient Sabbath of the Israelites. But their Sabbath, the last day of the week, was strictly kept in connection with that of the first day, for a long time after the overthrow of the temple and its worship.—Down even to the fifth century the observance of the Jewish Sabbath was continued in the Christian church, but with a rigor and solemnity gradually diminishing until it was wholly discontinued. No historical record, sacred or profane, has informed us of the first celebration of the Lord's day, the first day of the week, as the Christian Sabbath. It doubtless was very early; probably from the first communication of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost."

This, then, is the best account to be given about the beginning of the observance of the first day of the week; it has no command, and is without "historical record, sacred or profane." And yet the observance of that day is to be enforced as authoritative, and not to be neglected without sin! But what shall be said of the other facts here acknowledged, viz. that the Lord's day, as the first day of the week, was introduced as a separate institution from the Sabbath, and was kept in connection with the Sabbath for five centuries? It is plain from this, that the first day was neither considered as a substitute for the seventh day, nor kept to obey the fourth commandment, since the seventh day itself was strictly kept for that purpose. It commenced as did the observance of Good-Friday and Holy-Thursday; and it has the same authority with these holy days of the early church. Consistency, therefore, would require those who observe the one to observe the other likewise.

Having made this candid concession, we are surprised to find Mr. Coleman, on the same page, attempting to lug in the three passages commonly quoted in order to connect the name of the first day with the Scriptures, viz. Acts 20:7, 2 Cor. 16:2, Rev. 1:10. After some gratuitous suppositions about each of them, in the course of which he acknowledges that the first "is not conclusive proof," he says:

"These are all the passages in the New Testament upon which any reliance can be placed as evidence of the religious observance of the Lord's day by the apostolical churches."

Rather poor reliance, we should think, especially for one who allows that Christ kept, explained, and enforced the Sabbath, or seventh day; and that the ten commandments remain in full force, one of which says, "the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God."

Mr. Coleman's remarks, in this connection, upon "certain passages from Paul which have been thought by some to be opposed to the divine authority of the Christian Sabbath," are to the point, and valuable.

THE SABBATH AFTER THE APOSTLES.

Leaving the Scriptures and the days of the Apostles, our author asserts, that "Soon after the age of the Apostles, the evidence becomes clear and full that the Sabbath was solemnized in the Christian church for religious worship."

This clear and full evidence, as he calls it, is culled from the writings of Pliny, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Dionysius, &c.,—men concerning whom, (only six pages, after quoting them as authority,) Mr. C. uses the following language:

"When, however, we turn from this view of the subject to the controversial writings of the early fathers, in which they are opposing the spirit of the Jewish religion, they seem, in their zeal to oppose these errors, to contradict, in doctrine, the practice of the church. Justin Martyr disowns the original idea of the Lord's day. The Sabbath is, in his view, when disputing with Trypho the Jew, only a temporary institution of the Jews." "Tertullian also, in his controversy with the Jews, assumes a position similar to that of Justin. He seems never to have opened his mind to a just view of the real nature of the law of the Sabbath, nor to have noticed the fulfilment of it in the keeping of the Lord's day in the Christian church." "Clement of Alexandria seems also to have maintained with Tertullian, that the Christian's whole life should be one perpetual Sabbath holy unto the Lord." "Origen again offers similar sentiments respecting the keeping of the Sabbath." "These authorities show that the primitive fathers were far from establishing any new institution for religious worship."

Such are the men from whom our author derives his full and clear evidence—men who disavowed the "original idea of the Lord's day." And if we examine the quotations from them, we shall find that they only show, at most, that the church, in their days, held meetings on the first day of the week. Indeed, Mr. C. says himself, in connection with his quotations:

"During the early ages of the church, it [the Lord's day] was never entitled 'the Sabbath,' this word being confined to the seventh day of the week, the Jewish Sabbath, which, as we have already said, continued to be observed for several centuries by the converts to Christianity."

"No law or precept appears to have been given by Christ or the Apostles, either for the abrogation of the Jewish Sabbath or the institution of the Lord's day, or the substitution of the first for the seventh day of the week."

This we must regard as giving up the question at issue between those who keep the seventh day and those who keep the first. How a Protestant, who holds that the Bible is a sufficient rule of faith, can, after this acknowledgment, continue to neglect the Sabbath, and to observe the first day, is a problem which we are unable to solve.

The following extracts show clearly how the first day of the week was regarded down to the fifth century, and the means by which it was permanently established. We thank Mr. C. for his testimony in favor of the views which Sabbath-keepers have long maintained and defended.

"No sooner was Constantine established upon the throne, than he began to bestow special care upon the observance of the Lord's day. He required his armies to spend the day in devotional exercises. No courts of judicature were to be held on this day; no suits or trials in law prosecuted; but, at the same time, works of mercy, such as the emancipation of slaves, were declared lawful. Subsequently, Christian emperors confirmed and extended these decrees. All public shows, theatrical exhibitions, dancing and amusements, were strictly prohibited. Similar decrees were also passed by various councils, requiring a faithful attendance upon public worship, and a strict observance of the day, by solemn suspension of all secular pursuits, and abstinence from amusements and vain recreations."

"The historical facts in regard to the observance both of the ancient Sabbath and of the Lord's day as holy time, may be summed up in the following particulars:

"1. Both were observed in the Christian church down to the fifth century, with this difference, that in the Eastern church both days were regarded as joyful occasions, but in the Western the Jewish Sabbath was kept as a fast.

"2. Both were solemnized by public religious assemblies for the instruction and spiritual edification of the hearers, and for the celebration of the Lord's supper.

"3. The Sabbath of the Jews was kept chiefly by converts from that people and on their own account; who, though freed from the bondage of the law, adhered in this respect to the custom of their fathers. But in time, after the Lord's day was fully established, the observance of the Sabbath of the Jews was gradually discontinued, and finally was denounced as heretical."

What clearer proof could be given, that the "Lord's day" was not intended as a substitute for the Sabbath? It grew up in connection with the Sabbath; it was for a long time only partially observed; it was made more distinguished by Constantine's special care for it; then the Sabbath was made a day of fasting, and its observance denounced as heretical; after which the observance of Lord's day was fully established, and the observance of the Sabbath was gradually discontinued. This explains the "GREAT FACT," about which so much has been said, that the day has been changed. It shows the change to have been exclusively the work of human hands, without Scripture, without certain apostolical example, without trustworthy record, sacred or profane.

Remainder next week.

POLITICAL MEETINGS ON SUNDAY.

The editors of some of our exchange papers are making a great outcry about certain anti-slavery, temperance, and political lecturers, who see fit to hold their meetings on Sunday. There are three things connected with the outcry of these gentlemen, which seem to us somewhat strange:

The first is, that while they denounce the holding of these meetings as a great sin, they never quote a single text of Scripture of which it is a transgression. Now, if "sin is a transgression of the law," those who are charged with being sinners have a right to ask their judges to point out the law which they have transgressed. Will they do it?

The second thing which appears strange to us is, that the men who cry loudest against what they call the "desecration of the Sabbath," are just the persons who charge observers of the seventh day with being over particular and too nice, because they say, in the language of Scripture, "the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work."

The third strange thing is, that these same persons, when they come to talk with a Sabbatarian, will represent the Sabbath as a Jewish institution, not to be kept so strictly under the gospel dispensation; and say that Jesus Christ taught this, by healing the sick and going through the cornfield on the Sabbath day.

We do not expect much good will result from the rebukes of those men who have a different kind of talk for every different class of persons they meet with. They will too frequently be admonished to pull the beam out of their own eyes; and their rebukes will be powerless until they do it. It is the truth only, which is ever consistent with itself, that is sharper than a two-edged sword.

A CHAPTER ON ACCIDENTS.

By reference to the proceedings of the Saratoga Convention, which we published last week, it will be seen that much account was made of the accidents which have occurred upon the first day of the week, and that one speaker urged the policy of constantly presenting these as a means of affecting the public mind. We do not doubt the honesty or zeal of those who recommended this course, but we do seriously doubt the wisdom of following their advice. We believe that to pursue the course which they recommend, would be, in the first place, to call off the attention of men from the chief and only valid reason for keeping holy one day in the week, which is the command of God, and the sinfulness of disobeying that command. In the second place, it would expose those who pursue this course to the charge of attempting to befool and mislead the people. Every man of common observation knows, that accidents occur on any and every day of the week, and no more on Sunday than on any other day employed in a similar manner. The argument from this circumstance, therefore, may just as well be used by those who keep Wednesday in favor in their day, or by the Mahommedans, who keep Friday, to prove the sacredness of their day. Indeed, the Mahommedan might use the argument with much better grace and reason for the sixth day, than can the Christian for the first day—since the sixth day was once almost universally allowed to be an "unlucky" day.

But, as the argument is sometimes used in favor of the observance of the first day instead of the seventh day, we will take the liberty to present some accidents which have recently occurred upon the seventh day—the Sabbath—and to ask the learned doctors to explain them in consistency with their theory and teachings. If they denounce all who refuse to yield to the force of their argument, will they yield to the force of the same argument in favor of another day? "Thou that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself?" Read the following, and then say if as strong evidence cannot be derived from this source in favor of the Sabbath, as of the first day of the week:—

1. The Boston Mercantile Journal says, "On Saturday afternoon three young men employed in the foundries at South Boston were in an Indian canoe, paddling about for amusement, and when about half way between Alger's wharf and the channel, commenced rocking the canoe, and accidentally upset it. One of them, named James Wilson, who was unable to swim, immediately sunk, and did not rise to the surface again."

2. A Chicago paper says, "While the Whigs of Springfield, Ill., were attempting to raise an Ash pole on the Saturday previous to the election, one of the guy ropes that held a derrick 60 feet high, near the top of which were two men adjusting the block, gave way, and the derrick fell, crushing one of the men to death instantly, and injuring the other severely."

3. "A correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, writing from Rockville, Montgomery Co., Md., under date of the 31st ult., states that while the Loco Focos were engaged in that place on Saturday last, in raising a hickory pole to the cause of Polk and Dallas, a portion of it fell while at an altitude of about 35 degrees, and came in contact with the head of a young man named John Beckwith, a resident of Rockville, fracturing his skull and killing him almost instantly. Several others also made a very narrow escape."

4. A New York paper says, "On Saturday, the coroner held an inquest at No. 122 Leonard St., on the body of a lad, aged 18 years, named Anthony V. R. Tooker, born on Long Island. He was engaged up an alley way in Eldridge street, in the early part of the day, piling up some boards, when the heap slipped and pressed him against the opposite wall. No person was present, but when discovered he was dead, some of the boards having weighed heavily against his throat causing strangulation."

5. At a meeting between the Sheriff of Albany county and some of the tenants of Rensselaerwyck, which took place on Saturday, one of the "Indians," near the close of the day, fell from his horse, and was instantly killed.

6. A New York paper says, "There was a sad accident at Niagara Falls, on Saturday, Aug. 24th, which resulted in the death of Miss Martha K. Rugg, a young lady belonging to Lancaster, Mass. She was in company with a party of friends and relatives, and while attempting to gather some shrubs growing on the brink of the precipice near the Museum, lost her balance, and with a loud shriek fell. When taken up she was alive, but insensible. Able medical aid, which was promptly rendered, was unavailing; and she died in about three hours."

These instances are given only as specimens of what might be collected to almost any extent. They show, that "accidents and providences" are not confined to the first day of the week. On whatever day men deliberately contemn the authority of God, immediate manifestations of his displeasure will sometimes be given. And whenever the laws by which He governs the world are neglected, accidents will certainly follow. In such circumstances, we can but think, that cause must be weak, which requires the support of this argument from accidents; that people must be easily led, who will allow it to govern them; and that man must be either stupid or designing, who will habitually use it.

PROPOSITIONS.

1. Perhaps there has never been a period when accidents from the use of fire-arms were more frequent than during a few months past. A friend proposes, that this be made the basis of an argument against the manufacture of fire-arms altogether.

2. At the recent execution of a murderer in England, the crowd of spectators, after witnessing the "hanging," rushed through a narrow and steep avenue, where some of the leaders fell down and were run over by those who followed; thirty persons were taken up more or less injured, and twelve quite dead. Another friend proposes, that this be made the basis of an argument against all capital punishment.

3. As the steamboat Columbus, a few days since, was proceeding from New York to Sing Sing, for the purpose of conveying a large number of persons to a camp-meeting, she burst one of her flues, which threw the passengers into the utmost consternation; the Rev. E. W. Andrews, pastor of a Methodist church, jumped overboard and was drowned. A third friend proposes, that this be made the basis of an argument against attending camp-meetings at all.

Such a use of these Providences would certainly accord with the spirit of the age, and the movements in favor of the better observance of Sunday.

CONSECRATION OF PROPERTY TO THE LORD.

The duty of consecrating their substance to the Lord seems to have been well understood and practically taught by the founders of the Christian church. They felt that in giving themselves to the Lord, they gave also whatever they possessed. Hence the frequent notices of their contributions for benevolent purposes; and hence the efficiency and success of their efforts to propagate the truth. But was this duty confined to the early ages of the church? By no means. It is the Christian's duty, at all times, to honor the Lord with his substance. The demand for its consecration is not diminished by the lapse of time since the first preaching of the gospel. Although eighteen hundred years have passed since the command was given, to 'go and disciple all nations,' yet a vast majority of them are still ignorant of the way of salvation by Christ; and even of those who have heard the joyful tidings, many are cherishing dangerous errors. It is through human instrumentality that these errors are to be removed, and the gospel universally proclaimed. To accomplish this work, large contributions and great personal sacrifices are indispensable. Who will excuse himself from doing all in his power to promote so worthy an object?

It is impossible to estimate the influence which would be exerted by a church entirely consecrated to the work of spreading the truth. The church has acted upon the maxims of the world, until many think that there is really but little difference between the two. But the systematic contribution of her charity to sustain the cause of religion, would remove this impression, and present an evidence of the power of the gospel which none could resist. It would show that selfishness and avarice, all-grasping and seemingly invincible as they are, can yet be overcome by a diviner energy. Indeed, we cannot help believing, that if "Holiness to the Lord," was written upon the houses and lands, the gold and silver, of the church, it would do more than any other thing to give weight and meaning to Christian words and professions.

May we not believe, also, that this course would increase, rather than diminish, the resources of the church? "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." "Honor the Lord with thy substance; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Here is a direct answer to the question, in the language of a book which all Christians profess to believe. When, therefore, we hear such making their frivolous excuses for not helping the cause of benevolence, we cannot help thinking of this language, and fearing that they are already reaping sparingly, even as they have sown. Our advice to them would be, to try the opposite course for a while, and watch the result.

The time must come, when Christians shall learn that the best way to enjoy wealth is to give of its increase to the treasury of the Lord. There is no sweeter incentive to labor, than the hope of gaining something for such an object. If this were the object sought, labor would cease to be drudgery, and business transactions would become something else than a game of chance. They would be ways of rendering service to God, and would open up numberless sources of enjoyment. Instead of hindering, they would assist the growth of grace in the heart. They would improve whatever is lovely and desirable, and do much to prepare one for higher service. Christian, let not the heathen, who expend ten times as much for idolatry as you for pure religion, rise up in judgment against you. Remember that you are a steward, and that God will require a strict account of the manner in which you dispose of what he has committed to you.

BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT.

It was spring-time when I wrote to you before. The sights and sounds which gladdened us then have changed or passed away. Would that those were all for which we have to say gone. But a beautiful spirit has left us, which no returning spring will restore to us again. You have probably heard that dear Annie is dead. Her sickness was attended by peculiarly painful circumstances; but one lingered near her bed with the feeling which a flower, or an exquisite strain of music, awakens. Every word and act were characteristic. Her love of every-thing beautiful was undiminished. She would look upon a flower that her feeble hand could hardly retain, with child-like delight. The last night I was with her, I kept a little music-box on her pillow, and she was soothed by its tones, like an infant by its mother's evening song. Her patience and self-forgetfulness, her tender expressions of thankfulness and affection to those who were around her, her peaceful death, "are pleasant to remember."

I have sometimes said, thank God that we live in a world where we must love "what death may touch." How infinitely tender do all our relations to each other become, when we remember how brief they will be in their present form. The warm hands that we clasp, the eyes that look kindly on us, the voices we love to hear—how soon we shall know the void in home and heart, which the passing away of these will make. How holy do these ties become, when we think of the love embodied there, not merely as —"the joy and flower

And glory of an earthly hour;"

when we can look into the grave and say, all is not there of our beloved and blessed—we shall meet again—how we cannot tell. It is enough for us to know, that it will be in a world which God has made and governs.

C.

METHODISM.—From the Minutes of the Annual Conference of the Methodist Church for 1843–4, we learn that the nett increase of members during the year was 102,831. This, added to the increase of the previous year, namely, 154,624, makes the unprecedented increase of 257,455 in the short period of two years; and the whole number of members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, 1,171,356. The number of the travelling preachers, or regular clergy, is 4,282; of the superannuated or worn-out traveling preachers, 379; and that of the local or lay preachers, 8,087. Total number of preachers, 12,708.

REVIVALS.—The Biblical Recorder notices revivals in Milton, S. C., where fifty-one persons had professed conversion, thirty of whom had united with the Baptist church. In Preston Co. fifty-three had made a profession during a protracted meeting in that place. A powerful "religious excitement" was in operation among the Methodists in Raleigh, under the ministerial labors of Rev. Mr. Maffitt.

The Christian Index notices several meetings recently held in Georgia, which have resulted in considerable addition to the churches.

TOLERATION IN TURKEY.—Two or three instances have occurred in Turkey, in which men were put to death for renouncing Mahommedanism. This has induced some of the European powers to interpose; and the result is, that the Turkish Sultan has pledged himself that hereafter there shall be no execution of any who may become Christians, and no persecution of Christians in his dominions.

A LARGE CHURCH.—A missionary at the Sandwich Islands gives an account of a communion season of the largest church in the world. At the last celebration, which occurs once in three months, five thousand communicants were present. For want of a convenient house for the occasion, the meeting was held in a grove of cocoanut trees on the sea shore. The assembly was immense, and the scene overwhelming.

"REMOVED UP TOWN."—The lower part of New York city seems likely to be robbed of churches, and given up exclusively to business conveniences. Within a few years past, a number of down town congregations have disposed of their places of worship, and removed to the upper part of the city. One congregation, recently worshiping in Wall street, has realized from the sale of its grounds the sum of $110,000—sufficient to purchase a lot, and erect a spacious house in the upper part of the town. A venerable old building, on a site which has been occupied for religious purposes almost from the founding of the city, was recently leased, and is soon to be occupied for a post office. The congregation has removed up town. Now, although we have no great veneration for brick-and-mortar walls, or particular locations, because they have been "set apart," yet we are sorry to see these changes going on. We love to hear a church bell now and then sound from a place where the hum of traffic is usually heard; and we love to see a church spire pointing upward to heaven amid those commercial arrangements which are so likely to confine our thoughts to the earth. Gladly, therefore, would we have these sanctuaries and sacred places remain unmolested.

General Intelligence.

Burning of a State Prison.—A correspondent of the Tribune, under date of Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 31, says:—

Last night one of the greatest scenes of excitement took place here that has ever been witnessed. About 10 o'clock the prison was discovered to be on fire. There are in the Prison more than one hundred and sixty convicts. The flames spread so rapidly through the workshops that there seemed to be but one way to save the lives of the prisoners, and that to open the cells and allow all to leave the prison walls. The young men of the city rallied at once—repaired to the arsenal—broke it open without ceremony, took out four or five hundred stand of arms—organized at once and put themselves under the command of the Governor. The imploring cries of the prisoners for relief grew more and more earnest. Every building within the walls was in flames except the building containing the cells, and the provision house. The reservoir which supplies the city with water had been partially cleaned out on Friday, and the water was not let on until the alarm was given, and the flames were permitted to move on unchecked. The Governor arranged his men, entered the prison, and addressed the convicts. He told them if they attempted to escape every man would be shot. They fell upon their knees and begged but to be delivered from the horrid death that threatened them, and they would submit to any thing. Just as the Governor was about to open the doors of the prison to the convicts, a supply of water was obtained, and the engines began to play upon the building containing the cells. The Governor then left, assuring the prisoners that they should be rescued if the building could not be preserved. Fortunately for all, they were successful in preserving the buildings above-named, and in keeping the prisoners within their cells.

I have just visited the ruins. Nothing has been saved of the machinery or materials of the workshops. About fifty of the convicts were then at work in quenching the fire in different parts of the yard. Most of them were from eighteen to twenty-five years of age. They looked exceedingly dejected.

Invasion of Texas.—We learn from the Houston Democrat of the 7th instant, that "a Mexican named Ariola, who had been pressed into the Mexican service and deserted, arrived at the house of his father in Montgomery county, a few days since, from San Fernandez. He states that active preparations are being made for an invasion of Texas."

On the other hand, the Civilian of the 17th says: "By the last accounts, over land, from the Rio Grande, there was no indication of preparations to invade our territory. If Mexico really intends to make war, upon which point we are skeptical, she can have made but little progress as yet in getting ready."

The Civilian remarks—"From every quarter we hear that cotton picking is progressing rapidly, with undiminished prospects of a good yield."

From China.—Late news from China gives the following items.

Before the eventful peace of 1842, all heretics, and especially the Roman Catholics, were treated with great cruelty, by the Chinese Government, whenever any case was brought forward before the local tribunal. Much of this fury, however, has lately abated, and on a recent occasion, when a teacher was cited before the mandarins to undergo the customary doom, he was acquitted by express orders from the court.

The sale of American manufactures, &c., find a ready market there, and will continue so for a long period.

Mr. Cushing is still living with his suite at Macoe, and they say he has sent dispatches to the northward, (Pekin,) and informad the Emperor that he should soon go up the coast and make him a visit.

Disaster at Sea.—The St. John (N. B.) News of the 31st ult., says that two vessels, the Evergreen and the Cornwall, came into contact on the Banks of New Foundland in a thick fog. The vessels met on opposite points—the ship stearing W. N. W., going about seven knots; the brig steering E. S. E., going about eight knots. The master and crew of the brig got on board the ship; the brig was totally dismasted. The two mates, carpenter, and three seamen bolonging to the Evergreen, were left on board the brig, cutting away the wreck, to clear the vessels of each other, with the ship's jolly boat, and has not been heard of since. The masters of both vessels' impression is that they stopped by the brig. The Evergreen remained near the spot for thirty hours, firing guns nearly the whole time, and keeping a good look out for the boat, but nothing could be seen of her, or the wreck of the brig. On the 12th the fog cleared, but they could not discover any vessels, but fishermen—of which, there were about twenty in sight. The ship's bows were stove in nearly to the water's edge; and she was in a very dangerous state—until part of the cargo was hove overboard, to lighten the ship forward. The brig was cut down to the water's edge; the bows stove compleatly in, and a total wreck.

"A mob is usually a creature of very mysterious existence, particularly in a large city. Where it comes from or whither it goes, few can tell. Assembling and dispersing with equal suddenness, it is as difficult to follow it to its various sources as the sea itself; nor does the parallel stop here, for the ocean is not more fickle and uncertain, more terrible when roused, more uareasonable, or more cruel."

The Survivors of the Saladin's Crew.—Carr and Galloway, the last of the human beings who left South America in the Saladin, have had their trial for piracy, and been again acquitted—as they were on the charge of murder. The management of the trial was somewhat curious. The jury, after hearing all the evidence and being some time out deliberating, came into court and said they could not agree. They told the court that they were equally divided, one half being of opinion that the prisoners acted under compulsion, or the pressure of unavoidable circumstances—the other half that they went farther than the compulsion of itself urged them, and that therefore they were guilty.

The Court sent the jury out again, and when they were gone a conversation was had between the Attorney General and the bench, on the question whether the disagreement of the jury should not be regarded as amounting to an acquittal; by consent the jurors were then recalled and discharged, a new jury was empanneled on the spot, to whom the Attorney General related the facts proved before the other jury, and without swearing any witnesses, submitted the case. The new jury immediately acquitted the prisoners.

The treasure and other valuables saved from the wreck of the Saladin were shipped on board the mail steamer for England, which sailed on the 18th of August.

Family Convention.—The descendants of Richard Haven celebrated at Farmington, on Thursday last, the 300th anniversary of the arrival of their common ancestor in this country. The day was fine and we should judge that ten or twelve hundred descendants and their connections were present. An excellent address was delivered by Hon. John C. Park, of Boston. The company dined together, and the day passed in a most sociable and agreeable manner. Hon. Josiah Adams, of Farmington, has the merit of originating the agreeable novelty of a Family Convention, and this meeting will be looked back to as the first example of a festival, which we have no doubt will be frequently imitated hereafter.

[Worcester (Mass.) Ægis.

American Antiquities.—A gentleman of Massachusetts has recently uncovered the ruins of the house of Miles Standish, of glorious puritan memory, which was destroyed by fire. One of the first things discovered was a peck of barley in a bag, covered with a charred blanket, which crumbled to pieces on being handled; but the barley was sound, though thoroughly cooked by the fire which destroyed the house. This barley has been distributed, in small parcels, to a large number of persons. But the barley was a small part of the treasure found "hid in the sand." The old fashioned long wrought iron hinges on which the door turned to admit its valorous owner were enshrined, an andiron, a hammer, some glass beads, used then, as now, for traffic with the Indians, and above all, a part, including the lock, of that true and trusty gun, which, in the hand of Miles Standish, dealt death wherever it was aimed. These relics are to be deposited with some suitable society, and will increase in value as centuries pass away.

A Transparent Watch.—A watch has been presented to the Academy of Science at Paris, constructed of very curious material, the parts being principally formed of rock crystal. It was made by Robellier, and is small in size. The internal works are visible, the two-teethed wheels which carry the hands are rock crystal, the wheels of metal, to prevent accidents from the breaking of springs. All the screws are fixed in crystal, and all the axles turn upon rubies. The escapement is of sapphire, the balance wheel of rock crystal, and its springs of gold. The regularity of the watch, as a time keeper, attributed by the maker to the feeble expansion of rock crystal on the balance wheel, &c. The execution of the whole shows to what a state of perfection the art of cutting stones has been carried in modern times. [Boston Transcript.

Terrible Explosion.—Our citizens were startled from their slumbers last night, about 12 o'clock, by a terrible noise, shaking of dwelings and rattling of windows, caused by an explosion of about 20 or 2200 lbs. of powder, in one of the cylinder mills of the powder manufactory of the Messrs. Austins, about a mile from this village, demolishing the building and machinery and scattering portions of it for half a mile about. There was about 600 lbs. of copper balls in the mill, which are probably thrown to a considerable distance, but we have not learned that they have done any injury. We are happy to say that no lives were lost and no person injured. The cause of the explosion is unknown. The machinery was in operation at the time, but not one was in or about the mill. Loss $1,000. The accident will not prevent the supply of powder as usual.

[Akron (Ohio) Beacon Sept. 4.

Later from St. Domingo.—The schr. Victorine, Capt. Bunce, arrived yesterday in 18 days from Jacquemel, (St. Domingo.) A report had reached Jacquemel from Aux Cayes that the blacks at that place had again commenced hostilities against the yellow or half breed negroes, on account of the arrival of a great number of them from Jamaica and other West India ports. Almost every vessel that had arrived from other prts of the West Indies was full of the half breeds, returning to the island.

It was perfectly healthy at Jacquemel, and all through the Island. It was also very quiet there, and business dull. American produce is scarce, and sells quick; coffee and logwood plenty. A merchant from St. Domingo reported that all was quiet there, and in the neighborhood. There is no news as to the whereabouts of the President.

Mexico.—Two individuals who arrived yesterday from the interior of Mexico, state with apparent certainty, that from 16,000 to 18,000 Mexican troops had assembled at San Louis de Potosi, some three weeks since, and were on their way to begin the contemplated invasion of Texas. We are informed from the same source, that the army in question was well provided with artillery and cavalry. N. O. Bee, 27th Aug.

The Slave Trade.—Sir Robert Peel stated in Parliament, that the two countries of Spain and Brazil still maintained the slave trade in the greatest vigor, and that they conveyed from the coast of Africa annually no less than one hundred and fifty thousand negroes to be sold as slaves.

Melancholy Casualty.—On Tuesday last, William Malpers, a young man about twenty years of age, started from home, taking with him his dog and gun, on a hunting excursion in the neighborhood. Being absent through the day, as also on Wednesday, his friends became alarmed, and went in pursuit of him. He was found by his brother about noon on Thursday, lying dead, a short distance from the village, with the muzzle of his gun sticking between some logs near him. It is supposed that, in attempting to start some game from between the logs with the muzzle of his gun, it was accidentally discharged—the contents passing through his heart. His faithful dog was near him when found, nearly famished with hunger.

[Rochester Daily Adv. 4th inst.

The Comet.—Mr. Sears C. Ward, of Philadelphia, says:—"The comet is approaching the sun nearly twice as fast as it departs from the earth; hence its brightness is increasing, and will be about one-third greater than at present, in September, when it is quite probable that it will be easily seen by the naked eye. In good telescopes it has now a tail of about five minutes in length, extending in a direction opposite to the sun."

Anti-Slavery Convention—At the meeting of the American Baptist Anti-Slavery Convention, held in Boston in the spring of 1843, the executive committee were empowered to call another convention at such time and place as they should judge best. That committee have decided, that a convention be held at Albany, on the fourth Wednesday of September next, to transact such business in relation to slavery, as at the time may be deemed proper to be brought before the meeting.

Indian Education.—There is an interesting communication in the last number of the Arkansas Intelligencer, describing an examination of the boys in Spencer Academy—a school established in the Choctaw nation, and attended by nearly a hundred young Indians. This school was opened only in February last, and the pupils have increased from about forty till there is scarcely accommodation for them. Most of them, when they entered it, could not speak English, but now all receive their instructions in that language, and upon being examined made their replies through the same. They are arranged in three divisions, according to their proficiency, a distinct teacher being devoted to each. The most advanced division pursue the studies usual in our Academies; and it must have been an interesting sight, that of a young savage in the backwoods construing the Commentaries of Cesar! Success to the Spencer Academy, say we with all our hearts. [N. O. Pic.

Court House Burned.—On the 1st instant that beautiful edifice, the court house, the pride and ornament of the town of Madison, (S. C.) was entirely consumed. The books and papers of the several county officers who held their offices in the building, were all fortunately saved, although in a very disorderly condition. It is supposed the fire was caused by some person carelessly throwing a lighted cigar into a pile of sawdust that was in one of the rooms.

The Mediterranean Wheat.—The great advantage of this wheat over any now used by our farmers is becoming every year more apparent. Besides its superior yield, it is safer from the ravages of the fly and injury from rust, by its more vigorous growth. Mr. Manfield B. Brown, of Pittsburgh, gives the following account of the yield of his last year's crop. The average yield from a field of 23 acres, was 35 bushels to the acre. The wheat weighed 64 lbs. to the bushel. From 158 pounds which he sent to the mills, he received 120 pounds of superfine flour, after paying toll. If our recollection serves us right, the most of it was cut early, before it was fully ripe.

Extraordinary Wheat.—We are indebted to Myron H. Adams of East Bloomfield, for a fine specimen of white flint Wheat, raised by him the past summer. We are informed by Mr. A. that 177 1-2 lbs. of this wheat produced 144 1-2 lbs. of flour, and 32 lbs. of bran and middlings—averaging 48 lbs. of flour to the bushel. If any of the new varieties of wheat introduced among our farmers can show a greater yield of flour than the white flint, we should like to have an account thereof. Mr. A. has two or three hundred bushels of said wheat for sale for seed.

Executive Clemency.—Eighteen months since a gang of counterfeiting villains were arrested in Arkansas, and at their head as the ring-leader was the infamous Samuel G. Trowbridge, then the Mayor of Little Rock. They were tried, and found guilty, and sent to the Penitentiary—Trowbridge for twenty-one years, as he richly deserved. In the face of all his rascalities, yet too fresh in the minds of the community to recapitulate, would it be believed that this "head fellow," Trowbridge, has had sixteen years of his sentence remitted?

[Arkansas Times.

Outrages among the Van Rensselaer Tenantry.—A Deputy Sheriff named Lewis was forcibly taken from his house in the village of Nassau, Rensselaer Co., on Monday morning, covered with a thick coat of tar and feathers, and was then compelled to run around the town pump and up and down the streets for the amusement of his persecutors. [Journal of Commerce.

The Helderberg Riots.—The Governor of this State has issued a proclamation, in which he enjoins and requires all magistrates and other officers of justice to be faithful and vigilant in maintaining the supremacy of the laws; and offers a reward of five hundred dollars to be paid to such person or persons, who shall give information which shall result in the conviction of those who have disturbed the public peace, resisted the execution of the laws, and committed violence on the Sheriff and Deputy—one hundred dollars of which sum will be paid on each of the first convictions which shall take place in the counties of Albany and Rensselaer, and fifty dollars upon each subsequent conviction in each of the said counties.

SUMMARY.

According to the New Mirror, an association, called the Anti-taking-babies-into-public-assemblies-Society, has been formed in New York. At a meeting of bachelors, the evil against which an association was proposed, was pronounced a crying one that nearly justified a resort to arms for its suppression.

A committee of fourteen was appointed, whose duty it should be to carry out the objects of the society; and the hope was expressed, that not a single man would be found in the city, unwilling to join their interesting association.

One of Baldwin's large Locomotive Engines, on Wednesday of last week, brought down on the Reading Railroad, in a single train, one hundred and two cars, heavily laden with coal. That is what might appropriately be termed a "great haul."

Sickness is prevalent in different sections of Maryland, principally from bilious fevers. The Hagerstown News says:—"The sickness and mortality which has prevailed among the infantile portion of our population, still continues. Scarcely a day passes without bringing sorrow to the heart of some fond mother, whose darling infant is snatched from her bosom by the relentless hand of death.

That distinguished philosopher, Col. Hatch, writes as follows:—"In my recent travels I met with a highly respectable lady, one hundred and six years old. She talked about things that occured ninety years ago; and works lace edging, and reads fine print without spectacles. Her name is Hamilton, and she resides in East Falmouth, Mass.

The whole trade of the New York canals alone, in 1843, was equal to $76,276,000, more than equal to one third of the whole external trade of the Union.

Mr Joseph H. Wilson of Wilsonville, Shelby county, Ky., has declared his intention of freeing his slaves, thirty in number, and sending them with a proper outfit to Liberia. Several of them have trades, all of them can read, and one of them can write.

A new counterfeit one dollar note, purporting to be of the Farmers' Bank of Maryland, payable at Easton, has been detected at Baltimore.

There are also afloat, Onondaga County Bank, Syracuse, N. Y. 10s, spurious.

The Mormons have publicly resolved to take no part in the approaching Presidential Election.

Twenty-eight hundred dogs have been exterminated in this City during the present season.

Private letters state that the town of Nicaragua on Lake Nicaragua, Central America, was destroyed by an earthquake in June last. No particulars of the loss of life are given.

The Custom House receipts for the week ending the 30th ult., are seven hundred and sixty-two thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven dollars, which, with those previously reported, for the month of August, make it two millions eight hundred and three thousand dollars ($2,803,000.)

The Democratic Convention nominated the following persons for Canal Commissioners:—Stephen Clark, Jonas Earll, Nathaniel Jones, Danial P. Bissell.

McLean, indicated for the murder of Major Floyd, has had three trials at St. Louis, on neither of which did the jury come to an agreement. The prisoner has been remanded for the fourth tial.

The Episcopal Convention is now in session in Philadelphia.

Missing—Charles Reid, of Coeymans, Albany County, since the 6th June last.

Joc-o-sot, the Indian chief, died at Cleveland on the 3d.

About midnight, on Saturday, a colored man, named Richard Mideap, well known about Philadelphia as a well digger, fell upon the pavement and in a few minutes expired.

According to a Florence article, the corpse of Joseph Bonaparte lay in state for eight days; his orders on his breast. He is buried in a vault of the Church of Santa Cruz. He has left fifteen millions of francs to his widow and his daughter married to the Prince of Canino.

The New Orleans Tropic of the 31st ult. announces that the city is perfectly heathy.

Constable Saunders Gavitt, of Kensington, Pa., was arrested on Saturday, and held to bail on a charge of inciting to riot during the Kensington disturbances.

Some American ships of war were present at the bombardment of Tangiers.

An opposition line from Baltimore to Washington, is now in successful progress.

Among the passengers lately arrived from London, is Thomas Crawford, the American Sculptor, who has for the last ten years been pursuing his studies at Rome.

Gov. Letcher has appointed Thursday, the 26th inst., as a day of Annual Thanksgiving in Kentucky.

Plant tansy around the roots of peach trees; the peach worm will not trouble them afterwards.

A Devotee.—A Lutheran missionary to the Teloogoos, gives an account of an Indian devotee, who has spent more than nine years on a journey from Benares to Cape Comorin, being from the 26th to the 7th degree of north latitude. The journey is performed by rolling on the bare earth from one side to the other, about three miles each day. His family accompany him, and minister to his wants. He is in good health, and is much applauded by the people among whom he passes.

The Stonington Union Association held its 27th Anniverssary lately with the Baptist Church in Plainfield, Ct., at which were reported additions by baptism during the year 321, and by letter 103. Total number of members 334.

LETTERS.

Ephraim Maxson, Lester T. Rogers, R. T. Greene, Eld. Daniel Coon.

Postmasters.—Pitcher Springs, Livingston, Ill.

RECEIPTS.

West Edmeston.—Samuel P. Burdick, John H. Burch, Nathan Burch, John S. Coon, Ephraim Maxson, $2 each.

Waterford, Ct.—Edmund Darrow, Oliver Maxson, Oliver Maxson Jr., Thomas Rogers, George C. Stillman, Stephen Babcock, $2 each; Wm. Maxson $1; Daniel B. Rogers $2, which should have been credited in No. 2, concerning which we have written.

Shiloh, N. J.—D. McPherson, Auley Ayars, Ephraim F. Randolph, Geo. B. Davis, D. D. Sheppard, Elias Ayars, S. S. Ayars and D. Campbell, E. Davis and E. Ayars, James B. Thomas, John O. Frazier, John S. Bacon, John Bonham, Enoch J. Davis, Clayton F. Randolph, J. Davis, $2 each.

Rochester.—Wm. E. Arnold, $2.

South Branch.—J. B. Cottrell, $2.

Hopkinton, R. I.—Daninl Crandall, $1.

North Adams.—Benjamin Maxson $2; Rufus Bosworth, $1.

☞ The publication office of this paper is at No. 9 Spruce Street, first door below the Tribune Buildings, and five doors from Nassau Street. Our friends will find there all the publications of the New York Sabbath Tract Society, the Address of the General Conference to the Baptists, the Minutes, etc.

☞ Those who may wish to see the Editor will find him at the office between 2 and 5 o'clock P. M.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath Tract Society publish the following Sabbath Tracts, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.

No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.

No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.

No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.

No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

JUST PUBLISHED,

THE

MEDIATORIAL REIGN OF CHRIST ON THE EARTH.

Revealed, in a series of Essays, compiled from eminent authors; to which is added, a letter from Charlotte Elizabeth to the Bishop of Jerusalem, on the perpetuity of Israel's Ordinances.

The following are the subjects discussed in the above work:—

1. The Study of Prophecy, a Question of Degree.
2. Christ's Kingdom on Earth.
3. Reigning on Earth no Degradation to our Lord.
4. The Priesthood of Christ, as it shall be exercised during and after the Millennium.
5. Messiah's Reign on the Earth.
6. The uncertainty of the hour of the coming of the Son of Man.
7. The signs, times, and seasons preceding Christ's Second Coming.
8. War in heaven.
9. The First Resurrection.
10. The changing of the Living Saints at the First Resurrection.
11. The ascension of the Saints to meet the Lord in the air.
12. The ascended Saints preserved from the fiery judgments, exercise power with Christ over their enemies.
13. The restoration of the Jews to their own land.
14. The New Temple to be erected in Jerusalem, with a map explanatory of the same.
15. The New Temple Ceremonial Service.
16. The going up of all nations to worship the Lord at Jerusalem.
17. The New Divis on of the Holy Land, with 2 maps, the first showing the division of the land among the Twelve Tribes by Joshua, with references to chapter and verse. The second the division which shall take place after their restoration, as shown by the Prophet Ezekiel, with references also to the prophecy.
18. The New Heavens and New Earth.
19. The Paradisaical felicity and perfection of the animal and vegetable kingdoms generally restored during the Millennium.
20. Longevity restored to the sojourners on Earth.
21. The loosing of Satan and consequent Apostacy subsequent to the Millennium.
22. The Last or General Resurrection and Judgment of the wicked and the Second Death.
23. The delivering of the Kingdom to God the Father and commencement of the Everlasting Age.
24. The Everlasting Kingdom of God perpetuated in the renewed Heavens and Earth.
25. The gathering together of all things in Christ, and the Earth (renewed) the court or centre of unity of the Everlasting Kingdom of all Creation.
26. On Death and Hades, and the period of Satan's dominion over the present evil world.
27. The approaching New Dispensation.
28. Charlotte Elizabeth's letter to the Bishop of Jerusalem.

☞ Any person desiring the above Work, can have it sent to them, in sheets, by mail, by enclosing One Dollar, (post-paid,) addressed to Rev. T. P. Labagh, New York, or by calling at his Office, 130 Fulton street, or at 9 Spruce street, between the hours of 11 and 3 o'clock.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 12 a 4 18
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 00a24 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	8 50 a 9 50
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 50 a 5 50
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS.
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	— a —
Stripes, fast colors	— a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14½a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12½a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Maguesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4½@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 50 @ 2 62
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	10 37 @10 50
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 25 @ 4 31
Troy	4 18 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 25 a 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 a
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	88 @ 95
Do South new	94
Rye, Northern	63 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	48 @ 47
Barley N R	@

Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A. & RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng. &Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5½a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@1500
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4½ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 25 @ 5 62
Do prime	3 25 @ 3 50
Pork mess bbl	9 75 @ 9 87
Do prime	8 12 @
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13
Trieste in boxes	6½a
American	5 a
Spring	5½a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7¼
Havana white	8½a 9½
Do Brown	6½a 8½
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9½
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17¼a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6½a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¾
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 96
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
plates ⅛ X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 38
No. 1	31 a 32
No. 2	24 a 25

Miscellaneous.

INVITATION TO THE SONS OF BERKSHIRE.

The following poem was read at the Berkshire Jubilee, by Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, of Boston.

Come back to your mother, ye children, for shame,
Who have wandered like truants, for riches or fame!
With a smile on her face, and a sprig in her cap,
She calls you to feast from her bountiful lap.

Come out from your alleys, your courts and your lanes,
And breathe, like young eagles, the air of your plains;
Take a whiff from our fields, and your excellent wives
Will declare it's all nonsense insuring your lives.

Come you of the law, who can talk if you please,
Till the man in the moon will allow it's a cheese,
And leave "the old lady, that never tells lies,"
To sleep with her handkerchief over her eyes.

Ye healers of men, for a moment decline
Your feats in the rhubarb and ipecac line,
While you shut up your turnpike, your neighbors can go,
The old roundabout road to the regions below.

You clerk, on whose ears are a couple of pens,
And whose head is an ant-hill of units and tens:
Though Plato denies you, we welcome you still
As a featherless biped, in spite of your quill.

Poor drudge of the city! how happy he feels
With the burrs on his legs, and the grass at his heels;
No dodger behind, his bandannas to spare,
No constable grumbling, "you mustn't walk there."

In yonder green meadow, to memory dear,
He slaps a musketoe and brushes a tear;
The dew drops hang round him, on blossoms and shoots,
He breathes but one sigh for his youth and his boots.

There stands the old school-house, hard by the old church,
That tree at its side had the flavor of birch,
Oh sweet were the days of his juvenile tricks,
Though the prairie of youth had so many "big licks."

By the side of yon river he weeps and he slumps,
The boots filled with water, as if they were pumps;
Till sated with rapture, he steals to his bed,
With a glow in his heart, and a cold in his head.

'Tis past—he is dreaming—I see him again;
His ledger returns as by legerdemain,
His neckcloth is damp, with an easterly flaw,
And he holds in his fingers an omnibus straw.

He dreams the shrill gust is a blossomy gale,
That the straw is a rose from his dear native vale;
And murmurs, unconcious of space and of time,
"A. 1. Extra-supper—Ah, isn't it PRIME!"

Oh what are the prizes we perish to win
To the first little "shiner" we caught with a pin!
No soil upon earth is as dear to our eyes,
As the soil we first stirred in terrestrial pies,

Then come from all parties, and parts, to our feast,
Though not at the "Astor," we'll give you at least
A bite at an apple, a seat on the grass,
And the best of old—water—at nothing a glass.

A TRULY GREAT MAN.

A few years since, a gentleman traveling in Virginia, at the close of the day stopped at a public house to pass the night. He had but just alighted, when an old man arrived in his gig, with the apparent intention of becoming his fellow guest. The courtesies of plain honest strangers passed between them, and they entered the tavern. Soon after, an addition of several young gentlemen was made to their number. As soon as they were a little rested and refreshed, the conversation was turned by one of these to an eloquent harangue that day made at the bar. It was replied by another of the young men, that he witnessed the same day an exhibition of eloquence no doubt equal, but that it was from the pulpit. Something like a sarcastic rejoinder was made to the eloquence of the pulpit; and a debate ensued, in which the merits of the Christian religion were very freely discussed. Meanwhile the old gentleman listened with all the meekness of a child; as if adding new treasures to the stores of his own mind; or perhaps with patriotic emotion reflecting on the future destinies of his country, and the rising generation upon whom these destinies must devolve, when he should be sleeping with the honored dead. Or, most probably, with a sentiment of moral and religious concern and benevolence, he was adjusting an argument, which, (characteristic of himself,) no sophistry would be able to resist. The traveler first named remained a spectator, taking no part in what was said.

At length, one of the young men, remarking that it was vain to combat with the prejudices of early education, wheeled round, and with an air of familiarity, exclaimed, "Well, my old gentleman, what think you of these things?" If, says the traveler, a flash of lightning from heaven had come upon them, their amazement could not have been greater, than it was with what followed. Such an overwhelming strain of calm, affectionate, clear, and dignified eloquence, as proceeded from the old man, he and probably his young companions had never before heard. Every argument which had been advanced against Christianity, was fully overthrown; Hume's sophistry on the subject of miracles, was, if possible, more completely answered than it had been by Campbell. And in this timely lecture of the old man, there was so much of honest simplicity and energy, such affectionate pathos and sublimity, that not a word in reply was uttered.

It was now matter of deep curiosity and wonder who this old gentleman could be. The first impression of the traveler was, that it must be the preacher from whom the pulpit eloquence had been heard. But no—it was not he—nor the blind preacher of Virginia, so eloquently described by Wirt—it was John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States!

These well-authenticated incidents in the history of a great man, are surely worthy of being reiterated, especially as a memento to the young and proud. How many witlings of science, intoxicated, perhaps, by "a little learning," might be profited for both worlds, by investigating this all-important subject with something of the modesty, simplicity, and patience that ever characterized that distinguished man! How many, now living comparatively useless, and aiming at nothing generous or noble, might be preparing, like him, to enjoy the confidence and gratitude of their generation, and, like him, to shine for ever among the purest and wisest of celestial intelligences!

[Journal of Commerce.

THRILLING INCIDENT.

FIRE IN THE MINES.—We have to record one of the most thrilling occurrences that has ever yet transpired in this district. On Saturday, the 17th instant, an explosion of fire-damp took place in one of Mr. George H. Potts's workings, on the Black Mine. The explosion occurred near the foot of the slope, and was harmless in its effects, as far as human life was concerned, but was followed by a great increase of carbonic acid gas, which is recognized in mining language as 'choke damp.' This gas prevailed to so great an extent, that it was impossible for men to survive in the mines. In this situation of affairs, Mr. Potts had a furnace and cupola erected over an air shaft at the western extremity of the vein, at more than a mile from the slope, for the purpose of creating a draft of air through the workings, and in this manner rid the mine of the gas. After a trial of three or four days, and when it was ascertained that no good resulted from this movement, two of the principal miners volunteered to go down the mine and discover the cause of its failure. They accordingly entered at the extreme end of the working, and cautiously approached the place where the explosion had originally taken place, when to their surprise they discovered that the coal at that spot was completely on fire. There was at least one hundred tons of red-hot burning coal on fire at the time, and the draft which had been created at the extreme end of the mine, instead of benefiting, had only increased the rapidity of its ignition. The miners hastened up with the intelligence, and means were immediately taken to have the fire extinguished before it spread any farther.

The plan adopted was to quench the fire with water, and then haul up in the wagons the refuse matter. Gang after gang of the miners were sent down, and after working five or six minutes were brought up completely lifeless. The proprietor, however, persevered, and by rubbing and resuscitating the exhausted men as soon as brought to the surface, he succeeded in conquering the element after 36 hours of hard and perilous labor. The fire was completely extinguished, and about one hundred tons of charred coal and ashes were taken from the spot. [Pottsville (Pa.) Gaz.

MEDICAL SCIENCE.—The following quotation from a recent English work, exhibits the progress made in the medical science in that country:

"Sir Wm. Petty states, that the proportion of deaths to cures in St. Bartholomew's and St. Thomas' Hospitals, during 1741, was one in ten; during 1780, the mortality had diminished one in fourteen; during 1813, one in sixteen; and that during the year 1827, out of 12,494 patients, 259 only were buried, or one in forty-eight. His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex has justly observed, such is the advantage which has been already derived from the improvement of medical science in the study of anatomy, that comparing the value of human life as it is now calculated to what it was a hundred years ago, it has absolutely doubled."

BY LAND AND WATER.—A new mode of conveying freight by land and water has been discovered and carried into effect. A portable three-section canal boat arrived at the Baltimore and Susquehanna Rail Road depot the other day from Pittsburgh, and is intended to ply regularly between that city and Baltimore, carrying freight. She goes by Rail Road to Columbia; from thence to Hollidaysburg by canal, thence across the Alleghana mountains to Johnstown by Rail Road; and thence to Pittsburg. She is divided into three sections, which are united on the canals so as to form a single boat. This is an admirable contrivance, as it saves trouble and expense in transferring cargo, the whole passing the entire distance without being disturbed.

GERMAN SALUTATIONS.—The Germans never shake hands, their universal salutation being that of lifting their hats to one another, and to the ladies. To such an extent is this custom carried, that a humornus and argumentative pamphlet has recently been published in Berlin, giving prference to the English mode of salutation principally on the ground of convenience. The very clever author of this jeu-d'esprit, shrewdly calculates that not less than six million dollars are annually expended in Germany in the extra wear of hats and caps by this perpetual and universal taking them off to friends and acquaintances.

Dr. Lathrop, of London, was a man of genuine piety, but much opposed to the noisy zeal that seeketh the praise of men. A young divine, much given to enthusiastic cant, one day said to him: "Do you suppose you have any real religion?" "None to speak of," was the excellent reply.

THE LAW AND NEWSPAPERS.

"1. Subscribers, who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

"2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publisher may continue to send them till all arrearages are paid.

"3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the offices to which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have settled their bills, and ordered their papers discontinued.

"4. If subscribers remove to other places, without informing the publishers, and their paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

"5. The Courts have decided, that refusing to take a newspaper or periodical from the office, or removing, and leaving it uncalled for, is 'prima facie' evidence of Intentional Fraud!"

EMIGRATION ON A GRAND SCALE.—We learn from a Liverpool paper that a large section of Calvinistic Methodists, 1,000 at least, from Caernarvon and Anglesey, are preparing to emigrate to this country, with a view to forming a community on the banks of the Mississippi.

LITERATURE AND SCIENCE.—On Wednesday, two works at the sale of the library of the Duke of Sussex brought the enormous prices of £190, and £170! The former was for a Latin Bible printed by Gutenburg and Faust, being the first edition of the Holy Scriptures, and the first book ever executed by the inventors of printing with moveable types. This edition is generally known by the name of the Mazarine Bible. It was printed between 1450 and 1455. The second work (that sold at £170,) was a copy of the first edition of the Latin Bible with a date, 1462, and which was by Faust and Schoeffer.

DOCTOR'S VISITS.—A singular old gentleman was waited upon with his doctor's bill for medicine and visits. After cogitating for some time on its contents, he desired the young man to tell the doctor that the medicine he would certainly pay for, but as for the visits he had charged, he should return them again.

It is said that Willis will realize from the sale of his "Pencilings by the Way," as last published, over $5000.

The Bostonians are discussing the best means of supplying the city with pure water. It is proposed to bring water from Long Pond, 20 miles distant from the State House, and distribute it through the city.

THE PRESS.

BY WM. OLAND BOURNE.

A million tongues are thine, and they are heard
Speaking of hope to nations, in the prime
Of Freedom's day, to hasten on the time
When the wide world of spirit shall be stirred
With higher aims than now—when man shall call
Each man his brother—each shall tell to each
His tale of love—and pure and holy speech
Be music for the soul's high festival!
Thy gentle notes are heard, like choral waves,
Reaching the mountain, plain, and quiet vale—
Thy thunder-tones are like the sweeping gale,
Bidding the tribes of men no more be slaves;
And earth's remotest island hears the sound
That floats on ether wings the world around!

AGRICULTURAL.

CHARCOAL.—Respecting the effect of charcoal, Mr. Sutton says, "My farm was in the earliest settlement of this country, owned by a man who burned charcoal, and I find on those old beds always large wheat and bright straw, even if the rest of the field is poor, rusted and shrunk; and in fact all kinds of grain on these coal beds are good."

MIXING SOILS.—A correspondent of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, states that Mr. John Moor, of West Springfield, has made a successful experiment in the application of clay upon grass land of a dark, heavy soil. Last fall, he carted on clay to the amount of forty loads to the acre—left it in heaps exposed to the frost till spring; when, being dry and partially pulverized, it was spread. The expense of digging, carting and spreading, was ten dollars the acre. The grass before the experiment, was nearly all sedge. It is now changed (no seed being put on) to red and white clover, mixed with herds grass, worth double the former crop in quality, and increased in quantity thirty per cent. A similar experiment was made in the same lot upon a light, dry, gravelly soil, which produced no effect whatever.

CURING GREEN CORN-STALKS.—The difficulty which has sometimes attended the curing of corn-fodder, has been considered quite a draw-back to the advantages of sowing corn for winter feed. In curing hay from grass, we prefer the sweating mode as it is called, having practiced it with success. We have never tried this mode for green corn, but a writer [F. M. Butler] in the N. Y. Farmer and Mechanic says he has practiced it with corn to as good advantage as with grass. He recommends to cut the green corn and let it lay in the swarth to dry off the dews or moisture and to become a little heated. As soon as this is done put it up in large cocks or rather shocks, trample it down close, let it remain in the shocks until it wilts and sweats or ripens, then dry off the sweat and remove the fodder to your barn. He says, "I remember a lot of green corn which for ten days baffled the skill of the farmer to cure in, and which was finally handed over to my care as being incurable. Feeling a firm reliance in the principles that should govern the curing of succulent vegetation for fodder, I proceeded to dry off the dews, and as soon as this was done formed the green corn into large cocks, trampling it down close, although a fine warm sun was pouring down its heat upon the field. The cocks became heated, the corn stalks wilted, but was suffered to remain until the next day, when towards afternoon the sky became clear, and a fine breeze blowing, the heaps were thrown open, the stalks dried and taken into the barn perfectly cured. It kept well, and in the winter the cattle preferred it to hay." [Cultivator.

Sensible men and woman never sneer at mechanics and others who earn their living by their labor. But self-styled gentlemen and ladies not unfrequently do. We have heard of a "lady" who once left a ball-room because a mechanic entered. She married a basket maker, and died a washerwoman. [Exch. paper.

RECIPES.

TO EXTRACT THE ESSENTIAL OIL FROM ANY FLOWER.—Take any flowers you like, which stratify with common sea salt in a clean earthern glazed pot. When thus filled to the top, cover it well and carry it to the cellar. Forty days afterward, put a crape over a pan, and empty the whole, to strain the essence from the flowers by pressure. Bottle that essence, and expose it four or five weeks to the sun and evening dews, to purify. One single drop of that essence is enough to scent a whole quart of water.

TO EXTRACT IRON MOULDS.—Rub the spot with a little powdered oxalic acid, or salts of lemon and water, let it remain a few minutes, and rinse it in clear water.

TO MAKE CORKS FOR BOTTLES.—Take wax, hog's lard and turpentime, equal quantities, or thereabouts—Melt all together and stop your bottles with it.

TO PREVENT TEA-KETTLES COATING WITH LIME.—"Put the shell of an oyster within the vessel whenever it is used, and the lime, instead of adhering to the sides of the vessel, will all be deposited on the oyster shell, which thus forms a nucleus for its attraction. Tried by one of the first woman in the world, and found infallible."

GREEN CORN FOR WINTER USE.—Pluck the ears of green corn when fit for boiling, strip off the husks and throw the ears into a kettle of boiling water, leave them until the water boils up over them, when they must be taken out. Shell off the corn by running the prong of a fork along the base of the grain, holding the ear with one end against the breast; this is better than cutting off with a knife, inasmuch as it is more expeditious, and saves all the grain, including the heart or germ, which is the sweetest part.

After being thus prepared, it must be spread out thin on cloths in a shaded, airy place to dry; it should be stirred every day until thoroughly dried. When cooked, it should be put in cold water and boiled an hour or more; the water to be pretty well boiled off. When the water is nearly off, a little milk added to it will improve the taste. [Cultivator.

PREMIUM CHEESE.—For a cheese of twenty pounds, a piece of rennet about two inches square, is soaked about twelve hours in one pint of water. As rennets differ very much in quality, enough should be used to coagulate the milk sufficiently in about forty minutes. No salt is put into the cheese nor any outside during the first six or eight hours it is being prepared, but a thin coat of Liverpool salt is kept on the outside during the remainder of the time it remains in press. The cheeses are pressed forty-eight hours, under a weight of seven or eight hundred cwt. Nothing more is required but to turn the cheese once a day on the shelves.

POTATOES.—We hear considerable complaint from the farmers in this vicinity that their potatoes are beginning to rot. The tops are stricken with rust, and dying before the plant has come to maturity.

If any of our readers have an opportunity to save potatoe balls or the seeds of this plant, we advise them to do so. The tops with the balls on can be hung up under a shed and dried and kept ready for planting next spring. It is the opinion of several eminent agricultural writers in Germany, Russia and Great Britain, that by continuous propagation from the tubers for many years, without recurring to the natural seed of the plant, it has lost much of its vigor and vital power. A late number of the Journal of the Royal Agricultural Society of England has a valuable paper, written by a Russian, on this subject, whose name we do not remember. The "Dry Gangrene," or a disease which may be designated by some other name, has affected for several years, the potatoe crop of Great Britain, Germany, Russia and Sweden. In each of these countries, and on the Hudson River in this State, and we know not how many other places, new seedings have been propagated, which are said to be much superior to any old roots.

The potatoe crop of this State alone exceeds 30,000,000 bushels a year. We have the authority of Mr. Coleman for saying that in some parts of Germany they now contrive to raise 4,000 bushels of potatoes on five acres of land, or 800 bushels per acre. [Buffalo Com. Advertiser.

BUSINESS ON THE ERIE CANAL.—Some idea may be given of the immense amount of business done upon this great State thoroughfare, from the fact that at one of the locks 15 miles west of Albany a boat passes every nine minutes, on an average, night and day, during the whole season of navigation. Estimating the time of navigation at eight months and a half, three hundred and fifty thousand three hundred and twenty-nine boats pass this point on the Canal, during the season. In the celebrated Report of S. B. Ruggles, it was reported that the commerce of Western New York alone on the Canal, was $50,000,000 in the year 1838. In 1844 the tolls on the Canal are at least 50 per cent greater than in '38, and the revenue from it this year will, besides paying all expenses of repairs, official services on the Canal, the ordinary expenses of the State government, and the interest on the State debt, pay into the Treasury nearly a million of dollars. [Roman Citizen.

NAUVOO NEWS.—The Warsaw Signal says that Daniel Spencer has been elected mayor of Nauvoo, pro tem. George Miller and Whitney have been elected trustees of the church property, and under their management the Temple is progressing rapidly. Samuel H. Smith, brother of the Prophet, died at Nauvoo about two weeks since. William is now the only surviving brother. Sidney Rigdon who claimed the leadership of the church on the ground of his being the only survivor of the first Presidency, and also on the ground of his having been named by Joe at one time as his successor, has had his claims rejected by the twelve, who have decided not to have one man for leader; but that the church shall be governed by them collectively.

The authorities of Boston have arrested one of the principals and bottle-holder in the recent prize-fight, and are on the track of the others.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK

Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman-Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London — Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville — Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND

Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT

Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY

Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA

Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre — Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA

Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.

Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN

Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN

Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA

Fredonia, Louisa Co — M Wheelock

ILLINOIS

Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¼
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 35, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Nothern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatars, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10,

Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20

Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time, all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1844. NO. 13.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THOUGHTS ON THE PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

NUMBER ELEVEN.

The Time unchanged by the Resurrection of Christ.

The preceding series of thoughts, is only a carrying out of the sentiments which I held from my youth up, in common with thousands of first day Christians. But I now come to strike upon thoughts that have separated me from the observance of the first day as a Sabbath forever. As Mr. Stone, of Brooklyn, remarks in his book, I found a great fact: the day was changed! And, although not conscious of it at the time, I took what may properly be called prelatical ground to sanction it; i. e. the thing exists, and in the New Testament we find some things so like it, that we conclude this and that identical; though we cannot find the particulars of the change. And besides, we find some important occurrences that happened, seemingly in accordance with it, which we think are satisfactory reasons for the change. I do not mean that all prelates take this ground in favor of first-day keeping; but the ground they take in favor of prelacy is the same in principle and operation, as many take in favor of keeping the first day. But I was awakened to see the fallacy of this ground, by the discovery of another great fact, viz: That the first day was not honored as a Sabbath during the first two centuries after the Christian era. When I was fully convinced of this fact, I was astonished and ashamed to think, that until I was more than forty years of age, I should have been content to substitute for a known plain command of God, an observance for which I had no law, precept or passage of Scripture, that enjoined it. To declaim against prelacy as a perversion of Christ's institutions; and against pedobaptist sprinkling as a known substitute for a divine institution, and then find myself guilty of the same thing, in observing the first day of the week instead of the seventh, which God blessed and hallowed and commanded, filled me with shame and sorrow, and made me feel that I never more could stand up as an honest man and Christian, before God and my fellow men, unless I walked in his law, and called the seventh day a delight, holy of the Lord, honorable.

After a close and anxious examination of the subject, I found it was altogether vain to look for a Scriptural warrant for the observance of the first day of the week as any more sacred than any other of the six working days that God had appointed by the law.

The Resurrection of Christ is regarded as the great sanctifying event, that requires the substitution of the first for the seventh day of the week; and all the Scriptural reason for it is, that it was on the first day of the week that Christ appeared to his disciples after his resurrection. It is not pretended that we have his command or precept for hallowing that day; no other sanction of his, but his appearance to his disciples on that day. Yet neither of these appearances were when the disciples were assembled for public worship. His first appearance was to Mary Magdalene, Joanna, the wife of Chersa, Herod's steward, and Mary the mother of Jame sand Salome, as they returned from the sepulchre, where they had been with spices intending to embalm the body; and they were directed by an angel at the sepulchre, and by Jesus himself, to go and tell his disciples to go as he had appointed them, to a mountain in Galilee, where he would meet them. (See Matt. 28: 7, 10.) But Peter and John, with Mary the mother of Jesus, who now resided with John, went immediately to the sepulchre, and when they had looked in and satisfied themselves that the report of the women was true, they returned. But Mary his mother staid at the sepulchre weeping, and Jesus appeared to her alone. This was the second appearing. Matt. says, chap. 28: 16, Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw him, they worshiped him; but some doubted. Probably this was a general meeting of the whole body of disciples, five hundred at once, and strangers with them. He appeared likewise to Cleopras and another disciple, who were not of the eleven, as they went to Emmans. During the same day, he appeared to Peter; (Matt. 28: 34.) and the disciples being slow of heart to believe, and go into Galilee as directed, the eleven gathered together at Jerusalem to talk of these matters, when Jesus suddenly appeared in their midst, and upbraided them for their hardness of heart, in not believing them that had seen him. But Thomas was not with them. He appeared again after eight days to the eleven, Thomas being with them. After that he appeared to seven of his disciples, viz: Peter, Thomas, Nathaniel, James, and John, and two others, (probably not of the eleven,) while they were fishing, at the sea of Tiberias. After that to James alone; to the twelve on the day of his ascension; and last of all to Saul of Tarsus on his journey to Damascus.

Here are ten instances mentioned in which our Lord appeared to his followers, after the resurrection, and nine of them private interviews. Five of them occurred on the day after his resurrection; i. e. once to the women returning from the sepulchre, once to Mary his mother while weeping at the sepulchre, once to two of them journeying to Emmans, once to Peter alone, and once to the disciples who for fear of the Jews were gathered together in a private room in the evening, to deliberate upon what had happened. I cannot see how any one, without the strongest prepossessions, can think these things designed to consecrate that day for a Sabbath—a day of rest and quietude! And then to plead the substitution of this day for a divine institution, which, according to its first design and the expressed requirements of the law, was given for another and widely different reason, is to make void that law for the observance of a known device. God said, he blessed and hallowed the seventh day, because that in it he had rested from all his works which he had created and made; but the observers of the first day lay this reason all aside, and say they have found another, a greater, a nobler; although they have neither law, precept nor passage from Scripture for it, as they themselves admit. If this is not being wise above what is written, what course could be so? And who does not see, that if the resurrection and appearing of Jesus Christ sanctified the day, it must have sanctified journeying and fishing on the same occasions, for his disciples were so engaged, and so directed by Christ himself, on those occasions?

The observance of the first day for ages was not enjoined by any such consideration, as is manifest from the following extract from a Catechism published by Archbishop Cranner, in 1548, the first year of Edward VI. King of England:—

"And here note, good children, that the Jews in the Old Testament were commanded to keep the Sabbath day, and they observed it every seventh day, called the Sabbat or Saturday. But we Christian men in the New Testament are not bound to such commandments of Moses' law concerning differences of times, days and meats, but have liberty and freedom to use other days, therein to hear the Word of God, and keep an holy rest. And therefore, that this Christian liberty may be kept and maintained, we do now keep no more the Sabbath on Saturday, as the Jews do; but we observe the Sundays, and certain other days, as the Magistrates do judge convenient, whom in this thing we ought to obey."

This is the way men teach their children to make void the law of God, that they may keep their own traditions. S. D.

TROUBLES OF A PASTOR.

1. The state of the prayer-meeting troubles him. It is his right arm, and the bone of it is broken when that meeting languishes. He takes his way toward it thoughtful and solemn. He passes numbers, and disciples are among them, but they go not with him. A few are there. How is the place solitary that was full of people! The social party is full. The scenes of gaiety and merriment are crowded. But the meeting for prayer is swept away in the tide of worldliness. He cannot but be troubled.

2. Fallen family altars trouble him. He had helped rear them. Some of them rose only, by divine blessing, on his indefatigable exertions, He hoped, and loved to believe, that they would stand till death overthrew them, and united their incense with that of Heaven. But in sadness he hears it recounted that, here one and there another, has fallen—the fire has gone out—the incense rises not. Morning comes to ask recognition of divine goodness. Evening comes with a fresh claim for praise for God; but there is no prayer. That group of youthful travellers have heard the voice of prayer, and felt its moral power. But the altar is fallen. What could we say of the pastor's heart if it were not sad!

3. Covetousness among the disciples trouble him. He thought that degrading and hateful passion would wither and die, and its possessor come under the bright beams of the great Sun of righteousness. He hoped that the solemn public vow of the entire and eternal devotedness to Christ, would put the finishing stroke to this propensity, and that, in alliance with such a glorious specimen of benevolence as He who "gave himself," the vile person would be liberal and the church bountiful. He hoped that the very selfishness of the soul would all melt while the beams of so splendid an example were falling upon it. But he has had sorrowful experience of his mistake. If there has been a little melting, the frozen mass is enormous still. It impedes growth in grace—intercepts the beams of truth, and chains the soul down to earth and sense. Just so much as there is of this spirit in the church, just so much is there to mar its beauty, undermine its strength, and prevent its becoming the light of the world, and terrible as an army with banners. And the pastor cannot but be troubled.

4. Alienations among brethren—trouble him. —He supposed that, as they had one Lord, one faith, one baptism, and had professed the closest and sweetest fellowship with one another, and ate of the same bread, and drank of the same cup, they would be one in heart. But he cannot shut his eyes to the fact, there is strife, and envy, and jealousy, and evil surmisings, and evil speaking. The seamless garment is rent. Christian fellowship is a drooping flower. The alienation breaks the phalanx of the saints, weekens the sacramental host, encourages the assaults of Satan; and that pastor would not be fit for the name, who would not be sad in a view of such a spectacle.

5. The languor of Zion in spreading her glory through the world troubles him. She had heard the voice of her king. "Arise, shine, for thy light has come, and the glory of the Lord hath risen upon thee!" And her duty and glorious privilege it is to cause every pagan nation to exclaim, "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace!" But Zion rises not in her strength. Something is done; much to be glad of. But so slow and languid were her movements as to occasion the desponding cry, "When will the Saviour be known among all the nations!"

Here are some of the pastor's trials. Let the disciples know that many of them can be relieved by the exercise of their own piety, and that their fervent prayers will powerfully sustain him in bearing all the rest. [Boston Recorder.

"DAYS OF OLD."

REPHIDIM.

"Foolish enthusiast!" exclaimed Merad, 'put down that useless burden and mock not our anguish with the hope that shall not be fulfilled. No, here we perish. I have searched far and near, I lead a fainting camel north, south, east, and west, but no scent of water was upon the stifling air. He sank gasping, and died upon the sands, into which I had dug as a desperate chance that some well might spring up at my feet. No, we perish, we perish with thirst! Put down the pitcher, idle boy; take from thy mother's arms the dying child, and bear it forth; let her not see its expiring agonies."

"Father, the extremity of our want is a token that help is nigh. I go to fetch water."

"Alas! alas!" murmured his mother, "thou wilt find none. For our sins the Eternal hath forsaken us. We perish!"

"Forsaken us!" exclaimed Jabin, as with upraised arm he pointed to the cloudy pillar; "nay my mother, say not so: He that hath led us hither will here sustain us."

A tumult now rose on the hot air, the wildest that had yet been heard in Israel's camp, fierce tones of menace, shrill cries of suffering, and the deep, bitter, sullen upbraidings of a despairing crowd mingled together. There was a rush, angry and violent, as the meek man, Moses, bearing his slender rod, moved quietly along. A flush on his cheek bespoke emotion, that had recently found vent in an appeal to the Lord; for the people were ready to stone him; and now, obedient to the gracious answer, he approached the foot of Mount Horeb, surrounded by the seventy elders, who vainly strove to still the chiding of the multitude. It was a grievous spectacle to behold the little children with parched lips and gasping bosoms, clinging to their mothers' garments, and with faint voices imploring drink; while the very cattle moved by some new instinct, pressed upon the steps of their masters. They had but recently arrived at Rephidim, and further they could not go, for the pillar was immoveable, and until that unerring guide moved on, Moses would have yielded up his life rather that permitted them to advance a step forward. In the midst of the confused throng, young Jabin was seen bearing a capacious pitcher; his sister Rachel clasping his hand, while her other arm encircled a smaller vessel, suited to her strength. Struck by the sight, some paused, ran back, and fetched also such jars and pots as were within their reach: but the main body proceeded, loudly murmuring, chiding, and bewailing their helpless lot.

There stood a rock, isolated from the craggy mass of Horeb, and towards it Moses bent his way. "What will he now do?" impatiently, asked the fretful crowd striving to overcome a sensation of awe that stole over them; but Jabin full of confident hope made his way towards the point where Moses now paused. He spake not, that prophet of Israel, but he turned and with a brother's yearnings looked upon his people, grieving for the sin of mistrust that so tenaciously clave unto them; then he lifted his eyes for a moment to the still heaven above; and again he looked towards the camp, forming as it did the distance in a picture, where all else was rock and sand, and a dense mass of human beings, mingled with cattle and beasts of burden. He raised his rod; there was a thrill of stange and awe-struck expectation.

Down on the rock's surface, with sudden stroke, came the mysterious rod; and lo! a fountain sprang forth, yea, a river of gushing water, such as the arid desert had never seen. It gushed in measureless profusion, leaping high in air, then pouring down the plain sweeping for itself a channel; and rolled, and spread, and making many a curve, distributed its treasures far and wide.—Prostrate fell the multitude, not only to drink but to worship; and Jabin, after flinging himself on the earth in fervent adoration, held his pitcher aloft, catching a gush of the pure stream in its descent below. Dripping with the refreshing element, the brother and sister ran swiftly homewards, meeting on the way their father, who rushed by them to meet a little streamlet meandering in his view. It was delicious to behold the poor weary beasts, plunging their very heads into the tide, and lowing forth the contentment of their hearts; but who shall speak the feeling of Moses, the man of God, who, conscious that he stood in the presence of the Eternal, gave thanks and praise for Israel, the sheep of His pasture, the people of His hand.

"Jabin, hope of my house, crown of my old age, thy father asks thy forgiveness. Wonderful is thy faith—would it were also mine!"

"Nay, dear father, more wonderful is it that faith should ever fail in Israel—most wonderful that He, whose daily miracle we forget, should daily by new and greater miracles, call us to acknowledge that His mercy endureth for ever."

DOMESTIC HAPPINESS.

Ah! what so refreshing, so soothing, so satisfying as the placid joys of home!

See the traveler—does duty call him for a season to leave his beloved circle? The image of his earthly happiness continues vivid in his remembrance, it quickens him to diligence, it makes him hail the hour which sees his purpose accomplished, and his face turned towards home; it communes with him as he journeys, and he hears the promise which causes him to hope, "Thou shalt know also that the tabernacle shall be in peace, and thou shalt visit thy tabernacle and not sin." O! the joyful re-union of a divided family—the pleasures of renewed interview and conversation after days of absence.

Behold the man of science—he drops the laborious and painful research—closes his volume—smooths his wrinkled brow—leaves his study, and unbending himself, stoops to the capacities, yields to the wishes, and mingles with the diversions of his children.

Take the man of trade—what reconciles him to the toil of his business? What enables him to endure the fastidiousness and impertinence of customers? What rewards him for so many hours of tedious confinement? By and by the season of intercourse will behold the desire of his eyes and the children of his love, for whom he resigns his ease; and in their welfare and smiles he will find his recompense.

Yonder comes the laborer—he has borne the burden and heat of the day; the descending sun has released him of his toil, and he is hastening home to enjoy repose. Half way down the lane, by the side of which stands his cottage, his children run to meet him. One he carries and one he leads. The companion of his humble life is ready to furnish him with his plain repast. See his toil-worn countenance assume an air of cheerfulness! his hardships are forgotten; fatigue vanishes; he eats and is satisfied. The evening fair, he walks with uncovered head around his garden—enters again, and retires to rest! and "the rest of a laboring man is sweet whether he eat little or much." Inhabitant of this lowly dwelling! who can be indifferent to thy comfort? Peace be to this house! [Rev. W. Jay.

CAPTAIN ELLIOTT'S CONVERSION.

[The following is from Captain Elliott's speech at the late annual meeting of the American Seaman's Friend Society.]

A request has been handed me to relate the story of my conversion. I will do it as briefly as I may. My father's house was a hotel of religion, and my education was the best that piety could have bestowed. Early in life I went to sea, and was converted on a voyage from Matanzas, when I was far gone in practical infidelity and sin. It was on this wise. I had a job over the bows, and being somewhat particular about the work, I concluded to do it myself. There was a high sea rolling, but I had the jib hauled down, and over the bows I got. There I had worked for some ten minutes, sawing asunder two thick ropes, when suddenly I cast my eyes upwards at the rope. "My God," I exclaimed, "I have been hanging by an old yarn that would not hold an infant." My hair stood erect. I jumped on deck, and laughed away the fright. I was that night out at the first watch, and while walking the deck, the thought flashed upon my mind, "If the rope yarn had broken, where should you have been?" and I answered aloud, "In hell, to all intents and purposes." I dropped instantly upon my knees and cried aloud for mercy. For seven days my condition was truly awful. The captain thought I way crazy. I was praying every opportunity I could find, but found no rest. My old Bible, that had long lain on the bottom of my chest, was now drawn forth and read with intense interest. At length, one day while lying upon a yard-arm, and thinking my case hopeless, I bethought me to try again. I poured out my soul to God in the most urgent entreaties for grace to help. "Help now, Lord, or I perish." And God answered the petition. I descended to the deck a new man in Christ Jesus, and the happiness of that moment has never departed from me unto this hour. Assist then, I pray you, the sailor, with your prayers, your influence, your labor, and all you can spare of worldly goods, and at the last you shall hear the welcome words, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of my servants, ye did it unto me."

A SCENE IN SPAIN.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

It is evening, the day is gone; fast gather and deepen the shades of twilight! In the words of a German allegory, "the babbling day has touched the hem of night's garment, and, weary and still, drops asleep in her bosom."

The city awakens from its slumbers. The convent bells ring solemnly and slow. The streets are thronged again. Once more I hear the shrill cry—the rattling wheel—the murmur of the crowd. The blast of a trumpet sounds from the Puerta del Sol; then the tap of a drum—a mounted guard opens the way—the crowd doff their hats, and the king sweeps by in a gilded coach drawn by six horses, and followed by a long train of uncouth antiquated vehicles drawn by mules.

The living tide now sets towards the Prado, and the beautiful gardens of the Retiro. Beautiful are they at this magic hour. Beautiful—with the almond-tree—with the broad green leaves of the sycamore and the chesnut—with the fragrance of the orange and the lemon—with the beauty of a thousand flowers—with the soothing, calm, and the dewy freshness of evening.

I love to linger on the Prado till the crowd is gone and the night far advanced. There musing and alone I sit, and listen to the lulling fall of waters in their marble fountains, and watch the moon as it rises over the gardens of the Retiro, brighter than a northern sun. The beautiful scene dies half in shadow, half in light,—almost a fairy land. Occasionally the sound of a guitar, or a distant voice, breaks in upon my revery. Then the form of a monk, from the neighboring convent, sweeps by me like a shadow, and disappears in the gloom of the leafy avenues; and far away from the streets of the city comes the voice of the watchman telling the midnight hour.

Lovely art thou, O Night, beneath the skies of Spain. Day, panting with heat, and laden with a thousand cares, toils onward like a beast of burden; but Night, calm, silent, holy night, is a ministering angel that cools with its dewy breath the toil-heated brow; and, like the Roman sisterhood, stoops down to bathe pilgrim's feet. How grateful the gentle radiance of the moon! How grateful the delicious coolness of the omnipresent and deep-breathing air! Lovely art thou, O Night, beneath the skies of Spain!

BEAUTIFUL ALLUSION.

The Rev. J. Blackburn, in addressing the London Missionary Society, referred to the recent deaths of some of their missionaries, in the following manner:—

"I remember, in one of the tales of Miss Edgeworth, an anecdote borrowed from the proceedings of a Spanish artist, who was employed to depict the 'Last Supper.' It was his object to throw all the sublimity of his art into the figure and countenance of the Master; but he put on the table in the fore ground some chased cups, the workmanship of which was exceedingly beautiful, and when his friends came to see the picture on the easel, every one said, "What beautiful cups they are." "Ah!" said he, "I have made a mistake; these cups divert the eyes of the spectator from the Master, to whom I wished to direct the attention of the observer;" and he took his brush and rubbed them from the canvass, that the strength and vigor of the chief object might be seen as it should. I need not apply that interesting anecdote. You feel that God has taken the vessels of the sanctuary, that we may be shut up to Him who is the fountain of all good."

POWER OF THE CROSS.

BY REV. W. R. WILLIAMS.

Place yourself in imagination amid the multitude, that swayed by curiosity, or inflamed by hate, are rushing from the hall of judgment, and sweeping along their hurried and tumultuous way to the hill of crucifixion. Reeling under the insults, a meek sufferer, whose head is bound with a crown of thorns, and his face swollen with blows, and with the spewings of the mob, is treading, slowly and painfully, his way through that exasperated crowd, all athirst and ravening for his blood. He has reached the spot selected for his death. There he stands, faint, but mute and uncomplaining, whilst the cruel preparations are made that shall consummate the sacrifice. Amid shouts and taunts, and fiercest blasphemy, he is nailed and lifted up. As the cross becomes erect, and he hangs at last before that excited multitude, methinks I see exultation, like a rising breeze, ruffle that sea of upturned faces. And there he is lifted, how utterly friendless and abject to the eye of man; for even the thieves upbraid him, that hang and writhe beside him.

But were your eyes unsealed, as the prophet opened those of his servant at Dothan, you would discern, besides and above that howling rabble, a more august gathering.

INVISIBLE LEGIONS.

Legions, whose feeblest warrior would have turned to paleness the cheek of Cæsar at the head of all his hosts, are gazing there; yet withheld by some dread sentence, they do not interpose—Angels that excel in might and in glory, watch that desolate sufferer with adoring interest. That much outraged victim, seemingly rejected of man, and abandoned of God, is my Maker. In that lowly form is veiled the incarnate Godhead. The angels that smote Sennacherib's camp, and slew the first-born of Egyt, have bowed often their heads to this being, as their Lord and Creator. Excited as are his enemies, they could frame no consistent accusation against him to justify their enmity. There, under reproach, anguish cursing, dies the only one of Adam's race that knew no sin. For no guilt of his own is he suffering, but to cancel that of his murderer, man. Thus viewed, what elements of grandeur and tenderness, of the loftiest splendor and the lowliest condescension, blend in that dread sacrifice. Do men look with interest on greatness in misery? It is here. The King of glory dying as a malefactor. Are they touched with sympathy for distress? How deep was the languish even of his patient spirit, when he cried out, invoking a Father who had hidden his face. Should wisdom attract, here was the great Teacher whom all Judea had admired—speaking as never man spake—the heavenly Teacher for whom Socrates had taught himself and his scholars to hope. He is here giving his lessons on the cross. The good man dying ignominiously, of whom Plato had glimpses, is here, the exemplar of perfect innocence, enduring the treatment due to consummate wickedness.

HABIT.

Let no man fancy to himself, that he can at his own time and pleasure, subdue the evil notions of his own heart, and mortify and kill them, and turn the course of his heart another way, when he will. This is a conceit that runs in the minds of most men; but they deceive themselves: evil notions stirring in their hearts, are no weak and feeble notions, but they are strong and powerful, and the longer they continue, the stronger they grow, and by continuance they become more powerful and more prevailing; for then they have not only the devil continually to help them forward, but they have also nature and custom. [Elton.

A man once dreamed, says Jeremy Taylor, that all dreams were untrue.

"Now," says he, "if this be true, then dreams must be false; but if they are false, then I have dreamed truly," and so he went round again like a cat after its tail.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 19, 1844.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE CHRISTIAN SABBATH.

By Rev. L. Coleman, Instructor in Ecclesiastical History, Auburn Theological Seminary.

[Concluded.]

THE "SABBATH" AFTER THE REFORMATION.

We come now to the views of the Reformers. Of them Mr. C. says:

"The reformers assumed the general position, 'That neither rites of worship, nor religious solemnities, were of divine appointment or indispensably necessary; but that all these were from time to time to be adopted, or changed according to the peculiar circumstances of different churches; so that they might best promote the religious instruction, the edification and the devotions of the people.' In conformity with these views, the creeds, confessions and catechism of that period, treat all sacred seasons, including the Sabbath, as merely human institutions."

The following allusions to Luther and Calvin, we cannot pass over, although our quotations are already extended beyond our proposed limits:

"We honor the memory of Luther; we admire his transcendent genius, his lofty daring, and dauntless energy in defense of the truth; and now, after the lapse of three centuries, we stand amazed at the sight of the mighty impress of his great mind which he has left on the millions of Germany. But what thanks can they owe him for withholding from them that great day, which God has ordained to be the same through all time and equally rich in blessings to all who shall remember to keep it holy unto him. Had the true light of the Sabbath dawned on his mind, had he given to reformed Europe this priceless boon, next to redeeming grace, the noblest gift of God, how fragrant had been the name of Luther in all the earth, how sweet in heaven, the song of those countless millions more who then had come to join their blest voices before the throne in the services of an eternal Sabbath.

But there was one great reformer who had drunk deeper at the sacred fountain; one there was of more patient investigation, of calmer temper and clearer intellect. Had even his discriminating eye discerned, amidst the papal superstitions with which it was disguised, the day of God, the lost, neglected Sabbath;—had he had the discrimination to bring out the Sabbath of the Christian church from the mass of saints' days and festivals of the Romish church, where it had been disguised so long, like some ancient gem of priceless value, buried beneath the rubbish of many generations, but disinterred at last, and revealed to the admiring eye radiant still in all its original lustre,—had John Calvin given to the world this hidden treasure—The Sabbath of the Lord our God—what a benefactor would he have been to the world! To that single act we might have ascribed an influence, more permanent and various in its effect on the character and destinies of men and of nations than that of any other in the whole history of the reformation."

How true these words in application to "the Sabbath of the Lord our God!" But how insipid when applied to an institution which the Reformers held to be, and which our author has in effect acknowledged to be, a mere human ordinance!—To the present day, in Germany, as our author informs us,

"The great majority, even of the evangelical party in the church, adhere to the sentiments of their great reformer, consenting in principle and in practice to the latitudinarian principle that the Lord's day is merely a human institution, unauthorized by the word of God. It is accordingly, with the sober, religious part of the community, a day of pastime and of innocent recreation, as they call it. To such as are so inclined, it affords a convenient opportunity for attendance upon public worship; the religious observance of it is restricted to the two brief hours so employed."

THE TRUE DOCTRINE FIRST PROMULGATED.

"The Puritans, those stern defenders of the faith once delivered to the saints, to whom England is so deeply indebted for her religious liber[illegible]ties, and from whom we have received [illegible] less inheritance of our civil and religio[illegible]eges,—these have the immortal honor [illegible]ing to the Christian world the Sabbath[illegible] first asserted the divine authority of the [illegible] a clear exposition of the law of God respect[illegible] it." "The individual, who first promulgated [illegible] doctrine of the Christian Sabbath, was the [illegible] Nicholas Bound, D. D. of Norton, in the co[illegible] of Suffolk, in England." "About the yea[illegible] he published a famous book, entitled 'Sabba[illegible]um veteris et novi Testamenti, or The true Doctrine of the Sabbath.' In this book he maintained 'that the seventh part of our time ought to be devoted to God—that Christians are bound to rest on the Lord's day, as much as the Jews were on the Mosaic Sabbath, the commandment about rest being moral and perpetual; and that it was not lawful for persons to follow their studies or worldly business on that day, nor to use such pleasures and recreations as are permitted on other days.'"

This book was extensively read, and called forth several other works. The subject became the principal controversy of the age, and changed to a great extent the topics of discussion in the church. The excitement, however, seems to have somewhat subsided after a few years, and was revived again by the publication of the Book of Sports for Sunday, in 1618. Our author says:

"These measures revived the controversy respecting the morality of the Sabbath; and, at the same time, involved the adherents to this doctrine in renewed trials and persecutions. Bradbourne of Suffolk had published five years before, A Defence of the most ancient and sacred ordinance of God, the Sabbath Day. The bishop of Ely was now commanded by the king to write a refutation of this book, and Drs. Pocklington and Heylin soon followed on the same side, denying that there is any divine right or moral obligation to observe the Lord's day, and affirming that it depends entirely upon ecclesiastical authority."

Mr. Coleman's zeal in support of the newly-discovered institution seems to have led him into error here as to the sufferings of "Bradbourne of Suffolk." Theophilus Brabourne, (as his name should be,) did not suffer in defence of Sunday. On the contrary, he declared Sunday to be an "idol day," which the Puritans had set up in opposition to the Sabbath of Jehovah. The Bishop of Ely, in stating Brabourne's positions, says: "His third position is, that the Sunday, or Lord's day, is an ordinary working day; and it is superstition and will-worship to make the same the Sabbath of the fourth commandment." Such was the opinion of Theophilus Brabourne. His book, therefore, instead of being a "defence" of the new notion about Sunday, was, as it professed to be, "A Defence of the most ancient and sacred ordinance of God, the Sabbath Day," which he held to be on the seventh day of the week only. Hence his "trials and persecutions," which came, as the preface to his second book shows, more from the Puritans than from the members of the Established Church. And here it may be well to remark, that if Mr. C., with the candor which becomes a historian, had been disposed to notice the influence exerted upon the Sabbath discussions, both in Germany and England, by the observers of the seventh day, his "Historical Sketch" might have given a much truer picture of the facts. It is now over-colored and unnatural in some points where the facts would have made all plain and natural.

In concluding his sketch, Mr. Coleman assures us, that "against all opposition the Scriptural doctrine of the Sabbath continued more and more to prevail. The fury of prelatical zeal against it gradually abated; opposition ceased; and, finally, even the Church of England, and the whole nation, received the Sabbath of the Puritans as an institution of the Lord's appointment." "England, Scotland, and America, accordingly enjoy a Christian Sabbath."

CONCLUSION.

In the foregoing extracts, we have laid before our readers all of the facts and conclusions embodied in this labored article of the Auburn Professor. They establish the doctrine which our Sabbath publications have endeavored to enforce, that the observance of the first day of the week, as the Sabbath, has no warrant in the teachings of Christ, the Apostles, or the early fathers; but that it is altogether a modern notion, and one which found no favor with the leading Reformers. Coming, as the facts now do, from the highest authority, they have startled many who are not accustomed to be easily moved. A leading religious journal in New York, says, "We know of few things more calculated to bring the Lord's day into disrepute, than this essay of the Auburn Professor, bearing the imprimatur of Andover." Another thinks, that if the view here taken, that Dr. Bound "first promulgated the true doctrine of the Christian Sabbath," be just, then the day should be called—not 'the Lord's day,'—but 'Dr. Bound's day.' A third declares, that the presentation of these facts by a professed friend of the Sabbath, is an act so suicidal, that it must be attributed either to treachery or judicial blindness. But we believe there is no occasion whatever to be startled. These facts have long been known to a large class of those who exert a leading influence, and they have had their weight. It is much better that they should be brought forward now, when the subject is under discussion, than left to create disturbance and lead to inefficiency hereafter. If the Lord's day, so-called, is a mere human institution, the sooner we abandon it the better. When this takes place, men will be prepared to consider candidly the claims of the Sabbath. Feeling confident, as we do, that the only way to secure universal respect for the sabbatic institution is to return to the original day, and enforce it by Divine authority, instead of being moved by these things, we thank God and take courage.

LOOK AT THE OTHER SIDE.

"Rev. Dr. Wisner spoke of the Erie Canal, a Sabbath-[illegible]aking institution from the beginning, and now it is in[illegible]ved. So with the Post Office Department; he regretted [illegible] say it, yet it was a Sabbath-breaking institution; and now it is in trouble."

[Speech at the Saratoga Convention.

Now, suppose an objector, taking Dr. Wisner's own mode of arguing, should say: 'The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions is a Sabbath-keeping institution from the beginning, and now it is involved; therefore, Sabbath-keeping is bad policy.' How would the Doctor reply to him?

Or, suppose the objector should say, 'The Utica and Schenectada railroad is a Sabbath-breaking institution from the beginning, and now it is in a most prosperous condition; therefore, Sabbath-breaking is good policy.' How would the Doctor answer him?

It is impossible, upon the ground taken by these reformers, to answer the objections which arise in every thinking mind. And into this difficulty they are led by treating the subject superficially and unscripturally, instead of taking a position where they can say, "Thus saith the Lord."

SINGING.—Among the results of recent efforts in behalf of church music, is an increased attention to congregational singing. We are glad to see it. If singing be a part of worship, in which God is honored and we ourselves benefited, it surely should not be altogether done by proxy. Let the duty of qualifying themselves to sing correctly, be impressed upon all who have no insurmountable disabilities, and we doubt not that a tolerable degree of harmony will be secured. We are sure that many of the bickerings and heart-burnings which are now so common will be prevented.

REVIVALS AT SEA.—While a spiritual dearth has been prevalent throughout most of the churches, during the present year, it is remarkable that God has richly blessed the efforts made for the conversion of seamen. There have been repeated revivals at sea. Never, said Mr. Spaulding at a late public meeting, have the seamen been more blessed than during the past year.

Our Anniversaries.

—

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST GENERAL CONFERENCE met at Verona, on the fourth day of last week, Sept. 10. It was opened by a discourse from Eld. Wm. B. Maxson, on 1 Peter 4:7, 8—"But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer. And, above all things, have fervent charity among yourselves, for charity shall cover the multitude of sins." This discourse was designed to prepare the minds of those present for harmonious action, by showing the necessity of charity in our deliberations and benevolent efforts.

Immediately after the introductory discourse, a committee was appointed to nominate officers.—The report of that committee was presented and adopted at the opening of the afternoon session, and was as follows:

ELI S. BAILEY of Brookfield, N. Y., Moderator.
Thomas B. Brown, of Milton, Pa., } Sec's.
David Dunn, of New Market, N. J., }

The afternoon session was chiefly occupied in reading the letters from the churches, considering several petitions which they contained, and appointing the standing committees. The statistics of the churches presented many interesting and encouraging facts. They spoke of the great interest in the subject of the Sabbath which had been awakened, and gave an account of many who had commenced observing it in the course of the past year. The list of delegates which was prepared, showed an uncommonly full representation of the different sections of the denomination.

In the evening, a discourse was listened to from Eld. Samuel Davison.

FIFTH DAY, SEPT. 12.

The principal items of business in the morning, consisted in hearing and disposing of the report of the business committee, the appointment of a committee to arrange the business of the next Conference, and of another committee to prepare an Address to all evangelical denominations in America, on the subject of the Sabbath. Each of these subjects involved questions of some interest, and drew forth more or less discussion.

In the afternoon, the Corresponding Secretary's report was read, together with the letters from abroad; a committee appointed last year to publish the Baptist Address presented their report; and the report of the committee on petitions was discussed and adopted. This last report recommended the reception of the church at Clifford, Pa., into the Conference; and that the next meeting of the Conference be held with the first church in Alfred, N. Y.

SIXTH DAY, SEPT. 13.

After the appointment of Eld. W. B. Gillett to preach the introductory discourse at the next session, and disposing of some other business, a resolution was introduced, stating the importance of sustaining a denominational organ in the form of a weekly paper, and requesting that the Conference be informed of the present condition and prospects of the Sabbath Recorder. In compliance with this request, a full statement was made by the publisher; whereupon a resolution was presented, urging those who wish to favor the Sabbath cause, to exert themselves to extend the circulation of the Sabbath Recorder, as a paper which "not only needs, but highly deserves the support of all." This resolution drew forth interesting and spirited remarks from brethren Lucius Crandall, N. V. Hull, T. B. Brown, Wm. B. Maxson, James Bailey, and V. Hull. The interest awakened was gratifying, and the resolution was unanimously passed.

In the afternoon, reports were received from the committees on finance; on the state of religion; and on the foreign correspondence which had been forwarded to the Conference by the Corresponding Secretary. The latter report expressed satisfaction at the renewal of correspondence with our brethren in England, and sympathy with them in the loss of one of their ministering brethren, Rev. JOHN B. SHENSTON.

DAY OF HUMILIATION AND PRAYER.

Bro. Samuel Davison presented the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That inasmuch as the first day of November, 1843, was observed in accordance with the recommendation of this General Conference, as a day of humiliation before God, and earnest entreaty to Him to arise and plead for his Holy Sabbath, since which time a deeper and wider-spread interest upon the subject has sprung up than has ever been known in our country—therefore,

Resolved, That the 1st first day of the week in January next be observed as a day of fasting, devout acknowledgment for blessings bestowed, and earnest prayer that God would continue to plead for his holy Sabbath, and also prepare us by his Holy Spirit for the labor thus devolved upon us.

Resolved, That we invite all who love the Sabbath, and desire its better observance, to unite with us in presenting its interests at the throne of Grace.

REPORT ON THE STATE OF RELIGION.

This document speaks of considerable encouragement from the reports of the churches for the past year. The additions have been numerous in some sections of the denomination; a large number of persons have embraced the Sabbath, including several ministers of the gospel; and a deeper feeling of obligation to engage in the work of the Lord, is apparent throughout the churches.

THE ADDRESS.

An Address to all evangelical denominations, prepared by the committee appointed for the purpose, was presented and read on the evening of the first day of the week, Sept. 15. It was lengthy, and embodied much valuable matter. It spoke of the present movements in favor of the first day of the week; of the necessity of having a day, the observance of which could be enforced by divine authority; and from this, went into an examination of the authority upon which the observance of Sunday rests. The Address was listened to with deep interest and attention.

After disposing of the Address, measures were taken to ensure the opening of a correspondence with the remnants of Christians in Abyssinia, for the purpose of learning what are the encouragements to labor on their behalf.

A committee was likewise appointed to take into consideration the propriety of calling a Sabbath Convention. The committee consisted of twelve persons, who were authorized to make such arrangements as they might deem advisable.

At a late hour in the evening, the Conference adjourned, to meet with the first church in Alfred, in September, 1845.

It ought to be said, before closing this hasty sketch of the proceedings of the Conference, that a good degree of harmony characterized its deliberations. A number of meetings for preaching were held at different places in the vicinity. Those upon the Sabbath and the first day of the week, were unusually interesting. They were held in a grove near the ordinary place of worship, were attended by a large congregation, and addressed with great power. On the first day, agreeably to a notice which had been extensively circulated, Bro. N. V. Hull spoke on the subject of the Sabbath. He was followed by Br'n. Davison and Brown. The audience was attentive, and many were deeply affected. We cannot doubt, that a useful and lasting impression was made through the instrumentality of these meetings.

—

ANNIVERSARIES OF THE SOCIETIES.

GENERAL SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY.

The anniversary meeting of this Society took place on the evening after the Sabbath, Sept. 14. The business of the meeting was introduced with some remarks by the President of the Society, Lucius Crandall. These remarks were designed to show the happy adaptation of this kind of labor to the end sought. They were followed by reading the Treasurer's report. A lengthy report of the Executive Board was likewise read, which gave a full history of the labors of the Society during the year. Four agents had been employed portions of the time in distributing tracts, and advancing the interests of the Society.

Several resolutions were presented, and sustained by animated addresses. A resolution setting forth the importance of returning to the Sabbath from its connection with the Jews, was remarked upon by W. B. Maxson and W. B. Gillett. Another resolution, stating that the signs of the times admonish us to unite our energies in promulgating the truth, was sustained by N. V. Hull and G. B. Utter. A third resolution, declaring the necessity of bringing to our aid the tract effort, drew forth remarks from S. S. Griswold and V. Hull. At the close of the exercises of the evening a collection was taken up for the benefit of the Society.

—

THE MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION,

Held its anniversary on the morning of first day, Sept. 15; THOMAS B. BROWN in the chair. The report of the Executive Board was read, containing extracts from the journals of the missionaries, &c. Several resolutions were passed after some discussion, which we hope to give hereafter. Among them was one changing the time and place of the annual meeting of the Society. It is to be held at Plainfield, N. J., in May next, 1845.

THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY had two sessions during the anniversary week. These were mainly occupied in discussing the best means of settling up the affairs of the Society according to the directions given at the meeting last year.

FOREIGN MISSION MEETING.

The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions held its thirty-fifth anniversary in Worcester, Mass., last week. Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen presided.

The Treasurer's report showed the present debt of the Board to be about $20,000. The receipts during the past year have been sixteen thousand dollars less than the average of the last seven years! This deficiency is attributed to the low state of religious feeling prevalent in the churches. It was stated that twelve missionaries have arrived in this country during the year, and three have returned to their fields of labor. Twenty-five have been appointed, and 22 have gone out during the past year. The Board has now under its supervision in the various quarters of the globe about one hundred and thirty missionaries, two hundred and fifty assistant missionaries, twenty-eight thousand native communicants, thirty-three thousand scholars, thirty printing presses, with four type foundries and forty-three founts of type in different languages.

The annual sermon was preached by Albert Barnes, of Philadelphia, and is spoken of as an able production.

On the second day of the meeting, Mr. Spaulding, who has lately returned from Ceylon, gave an interesting account of the people, and the labors of the missionaries. The missionaries assist the people of Ceylon in publishing a semi-monthly paper called the Morning Star, whose columns are filled with commercial, literary and moral information and discussions. It has a circulation of 3 or 4,000. It is a novelty, and much read, and quite open to the freest discussion of religious and other subjects. He remarked also, that the TAMULS are a polite people; that their language is a smooth, harmonious, rich language, containing about fifty-eight thousand words, now arranged in a Dictionary like our Webster's; that the females, on account of the law which makes them sole owners and inheritors of property, are treated, of course, with considerable respect by the other sex. They are in all respects less degraded than heathen females generally. The prejudices against their receiving education had very considerably worn away.

Similar accounts were given of the results of labor in other places, a variety of resolutions were discussed and passed, and the whole meeting seems to have been conducted with great spirit.

POLITICS.

A writer in the Boston Recorder has undertaken to show, that the text, "Let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel," should be translated "Let your politics be as it becometh the gospel." This improved translation is well supported by the original language, and ought to prevail. Men have long enough acted upon the maxim, that "all's right in politics." Many good men have, by the influence of this maxim, been led into transactions which they felt to be inconsistent with doing every thing to the glory of God, and which they could not therefore approve. Would it not be right and useful for ministers of the gospel to enforce the duty of conducting in all civil relations "worthy of the gospel of Christ?" We are sure that this might be done, without giving any just occasion for the charge of meddling with politics; it would only be teaching men to observe the things which are written for their instruction. If at the present time, when political excitements run high, and party predilections are strong, the duty of acting conscientiously in all civil relations, were calmly presented, we believe it would do much to soften the asperities of partizans, and to keep others from falling into temptation.

MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE.—The Ministerial Conference of the Seventh-day Baptist Western Association will hold its next session with the Seventh-day Baptist Church at Friendship, on the fourth day of the week before the second Sabbath in October 1844, at ten o'clock A. M. The order of exercises embraces twenty-two subjects for essays, and discussions, and promises a rich treat to those who may be able to attend. It cannot fail to be a profitable interview.

√ We learn that Rev GILES M. LANGWORTHY has opened an independent Select School at Clarksville, Madison Co., N. Y. It commenced on Monday last, 16th inst.

THE JEWS.—The celebrated Professor Tholuck lately wrote as follows: "There have been effected more voluntary conversions of Jews in these last twenty-five years, than in the seventeen hundred years, elapsed since the days of St. Paul."

FOREIGN NEWS.

On Tuesday morning the steamship Britannia arrived at Boston, bringing London dates to September 4.

The principal topic of discussion by the British press is the rumored intention of Her Majesty to visit Ireland preparatory to an amnesty remitting O'Connell and his fellow prisoners the remaining term of their imprisonment. Whether true or not, the mere rumor has created great excitement among all parties.

The English Judges, in the case of Mr. O'Connell and the State prisoners, have confirmed the judgment given by the Irish Court of Queen's Bench.

FRANCE AND MOROCCO.—The Prince de Joinville has followed up the bombardment of Tangier by the bombardment and occupation of Mogador on the 15th. After the destruction of the town and forts, he took possession of the island and port. On this occasion the Moors do not appear to have awaited the attack of the French, but to have fired upon them before they could bring their guns to bear; and the consequence, according to the French is, that seventy-eight men, of whom seven were officers, have been killed and wounded.

It is impossible to predict what may be the final issue of this struggle, as the Emperor of Morocco is using every effort to make a successful resistance, and as there is a daily increase in the number of the Moors, who maintain the conflict with great spirit and impetuosity.

In Spain, and other parts of the continent, the belief is general that the affairs of Morocco will lead to a war between the great Powers; and in Germany it is even rumored that an alliance offensive and defensive against France has already been formed between Great Britain and Russia. The Italian insurgents are said to be watching the progress of events with unusual interest, and the Papal and Austrian Governments are adopting measures of precaution to meet contingencies. The visit of the King of Prussia to the Austrian Court is taken as a sign of a more intimate intercourse between the two great powers of Germany, and the present condition of the world proves that a rupture between France and England would not only be a war of giants, but would involve Europe in its consequences.

Many rumors are afloat as to the course which England intends to pursue in regard to the French movements at Morocco. It is said that on receiving intelligence from Mogador, Lord Aberdeen demanded of M. Guizot the evacuation of the island by the forces under the Prince de Joinville, and intimated that, in the event of a refusal to withdraw the French troops, measures would forthwith be taken in conformity with the established usage in similar circumstances.

The Liverpool Albion of August 26 announces the death of James Haggerty, Esq., United States Consul at Liverpool, on the 26th of August. Aged 54 years.

From Egypt we have some further details of the late proceedings of Mehemet Ali, but they throw no certain light upon his purpose, and indeed are contradictory in their statements of the reasons which are supposed to have led to his departure from Alexandria. Some accounts attribute his movements to a sudden fit of insanity, while others, with more probability, suggest that he has received intelligence of an intrigue against him in his own family, and that he had determined to take them by surprise. Whatever may be the cause, it is important to know by the last advices that Ibrahim Pacha had not assumed the Government, and that the country was perfectly tranquil.

General Intelligence.

From the Iowa Standard, Aug. 26.

FROM OREGON.

The following letter is from a gentleman who left this Territory for Oregon last summer. Many of the citizens of Iowa were well acquainted with him, and the statements may be relied on as substantially correct:

FT. VANCOUVER, Nov. 10, 1843.

DEAR SIR: I am here, and well pleased with the country, and avail myself of an opportunity of writing to you by Lieut. Fremont, who leaves here for the United States to-morrow. * * * *

Let me again advise you how to prepare for the journey. In the first place, turn every thing you have, (as well as all I have,) into cows, with the exception of clothing; yearlings will drive as well as old cattle; bring no steers, excepting work-cattle, let them be young, say not over seven years old; a cow from 2 to 8 years old, will sell here for 50 to 60 dollars. Kill or sell your calves before you start, as their feet wear out in the Buffalo country, where they will be valueless, and your cows will be lost by running back after them; there is a kind of foot-evil which causes lameness in the cattle, until they reach Ft. Larime, after which, but few fail; it is not worth while to have your cattle shod for working or driving; there is grass and water in abundance on the way for an indefinite number. Bring as few horses as will be necessary for driving the cattle, as one cow will buy two or three common horses in this country—the horses should be shod, and shoes and nails provided for shoeing on the route. If you could start with 500 head of cows, do not stop, come on with them. Tell Mr. Clark to turn every sheep he has into cows, except 50 of the finest wooled ones, and send them if he wishes to speculate.

Butter is from 37½ to 50 cents per lb. and will fetch that for many years in the Sandwich Islands. Beef is from 5 to 6 cents here; Pork 10 cents; Wheat $1 per bushel; Potatoes 50 cents; Turnips 50 cents; every kind of produce high; dry goods and groceries low; wages from $1 to $1,50 for common laborers; stock hogs plentiful, and of the finest kind, generally Berkshire.

Leave the States with not less than 175 lbs. of flour to each adult, and in proportion for children; 50 lbs. of bacon for each, and also rice and dried fruit.

Cows answer quite as well as oxen for working, and I think better. Bring strong two-horse wagons, one for the family, and I think oxen are preferable to horses or mules to draw it; paint the covers, as we did, so that you can sleep in it; have your tent so that it will close at both ends. Bring some of the plain flint-lock guns, with large bores, such as are saleable to the Indians; this with a few beads, paints, and trinkets will buy you a good horse after you cross the mountains, but you can sometimes get two horses for a good gun; however, a supply of horses is no object in this country, as an Indian will drive from one to two thousand at a time. Cattle are all the go, and those fine milkers. One or two cows were sold last summer for $100 per head. The country is poor and barren until you reach the blue mountains; after that the country is good for grazing and farming; the country of the Willamette cannot be beaten for health and fertility in the world. I have found all and more than all I expected; there is not a country in the world that offers more inducements to enterprise than this. I have selected the great shipping point 1 1-2 miles above the Willamette, where ships can lay along side of the bank.

* * * *

I have purchased a claim on the plains with a cabin, and five acres under cultivation within five miles of the river. I can sell lots now for $50 or $100.

Don't leave the States with more than $25 in cash, as cows are better. We found no difficulty in procuring hands to drive for their provisions. There is no danger of Indians or English, but you should keep in a good company. Take care of your cows at Cawe River, after that the Indians will not trouble them, there is no need of guarding them at night. I am, very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

M. M. McCARVER.

FRONTIER NEWS.—Four persons, who started from Chariton Co., Mo., about the 1st of June, with 104 head of cattle for the Sioux Nation, got lost and were attacked by the Lisiton Sioux, about 250 miles above St. Peters, on the St. Peters river, about the middle of August. One of the men was killed and robbed, and the Indians started off with the cattle. Bennett and Turner, two of the men in charge of the cattle, made after the Indians; but their horses giving out, they traveled on foot for five days, when in swimming an unfordable stream, Turner (who had been wounded) was drowned. Bennett, after wandering about for some time, fell in with Sleepy Eye, a friendly Indian near Swan Lake, who sent to the Mission Station at Travers de Sioux, where Bennett was taken. Intelligence of the affair was sent to Col. Bruce at Fort Snelling, who despatched men in search of the cattle. The attack was alledged by the Sioux to have been made in consequence of an attack recently made by the half-breeds, in which eight Sioux were killed.

DEATHS IN NORTH CAROLINA.—Death has been busy in the North State for a few weeks past. Four members elect to the Legislature have recently paid the great debt of mortality, to wit: Dr. Levi Walker of Caswell, Charles Brummell, Esq. of Davidson, James Harper, Esq. of Greene, and Ransom Saunders, Esq. of Johnston; together with Owen B. Cox, Esq. of Jones, and Kedar Whitley, Esq. of Johnston, both of whom were candidates for seats in the ensuing Legislature.

FATHER MATHEW.—The reason for the postponement of a visit to this country by this distinguished apostle of Temperance has been given. We are informed, by a gentleman who had an interview with Father Mathew at Dublin, a short time since, that the riots at Philadelphia were the sole cause of his change of purpose. Thus it is, that such scenes give an impression abroad that our country is unsafe even for that class of travelers whose missions are designed for works of Christian benevolence. [Express.

CROPS IN THE WEST.—The Opelousas Gazette states that in consequence of the almost annual appearance of the Caterpillar in the cotton fields of that district, many planters are making arrangements to turn their cotton gins into sugar houses. The same, we understand, is in contemplation by many planters on the Red River. The frequent partial destruction of the crops in particular neighborhoods, together with the low prices which now seem to be established for cotton, will no doubt induce many planters to turn their attention to other articles of culture. Sugar will, of course, be preferred wherever the climate will permit its growth. We have no doubt, however, that still other articles might be adopted, which would yield a better profit than cotton, or perhaps, than sugar.

NARROW ESCAPE OF BISHOP KEMPER.—The Lafayette (Ia.) Journal says: "Bishop Kemper very narrowly escaped being drowned, on Monday last. Starting from Delhi at 3 o'clock in the morning, in company with our townswan, Mr. Mason, who had forded the river about 8 o'clock the evening before, no apprehension of danger from high water was felt, until, on driving in, they soon found themselves immersed almost to their chins, and the horse unable to haul them forward. But the Bishop and Mr. Mason fortunately made the shore, on the same side they went in, by swimming. The horse was drowned.

INDIAN BATTLE.—The Editor of the St. Louis Republican learns, from a gentleman from the Missouri, that a battle took place, three or four weeks since, in the Indian territory, between a party of Sacs of the Missouri and a party of Pawnees. The latter had eight men killed and the Sacs one man. The Sacs returned to their village with five scalps. The Pawnees stole five horses from their enemy, and thus brought on the fight.

FIRST OF AUGUST IN JAMAICA.—A letter in the Pennsylvania Inquirer, dated Kingston, Aug. 8th, contains the following: "The first of August, the anniversary of negro emancipation, has passed off in the usual satisfactory manner. In the rural districts it was observed with much zest. After the religious services of the day had passed off, the remainder of the time was spent in feasting and making merry. In Spanish town, a large congregation was addressed by two ministers of the Society of Friends, who are now amongst us on a mission of benevolence."

LONG ISLAND RAILROAD.—The grand march of improvement in overcoming time and space, was most triumphantly illustrated last Saturday, from Brooklyn to Boston via Norwich. The train left Brooklyn at ten minutes after 8 o'clock, and arrived in Boston at fifteen minutes past 6 o'clock, having performed the journey of 245 miles in 9 hours and 46 minutes.

VOLUNTARY DROWNING.—A lad about 17 years of age, took off his clothes and deliberately walked into the Mississippi, opposite Notre Dame-street, and was drowned. He appeared, from what we could learn from those who saw him at the time, to be intoxicated. He told the bystanders that as he had no friends in New Orleans, he would end his troubles by a watery grave.

A MOOSE HUNT.—A stranger belonging to that family was seen to enter the woods near West Port, Essex county, in this State, a few days ago In less than half an hour, some 25 or 30 citizens surrounded the woods. After various manœuvres it was driven into the main road, and then closely pursued by swift horses for more than a mile, when it stumbled and fell to the ground, and immediately the contents of two rifles were discharged in its head. Its weight was 815 pounds; height, 6 feet 8 inches. The meat was neatly dressed, and liberally divided among the inhabitants, and many pronounced it superior to the best beefsteak.

FISHERMEN.—Capt. Finney, of the schooner Vesper, at Plymouth, from the Banks, reports fish very scarce on the Banks; took only 3000 the last four weeks. The Bank fishermen are returning with poor fares, finding few fish, and those small; while those from the Straits return with full fares, caught in much less time than usual. But few vessels have been fitted out at Plymouth this season for the mackerel fishery, owing to the great uncertainty and repeated failures in that business for years past.

LATEST FROM TEXAS.—The N. O. Picayune, of Sept. 8, says: At an early hour yesterday morning a Texan vessel, the schooner Star, arrived at this port twelve days from Galveston, having on board Mr. E. O. Corr, with despatches for the U. States Government, and for the British and French Ministers at Washington city. The despatches are supposed to refer to the invasion of Texas. Gen. Wool, with some 10,000 of the advance detachment of the Mexican army, has, it is said, arrived on the banks of the Rio Grande. The despatches were forwarded by yesterday's mail. This is indeed deeply interesting intelligence, and may be supposed to have created great excitement in Texas. It is, however, but a rumor.

The British government is about to take strong measures for the prevention of the New York packets and other ships taking out letters; and to require them all to go in the mail bags of the Cunard steamers.

It is said that the U. S. mail from Boston to this city, came through the other day with only two letters!

It is said there are 2000 newspapers published in the United States, at an estimated cost of six millions of dollars per annum. The yearly circulations are five hundred millions of copies, more than a million and a half every day.

The receipts on the Long Island Railroad are estimated to be over $800 per day—near $300,000 per annum.

A laboring man named Henry Dewey, went into a rum shop on Sunday afternoon, kept by a man named Hovey, and as he entered the door he fell down dead. He was accustomed, it is said, to drinking near a quart of liquor at a time. The jury of inquest returned a verdict of "death in a fit caused by intemperance." [New Haven Pall.

The London papers of the 19th ult. contain accounts of the execution of Catharine Bien and Bridget Langan, at Roscommon, Ireland, for murder. Seven thousand persons were present, of whom about four thousand were women. The culprits did not appear to feel their awful situation. One of them laughed and chatted up to the very moment that the drop fell.

A part of the steam apparatus of one of the woollen factories in Saxonville, Mass., exploded last week. The explosion was sudden and violent, and destroyed the engine and the small building in which it stood. The damage is estimated at $2000 or $3000.

A dividend of twenty per cent. upon all claims against the Commercial Bank of Buffalo, which have been presented to and allowed by the Receiver, has been declared, payable on the first day of October next, at the office of the Receiver in Buffalo.

The 'Anti-Rent' party of Rensselaer County held a convention at Sandlake on the 12th to decide on the expediency of running a County ticket this Fall.

An advertisement has been published calling on the creditors of the Southern Life and Trust Co. to send in their claims.

The amount of Duties paid at this port for the week ending last Saturday was $689,542 30.

It is expected that there will soon be a regular line of steamers running between this city and Philadelphia by sea, a steamboat leaving each port every other day.

The amount of tolls collected at Oswego from the opening of navigation to Sept. 1st, 1843 and 1844, have been as follows:

To September 1, 1844	$77,965 84
To September 1, 1843	40,209 77
Increase	$37,756 08

Rev. Wilson Conner, says the Ohio Cross and Journal, a worthy and most successful minister among the Baptists in Georgia, fell dead in the pulpit, on the fifth Sunday in June last, just at the close of an animated sermon to a crowded audience, from these words: "Verily, verily I say unto you, the hour is coming and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live."

Com. Lothrop, of the Texas Navy, whose death was lately announced, was a native of Utica. His father was cashier of the Ontario Branch Bank, and his borther-in-law is C. P. Kirkland, of that place.

Two hundred persons have died of yellow fever at Galveston during the four weeks ending August 14.

Mr. Van Zandt, the Texan Minister to the United States, has taken leave of the Executive of our Government.

Three hundred barrels of flour are daily manufactured at the steam mill in Brooklyn.

The Assignees of the Girard Bank have a public sale of a portion of their assets in Philadelphia on the 17th inst.

The corner stone of the new edifice of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was laid on Saturday, in Boston, with appropriate ceremonies.

Mrs. Gen. Harrison was robbed of a favorite gold watch lately by a set of burglars who broke into her dwelling.

Mr. Frazee Ayres, of Middlesex, in getting off the cars from Philadelphia at Uniontown, near Rahway, fell from the platform and tore the scalp from one side of his head. The skull did not appear to be broken, and the injury, though severe, is not supposed to be mortal.

A correspondence has made its appearance between a committee of the Chamber of Commerce and the Postmaster General, in which the latter avows distinctly his desire for a reduction of postage.

ACCIDENT AT THE NEW ORLEANS DRY DOCK.—The fine steamer Brilliant was seriously injured at the Dry Dock opposite New Orleans, on the night of the 3d inst. She had been raised for repairs upon the dry dock of Messrs. Bailey & Macy, nine feet above the bottom of the deck. During the night the blocks gave way and she fell with a tremendous crash, breaking down her guards and chimneys, and destroying her cabin furniture. The Picayune says:

The dry dock will narrowly escape ruin, so severe was the shock. At our last accounts it was still under the steamboat, with its sides sprung open and leaking rapidly. The Brilliant cost $35,000, and the dry dock $53,000. The great difficulty appeared to be to get the Brilliant out of the dock. In the fall she broke in the bottom of the dock, and raked herself in such a manner that it will be with extreme difficulty that they will be kept afloat. The engines however, had succeeded in clearing the Brilliant, when it was found she had but one hole in her hull. It was thought she could be removed.

FRUITS OF SLAVERY.

The following letter, written from the dominion of slavery, exhibits in a strong light one of the natural results of that abominable system. We copy from the Advocate of Moral Reform.

* * * "You wish me to give you my 'first impressions' of men and things in A——. I am not sure that this would be wise, for first impressions are very apt to prove incorrect, on farther investigation, and this is emphatically true of one who for the first time visits the sunny South. To a Northerner, there is an indescribable charm in the chivalric politeness, the frank and cordial hospitality, and the warm kindness which every where greet the stranger, that is very apt to destroy, for a season at least, the power of seeing accurately and judging impartially. In my own case, this has certainly been so, for I often found myself mentally inquiring, "Can it be, that such evils exist in a state of society like this, as those of which I have heard and read at the North? Surely misrepresentation and prejudice have been at work to produce alienation and distrust." In this state of anxiety and skepticism, I became acquainted, (I was going to say accidentally, but the hand of Providence was in it,) with one who knew the subjects of the following narrative, every word of which is strictly true. The sisters were said to be most interesting girls—graceful and elegant in their manners, and not darker than many a brunette at the North, who ranks among the most brilliant and admired of the sex. Poor girls! as I listened to their story, and thought of their wrongs, the enchantment by which I was surrounded all vanished, the splendors faded away, and the cold stern reality of shame, dishonor, and sin, took their place. Let me tell you their short, but sad story, and you shall judge for yourself of the impression it produced on me.

Mr. H. was a New Englander by birth and education, who in early life went to the South, and there established himself in a lucrative business. He became in time attached to Southern habits and manners, and giving up his long cherished plan of returning home with a competency, became a permanent resident in one of the large Southern cities. Previous to his leaving home, he was considered a young man of excellent principles, but he had been so long accustomed to look upon the slaves by whom he was surrounded, as born only to minister to the pleasure of their masters, that he felt no hesitation in forming with one of these unfortunate beings a connection the most dishonorable. She was a quadroon, beautiful, and tolerably well educated, and was purchased by Mr. H. at an immense price from her father! the owner of a neighboring estate. Mr H. never married, for he was strongly attached to the confiding creature who lived but in his presence, and to whom his slightest wish was a law, though his 'bachelor establishment' was considered the abode of refinement, taste, and elegant hospitality through all the country round.

His two daughters received every advantage of education which wealth could procure, and grew up uncommonly lovely and interesting ladies, in spite of the mixed blood that flowed in their veins. It seems never to have occurred to the fond father, whose idols they were, that as the daughters of a slave, his proud and gifted children must follow the condition of their mother, in the event of his death—yet such was the case. While he lived, an act of manumission for her who was in all but the name, his wife, seemed a needless formality, and he little recked that death was so near.

In an unexpected moment, the king of terrors came—and Mr. H., in the prime of life, and in the midst of his schemes of honor and pleasure, was summoned to his final account. In the first wild burst of anguish that overwhelmed his family, they thought not of the evils to which they were exposed in consequence of the blow that had deprived them of a husband and father, but they were doomed to feel their full force. He had died insolvent, and when his brother came on from the North, to settle the estate, he found to his horror, that his beautiful and accomplished nieces were considered a part of the personal property, and as such, appraised by the creditors at so high a rate, that it was impossible for him to redeem them. Like their poor mother, they were reserved for a fate, worse to every virtuous woman than death itself. In common with hundreds of interesting and intelligent young females in Louisiana. Mississippi, and the West India Islands, whose mixed blood prevents them from forming honorable connections in life, these unfortunate sisters are now the mistresses of wealthy planters, liable at any moment to be sold and sent to a returnless distance, from all they have ever known or loved.

You may not, indeed you cannot, at such a distance, realize the impression produced by this story on one who is in the immediate neighborhood of its occurrence. Can a state of society which tolerates such things be favorable to purity of heart or life? Only imagine a New England village to have been the scene of this transaction, and you can then form some idea of its moral bearings. Think of your own S. and J, fondly cherished and carefully reared as they have been, deprived by death of their natural protector, seized for debt as a part of the estate, and sold into the harem of some wealthy libertine, without any earthly resource from his tyranny or caprice. What think you would be the state of public sentiment, if an outrage like this were perpetrated in your midst? Thank God, such an act can never stain the soil of free New England; for could a wretch be found blackhearted enough to make the attempt, a torrent of righteous indignation would overwhelm him ere his work was well begun. What, then, must be the influence of the system of slavery here, when high-minded, honorable men, and noble, virtuous women, can look on calmly, and speak in terms of indifference of deeds such as I have imperfectly described. What to them are the blighted hopes, the crushed affections, the shame, the anguish, the hopeless ruin of these victims of avarice and lust? The taint of African descent is upon them, and presents an insuperable barrier to the full tide of human sympathy that would otherwise flow out at the recital of their miseries. Their complexion is darker than ours; ergo, they are insensible to shame and dishonor, and incapable of feeling the extent of their own misery and degradation.

I sometimes almost wish that this were indeed the case—but nothing can be farther from the truth than such a view of the subject. Their hearts are as warm, their affections as ardent, and their sensibilities as keen as those of their proud oppressors; but who is there to care, if the tortured heart-strings break, in the strong effort to repress emotions, whose outward expression would be a crime? Alas, on one side there is power, absolute and irresponsible; on the other, the most entire helplessness and dependence. Those who know what human nature is, will cease to wonder that under such circumstances, occurrences like that we have described should take place.

Another circumstance, related to me by a young lady with whom I travelled a short distance, and who was herself the subject of the story, furnishes a curious illustration of this state of things. Were not the subject so serious, the anecdote would be only a source of amusement.

Miss M., the lady referred to, was originally from the Empire State, but had been for some years a resident of Texas, whither she went in company with a brother. She was on a visit of some length in the family of Mr. A., one of the founders of the Republic, and being very fond of children, frequently amused herself with drawing the infant about the grounds, while the rest of the merry group accompanied her in her rambles. She had one day taken the child from its sable nurse, and was drawing its little wagon along a shaded path, when at a distance she saw a cavalier approaching on horseback, whom she knew by his short cloak and sombrero, to be a Mexican of Spanish descent. He stopped as he came up to the little party, and made several inquiries of Miss M. about Mr. A., the the way to the house, &c., and among other things, asked her, rather abruptly, if she belonged to Mr. A.? Not exactly understanding the question, she answered in the affirmative, for there was something in his manner she disliked, and she was anxious to get rid of the intruder. He passed on, and she thought no more of the circumstance, until on her return home. Mrs. A. met her with a smile, and advised her to prepare for conquest, as General Z. was in the house, an unmarried and wealthy planter, to whom she would be introduced at dinner. When at dinner time, she entered the room with Mrs. A. and was introduced to the gentleman, he started, changed color, and exhibited a perturbation, for which no one could account. This constraint and agitation affected all the company, and there was a general feeling of relief when the uncomfortable meal was concluded. The General not long after, left the house, and Mr. A., almost convulsed with laughter, came to the ladies to explain the cause of his sudden fright. It seems that soon after his arrival, he took occasion to inquire of Mr. A. if he owned the child's nurse whom he had met in the grounds. Entirely ignorant of Miss M's. proceedings, Mr. A. answered in the affirmative. "Would you sell her?" inquired the General; "I have taken a fancy to the girl, and will give any price you choose to name." Surprised at the request, Mr. A. named a large sum for the girl, who was in reality young, and though dark, rather prepossessing in her appearance. The bargain was concluded, when, to the surprise and dismay of the gentleman, he was introduced to the supposed nurse, as Miss M., a friend and inmate of the family. His reproaches, after the ladies had left the room, gave Mr. A. the first intimation of the mistake into which he had fallen, which was fully explained by Miss M., the unconscious subject of this novel transaction. The fate to which she was destined by her purchaser, was perfectly understood by all the parties, yet, had the colored woman alone been concerned, not one of them would probably ever have given a second thought to the matter. She was a slave, and therefore her virtue was not worth preserving. Indeed, I have had ample evidence, that any regard for chastity on the part of these poor females, is considered unpardonable, affectation and arrogance, even by those of their own sex, who, for their superior knowledge and standing in society should be the guardians and protectors of these unfortunates. What kind of process can it be, which renders the heart of woman callous to the wrongs and indignities suffered by her colored sister, when, if the same were offered to one of the Anglo Saxon race, every emotion of the soul would be roused to vehement action? If any thing were wanting to fill up the measure of my abhorrence of the whole system of Slavery, the knowledge of the injury it has done to woman, the mistress no less than the slave, would do it, for sure I am, that whatever tends to weaken the moral sense of my own sex, tends in the same ratio, to deteriorate society at large."

MARRIED,

In Clarence, by Eld. N. V. Hull, Mr. HARRISON THOMAS, to Miss LYDIA HUNT, all of Clarence.

LETTERS.

Jonathan F. Randolph, George B. Clarke, John D. Collins, Jeremiah Barritt, James R. Irish, Jason B. Wells, Benjamin Clark.

POSTMASTERS—West Genesee, Otselic, Cuyler, Ulysses, Pa., Cowlesville.

RECEIPTS.

New Salem, Va.—Wm. F. Randolph, Jonathan F. Randolph, Jesse F. Randolph, Jepthah F. Randolph, $2 each.
New London, Ct.—Peleg . Berry, $2.
Reservation, Jeremiah Barritt, $2.
Londonderry, Vt.—B. Sumner, $1.
Wellsville.—Clark Witter $2.
Alfred—George Maxson, Asa Burdick, Alfred Lewis, Freeborn Hamilton, Amos Burdick 3d, Benjamin Collins, Ezra Potter, Roxana Coon, E. Potter, (clothier,) Jeremiah Burdick, Nathan Truman, Elijah Lewis, James H. Cochran, $2 each; B. W. Millard $1.
Sackett's Harbor—Judith Clark, Holly W. Maxson, Elias Frink, $2 each.
Otselic—Francis Tallett $2.
Rome—J. H. Hazard $1 75.
Adams—Barton Whitford, David Maxson, $2 each.
Adams Center—Pardon Babcock $2.
Verona—Dea. Thos. Williams, D. P. Williams, $2 each.
De Ruyter—L. H. Babcock $1; S. S. Coon, Wid. Elisha Stillman, $2 each.
Whitestown—Reuben Wilcox $2; Francis Wilcox $1.
Shiloh, N. J.—Solomon Carpenter $2.
Coudersport, Pa.—J. A. R. Greenman $2.
New Market, N. J.—John Pope $2.
Little Genesee—Daniel Edwards $2; P. Lackey $1.
Higginsville—Waite Williams $2.
Sweden—Rowland Saunders $2.
Westerly, R. I.—Dea. Ethan Stillman $2.
Lairdsville—C. A. Osgood $2.
Leonardsville—G. R. Babcock $2; W. B. Maxson $1.
Cowlesville—Mark Robinson $2.
Ross Centre, Mich.—Albert Eldred $2.
Alden -Ethan Saunders $1 50.
Broadalbin—Ann S. Clark $2.
Petersburgh—Azor Estee $2.
Oxford—Ethan Rogers, Clark Rogers, Nathan Rogers, $2 each.
New London—Henry Williams, Jr., Hiram Williams, $1 each.
Sackett's Harbor—N. R. Truman 50c.
Scott—R. G. Burdick $1.
Oriskany—Dr. W. A. Babcock $2.

☞ Among the receipts from Shiloh, N. J., last week, John Bonham should have been Jehu Bonham.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

NEW YORK MARKET, SEPT. 16.

At market, 1400 Beef Cattle, 325 from the South, 30 Cows and calves, and 3350 Sheep and Lambs.

PRICES.—Beef Cattle are a little higher, ordinary $4 50 a 4 75, and prime $5 25 a 5 50.

Cows and Calves are a little dearer; $16 a $28, and all sold.

Sheep and Lambs.—The market was cleared at 1 a $2 75 for Lambs, and 1 50 a $4 for Sheep.

Hay.—A large supply at last week's rates, viz: 4 a 5 shillings per cwt.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 12 a 4 18
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 00a24 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	8 50 a 9 50
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 50 a 5 50
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8¼a 8¾
DOMESTICS
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	- a —
Stripes, fast colors	- a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14½a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12¼a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4½@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 50 @ 2 62
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	10.37 @10 50
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 25 @ 4 31
Troy	4 18 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 25 a 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 a
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	88 @ 95
Do South new	94
Rye, Northern	63 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	48 @ 47
Barley N R	@
Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A.& RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14¼
Damaged	12½@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@1500
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 25 @ 5 62
Do prime	3 25 @ 3 50
Pork mess bbl	9 75 @ 9 87
Do prime	8 12 @
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13
Trieste in boxes	6¼a
American	5 a
Spring	5¼a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8½a 9½
Do Brown	6½a 8½
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¼
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17½a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6½a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7½
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
n plates ¼ X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	38 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 36
No. 1	31 a 32
No. 2	24 a 26

Miscellaneous.

THE CRIMINAL.

The dungeon walls were dark and high,
The narrow pavement bare,
No sunlight of the blessed sky
Might ever enter there:
In all the melancholy weeks
The prisoner chained had lain,
No breath of heaven had kissed his cheeks,
Or cooled his fevered brain.

* * * * * *

His mother heard his final doom,
With shrieks that thrilled through all—
Oh! could naught save him from the tomb?
Must he—must he! thus fall?
The arrow pierced her aged head,
With cold and deadly pain;
She tottered senseless to her bed,
And never rose again!

His father spoke not—but the pale
And quivering lip confessed,
The agonies which did assail
His miserable breast;
His eyes were closed, as if the light
Was loathsome to behold;
But tears burst from the lids to sight—
They could not be controlled!

Fast flew the fatal hours—he trod
Life's very brink, alone;
Yet had no hope—no fear—no God!
His heart was turned to stone.
I saw him as he passed along,
A branded death to die;
Wild curses were upon his tongue—
Despair, and blasphemy!

If there be one these lines may teach
A moral, not in vain
Have I endeavored thus to reach
A more reflective strain;
The picture is from life—each day
As sad a tale records:
Virtue! may thy eternal ray
Light all our deeds and words!

CHARLES SWAIN.

A BURNING FOREST.

The following graphic picture of an occasional western scene, was given to Audubon, the American Ornithologist, by a back-woods hunter, at whose cabin he passed a night.

It is a difficult thing, sir, to describe; but I will do my best to make your time pass pleasantly. We were sound asleep, one night, in a cabin about a hundred miles from this, when about two hours before day, the snorting of the horses, and lowing of the cattle, which I had ranged in the woods, suddenly awakened us. I took my rifle, and went to the door to see what beast had caused the hubbub, when I was struck by the glare of light, reflected on all the trees before me, as far as I could see through the woods. My horses were leaping about, snorting loudly, and the cattle ran among them, with their tails raised straight over their backs. On going to the back of the house, I plainly heard the crackling made by the burning brushwood, and saw the flames coming towards us in a far extended line. I ran to the house, told my wife to dress herself and child as quickly as possible, and take the little money we had, while I managed to catch and saddle the two best horses. All this was done in a very short time, for I guessed that every moment was precious to us.

We then mounted and made off from the fire. My wife, who is an excellent rider, stuck close to me; my daughter, who was then a small child, I took in one arm. When making off, as I said, I looked back and saw the frightful blaze was close upon us, and had already laid hold of the house. By good luck there was a horn attached to my hunting clothes, and I blew it, to bring after us, if possible, the remainder of my live stock, as well as the dogs. The cattle followed for a while, but before an hour had elapsed, they all ran as if mad through the woods—and that, sir, was the last of them. My dogs, too, though at all other times extremely tractable, ran after the deer that in hordes sprang up before us, as if fully aware of the death that was so rapidly approaching.

We heard blasts from the horns of our neighbors as we proceeded, and knew that they were in the same predicament. Intent on striving to the utmost to save our lives, I thought of a large lake, some miles off, which might possibly check the flames; and urging my wife to whip up her horse, we set off at full speed, making the best way we could over the fallen trees and brush heaps, which lay like so many articles placed on purpose to keep up the terrific fire that advanced with a broad front upon us.

By this time we could feel the heat, and we were afraid that our horses would drop every instant. A singular kind of breeze was passing over our heads, and the glare of the atmosphere shone over the daylight. I was sensible of a slight faintness, and my wife looked pale. The heat had produced such a flush in the child's face, that when she turned towards either of us, our grief and perplexity were greatly increased. Ten miles, you know, are soon gone over on swift horses; but notwithstanding this, when we reached the borders of the lake, covered with sweat and quite exhausted, our hearts failed us. The heat of the smoke was insufferable, and sheets of blazing fire flew over us in a manner beyond belief. We reached the shores, however, coasted the lake for a while, and got round on the lee side. There we gave up our horses, which we never saw again. Down among the rushes we plunged by the side of the water, and laid ourselves flat, to wait the chance of escaping from being burned or devoured. The water refreshed us, and we enjoyed the coolness.

On went the fire, rushing and crashing through the woods. Such a sight may we never see!—The heavens themselves, I thought, were frightened, for all above us was a red glare mixed with clouds of smoke, rolling and sweeping away. Our bodies were cool enough, but our heads were scorching, and the child, who now seemed to understand the matter, cried so as nearly to break our hearts.

The day passed on, and we became hungry.—Many wild beasts came plunging into the water beside us, and others swam across to our side and stood still. Although faint and weary, I managed to shoot a porcupine, and we all tasted its flesh.—The night passed I cannot tell you how. Smouldering fires covered the ground, and the trees stood like pillars of fire, or fell across each other. The stifling and sickening smoke still rushed over us, and the burnt cinders and ashes fell thick around us. How we got through that night, I really cannot tell, for about some of it I remember nothing. Towards morning, although the heat did not abate, the smoke became less, and blasts of fresh air sometimes made their way to us. When morning came, all was calm, but a dismal smoke still filled the air, and the smell seemed worse than ever. We were now cool enough, and shivered as if in an ague-fit; so we removed from the water and went up to a burning log, where we warmed ourselves. What was to become of us I did not know. My wife hugged the child to her breast, and wept bitterly; but God had preserved us through the worst of the danger, and the flames had gone past, so I thought it would be both ungrateful to Him and unmanly to despair now. Hunger once more pressed upon us, but this was easily remedied. Several deer were still standing in the water up to the head, and I shot one of them. Some of its flesh was soon roasted; and, after eating it, we felt wonderfully strengthened.

By this time the blaze of the fire was beyond our sight, although the ground was still burning in many places, and it was dangerous to go among the burnt trees. After resting awhile and trimming ourselves, we prepared to commence. Taking up the child, I led the way over the hot ground and rocks; and after two weary days and nights, during which we shifted in the best manner we could, we at last reached the "hard woods" which had been free of the fire. Soon after we came to a house, where we were kindly treated for a while. Since then, sir, I have worked hard and constantly as a lumberer; but thanks be to God, here we are safe, sound, and happy.

HOUSE OF DEATH AT FRANKFORT.

In a cemetery of Frankfort, a very tasteful imitation of Pere la Chaise, there stands a large building, handsomely finished, and in very correct style of Roman architecture, which is called the "Recovery-house," being neither more nor less than an institution devoted to the dead, for the purpose of giving them every opportunity of returning to life again, should they feel disposed. The appartments are furnished with all the luxurious elegance of the best of houses; the beds are decorated with carving and inlaying; the carpets are soft and noiseless to the tread, and in fact, few of those who live and breathe, are surrounded by such appliances of enjoyment. Beside each bed there stands a small table, in which certain ivory keys are fixed, exactly resembling those of the piano-forte. On these the hands of the dead person are placed as it lies in the bed; for, instead of being buried, he is conveyed here, after supposed death, and wrapped up in warm blankets, while the temperature of the room itself is regulated by the season of the year. The slightest movement in the fingers would press down one of the keys which communicate with a bell at the top of the building, where resides a doctor, or rather two doctors, who take it watch and watch, ready at the summons to afford all the succor of their art. Restoratives of every kind abound, all that ingenuity can devise in the way of cordials and stimulants as well as a large and admirable equipped staff of servants and nurses, whose cheerful aspect seems especially intended to reassure the patient, should he open his eyes once more to life. The institution is a most costly one. The physicians, selected from the higher practitioners of Frankfort, are most liberally remunerated, and the whole retinue of the establishment maintained on a footing of even extravagant expenditure. Of course, I need scarcely say, its benefits, if such they be, are reserved for the wealthy only. Indeed I have been told the cost of this "lying in state" exceeds that of the most expensive funeral, four-fold.—Sometimes there is a great difficulty in obtaining a vacant bed. Periods of epidemic diseases crowd the institution to such a degree, that the greatest influence is exerted for a place. Now one naturally asks, what success has this system met with, to warrant this expenditure, and continue to enjoy public confidence? None whatever. In seventeen years which one of the resident doctors passed there, not one case occured of restored animation, nor was there reason to believe that, in any instance, the slightest sign of vitality ever returned. The physicians themselves make little scruple at avowing their incredibility concerning its necessity, and surprised me by the freedom with which they canvassed the excellent, but mistaken notions of its founders.

THE POTATOE.

It is now pretty generally understood that the potatoe is indigenous to Chili and Peru, in which country it grows wild. The plant is very common about Valparaiso, and Mr. Cruikshank says he has noticed it long the coast for fifteen leagues to the northward of that port. There is one peculiarity ascribed to the wild plant, by this gentleman, viz: that the flowers are pure white, from the purple tint so common in the cultivated varieties. Amidst conflicting testimony, and opinions on the subject, we must give to Walter Raleigh the credit of introducing the potatoe. Its introduction by him into Ireland, in 1610, is well authenticated by corroborative testimony. Among the ancedotes told of this enterprising voyager, it is said that when his gardener at Young Hall, in the county of Cork, had reared to full maturity of "apples," the potatoes which he had received from the knight, as a fine fruit from America, the man brought to his master one of the apples and asked if that were the fine fruit. Sir Walter having examined it, was, or feigned to be, so dissatisfied that he ordered the weed to be rooted out. The gardener obeyed, and in rooting out the weeds, found a bushel of potatoes.

The discrepancy of opinions, respecting the date of the introduction of the potatoe into Europe, seems to have arisen from confounding the common with the sweet potatoe. The latter was introduced into Europe long before the former, and it seems most probably that it was the species brought from New Grenada by Hawkins.

Potatoes were first looked upon as a great delicacy, and cultivated by but very few. The Royal Society, in 1663, encouraged a more extensive cultivation of them, as a means of preventing famine. Previously, however, to 1684, they were raised only in the gardens of the nobility and gentry; but in that year, they were planted, for the first time, in the open fields in Lancashire—a country in which they have ever since been very extensively cultivated. Their growth was more rapidly extended in Ireland than in England, and they have long furnished from two-thirds to four-fifths of the entire food for the people of Ireland. Potatoes were not raised in Scotland, except in gardens, till 1728, when they were planted in the open field by a person by the name of Prentice, a day laborer at Kilsyth.

AN INGENIOUS EXPEDIENT.

The church in the village of Western, England, was erected in the fourteenth century. In 1630, and again about ten years since, the building was considerably injured by lightning. From age and casualties, the north wall had declined outwardly 19 inches from the perpendicular, and threatened the utter destruction of the building. Under the superintendence of an architect this wall (the weight of which had been calculated at 240 tons) has been brought up to the perpendicular, by the process of expanding by heat three bars of iron, 2 1-2 inches in diameter, which traversed and connected both walls of the church. These bars (which had screws worked on one end of them and projected beyond the south wall) were enclosed in cast iron boxes filled with lighted charcoal. When the bars were fully expanded by the heat, the screws were wound up firmly to the undamaged south wall. The charcoal boxes were then removed, and the process of cooling commenced. Gradually the bars, contracting equally with their previous expansion, compelled the whole mass of the wall to follow the irresistible power now exerting itself, and in four successive operations the whole wall rose to its original perpendicular.

SNAKE CATCHERS.

The secret of rendering docile the most venomous serpents, which has so long been in the possession of the natives of Western India, is not unknown in China. It is observed that the native snake catchers here rub their hands, previous to taking hold of the snake, with an antidote, composed of pounded herbs. The virtue of the preparation is such that they hold with the naked hand, and provoke fearlessly, the deadly corba di capella, or spectacle viper, which, next to the rattlesnake, is perhaps one of the most dangerous reptiles in existence. This serpent, in common with others of a similar nature, is not unfrequently met with in Canton, in the possession of those men, who, for a trifling gratuity, exhibit them to the curious spectator.

THE MOTHER OF NAPOLEON.

The family of Napoleon, says Allison, though noble, had not been distinguished, and had suffered severely from misfortune. The mother of the great captain, who was marked by great beauty, and no common firmness and intrepidity of mind, shared in the dangers and fatigues of her husband, at a period of great trial, and was engaged with him on some expeditions on horseback. His father died at the age of thirty-eight—but the want of paternal care was more than supplied by the mother, to whose early education and solicitude, Napoleon in after life ascribed his elevation. On one occasion he expresssed his opinion that the future good or bad conduct of the child, depends entirely on the mother. Though left a widow in the prime of life, the mother of Napoleon had already borne thirteen children, of whom five sons and three daughters survived their father. She lived to see one of them wearing the crown of Charlemagne, and another seated on the throne of Charles V.

KINDNESS.

Be kind to all who feel interested in your welfare and are laboring for your good. A harsh word, an angry look, or the least indifference may plant a sting in their bosoms. There is nothing so wounding to the feelings as to receive an unkind expression from one we love, and to promote whose welfare we have spared no time and withheld no effort.

Somebody who writes more truthfully than poetically, says—an angel without money, is not thought half so much of now-a-days, as a devil with a bag full of guineas.

"THEN GIVE ME DEATH."

A most striking anecdote was related by a speaker in New Haven reported in the Fountain, which fully demonstrates that nobility of purpose and firmness, even in the face of death, is not to be found on the battle-field alone. A gentleman who had been a member of the bar of the county, but who, in consequence of his intemperance, had been sunk to the lowest degree of degradation, and was banished from the bar, reformed two years since, through the influence of the pledge, and was among the first to form a Washingtonian Society. Last December he was associated with the gentleman who related the circumstance, as counsel in an important case, and his return to the bar was hailed with delight by all who knew him. But it was his last effort. He was taken sick soon after, and when near his end, his physician thought proper that he should take some brandy, for the purpose of stimulating and bearing him up a little. He was not so far gone as not to understand the nature of the prescription. Addressing his physician he asked, "Is there no hope for me, but in taking this brandy?" "No, sir," said the physician, "the brandy may prolong your life a little, but there is no hope of your recovery." The sick man raised his emaciated frame in the bed and exclaimed, "then give me death!" and falling back on his pillow, breathed no more.

[Chrystal Fount.

THE WELCOME SABBATH.

Return, thou wished and welcome guest;
Thou day of holiness and rest!
Thou best, the dearest of the seven,
Emblem and harbinger of heaven!

BUT HE IS A GENTLEMAN.

Not long since, I chanced to hear a short dialogue between a mother and her daughter, who had just arrived at the age of sweet sixteen, on the propriety of associating with a certain individual who was not named, but whom the mother seemed anxious that her daughter should shun. From what I could learn from the conversation, it seemed that the individual in question possessed a prepossessing exterior, dressed well, was finished and affable in his manners, had managed to keep his stand in what is generally termed good society, in consequence of his winning ways, but who was, nevertheless, a heartless, depraved wretch—a debauchee—and a notorious gambler. It was after these qualities of the man had been portrayed by the anxious mother, as a warning to her inexperienced daughter, that the artless girl exclaimed, as though she had hit upon a reason that more than outweighed all her mother's objections—

"But he is a gentleman!"

These words struck my mind forcibly, nor will the honest simplicity with which they were uttered be soon effaced. "But he is a gentleman!" What then? Why, these cannot be vices—a gentleman would not practice any thing that is not proper, is undoubtedly the conclusion to which the unsophisticated mind of the girl at once arrived. How much misery, how much disappointment, and how much overwhelming sorrow and regret, has this short sentence caused in the world. How many heartless villains are there who move in the first circles, and whose characters are known to be infamous, and yet hold up their heads for no other reason than because they are "gentlemen!" that is to say, they possess the exterior of gentlemen, a comely person, affable manners, and a good suit of clothes! How few there are who look beyond these accomplishments in forming their estimate of character! Let a man be ever so corrupt—let his private character be what it may—if he only possesses the little external accomplishments, it will not answer, under the present constitution of society, to censure him, for 'he is a gentleman!'

But, let a female wander from the path of virtue and propriety—nay, let her even be suspected, though she may be ever so charming, this grand salvo, 'But she is a lady,' will not be sufficient to cover her failing. Such a certificate will not sustain her; she must be consigned to disgrace and infamy. In what consists the difference? Why is it that a man may practice with impunity vices which will not be tolerated for a moment in the other sex? That there is a false standard of gentility set up, there can be no doubt. That good old maxim of Pope's that, 'worth makes the man,' has gone out of vogue, at least with a very large portion of society; or else a different standard has been set up, which is to measure a man's worth by the quality of cloth he wears, or the grace with which he bows. Thus it is no uncommon thing to see a man who can drink, gamble, swear, and commit every species of vice, and still be a gentleman. If these men could be stript of their false plumage—if their real character could be exhibited to the artless youth—there would be but little danger to be apprehended from them. But the cloak under whith their baseness is disguised, renders them doubly dangerous associates for youth; for it enables them first to gain confidence by their easy address, then to lure them to ruin. Every parent who has the good of his offspring at heart, should not hesitate to expose the viper, nor let the consideration that he is a gentleman have any weight in restraining his children from the society and influence of such men. It may be an unpleasant task, but it is a duty which you owe to your children and yourself, and will doubtless save you many a pang of anguish and many a vain regret.—Ch. Freeman.

FRIGHTENING CHILDREN.

We agree with the Boston Mercantile Journal, that there are few things more calculated to excite a just indignation, than an attempt on the part of young persons to frighten little children, or each other. In this way, impressions are often made on the plastic minds of youth, which remain through life, and cause many an hour of anxiety, and perhaps agony. In this way a species of cowardice is produced, which cannot be overcome in after years; and the man who would be the first to plant a standard on a hostile fort, or to board an enemy, fighting hand to hand, has been known to turn pale with affright at the idea of passing a churchyard alone in a dark night—or even at entering a lonely and lofty garret, in the dark, after the family have retired. Marshall Saxe, one of the bravest men who ever commanded an army on the embattled field, would never retire to rest until he had carefully examined the closets in his chamber, and looked under his bed!

It is sometimes the case, however, that these sudden shocks of fear, when young, administered not unfrequently by the unthinking, for the joke's sake, are attended with the more serious consequences. We sometime since saw mention made of a child in Virginia, who was frightened to death. The circumstances which led to this melancholy catastrophe are not of unusual occurrence. The child was playing with its companions, and was told by them, in sport, that a ragman was about to carry him off in his bag. Alarmed with fear, the child ran into the house, when the object of his terror, unfortunately, also coming into the house, he uttered a shriek, and instantly expired.

This is not the first or only instance of the fatal consequences of fright upon children, and even upon adults, peculiarly susceptible to fear. We have given many cases of this kind in the Journal—and we tkink the subject needs no further illustration.

Indeed, cases are known where young persons have had their minds entirely overthrown—and been doomed to lives of helpless idiocy, by the unprincipled follies of their acquaintances, who have devised and executed some cruel plan of making sport of their fears. Such conduct has no apology. Those who are guilty of it should be held as accountable as the man who levels a deadly weapon, and destroys the life of a fellow creature.

Terror is too often the governing principle in families—and many a young and promising mind has been weakened and depressed by the dread of some threatened danger. And yet the attempt to excite the fears of a child is not unfrequently resorted to by parents, as a salutary punishment! Bugbears are created to frighten the young innocents into subjection. Such a course cannot be too severely rebuked. It is unphilosophical, and in the highest degree barbarous in its nature, often entailing wretchedness, in the shape of unnecessary fears, on the being whose courage and determination should be fortified and strengthened, instead of being sapped and destroyed by the unnatural and unthinking parent.—Asylum Journal.

EARLY EDUCATION.—Broham says: "if a child is neglected until six years of age, no subsequent training can recover it. If to this age he is in ignorance and dissipation, baseness and brutality, in that vacuity of mind which such habits create, it is in vain to try to reclaim it, by teaching it reading and writing.

You may teach it what you choose afterwards, but if you have not prevented the formation of bad habits, you will teach in vain. With children under the age of six years, school learning should not be the chief consideration, but the formation of moral principles."

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK

Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman-Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND

Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT

Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

NEW JERSEY.

Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA

Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA

Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.

Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Butlerville—G N Swinney
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN

Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN

Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA

Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS

Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally. price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most River bks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 35, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn, Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatara, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10, Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem. Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT
NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.

"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."

PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I.

NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1844.

NO. 14.

Biographical.

FRANCIS BAMPFIELD.*

FRANCIS BAMPFIELD was acknowledged, by all who knew him, to be a man of distinguished piety, and one of the most celebrated preachers in the west of England. He descended from an ancient and honorable family in Devonshire. His parents were religiously disposed, and designed him for the work of the ministry from his birth. When he was but a child he manifested a great interest in books and study, and from his own inclination concurred with the pious designs of his parents. In the grammar school he enjoyed the instruction of the ablest masters, and when he left that school it was with the highest honors. About the beginning of his seventeenth year, he was sent to the University of Oxford, and entered at Wadham College.

According to his own account of the matter, he made but little progress in acquaintance with the Scriptures and his own heart during the early part of his stay at Oxford. He secured a reputation for scholarship, but was destitute of vital piety, and filled with prejudice against the strictness of the Puritans. By some means, however, his attention was called to his own pride and sinfulness in such a way that he could not drive the thought from him. On one occasion, he tells us, while meditating upon a besetting sin, a voice said to him, What if God should strike thee dead and damned in this place? He felt himself unprepared for such an event, yet could not escape from the harassing fear of it. He resorted to his closet and his Bible. Instead of finding peace, however, he only found still clearer evidence of his lost condition. The Spirit of God held him strictly to these terms, as necessary to salvation, that he should throw aside his "collections out of human authors, and begin to study alone with Christ." It was not until he had come to this decision, after a most agonizing struggle, that he found rest for his soul. Here he did find it; and from this time he "began to have new views of Scripture, so that not one week passed without some special opening of his understanding."

When Mr. Bampfield left the University, he was first ordained a deacon, by bishop Hall; then a presbyter, by bishop Skinner. He was soon afterwards preferred to a living in Dorsetshire, where he labored most assiduously to promote the interests of religion among his people. His income from his office, together with a life annuity settled upon him by his father, was all expended in acts of charity among his parishioners, in giving them Bibles and other good books, encouraging industry by providing work for the poor, and relieving the wants of those who could not labor. It is said that he did not knowingly permit a beggar to remain in the parish.

Mr. Bampfield's faithfulness in this field of labor drew towards him the attention of the people of Sherbourne, one of the most populous towns in that vicinity. They being in want of a minister, many thousands having earnestly solicited him to come among them, and some of the neighboring ministers being very desirous that he should comply with their request, he accepted the call after waiting about two years. In his new field he found more work and less wages. But he met with great success, and was universally beloved by his parishioners. He continued in that parish until driven from it by the act for uniformity.

The circumstances connected with his leaving the established church were strikingly characteristic of the man. It seems, that soon after commencing his ministry, he began to see that the church of England needed reformation, not only in doctrine and worship, but also in discipline. He therefore set about it at once, as became a faithful minister and sincere Christian. Remembering his promise "to study alone with Christ," he made the laws of Christ his only rule in this case. He however met with great trouble and opposition in carrying out his wishes. At length the act for uniformity came forth, concerning which he said, about seventeen years afterwards, "The Lord put it into his mind not to touch that unclean constitution, which he obeyed, and has continued ever since a thorough nonconformist in the midst of persecution." The consequence was, that on the Sunday before St. Bartholomew, in 1662, he took leave of his sorrowful and weeping people, and was soon after imprisoned for worshiping God as he deemed right in his own family.

It has been thought strange, that Francis Bampfield should have received such harsh treatment from the royal party. For, although he had joined heartily from the first in the efforts to reform the church, yet he was zealous against the Parliament's war and Cromwell's usurpation, constantly asserting the royal cause in the face of danger. In addition to this, he had been ordained by the highest authority, was approved by the associated ministers both of the presbyterian and congregational persuasion, had received a voluntary license under the hand and seal of Oliver Cromwell, and also licenses under the hands and seals of two Kings. But these human authorities, upon which he had never placed much value, he now found to be of no value whatever. He was exposed to greater hardships for his nonconformity than most other dissenters. He resolved, however, to be faithful to his commission from Jesus Christ, and to obey God rather than man. This he did, without being discouraged, and without declining from persecution.

Previous to Mr. Bampfield's imprisonment, he had traveled and preached much in the vicinity of his particular station. He was the first man who set up three separate meetings in two or three counties. During his imprisonment at Dorchester, he preached to such as resorted to him; and towards the close of it, he preached often "sixteen times a week, besides other occasional work." His own account of his trials and joys, written from the prison at London in which he died, will be read with thrilling interest:—

"During the last twenty years I have been honored with several imprisonments. To pass by some of them, which were but short, for some few days, I was eight years, and three quarters of a ninth year, under confinement at Dorchester prison in Dorsetshire, for preaching, praying, reading, and opening and applying the Scriptures, and for singing hymns, and such parts of my office, and for not conforming to the corruptions of the times in the matters of worship; during which time I had wonderful experience of the wisdom, power, loving-kindness of Jehovah Aelohim, and many other covenant favors in special unto me, in healing, strengthening, comforting, teaching, enlightening, in a peculiar manner, and in divers ways of spirit illuminations. Upon my discharge from that confinement, without paying one penny of that fine that was laid upon me, I went on with my ministerial work as before. * * * But I was quickly apprehended again, and imprisoned at Salisbury in Wiltshire, for about eighteen weeks, which filled up my ten days of tribulation in the letter of it—Rev 2: 10—'Ye shall have tribulation ten days; be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.'"

His imprisonment at Salisbury was for the same cause as before; and he was discharged, as before, without paying the fine which had been laid upon him.

[To be continued.]

---

* In the preparation of this article, much assistance has been derived from two works written by Mr. Bampfield himself, and now preserved in the British Museum at London. The first is entitled, "שם אחר, a Name, an after one; or, Ονομα Καινον, a Name, a new one; or, an Historical Declaration of the Life of Shem Acher, especially as to some more eminent passages of his day, relating to his more thorough and lawful call to the office and work of the ministry, for about thirty years last past," etc. The second is entitled, "A Just Appeal, from lower courts on earth to the highest court in heaven; or, the case of F. B., the Lord's free prisoner, truly, in the main, reported, as to the matter of fact at his examination and trial in the open Quarter Sessions at the Old Baily, vulgarly the 12th and 13th days of the 8th month, in the year, 1683." Reference has also been had to seven other works published by Mr. Bampfield, of which some account will be given in the course of this biographical sketch.

The Recorder.

TIME OF COMMENCING THE SABBATH.

To the Editor of the Sabbath Recorder:

DEAR SIR—The method you have taken to dispose of the inquiry of a correspondent in reference to the commencement and duration of the seventh day, was on your part, in our opinion, altogether justifiable. Nevertheless, on seeing a re-publication of that report, it brought afresh to our mind thoughts with which we had been previously exercised, but until now have neglected to put in execution. What we allude to is this, to take a succinct review of the report of the Committee appointed by the General Conference, on the subject of the time for commencing the Sabbath; and in so doing, show reasons why some could not consent to be responsible for the arguments therein contained.

1. With all due deference to the ability of that part of the Committee who drew up the report and the Conference who adopted it, we would venture to say, that there appears to be a discrepancy observable on the very face of the argument. After quoting these words in Genesis, "The evening and the morning were the first day," &c., an opinion is given concerning what is meant by the evening and morning, which is this, "The evening being put for that part which we call night, and the morning for that part which in our popular language is called day." The report goes on with an argument founded upon Lev. 23: 32, "From even to even shall ye celebrate your Sabbath." Now, putting these two together, what is the amount, viz: the evening being put for all the dark part of time, and the morning for the light part, and then to say in accordance with the law above referred to, "from even to even shall ye celebrate your Sabbath?" It would appear, in viewing those arguments together, that the only portion of time required to be observed as the Sabbath, is from the close of the evening, or dark part of time, to the commencement of the next dark part; for it is "from even to even," which, according to the explanation given above of morning and evening, includes only the light part of time. Perhaps neither of us would wish to sustain such a position; but this is, so far as we can see, the legitimate amount of the argument.

The next argument is adduced from Nehemiah's undertaking to reform Sabbath profanation in Judah. The report says, "He commenced it by shutting the gates as soon as dark," and remarks, "If the evening was not the proper time for beginning the Sabbath rest, it is difficult to construe the conduct of Nehemiah in this matter." But we see no difficulty whatever in construing the conduct of this servant of God in this matter, independent of the above reason assigned for it; especially when we read in this very connection, "that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the Sabbath, Nehemiah commanded them to be shut." But according to the sentiment advocated by the report, when darkness commenced the Sabbath began. But mark it, Nehemiah says, when the gates began to be dark before the Sabbath. Again, we gather from perusing this chapter, that the men of Tyre, and other surrounding people, brought all kinds of wares and merchandize into the city the evening before the day when they intended offering them for sale, as is the practice at the present day for those who live at a distance from our large cities. This made it necessary, and a dictate of prudence, in order to prevent traffic on the Sabbath, that the gates should be shut early in the evening before the Sabbath. If this reason for the conduct of Nehemiah is not expressed in so many words in the passage, it is very plainly implied; for we learn from the chapter, that those traders on a subsequent occasion, perhaps the very evening before the next Sabbath, again attempted to enter the city, but finding the gates shut, they lodged about the wall, intending probably to enter the city on the Sabbath; but Nehemiah, steady to his purpose, drove them from thence. The evil consequences arose from their being in on the Sabbath day; and to prevent this, it was indispensably necessary that measures should be taken to keep them out, that there should be no temptation presented to the inhabitants to desecrate the Sabbath.

Again, in reviewing the argument founded upon the manner of expression in Genesis 1st, "The evening and the morning were the first day," &c., and the supposition raised from it, that the portion of time which the Creator then sanctified and blessed included the evening before the seventh day—this inquiry may arise, had that been the object of the sacred writer, why should he have omitted to state that the evening and the morning were the seventh day? For, in the opinion of the report, this is the all-absorbing subject for which this expression is used, and yet at the very time that we should expect it, if this was the object, it is omitted. May we not be allowed to suppose a reason for this mode of expression, as well as the reporters, which is this: The sacred historian commences with the beginning of God's work in the creation of this world, and tells what he did on the first day until he closes the account of the day's work, and then having arrived at the evening of this day, he commences at the present time and says, "The evening and the morning were the first day," and so on through all the days in which he was engaged in his creative operations. To us it seems singular, that so much stress should be placed upon this mode of expression in reference to the commencement of the Sabbath, when we have examples of a similar mode of wording in the Scripture. For instance, Hosea 6: 3, when the Lord promises to them that follow on to know him, that "He will come to them as the rain, as the latter and the former rain upon the earth," here is an example of commencing at the present or a later time, and going back to a former. But in this case it is evident, that the meaning is substantially the same as if it said, the former and latter rain. And just so in reference to the language in Genesis 1st, "The evening and the morning," &c. We do not conceive that such a position as is taken by the report can be sustained from this portion of Scripture, especially when we see that it is omitted in the account of the day that the report makes it bear principally upon.

Again, it is stated in the report, that "when God said, let there be light," he did not bring light into existence in the form of broad daylight, as distinguished from what is called night; for the sacred narrative shows that the separating of the light from darkness was a subsequent work. We are not disposed to deny that it was a subsequent work; but how much time intervened between the creation of light and the bringing it into broad daylight, we have no Scripture authority to say. That it occupied the whole time of what is usually called a night, is no more nor less than supposition, and that for the purpose of sustaining a favorite theory. God does not bring broad daylight into existence at once in the works of his providence, any more than in his works of creation. In the morning we first behold some rays of the sun, which constitute the dawning of the day, and this glorious luminary pursues his onward course. Upheld by the arm that supports all things, he soon is seen shining in his full-orbed splendor. So rapid, for aught we know, or for anything that appears to the contrary, was the approach of the first day. But by this saying we do not design to intimate that the order was the same; for the treasuring up of the light in the heavenly orbs was yet a subsequent work. But before the formation of the sun, moon and stars, there was, in some way which we cannot explain nor understand, a regular succession of light and darkness on the different parts of the chaotic mass, which measured out the first day.

Finally, we believe that there was a morning before there was an evening, a day before there was a night, properly so called, for "God called the light day, and the darkness he called night," and we have as much ground to build upon, in the method of expression here used, as our opponents have in the "evening and morning;" but we will not rest our belief upon this, while we have in Scripture plain English to our point. Matt. 28: 1, "In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn towards the first day of the week, came Mary," &c. So says Mark, Luke, and John, with a little circumstantial difference, but essential agreement, which is always allowed to strengthen testimony. Again, in John 20: 19, "Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut, where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews." Here we have plain Scripture testimony that the night following the day is that which belongs to it, as making up the twenty-four hours. Mark the expression, "the same day at evening."

This may suffice as a reason why some could not respond to the arguments contained in the report; but we still agree to the closing paragraph, having regard for the feelings of our brethren, though we may differ a little from them in sentiment.

FAGANUS.

September 3d. 1844.

FRAILTY AND FRUITION.

BY GEO. BABCOCK CLARK.

"When we have looked on the pleasures of life, and they have vanished away; when we have looked on the works of nature, and perceived that they were changing; on the monuments of art, and seen that they would not stand; on our friends, and they have fled while we were gazing; on ourselves, and felt that we were as fleeting as they,—we can look to the throne of God; change and decay have never reached that; the revolutions of ages have never moved it; the waves of an eternity have been rushing past it, but it has remained unshaken; the waves of another eternity are rushing toward it, but it is fixed, and never can be disturbed."

[Greenwood.

They pass away, the fading joys of earth,
Dear to our youth, and many a pleasant dream
Flies, ere the dawn of high born-thought breaks forth;
The silent flow of time's resistless stream
Bears to oblivion's gulf what we did deem Should bloom in childhod's long-deserted bower;
Brightening to memory, as the starlight gleam,
To guide the wand'rer at the evening hour,
O'er the wide waste, when joy had lost its thrilling power!

One general sigh bursts from the toil-worn crew,
Still coursing onward o'er the fearful wave—
The morn of life hath lost its radiant hue,
They ne'er return who voyage to the grave!
The night of age even terrifies the brave—
To slumber on a death-couch cold and wan!
The wreck too sinks where pity cannot save,
And their mute names from human ken withdrawn,
Are all the victor's triumphs, echoed and gone.

Ah! ye who vainly wish again to tread
Youth's early footsteps in your native vale—
There grief oft wanders near your kindred dead,
Sepulchral sounds rise in the passing gale!
The voice of strangers would your ear assail,
Who turn aside to scan the heap unknown
Of sculpture crumbled, or the cottage frail;
Decay yet lingers on the weedy stone,
Deriding art, whose fairest works are his alone.

Ye learned, turn the wanderings of your feet,
The gleams of earth-born science lead astray;
Go with the pious to their blest retreat,
And mark the tear-dops as the humble pray;
A light from heaven illumes the narrow way
Which guides to bliss, beyond this vale of gloom;
Their spirits, ransomed, hail immortal day,
Above the closing shadows of the tomb, awaiting the last trump to hear their final doom.

Ecstatic thought! when transient life has fled
The forms that writhed beneath afflictions power—
When Frailty falls, forgotten with the dead—
Their spirits live in an elysian bower!
Then fear not, mortal, thy expiring hour—
Have faith in Christ, the ever-blessed King!
That when destruction's fiery tempests lower,
Thou mayest with seraphs rise on shining wing,
And join the millions through eternity to sing!

BROOKFIELD N. Y.

THE SCRIPTURES.

The Word is a telescope to discover the great luminaries of the world, the truths of the highest concernment to the souls of men; and it is such a microscope as discovers to us the smallest atom of our thoughts, and discerns the most secret intent of the heart. And as far as this light reacheth, it comes with power and authority, as it comes armed with the majesty of that God who reveals it, whose authority extends over the soul and conscience of man in the most secret and hidden recesses.

[Bp. Stillingfleet.

A WORD FITLY SPOKEN.

Some eighteen months since, an individual whose religious views were of the character called "liberal," was by a reverse in his fortunes, thrown into a pious family in a neighboring city, where he availed himself of an opportunity of attending a series of religious services upon a special occasion. Here he was called to a serious reflection upon the concerns of the soul. At this period he was under a matrimonial engagement to a lady in Maine, and in a correspondence with her, asked her, as if only half in earnest, "What her feelings would be, should she hear of his conversion." Her reply was, "If YOU have one religious emotion, CHERISH it."

Not long after, the Spirit was striving with that individual, and conscience was urging and entreating him to make his peace with God, while Satan was holding up the short-lived and guilty pleasures of the world, to induce him to remain in sin. He saw in imagination kindred and friends reproving and deriding—companions deserting him;—he faltered—he turned one thought to the loved one who had won his affections;—that word of encouragement, coming from one who had his dearest interests at heart, decided the important question. He sought, and trusts that he found, a Saviour. Shortly afterwards she too became pious, with many of their relatives and friends.

This happy pair have been united in marriage; and when the morning and evening prayer is offered for help and strength to perform the duties devolving upon them, and for the spread of the Redeemer's kingdom, they do not forget to thank God with truly grateful hearts, for having called them from nature's darkness to behold this marvelous light.

Reader, eternity alone can unfold the glorious results which will have sprung from the sentiment of that young lady's generous heart, uttered in virtue's cause! "If YOU have one religious emotion, CHERISH it."

[Boston Recorder.

CHRISTIANITY IN CHINA.

In September last, Dr. Macgowan, of the American Baptist Mission in China, left Hong Kong for the north, having been delegated by his colleagues to visit the various ports of the empire recently opened to foreign commerce, for the purpose of collecting information as to the most suitable place for establishing a new missionary station. In October he took up his residence at Ningpo, where he met with a kind reception.

A house having been freely offered for the purpose, within the walls in the midst of the business part of the city, a Missionary Hospital was opened. It was soon thronged by a suffering populace, and although a small portion of the time only could be devoted to the institution, about 700 patients were treated the first quarter. The patients freely posted up Christian hand-bills that were given them, throughout the city and neighboring towns and villages. Merchants from Nankin and other distant parts were supplied with Tracts, some of which the Mandarins received, read them, and pronounced them good. A plan, first adopted at this hospital, of printing passages of Scripture on one side of the surgeon's treatment, and which the patients kept in possession, was an effectual means of disseminating much Christian truth. These passages were committed to memory by the patients and recited to the doctor.

AN INTERESTING RECOGNITION.

One of the missionaries of the New York City Tract Society was for seven years a Tract Visiter before he received his present appointment. A little while ago, as he was passing through a street, he heard himself called by name, and looking around, saw a young man who expressed much pleasure at meeting him. He returned the salutation, but intimated that he was not aware of their having met before.

"What! do you not recollect me?" said the young man, "I never can forget you; you were a Tract Visiter, and used to call at my grandmother's, in Anthony street."

"Very likely," said the missionary, "but still I have no recollection of you."

"What! don't you recollect that six years ago you gave me a Testament, and then knelt down with me and grandmother, and prayed the Lord to make that Testament the means of my salvation? O, that prayer! I never can forget it, for the Lord heard it and answered it. I read in that Testament the words—'The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord!' and the Lord fastened them on my mind and converted my soul. O how glad I am to see you! And grandmother will be so glad! Do come and see her!"

In a short time the missionary was listening to the venerable and pious matron as she spoke of the days that were past, and fully confirmed all that her grandson had told him.

The identical Testament was produced, and the missionary saw, within the cover, in his own writing, the name of the youth to whom given, then aged 14—the date January 7, 1838—the signature of the missionary of the ward—his own also, as visiter of the district—and under it, this prayer—"May the Lord bless this book to the salvation of his soul!"

DISCOVERIES OF TRUE RELIGION.

In order to render men happy, religion ought to convince us that there is a God; that we are under an obligation to love him; that our true felicity consists in our dependence on him, and our only evil in separation from him. It ought to inform us that we are full of darkness, which hinders our knowing and loving him; and that our duty thus obliges us to love God. It ought to discover to us the cause of our enmity to God, and to our own happiness. It ought to teach us the remedies, and the means of obtaining them. Let men compare all the religions of the world in these respects, and let them see whether any but the Christian answers all these purposes.

[Pascal.

TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE
ates, from the Seventh day Baptist herein is shown the perpetual ob-
Gentile to observe God's Holy
IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH week; and the subsequent substitu is shown to be inconsistent with the iversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of office for the Conference, and for sale row & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. dway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Ful ), and at the bookstores generally.

K NOTE LIST,
Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.
Banks in the several States included in the Money, (except those specified in the Table Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary by the Brokers in this city with the disc.

¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
1	York Bank	1½
Ct. par	Wyoming Bank	2½
	Delaware:	½ to 1
par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
½	Cumberland Bank	2
½	Mineral Bank	2
	Salisbury Bank	3
	Dist. Columbia:	1
	Virginia:	1
¼ to 1½	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
	North Carolina:	1½
1¼	South Carolina:	1¼
1¼	Georgia:	1¼
2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
	Ohio:	2
1½	Indiana:
2	State Bk & branches	2
1½	Kentucky:	2
1½	Tennessee:	3
2	Canada:	3 to 4
1¼	Michigan:	3

NCURRENT MONEY.
10 Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mer-
— Westbrook 3.
Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co.
Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford,
Stillwater Canal, Washington Co.
Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultu-
Concord 6. olfsborough—broken.
ngton 90, Windsor —.
mercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jef-Phenix—broken.
Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, New-12½.
Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm.
anklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of bury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—
Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Proviof Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & ovidence, Scituate—broken.
idgeport, Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport
Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—
Clinton 1, Washington 1.
Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co.
Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber
ttan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co.
nhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign
N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co.
River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—
Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 &
falo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25,
85, Clinton Co. 30, Erie Co. 30 &
Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30,
21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers'
& 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff.
Buff. 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52
Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21
N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.
two prices in this list, the first is for Stock second for Real Estate and Stock Secu-
Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia
Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co.
ders, Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washfalo—broken.
klin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey
Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Mor-
Co. farm. & Mech. of New Bruns-
N. J. Manufacturing & Banking
Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia
State Bank of Trenton, Washington
Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna
Branch 15.
ghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch.
Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do.
burg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst.
ington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan fayette & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of N. Salem, Northern, Northampton,
Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac.
Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Pots-
Lake, Southwark Savings, South-
Loan Co. Swataras, Tylorsville nda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, barre Bridge Co. Youghogany—bro-
Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.
& Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10,
Commercial of Balt. do. of Mil-
Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de
Bank of St. George's Co. Sombranches, Susquehanna Bridge Co
Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics',
Central—broken.
Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20
Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie
Columbus, Darien and branches.
Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch.
& Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phe-
Western—broken.
of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Can-
Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50,
Circleville new, Cleveland Exch.
Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincin-
Bank of Wooster, Granville Al-
Hamilton & Rossville Manufac-
Soc. Lebanon & Miami Cos.
Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Tra-
Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan
Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst.
Washington, West Union, West-
Co. Zanesville Canal & Man-
Western Bank of Va. Mo broken.
Bank and branches—broken.
Branch 88.

ath Recorder,
WEEKLY AT STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.
is delayed six months, at subscriptions will be considered accordingly.
paid strictly in advance.
the friends of this enter-to extend the circulation as who subscribe to pay in the "cash system" will all concerned.
by law to send money and change of residence, to the and they will in most be acknowledged in the pa remittances should
B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce

SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, SEPT. 26, 1844.

PERPETUITY OF THE SABBATH.

ANSWER TO "THE MIDNIGHT CRY."

We have heretofore spoken of an article headed "the Lord's Day," which appeared in this organ of the believers in the speedy Second Advent. That article contained some objections to the perpetuity of the Sabbath, which are frequently raised, and which we will therefore endeavor candidly to answer.

OBJ. 1. The first objection is from Col. 2 : 14, 16 : "Blotting out the hand writing of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross. . . . . Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days." From this it is concluded that the Sabbath was abolished at the death of Christ.

ANS. It is here distinctly said, that the thing which was blotted out was "against us, contrary to us." In order, therefore, to make any use of this passage, it is necessary to show that the Sabbath is against us, contrary to us. We deny that it is contrary to us, any more than the other requirements of the Decalogue, such as to love the Lord with all our hearts, to abstain from idols, or to obey our parents. Those who think it to be against them to love the Lord with all their hearts, and those only, may, consistently with themselves, use this passage as an objection to the Sabbath. But, it is said, the Sabbath is here classed with meats and drinks, which are a shadow of things to come. How do you know this is said of the weekly Sabbath? The expression is [Sabbaths, which might refer, for ought we know, and probably did refer, to the annual or other festival Sabbaths, of which there were several. We cannot think the Apostle would take a precept out of the heart of the Decalogue, and class it with meats and drinks and new moons, especially when there were Sabbaths which might properly be classed with these. And for this reason, the Apostle, lest he should be mistaken in speaking of these meats and drinks and Sabbaths, gives this particular note of distinction, viz., that they were shadows of things to come, whereas the weekly seventh-day Sabbath was to be kept in remembrance of what was past. We should as soon think of arguing from this passage the duty of abstaining from all meats and drinks without distinction, as the duty of abstaining from the observance of all Sabbaths.

OBJ. 2. The second objection is from that passage of Paul, "One man esteemeth one day above another; another esteemeth every day alike; let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind." From this it is concluded that all distinction of days is done away.

ANS. We doubt not, if the controversy had there been about whether the Sabbath should be observed or not, it would have been plainly expressed. Since it was not so expressed, and since the Apostle was here speaking about things indifferent, there is a manifest impropriety in referring this to the weekly Sabbath.

OBJ. 3. "The law was our schoolmaster, to bring us to Christ. . . . But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster." This is thought to teach that we are set free from the law by faith.

ANS. We will answer the objection by the language of the Apostle himself. He seems to have expected that just such objections would be made to his remarks about the importance of faith; and he therefore says, "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid; yea, we establish the law." The law had brought him to a knowledge of his sins, and his need of a Saviour. When he put his trust in Christ, it was not because the law had been done away, but because it was still binding, and condemned him. His faith acknowledged this, and thus established the law. Who, then, will dare to charge the Apostle with teaching that faith had superseded and abolished the law?

OBJ. 4. "The law of Moses was made for a people separated from the rest of the world, with God for their lawgiver in all their concerns. We [Christians] are scattered among those who pay no regard to the authority of God. We cannot make the weekly Sabbath so peculiarly sacred as they could, to whom it was one of the chief signs of their national covenant with God." "The law of Moses was made for a people who were empowered and required to enforce obedience to its general requirements on all who came among them." "The law God gave by Moses was designed for a people in a state of comparative infancy."

ANS. In answer to all this, we deem it sufficient to say, that the Sabbath was given to Adam in Paradise, centuries before the Jewish people had an existence, as may be seen by reading the second chapter of Genesis. We are not aware that Adam sustained a different relation to the Jews, from that which he sustained to the Gentiles. Whatever institutions, therefore, were given to him, such as marriage and the Sabbath, were designed for all his descendants. This view was confirmed by our Saviour, when he said, "The Sabbath was made for man," meaning, unquestionably, the whole race, in all times and places. The objection to the perpetuity of the Sabbath, therefore, from its relation to the Jews, is altogether groundless and absurd.

Having now answered all the objections which the "Cry" raises against the perpetuity of the Sabbath, we will give in brief some of our reasons for believing that the Sabbath is to continue in the Christian dispensation.

§ 1. It was given to our first parents in Paradise, and sanctioned by the divine example of resting upon it; from which we infer that it did not belong to any particular dispensation, but was common to all.

2. When God gave his law at Sinai, he wrote the law of the Sabbath on tables of stone, among the other nine precepts of the Decalogue, which are admitted to be moral in their nature and perpetually binding.

3. Jesus Christ said of the Sabbath, that it was made for man; and if it was given for the benefit of all men, it must continue while they continue to need its influences.

4. The perpetuity of the Sabbath law is taught by our Saviour in his sermon on the mount, Matt. 5, where he says, "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled."

5. In perfect agreement with this, our Saviour, speaking of an event which should not take place until forty years after his death, directed his disciples to pray, that their flight from Jerusalem might not be in the winter or on the Sabbath day.

6. The disciples of our Lord continued to observe the Sabbath strictly until the close of the New Testament history, about thirty religious meetings on that day being recorded by the pen of inspiration.

7. The best historians allow that the Sabbath was kept for four or five centuries of the Christian era.

8. A law once given can only be abrogated by the same authority, and by an act as explicit as that which at first gave it; this is not the case in regard to the law requiring the observance of the seventh day as the Sabbath.

In view of these considerations, we must think, that the duty of keeping the Sabbath is still binding upon all men. We agree with the editor of the Midnight Cry in his candid assertion, that "if the Sabbath, as a legal observance, is not done away, then all the divine laws for the regulation of the Sabbath are still in force, and they are to be observed on the seventh day of the week; for the particular day is as emphatically enjoined as the observance of any day, and no 'Thus saith the Lord,' can be found for a change." We agree with him likewise in his recommendation that all should "leave off applying the term Sabbath to the first day of the week." In addition to this, we believe, that the change of the Sabbath is the work of Antichrist, described in Daniel 7 : 25, 26—"And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand, until a time and times and the dividing of time. But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end." Such being our opinion of the origin of the change, we have no hope that the full designs of the institution will be secured except by returning to it as originally given by God, and sanctioned by his example of resting upon it, as well as by the example of his Son Jesus Christ. Returning to this day, therefore, instead of being an attempt "to mend the old broken Jewish yoke," will be complying with the invitation of the Saviour, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and you shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

DR. EDWARDS AND THE SARATOGA CONVENTION.

A correspondent, speaking of the late Convention at Saratoga, and the course of Dr. Edwards, uses the following deservedly severe language:

"That a man styling himself 'reverend' could presume to oppose the participancy of two ministers of the Sabbath of Jehovah, is a violation of all 'Christian' feeling so flagrant, that I am at a loss to conceive for one moment how the 'reverend doctor' could so far forget the admonitions of his fellow-laborer Paul, (if I may be permitted to obtrude the companionship of the Apostle on the politeness of Dr. Edwards,) who charges the brethren to 'be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another;' who says, 'in lowliness of mind, let each esteem other better than themselves;' and that no man is to regard himself only, 'but also the things of others.' Surely these passages, not to mention the example of the 'meek and lowly Jesus,' are not to be found in the Reverend Doctor's Bible; or if, by some accident, they have been inserted, I wonder whether the eye of Dr. E. has ever scanned them? If he has, it is very evident that in his readings he has neither 'marked, learned, nor inwardly digested' the burden of his meditations.

"While penning the above, I have thought the Reverend Doctor's Bible might perhaps be a copy of the famous edition surnamed the 'Vinegar Bible;' and if so, the Doctor's retention of the same is most accordant with the spirit manifested towards brn. Brown and Crandall.

"Now, it is impossible not to see in all these manifestations of the 'Christian' Sabbatists, a 'shaking of the hills;' and I think, despite their exertions to maintain the first day observance, they are coming to the same opinion, and that they begin to feel the tremblings which shall shake the earth to its centre.

A WATCHMAN!

"A correspondent of a New-York paper, writing from 'Rockaway,' a celebrated watering place in that vicinity, says: 'The afternoon of Sunday is spent in reading, strolling on the beach, or promenading the piazzas.' We would commend to the consideration of visitors to this and similar places of resort, the fourth commandment contained in the 20th chapter of Exodus." [Christian Watchman.

The rebuke of the Watchman amounts to this: "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work. Therefore it is wrong to read and stroll about on Sunday!" How many such rebukes would it take to convince a man of sin?

FREEWILL BAPTISTS.—The twelfth General Conference of the Freewill Baptist Churches is to commence on the 2d of October, at Plainfield, N. Y.

EXAMPLE.

Many of those who talk most fluently and censoriously of the example set by others, are precisely the most careless about their own example. Such persons are often particularly interested in discussing the probable influence of a minister's example, or that of some leading member of a church. In doing so, they seem to forget that they too are exerting an influence which must be lasting for good or for evil. From this there is no escape. If their queries and insinuations causelessly diminish confidence in the religious professions of others, they may inflict the deepest wounds upon the interests of religion. If they present an example of indecision and lukewarmness, its influence will dampen the ardor of all around them. But if they are zealous and consistent in Christian action, it will increase the confidence and encourage the hearts of all the circle with which they are connected. Whether they give sparingly or liberally for the spread of the Gospel; whether they are generous or niggardly in their ordinary concerns; others will follow in their footsteps. Who has not noticed how readily the young, especially the young in religious experience, fall into the habits of those who are older, and to whom they therefore look up as patterns? Hence we may hereafter see ourselves re-presented in the characters of those with whom we have associated. This consideration should make every man watchful of his example before others.

QUALIFICATIONS OF A MINISTER.

An uncommon anxiety to elevate the standard of ministerial qualifications, is now manifest in almost every denomination. The friend of religion will rejoice to witness this, because he will see in it a promise to the church of strength and protection against internal difficulties. But it is possible for this commendable desire for high qualifications to be misdirected. When, for instance, commanding and attractive personal appearance, is preferred before the humility and self-forgetfulness which approves itself to the consciences of all men; when acquaintance with the arbitrary rules of polite society, is deemed more important than acquaintance with the evils of the heart; when a disciplined and gifted mind is valued above decision of character and the love of souls—then, we believe, this desire is misdirected. The result will be, fashionable and showy religious arrangements, but little of the power of religion. It ought never to be overlooked, that the first qualification for ministerial labor is deep piety, thorough Christian experience, and ardent love for the work. The second is such discipline as will enable one to give full and free expression to this by actions and words. The combination of these is necessary to a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

MISSIONARY INTELLIGNCE.

The Annual Report of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, which was read at the late meeting in Worcester, embodies much valuable information. We give some interesting extracts from it.

MISSION TO GREECE.

This mission was established some twelve or fifteen years ago. After referring to several influences which have operated against the mission, the report says:

"Whatever the causes be, and they are doubtless various, the Greek mind, just now, is strangely inaccessible to the missionary who would preach to them the gospel. With rare exceptions, they will not hear; and the number of conversions has been exceedingly small, and scarcely any where in the history of the missions among them, or in the present aspects of the nation, can we see indications of a spiritua land divine influence. Nor is this less true of the Greeks in Turkey, than it is in independent Greece."

MISSIONS TO THE ARMENIANS.

This mission has 5 stations, 16 missionaries, 16 female assistants, and 13 native helpers.

"If the reformation among the Armenians is not advancing rapidly, it is certainly advancing with great steadiness, and gives more and more signs of being a genuine work of divine grace. The means employed by the mission are are in perfect accordance with the principles and usages of the churches that support the mission, as the Committee believe they ever have been, and are exerting an admirable influence. Their piety has more of primitive simplicity, and more of a prayerful spirit, than is common in our country. The converts are found in very many of the larger cities. The number in any one place is indeed small, but the light is thus beginning to shine over the empire. From one hundred and fifty to two hundred thousand Armenians reside in Constantinople and its suburbs. The progress of the reformation has been greatest among these, and at Trebizond, and in one or two places where no missionary has ever resided. But no where does labor appear to be in vain."

"The Armenians have the whole Bible in their ancient language; also in the Turkish language, printed in their own letter; and they have the New Testament in their modern language, with the Old Testament in a course of translation. Strange as it may seem, they have received a valuable supply of school books from their papal countrymen residing in the convents at Venice and Vienna. Dr. Merle D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, somewhat abridged, is about to be printed for them by our brethren at Smyrna. Other books in doctrinal, practical, and experimental religion, being greatly needed and desired by hundreds, if not thousands of the people, have been issued from the press, or will gradually be issued and put in circulation. About 7,000,000 pages were printed at Smyrna last year, though not all in Armenian."

MISSION TO THE JEWS.

"The Sefardim, or Spanish Jews in Constantinople, amount to seventy or eighty thousand. Owing to the power and tyranny of their rabbis, they are at present very difficult of access, and they belong intellectually to the most degraded people in Turkey. In morals they stand higher than the Turks. Many copies of the Old Testament in Hebrew-Spanish have been distributed among them by Mr. Schauffler, who is also engaged in preparing a variety of works, that are indispensiable to their intellectual and spiritual elevation. There is now such leisure to prepare these, as it is hoped there will not long be."

NESTORIANS OF PERSIA.

"The labors of former years on the plain of Oroomiah, have been continued the past year with increased encouragement. After long waiting, our brethren are permitted to enjoy a refreshing from the presence of the Lord, though they hardly call it a revival. A number give evidence of having passed from death unto life. Others are serious, and many have become unusually attentive to the preaching of the gospel. Most of the hopeful converts are young men of promise, who had long been members of the seminary, or in some way connected with the mission. How grateful and cheering to the toil-worn missionary are such drops of mercy in a dry and thirsty land. The earliest indications of unusual seriousness appeared on the first Monday in January, while the missionaries were assembled at Oroomiah for conference and prayer. Mar Yohannan, whose visit to this country is remembred by many, takes a very decided stand among the people as a Christian and a reformer; far more so than he did before his visit to America; and he is a good and faithful preacher of the gospel."

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

At the recent meeting of the American Board, a speaker objected to an expression in one of the reports, that the heathen were calling upon the Board for help. He declared it to be a false and injurious impression, that Missionary Boards are responsible for carrying on the work of missions. They are but the instruments of the church. The church is responsiable for the work, under God. Every church that has refused to engage in actual labors to spread the gospel has dwindled away and died. The history of the seven churches of Asia illustrates this. Their history will be the experience of every church that does nothing to advance the Redeemer's kingdom. This thought ought to be impressed upon the heart of every Christian. Whenever societies or associations create a sentiment that the individual Christian is released from responsibility, they undo their own work. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

THE JEWS IN NEW YORK.

The past week has been one of great interest among the Jews, being the period of some of their most important celebrations. On Monday was the Fast of Expiation, or Day of Atonement—a day which the Jews observe as a most strict fast, abstaining from all servile work, taking no food, and afflicting their souls. The sacrifice of the atonement is regarded as the most solemn and important ordained by the Mosaic Law. It was formerly offered on the tenth day of the month Tisri, which was the only day in the course of the year in which the high-priest was permitted to enter the sanctuary. In New York, most of the Jewish places of business were closed; scarcely a Jew was to be met at the exchange; the synagogues were open from morning until evening; and everything about them appeared like a day of perfect rest and devotion. The synagogues which we visited towards evening were filled, but the auditors appeared listless and inattentive. The exercises had continued until they were almost worn out with fatigue.

N. Y. STATE FAIR AND CATTLE SHOW.

This grand exhibition took place on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, of last week. The arrangements had been made upon a large scale, the enclosure covering nine acres. The exhibition of flowers, plants, and fruits; of the products of American skill and industry; of agricultural implements and articles pertaining to the business of the farmer—was very extensive and gratifying. It was estimated that 25 or 30,000 persons passed through the gates of the enclosure on Wednesday; and notwithstanding there was so dense a throng, the most perfect order prevailed. No intoxicating liquor was allowed within the enclosure.

On Thursday, at three o'clock, four or five thousand people assembled under the great tent to hear an address by George Bancroft. It was an eloquent production. It was sundown when the Fair ended with the close of the proceedings in the tent, and the people rushed eagerly homeward, delighted with what their eyes had seen of this great exhibition of the productions of Nature and Art, and determined, it is to be hoped, to do much within the coming year to dignify Labor and advance the great interests of Agricultural and Manufactures.

NEWSPAPERS.—No man has given better advice upon practical questions of political economy than Benjamin Franklin. Hear what he says about taking a newspaper.—"I positively never knew a man in the country too poor to take a newspaper. Yet two out of three, even respectable people, read no papers but what they borrow. Every man can conveniently take one. The cost is three pence a week. How many, who think themselves too poor to take a newspaper, pay as much daily for drink! Miserable man, thou art poor indeed!

"LAY BAPTISM."—The question has several times come before the ecclesiastical courts in England, whether Episcopal Clergymen ought to read the burial service over persons not baptized by one of their own body. In a case tried some years ago, it was decided that baptism by a Methodist Clergyman was lay baptism, and yet good and valid. In a recent case, where a clergyman refused to bury a child that had been baptized by an Independent, it was determined that baptism by the Independents, though they are heretics and schismatics, is still valid. This will settle the question, undoubtedly.

TO OUR FRIENDS.

With this number of our paper, we enter upon the second quarter of the volume. In doing so, we wish to say a few words to our friends, who have kindly inquired after our plans and prospects.

1. PLANS.—The Recorder was commenced at the solicitation of many friends of the Sabbath, who deemed it important that such a paper should be sustained in the city of New York, and who became responsible for its financial affairs during one year. Their experience thus far has deepened their conviction of the importance of the undertaking, and increased their anxiety for the permanent establishment of the paper. But having commenced it with the single object of advancing truths in which all Sabbath-keepers have a common interest, they feel that the responsibility of its permanence rests alike upon all. They therefore ask every friend of the Sabbath, who thinks the paper calculated to advance the truth, to make its interests his own, and to do what he can to extend its circulation.

2. PROSPECTS.—We are happy to have assurances from various quarters of the interest and satisfaction which is felt in the paper. In many cases this expression of interest is accompanied with additional subscribers. At present, however, our list of subscribers is not sufficient to meet the expense of publication, and enable us to lay out that labor upon the paper which we desire. The list must be increased. And we promise our friends, that just as fast as it is increased, the means thus secured will be expended in adding to the interest of the paper. It is earnestly hoped that each friend of the object, will see what can be done in his own neighborhood. To encourage this, we make the following

PROPOSITIONS.

1. Any person sending us four new subscribers, with the pay for them, shall have a fifth copy sent gratis to such person and place as he may direct.

2. Any person who will interest himself to obtain new subscribers and collect the pay for them, shall be entitled to a commission of twenty per cent.

Subscribers commencing with the present number, will receive the paper during the remainder of the volume for $1 50. Those who may wish the back numbers can be supplied with them if application be made soon.

A CARD.

The subscriber is anxious to collect all the facts or records to be obtained, which throw light upon the history and spirit of Sabbath-keepers both ancient and modern. He would therefore request any friends who may be able and disposed to aid in making such a collection, to forward him the information of which they are in possession. Copies of letters, extracts from church or family records, notices of books or pamphlets, copies of inscriptions on tomb stones, autographs, prints—indeed, anything calculated to assist one in judging of the characters of individuals, would be gratefully received. The loan of books when the owner may wish to keep them under his control, or the plainest statement of facts, when one has little time to dress them up, will often be of great service. It is hoped that many will show their readiness to promote this object by furnishing what may be in their power. An opportunity to forward by some one visiting New York can generally be found. Address No. 9 Spruce street.

GEO. B. UTTER.

MR. KINCAID'S VISIT TO CONNECTICUT.—We learn from the last number of the Christian Secretary, that Mr. Kincaid is to visit Connecticut during this week and the next, for the purpose of giving a history of the missionary enterprise in Burmah. On Sunday next, he is to be at Hartford, and on the following Wednesday, Oct. 2, at Middletown, where the New Haven Association holds its meeting.

THE TEST.—Our readers are aware that the question of appointing slaveholding missionaries was discussed at great length by the Missionary Convention of the Baptists held in Philadelphia last spring. It is said that the Secretary of the Georgia Baptist Convention has applied to the Home Mission Society, for the appointment of a Mr. Reeve, as missionary, distinctly stating that he is a slaveholder, and that his appointment will be considered as settling the question whether the Board will or will not appoint such men. A deep interest will be felt in the decision.

QUICK WORK.—A Bishop of the English Church, in a recent visit to Santa Cruz and some of the neighbouring islands, held a confirmation service at which three hundred persons received the rite at his hands. Between seven and eight hundred persons were confirmed during the visit, among whom were twenty converts from Romanism, and members from three different families of the Jewish nation.

BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE.—Elihu Burritt in recording the death of his aged mother, in a late paper, adds this beautiful and impressive obituary, revealing a heart worthy of the man:

"She was our own beloved mother, and to us, as to all her children—both in heaven and on earth—the most precious friend this side of JESUS CHRIST."

CHARLES T. TORRY.—It seems that this gentleman, of whose imprisonment at Baltimore, we have heretofore spoken, impelled by despair of other help, attempted to escape from prison a few days since. The Baltimore Sun says:

"On searching his bed, there was found concealed in it, four mortising chisels, apparently quite new, a saw made from the main spring of a watch and set in a semi-circular frame, a frame for another saw of the same decription, and a small new gunsmith's saw. In his trunk was found a handful of bullets and a paper of powder. On examining the windows, one of the large upright iron bars was found cut at both the upper and lower points of its intersection with the cross bars nearly through, requiring but a little more labor to complete its removal, and to afford ample space for the egress of the prisoners. The offenders were all confined to the cells and placed in irons."

In a letter since written to his wife, Mr. Torry says:

"I am in much affliction. When I wrote to you last week, I was suffering with a brain fever, the effects of long and close confinement. Yesterday I made an attempt to escape, which was detected, or rather betrayed by a counterfeiter named Dryer; and myself and others put into the cells, in irons. The excitement, with a cold cell, and irons so heavy and painful as to prevent all sleep, have brought on the fever again. I suppose I shall be so confined till October, if I survive so long. I deemed it my duty to try once to escape out of the hands of my enemies. But God knows best, and has ordered it otherwise."

FRIENDS.

we enter upon the se-doing so, we wish to say who have kindly inquired commenced at the soli-the Sabbath, who deemed it paper should be sustained in the who became responsible for its year. Their experience thus conviction of the importance of their anxiety for the per-the paper. But having com-object of advancing truths in have a common interest they of its permanence rests alike ask every friend of the Sab-calculated to advance the his own, and to do what he happy to have assurances from interest and satisfaction which is cases this expression of inter-additional subscribers. At pre-of subscribers is not sufficient to publication, and enable us to lay out paper which we desire. The list we promise our friends, that just the means thus secured will be the interest of the paper. It is each friend of the object will see his own neighborhood. To encour-following

ROPOSITIONS.

us four new subscribers, with have a fifth copy sent gratis to such may direct.

will interest himself to obtain new the pay for them, shall be entitled per cent.

with the present number, will the remainder of the volume wish the back numbers can application be made soon.

A CARD.

to collect all the facts or re-throw light upon the history both ancient and modern.
any friends who may be able such a collection, to forward which they are in possession.
from church or family records, copies of inscriptions on prints—indeed, anything calcu-of the characters of individu-received. The loan of books, to keep them under his con-
of facts, when one has little will often be of great service. It show their readiness to promote what may be in their power. An by some one visiting New York
Address No. 9 Spruce street.
GEO. B. UTTER.

CONNECTICUT.—We learn of the Christian Secretary, visit Connecticut during this the purpose of giving a his-enterprise in Burmah. On be at Hartford, and on the
Oct. 2, at Middletown, where holds its meeting.

readers are aware that the ques-slaveholding missionaries was by the Missionary Convenin Philadelphia last spring. of the Georgia Baptist to the Home Mission Sociof a Mr. Reeve, as mission-that he is a slaveholder, and will be considered as settling the Board will or will
A deep interest will be

Bishop of the English Church,
Santa Cruz and some of the held a confirmation service persons received the rite seven and eight hundred during the visit, among converts from Romanism, and different families of the Jewish

Elihu Burritt in recording mother, in a late paper, adds obituary, revealing a beloved mother, and to us, both in heaven and on friend this side of JESUS

It seems that this gentle-ment at Baltimore, we have compelled by despair of other from prison a few days says:

there was found concealchisels, apparently quite the main spring of a watch frame, a frame for anoth-and a small new trunk was found a hand-of powder. On examinthe large upright iron bars the upper and lower points the cross bars nearly little more labor to comafford ample space for the
The offenders were all placed in irons."

to his wife, Mr. Torry

When I wrote to you with a brain fever, the confinement. Yesterday which was detected, counterfeiter named Dry-into the cells, in a cold cell, and irons prevent all sleep, have
I suppose I shall so long. I deem out of the hands best, and has or-

General Intelligence.

MEXICO AND TEXAS.—The N. Y. Tribune gives the following extracts from a letter written by a gentleman residing in the city of Mexico:—

As regards Texas, you have no doubt heard of the great preparations going on here for an overwhelming invasion of that country, by land as well as by sea. It is said that two steamers and two sailing vessels are expected momentarily at Vera Cruz from England to reinforce the Mexican navy, and this I think very probable.

It is always well that Texas should be prepared for the worst; but my humble opinion is, that these fellows will come to blows with themselves before they do with the hardy borderers of the "Lone Star" Republic. Still, should they attempt the invasion, I feel fully satisfied that the result will be most disgraceful to the Mexicans. The Texans, however, must take care of Galveston.

Santa Anna is having hard words with the Congress, and his friends say that the only way to carry on things properly is to have no Congress. This would lead one to suppose, naturally enough, that the great man is planning the overthrow of the actual Congress—an undertaking I am inclined to believe, he will find, at this time, rather difficult and somewhat dangerous.

Three of the Ministers have recently been accused by the Congress of trickery—Bocanegra, as also the Minister of War and Triguerus.

Affairs with France, on account of the late executions of some of the followers of Sentmanat without any trial—(sixteen of them were Frenchmen)—seem to have taken a turn which renders it far from improbable that a second war with that power will shortly ensue—some think it inevitable. Many desire it ardently, even among the Mexicans; as all are persuaded, by certain expressions made use of by the French Minister in his last note to this government, that it will be a war to overthrow the power of Santa Anna. So things go in this mis-named Republic.

ELECTRICITY.—Mr. J. E. Strong, electrician, of this town, has been recently trying some experiments in the way of obtaining electricity from a clear or cloudless atmosphere, by means of a balloon and a copper wire. On Tuesday, he succeeded in a beautiful experiment of this kind. Having sent up a balloon as near as he could judge 2000 feet above the earth, into a cloudless sky, he applied the wire to his receiver, and found it highly charged with positive electricity. One man present received a heavy shock from it. On a second trial the same afternoon, the gas escaped so much from the balloon that he could not get it up high enough for an application.

[Springfield, (Mass.) Republican.

TREMENDOUS GALE AT APALACHICOLA, FLORIDA.—A tremendous gale occurred at Apalachicola, Florida, on the 9th inst., accompanied by a great loss of property. An extra from the office of the Commercial Advertiser, furnishes us with the particulars, giving a list of about thirty houses that were unroofed or lost their upper stories, whilst others were entirely demolished. Shantees, stables, out-houses, fences and trees, in innumerable quantities, were seen flying about in every direction. Fortunately no lives were lost, and very little bodily injury sustained, though several had very narrow escapes. The loss is estimated at $20,000.

SUDDEN DEATH.—The Rev. James Blake Howe, Rector of the Episcopal Church in Claremont, New Hampshire, died at Albany very suddenly on the 17th inst. He was on his way to Indiana, and had procured his ticket and taken his seat in the cars for the West. Just before the cars started he was seized with an apoplectic fit and expired almost instantaneously. He lodged at the Mansion House and left there immediately after breakfast, in apparently perfect health. He seemed to be between 60 and 65 years old. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by visitation of God.

THE STEAMER ERIE.—The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser says that the wreck of this boat cannot be raised. Several attempts have been made to get the hull and engine afloat, but on getting the vast bulk weighed with chains something continued to give way and let her down to the bottom again, some 65 feet from the surface. Those interested in the undertaking will in future direct their exertions tothe recovering of such pieces of machinery only as may be deemed worthy of preservation.

ACCIDENT ON THE HARLEM RAILROAD.—On Saturday evening while the cars were on their route to Westchester, a few rods from the river, two of the largest cars, well laden with passengers of both sexes, capsized over a small precipice, tearing them to pieces, but through a dispensation of Providence, all escaped without any serious injury save a few slight scars. It was caused by an excavation of one side of the road.

SUICIDE.—A Mrs. Beman of Shutesbury was found dead about 2 o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday last—she having hung herself with a skein of yarn in her own house. It is somewhat remarkable that her husband also hung himself about a year and a half since.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—The daughter of Mr. James Hughston, of East Guilford, aged 7 years, came to a meloncholy death on Saturday afternoon last; The particulars are these: A wagon, containing Mrs. Hughston, two boys and the little girl, was driven up to the ferry boat at Sidney Plains, for the purpose of crossing the Delaware. As the horses stepped upon the boat it shoved off, not having been fastened. The horses were drawn into the river, and falling backwards, broke the pole, when the wagon pitched forward, and all went into the water together.

Mrs. H. and the boys were rescued, but the daughter was drowned. It is supposed that the injury she received, probably from the horses, caused her death instantly. She remained in the water about twenty minutes before the body was recovered. Both horses were drowned.

[Chenango Telegraph.

We learn by an extra of the Northampton (Mass.) Democrat, received by Beecher's express, that about 2 o'clock on Saturday morning a fire broke out in the large barn belonging to the American Hotel and rapidly spread through the wooden sheds adjoining the building to the hotel itself, which was entirely destroyed.

On Saturday night, the steamboat Rochester, on her way to Albany, came in contact with a schooner, by which the kitchen of the steamer was completely demolished, and a part of the wheelhouse torn away. The cook and another man were badly injured, one of them, it is thought, dangerously.

We notice the death of John L. Upshur Esq., on Tuesday last, at the residence of his uncle, Lt. Upshur, in Virginia.

THE DROUTH.—Several weeks have now elapsed since we have had rain, and except for the occasional showers we have received through the summer months, vegetation would have been entirely cut off long since. As it is, the country remains more fertile than could have been expected, while the streams are almost entirely dry. Many factories have been obliged to suspend their operations, and what is worse, there is no appearance of a change at present.

[New-Haven Courier.

The Rochester papers speak of an unparalleled drought in that vicinity. The Democrat says: "The earth, in city and country, is as 'dry as a powder house.' Vegetation of all kinds looks as though it had been kissed by fire. We have had but two or three showers during the last four or five weeks, and they were light. The bed of the Genesee is nearly bare, and most of our mills are idle, for want of water. Many of the wells in the city are dry, and all of them are unusually low. Our principal public-houses are not only obliged to go over a mile for every drop of water they use for cooking and drinking, but have to pay for it by the barrel!"

THE DROUTH.—There was a shower in Boston on Saturday afternoon, but the Post says, "days of soaking rain are needed to replenish the exhausted earth."

Rain fell on Saturday night, for the first time since the 28th ult. in this vicinity. Although it rained from 8 o'clock during most of the night, the thirsty earth had absorbed it all by morning, and there was little to indicate that any thing unusual had happened, beyond a very grateful change in the temperature. [Albany Argus.

In consequence of the severe drouth, the Factories at Amesbury and Salisbury have been compelled to suspend operations altogether. We have heard that such is the case in several other places in this section. [Boston Times.

FIRE AND EXPLOSION.—The keel boat Tiger, of Morgantown, Va. took fire lately while lying at the Luzerne Township ferry, on the Monongahela, in Fayette County. The crew of 8 or 10 men rushed to the forecastle to secure two kegs of gunpowder which had been placed there, but the flames spread all around them with fearful rapidity, compelling them to flee to the shore for safety. They had retreated but a few steps from the boat when the two kegs of powder exploded, making a complete wreck of the boat, and destroying its valuable cargo, consisting of 140 or 150 barrels of salt from 6,000 to 10,000 weight of groceries and other goods, together with a large lot of liquors. Not five dollars worth of the cargo could be saved, and the crew lost all their wearing apparel.

WHEAT CROP IN VERMONT.—The Boston Cultivator contains a letter from a gentleman in Vermont, which states that the wheat crop of this year will equal the consumption. Last year the average yield was about 19 bushels per acre; this year he thinks it will be 25.

IMPROVEMENT OF MORSE'S TELEGRAPH.—It is stated that Prof. Morse has recently made a new discovery. He can transmit the electric current over water without any conducting wire. He says that he can connect England and France by telegraphic communication.

"FLOATING PALACES."—The New York Express gives the length and tonnage of the following steamboats:

	Length.	Tonnage.
Empire,	330	1000
Troy,	294	720
Knickerbocker,	315	968
South America,	286	738
Swallow,	270	700
Albany,	280	725
Rhode Island,	273	745
Massachusetts,	275	1000
Worcester,	250	700
Cleopatra,	270	600
Empire, of Cleveland,	260	1200

THE CATERPILLER.—This deadly enemy of the Southern Planter has made its appearance in the vicinity of Bayou Bœuf, La, sweeping every thing before it. Scarcely a green leaf was to be seen for miles, and whole plantations resembled rye-fields. It was supposed that the crop would be about one third of an average yield.

EARL OF WASHINGTON.—The Baltimore American, in noticing the anniversary of the Battle of North Point, says: "A fact has just come to our knowledge, which it may not be improper to mention at this time. We learn from a reliable source that the British Government had actually made out the papers constituting Gen. Ross "Earl of Washington," in consideration of the capture of the American Capital and the destruction of the public buildings. The death of Gen. B. at the battle of North Point, which took place about three weeks afterward, most effectually frustrated the intention of the Government.

THE SICKNESS AT WOODVILLE, MISS.—The accounts that we receive almost daily from interior sections of the country are truly lamentable. The following from the Woodville Republican of the 7th instant, is indeed a melancholy picture:

Those that have read a description of the "Plague of London," can have some idea of the condition of the Woodville denizens at this time. Some one remarked to-day that the village was spotted with the sick. The reverse is nearer the truth—the well being the spots, while sickness is the whole ground-work of the picture. In a word, there has not been for some time past well persons enough to take care of the invalids. The epidemic has seized all classes and all professions, especially those of the pill and the lancet.

"GONE TO TEXAS."—Many of our readers will recollect the atrocities and depradations of Morrell's gang of murderers and robbers that a few years since set law and justice at defiance in the western part of our country.—Most of them were finally captured and punished, and are now expiating their crimes in various penitentiaries. Morrell, the Captain, and one of the most daring and adroit freebooters that this or any other country ever produced, managed, however, to escape, and his whereabouts has ever since been as much of a mystery as his daring and success were a marvel. The Clarksville (Miss.) Standard has at last singled him out and states that he now resides a few miles above the Robbin's Ferry, on the Trinity river, Texas.

MINUTE MECHANISM.—By a measurement lately made by one skilled in curiosities, it is found that the silk worm's thread is so fine that one drachm of it will extend a distanca of one hundred and eighty-five miles and ninety-two feet; while the same weight of a common grass spider's thread will reach two hundred and twelve miles and seventy-four feet.

FIRE AT NEWINGTON.—The ancient tavern stand, seven miles from Hartford, on the New Haven turnpike, long known as the Gen. Lusk place, was lately destroyed by fire, and what is more to be lamented, several lives were lost. The New Haven Herald gives the following particulars:

Our informant assisted to take from the burning embers two human skeletons, the bodies being almost entirely consumed. One of them was a large man, supposed to belong to Hartford; the other could not be recognized. Besides the dwelling house, three barns were burnt, together with an extensive range of sheds. There were upwards of two hundred tons of hay, and two hundred and fifty shocks of rye, in the barns, which were all destroyed. Six hogs were burnt, and the cattle and horses were saved with great difficulty. The house was occupied by a Mr. Dicks, who had purchased the premises, and was a thriving and industrious man. He escaped with his family of six children in a state of nudity. Several of the inmates jumped from the upper windows, and one young man from the garret, fortunately without injury. The lad was the companion of the giant man who has held public exhibitions, who was also present at the fire and rendered great service in the preservation of life and property.

In addition to the above, during the conflagration, a man went down the well, to save something which had fallen or was thrown into it, where he was prostrated by the noxious gas with which it was filled. Another went down to his relief and met the same fate. A young man followed, suspended by a rope, and succeeded in attaching a rope to the two bodies, by which they were drawn up.

TEMPERANCE AND SUNDAY-KEEPING IN NEW YORK.—A correspondent of the Emancipator, writing from New York says:

O, the vast amount of intemperance and drunkness, with its awful concomitants, in this city! While these thousands of grog-shops are making all sorts of wretchedness and ruin, by day and by night, little interest, comparatively, is felt in the cause of temperance. And the mayor, after granting the thousands of licenses to these "poisoners general," as John Wesley justly calls them, very piously orders them to cease from their labors on the Sabbath day! They may corrupt society, ruin men, and destroy the peace and happiness of families, during the week, according to law, but must not on the holy Sabbath. A very pious temperance man that mayor.

AN UNUSUAL FAMILY MEETING.—The family of the late Chauncy Dickerman, of Hamden, numbering eleven sons and daughters, met together in the house in which they were born, on Thursday week. Their ages added together amount to 641 years. The eldest 73, the youngest 45. It is forty years since they all last met together.

[New Haven Herald.

THE FEVER AT GALVESTON.—The Picayune of the 30th ult says:—"We saw yesterday private letters received by the Republic, from the most respectable sources in Galveston, which give a deplorable account of the ravages of the fever in that city, which, however, had somewhat abated when the Republic left. It swept through some families, prostrating every member, the children and servants not escaping. In the threatening aspect of Mexico, and the risk of an attack upon Galveston, the inhabitants would naturally have found cause for alarm, but the more immediate danger from the pestilence overpowered every feeling of the kind.

DAILY CONVICTED OF MURDER.—The jury in the case of John Daily, charged with the murder of Matthew Hammit, in the Kensington riots, came into Court last evening at nine o'clock, and returned a verdict against the prisoner of MURDER IN THE SECOND DEGREE.

ANOTHER CONVICTION FOR RIOT.—The jury in the case of John O Neil, indicted for riot in disturbing the Native American meeting held in Kensington on the evening of the 3d of May last, this morning returned a verdict of guilty.

COURT OF QUARTER SESSIONS.—In this Court this morning, Thomas Wall was put on trial for riot in Kensington on the evening of the 3d of May last. [Philad. Gaz.

BALL HUGHES, the eminent sculptor, has finished his model for a statue of bronze, representing the late illustrious Bowditch, of Boston. It is destined for Mount Auburn, where repose the ashes of the great man, to whose memory the Bostonians will erect it.

A DRUNKEN HUSBAND.—In an Alderman's office in Philadelphia, the other day, we heard, says the Ledger, a tale of woe narrated by a heart-broken woman, who had come to complain of the conduct of her drunken husband. For the last five months she described him as not having been sober for a whole week in succession, and she exhibited to the Alderman the pawnbroker's tickets for the various comforts and necessaries of her household, which he had carried off and pledged to obtain the liquid fire, the use of which has rendered him callous to all the ties which man should hold most dear. Her tears, as she told the history of her wrongs, convinced the spectators that the last step she had taken was a bitter one to her feelings.

Professor Tucker, of Virginia, estimates the products of our national industry as follows: Agriculture, $654,386,597; manufactures, $239,836,224; commerce, $79,721,086; mining, $42,358,751.

A New York paper of the 21st inst., says, "The London packet of to-morrow takes out 350,000 Mexican Dollars, and the next Havre packet has a small quantity of Specie engaged. There are considerable amounts of Specie coming in from all quarters. Within ten days over $100,000 have been received from Canada, and the South and West are contributing to our vaults."

About $30,000 have already been paid back to importers at this port under the recent decision of Secretary Bibb. The amount of claims is very much larger.

Twenties of the Union Bank of this City, altered from Ones, are in circulation.

The whole amount of Specie exports, from 1st August to 23d September, has beec $1,629,818.

The Madisonian announces that the Committee of the Franklin Institute have made a report on the calamity on board the Princeton, which entirely exonerates the officers of that vessel from all blame.

Sir Charles Metcalf has issued his proclamation calling a meeting of the parliament of Canada on the 22d of October, "for the despatch of business;" this will be the first session held since the removal of the seat of government to Montreal.

The steamer Adelaide, Captain Bougher, struck a rock on Petticoat Bar, about fifty-four miles below Wheeling, on the 13th inst. and sunk. She was chiefly loaded with dry goods, which are nearly all damaged. The loss will be about $50,000.

The Continental Congress imported twenty thousand bibles from Europe in 1778.

At Rio de Janeiro on the 27th inst., there was a report, generally credited, that Brazil was about to declare war againt Buenos Ayres.

Ellis's pail factory at Whitesboro, Oneida county, was cosumed on Wednesday night, with its contents. Loss $2000, and insurance run out.

The Lake Erie steamboat Empire arrived in Buffalo on Thursday evening last, in 75 hours running time from Chicago, a distance of 1072 miles.

The police of Cincinnati have made another descent on a gambling establishment, capturing two negroes, two white men, and all the money and apparatus.

The sum of money received in Philadelphia, in aid of the families of the soldiers who suffered in the late riots, amounts to ten thousand eight hundred dollars.

We learn from the Toronto Colonist that there have been farther disturbances on the Welland Canal. One man has been killed. Work had been stopped.

In Philadelphia and its neighborhood there are seventy Woollen Manufacturing establishments, of cloths, jeans, carpets, &c. which employ 2420 looms and 168 carding-machines. The quantity of Wool used weekly is upwards of 100,000 lbs. In Kensington and Northern Liberties there are nineteen hundred and fifty hand-loom weavers. One of these manufactories consumes all the Wool which can be raised on thirty thousand acres of land.

The Hamilton (C. W.) Gazette has lately contained quite a chapter of accidents:

The death of a Mr. Olmstead, a farmer of Glaudford, by his team running away; the death of Mr. Alvas, the Indian Interpreter of Tuscarora by a loaded wagon falling upon him; the death of Mr. Steward Hunter, aged 16, who was on a collecting tour, and went out pigeon shooting, when his gun accidently went off, the charge passing through his head; the fracture of Mrs. Hunter's shoulder (mother of the unfortunate youth,) by being thrown from a wagon, after having met her son at Hamilton; and the death of James Alex. Bitton, master of a schooner on Lake Ontario, who shot himself in a fit of insanity.

A letter published in the Charleston Mercury says: "A new disease of the congestive character, and the common scarlet fever, have carried more to the grave in the last six months in Tennessee than ever was known in so many years. In the neighborhood of Jonesboro', 400 have died in five months."

A Boston firm is engaged in manufacturing one thousand tents for the Mexican government.

A few days since, Dr. B. B. Brown, simply by a common magnet, removed a particle of iron which had become deeply lodged in the centre of the cornea of the eye, and caused the sufferer very acute pain. This is a happy instance of the application of philosophy to surgery.

[St. Louis Reveille.

Morris and Willis are about to change their weekly Mirror into a daily literary journal, to commence Oct. 7. It will be an agreeable companion of a winter evening.

On Tuesday morning the third story of a store in John street broke through with a tremendous crash, the second and first floors, and discharged a large quantity of iron and timber into the cellar. The third floor had been overlooded.

A brig which arrived at New York on the evening of Sept. 25, fell in with the schooner Brones, from Belfast, which was capsized on the 13th inst. Five persons were taken from the wreck after having been seven days without water or provisions. The Captain had been washed from the deck and drowned.

Another luxury is astonishing the over-sea brethren, thanks to the demolition of time and space, by steam. We copy the following great story about two common Boston lobsters, from the Liverpool Albion:—'At the London and American Shell Fish establishment of Mr. Cole, in Bassnett street, there are frequently to be seen shell fish of an enormous size. Within the last fortnight, for instance, Mr. Cole has imported two monster lobsters which together weighed 47 pounds! One of these is still to be seen.'

DEATHS.—The Presbyterian mentions the death of three members of the last Presbyterian General Assembly, Rev. Enoch Bouton, Rev. T. G. Potts, and Rev. G. D. McCuenn.

MARRIED,

In Berlin, on the morning of the 7th inst., by Rev. Wm. Satterlee, Mr. TRUMAN SAUNDERS, to Miss PHEBE WILCOX, daughter of John Wilcox, all of Berlin.

"I saw two clouds at morning,
Tinged with the rising sun;
And in the dawn they floated on
And mingled into one." H. H. B.

In Verona, on the 18th inst., by Rev. S. M. Burdick, Mr. ABIJAH JONES, Esq., of New London, to Mrs. CALISTA GRANT, of Verona.

On the 16th inst., by Eld. J. Ellis, Mr. JOHN G. SISSON of Plainfield, to Miss RUHAMAH LEWIS, of Butternuts, Otsego Co., N. Y.

At Pawcatuck, R. I., on the 23d inst., by Rev. Alexander Campbell, Mr. ALBERT STILLMAN, to Miss EMELINE ROGERS, all of Pawcatuck.

DIED,

In Scott, N. Y., on the 9th of August, Mrs. HANNAH BABCOCK, widow of Paul Babcock, Esq., aged 75 years. She had been for many years a professor of religion and a member of the Seventh-day Baptist church in Scott, and had exemplified the Christian character by a firm reliance upon the Saviour and attachment to his cause and people. A large circle of relations mourn their loss.

In Stonington, Ct., on the 22d inst., MELVIN, son of Asher M. and Mary E. Babcock, aged 8 months.

LETTERS.

S. P. Stillman, Sebeus M. Burdick, Ethan Stillman (all right,) John Forsyth.

Postmasters.—Sacketts Harbor, New London, Ct.

RECEIPTS.

Westerly, R. I.—Amos Stillman, Nathan H. Langworthy, $2. each.
New York—D. Gordon Wells $2: Alexander Brandon $1.
Sacketts Harbor—Harvey Maxson $2.
Mystic, Ct.—Simeon Fish $2.
New London, Ct.—Charles Stillman $2.
Unadilla Forks—Ransom Lewis $2.
Friendship—Samuel E. Lanphear $2.
Scio —Daniel Stillman $2.
Berlin—Eld. Wm. Satterlee $2.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.

TO PRINTERS.

The subscriber having relinquished the business of publishing the S. D. B. Register, wishes to sell his Press, Type, &c. And he takes this method of saying, that he will sell at a very low rate to any one wishing to purchase. The Press is a No. 3, Washington. There is every thing connected with the Office that is necessary for publishing a paper, and also an extensive quantity of Job Type, and a small Book Bindery.

JAMES BAILEY.
DeRuyter, Madison Co., N. Y. June 18, 1844.

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	4 12 a 4 18
Pearl	4 37 a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 00a24 50
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	8 50 a 9 50
Newcastle	7 00 a 8 00
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 50 a 5 50
COFFEE.
Java	10 a 11
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5¾a 10
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS
Shirtings brown ¾	4½a 6
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	5 a 8
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4 4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4 4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	— a —
Stripes, fast colors	— a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14½a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1¼a 1½
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12½a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Maguesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4½@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	32 50 @35 00
Camwood	40 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	24 00 @26 00
Do Tampico	16 00 @18 00
Logwood, Cpy	26 00 @29 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	13 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 50 @ 2 62
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	10 37 @10 50
No 2 bbl	8 00 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 75 @ 6 50
Buckep't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX.
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun cak	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 25 @ 4 31
Troy	4 18 @
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 13
Michigan	4 25 a 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 a
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	88 @ 95
Do South new	94
Rye, Northern	63 @
Corn N & Jersey	50½@ 52
Southern	46 @ 47
Barley N R

Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A.& RioGrand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng.&Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do RussPSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4¼@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @—
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12½@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@1500
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@30
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4½@ 4¾
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES:
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turp W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 25 @ 5 62
Do prime	3 25 @ 3 50
Pork mess bbl	9 75 @ 9 87
Do prime	8 12 @
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5½
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7½
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10½ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13
Trieste in boxes	6½a
American	5 a
Spring	5½a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7¾
Havana white	8½a 9½
Do Brown	6½a 8½
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¾
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17½a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6½a 6¾
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7½
TEAS.
Imperial lb	30 a 95
Gunpowder	30 a 96
Hyson	40 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
Do E. India	16 a 17
plates I X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	40 a 42
Do merino	36 a 40
Pulled superfine	35 a 36
No. 1	31 a 33
No. 2	[illegible]

Miscellaneous.

UNION WITH CHRIST.

Jesus! on thee I would recline,
And feel that thou art wholly mine.
Within thine arms—upon thy breast,
My weary, aching head I'd rest;
Bask in the sunshine of thy face,
Draw from the fulness of thy grace,
Behold thy glory, hear thy voice,
And in my gracious God rejoice.

My Saviour, cast me not away;
Now at thy feet in tears I lie;
My soul in anguish thou hast known,
Hast mark'd each sigh, hast heard each groan.
And now, a weak, a worthless thing,
Yet all I have—myself I bring;
And weak and worthless though I be,
Thy precious blood was shed for me.

To thee I look—on thee I wait—
Without thee, lost and desolate—
Take me—my soul to thee is given—
Whom have I else in earth or heaven?
To that poor soul thy love impart;
Set me upon thine arm, thine heart;
Thy glorious presence let me feel,
And all thyself, dear Lord! reveal.

M. A. S.

"MY FATHER MADE THEM ALL."

"He is the freeman, whom the truth makes free,
And all are slaves beside. There's not a chain,
That hellish foes, confed'rate, for his harm,
Can wind around him, but he casts it off
With as much ease as Samson, his green withes:
He looks abroad into the varied field
Of Nature, and though poor, perhaps, compared
With those whose mansions glitter in his sight,
Calls the delightful scenery all his own.
His are the mountains, and the valleys his,
And the resplendent rivers. His to enjoy
With a propriety that none can feel.
But who, with final confidence inspired,
Can lift to heaven an unpresumptuous eye,
And smiling, say, 'My Father made them all.'"

From Chambers' Journal.

THE FIRST OFFENCE.

In the cheerful dining room of my bachelor friend Stevenson, a select party was assembled to celebrate his birthday. A very animated discussion had been carried on for some time, as to whether the first deviation from integrity should be treated with severity or leniency. Various were the opinions, and numerous the arguments brought forward to support them. The majority appeared to lean to the side of "crush all offences in the bud," when a warm-hearted old gentleman exclaimed, "Depend upon it, more young people are lost to society from a first offence being treated with injudicious severity, than from the contrary extreme. Not that I would pass over the slightest deviation from integrity, either in word or deed; that would certainly be mistaken kindness; but, on the other hand, neither would I punish with severity an offence committed, perhaps, under the influence of temptation—temptation, too, that we ourselves may have thoughtlessly placed in the way, in such a manner as to have rendered it irresistible. For instance, a lady hires a servant; the girl has hitherto borne a good character, but it is her first place; her honesty has never been put to the test. Her mistress, without thinking of the continual temptation to which she is exposing a fellow-creature, is in the habit of leaving small sums of money, generally copper, lying about in her usual sitting room. After a time, she begins to think that these sums are not always found as she left them. Suspicion falls upon the girl, whose duty is to clean the room every morning. Her mistress, however, thinks she will be quite convinced before she makes the accusation. She counts the money carefully at night, and the next morning some is missing. No one has been in the room but the girl; her guilt is evident. Well, what does the mistress do? Why, she turns the girl out of the house at an hour's notice; she cannot, in conscience, give her a character; tells all her friends how dreadfully distressed she is; declares there is nothing but ingratitude to be met with among servants; laments over the depravity of human nature; and never dreams of blaming herself for her wicked—yes, it is wicked—thoughtlessness in thus constantly exposing to temptation a young, ignorant girl; one, most likely, whose mind, if not enveloped in total darkness, has only an imperfect twilight knowledge whereby to distinguish right from wrong. "At whose door, I ask," continued he, growing warmer, "will the sin lie, if that girl sink into the lowest depths of vice and misery? Why, at the door of her who, after placing temptation in her very path, turned her into the pitiless world, deprived of that which constituted her only means of obtaining an honest livelihood,—her character; and that without one effort to reclaim her—without affording a single opportunity of retrieving the past, and regaining, by future good conduct, the confidence of her employer."

"There is, I fear, too much truth in what you say," remarked our benevolent host, who had hitherto taken no part in the conversation; and it reminds me of a circumstance that occurred in the earlier part of my life, which, as it may serve to illustrate the subject you have been discussing, I will relate." There was a general movement of attention; for it was a well-known fact, that no manufacturer in the town of —— was surrounded with so many old and faithful servants as our friend Stevenson.

"In the outset of my business career," said he, "I took in my employment a young man to fill the situation of under clerk; and according to a rule I had laid down, whenever a stranger entered my service, his duties were of a nature to involve as little responsibility as possible, until sufficient time had been given to form a correct estimate of his character. This young man, whom I shall call Smith, was of a respectable family. He had lost his father, and had a mother and sisters in some measure dependent upon him. After he had been a short time in my employment, it happened that my confidential clerk, whose duty it was to receive the money from the bank for the payment of wages, being prevented by an unforeseen circumstance from attending at the proper time, sent the sum required by Smith. My confidence was so great in my head clerk, who had been long known to me, that I was not in the habit of regularly counting the money when brought to me; but, as on this occasion, it had passed through other hands, I thought it right to do so. Therefore calling Smith back as he was leaving my counting room, I desired him to wait a few minutes, and proceeded to ascertain whether it was quite correct. Great was my surprise and concern on finding that there was a considerable deficiency.

"From whom," said I, "did you receive this money?"

He replied, "From Mr. ——," naming my confidential clerk.

"It is strange," said I, looking steadily at him. "But this money is incorrect, and it is the first time I have found it so." He changed countenance, and his eye fell before mine; but he answered, with considerable composure, "that it was as he had received it."

"It is in vain," I replied, "to attempt to impose upon me, or to endeavor to cast suspicion on one whose character for the strictest honesty and undeviating integrity is so well established. Now, I am perfectly convinced that you have taken this money, and that it is at this moment in your possession; and I think the evidence against you would be thought sufficient to justify me in immediately dismissing you from my service. But you are a very young man; your conduct has, I believe, been hitherto perfectly correct, and I am willing to afford you an opportunity of redeeming the past. All knowledge of this matter rests between ourselves. Candidly confess, therefore, the error of which you have been guilty; restore what you have so dishonestly taken; endeavor, by your future good conduct, to deserve my confidence and respect, and this circumstance shall never transpire to injure you." The poor fellow was deeply affected. In a voice almost inarticulate with emotion, he acknowledged his guilt, and said that having frequently seen me receive the money without counting it, on being intrusted with it himself, the idea flashed across his mind that he might easily abstract some without incurring suspicion, or at all events without there being sufficient evidence to justify it; that being in distress, the temptation had proved stronger than his power of resistance, and he had yielded. "I cannot now," he continued, "prove how deeply your forbearance has touched me; time alone can show that it has not been misplaced." He left me to resume his duties.

Days, weeks and months passed away, during which I scrutinized his conduct with the greatest anxiety, while at the same time I carefully guarded against any appearance of suspicious watchfulness; and with delight I observed that so far my experiment had succeeded. The greatest regularity and attention—the utmost devotion to my interests—marked his business habits; and this without any display; for his quiet and humble deportment was from that time remarkable. At length, finding his conduct invariably marked by the utmost openness and plain-dealing, my confidence in him was so far restored, that, on a vacancy occurring in a situation of greater trust and increased emolument than the one he had hitherto filled, I placed him in it; and never had I the slightest reason to repent of the part I had acted towards him. Not only had I the pleasure of reflecting that I had, in all probability, saved a fellow-creature from a course of continued vice, and consequent misery, and afforded him the opportunity of becoming a respectable and useful member of society, but I had gained for myself an indefatigable servant—a faithful and constant friend. For years he served me with the greatest fidelity and devotion. His character for rigid, nay even scrupulous honesty, was so well known, that "as honest as Smith," became a proverb among his acquaintances. One morning I missed him from his accustomed place, and upon inquiry learned that he was detained at home by indisposition. Several days elapsed, and still he was absent; and upon calling at his house to inquire after him, I found the family in great distress on his account. His complaint had proved typhus fever of a malignant kind. From almost the commencement of his attack, he had, as his wife, (for he had been some time married) informed me, lain in a state of total unconsciousness, from which he had roused only to the ravings of delirium, and that the physician gave little hope of his recovery. For some days he continued in the same state; at length a message was brought me, saying that Mr. Smith wished to see me; the messenger adding, that Mrs. Smith hoped I would come as soon as possible, for she feared her husband was dying. I immediately obeyed the summons.

On entering his chamber, I found the whole of his family assembled to take farewell of him they so tenderly loved. As soon as he perceived me, he motioned for me to approach near him, and taking my hand in both of his, he turned towards me his dying countenance, full of gratitude and affection, and said, "My dear master, my best earthly friend, I have sent for you that I may give you the thanks and blessing of a dying man for all your goodness to me. To your generosity and mercy I owe it, that I have lived useful and respected, that I die lamented and happy. To you I owe it that I leave to my children a name unsullied by crime, that in after years the blush of shame shall never tinge their cheeks at the memory of their father." "O God!" he continued, "Thou who hast said, 'blessed are the merciful,' bless him. According to the measure he has meted to others do thou meet unto him." Then turning to his family, he said, "My beloved wife and children, I entrust you, without fear, to the care of that heavenly parent who has said, "Leave thy fatherless children to me, and I will preserve them alive, and let thy widows trust in me." And you, my dear master, will, I know, be to them as you have been to me—guide, protector, and friend." "That," continued the kind old man, looking around upon us with glistening eyes, "though mixed with sorrow, was the happiest moment of my life. As I stood by the bedside of the dying man, and looked around upon his children growing up virtuous, intelligent and upright, respecting and honoring, as much as they loved their father; when I saw his wife, though overcome with grief at the loss of a tender and beloved husband, yet sorrowing not as one without hope, but even in that moment of agony deriving comfort from the belief that she should meet him again in that world where when I listened to his fervent expressions of gratitude, and saw him calmly awaiting the inevitable stroke, trusting in the mercy of God and at peace with his fellow-men; and when I thought of what the reverse of all this might have been—crime, misery, a disgraceful and dishonest life, perhaps a shameful and violent death—had I yielded to the first impulse of indignation, I felt a happiness which no words can express. We are told that there is more joy among the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth, than over ninety and nine that need no repentance. With such a joy as we may imagine theirs, did I rejoice over poor Smith, as I closed his eyes, and heard the attendant minister in fervent tones exclaim. 'Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea, saith the spirit, for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them.' My friends, I am an old man. During a long and eventful career in business, I have had intercourse with almost every variety of temper and dispositions, and with many degrees of talent, but I have never found reason to swerve from the principle with which I set out in life, to 'temper justice with mercy.'"

"Adieus and farewells are a sound unknown;"

Such was the story of our friend. And I believe not one in that company but returned home more disposed to judge leniently of the failings of his fellow-creatures, and, so far as lay in his power, to extend to all who might fall into temptation, that mercy which, under similar circumstances, he would wish shown to himself, feeling "that it is more blessed to save than to destroy."*

---

* It may not be superfluous to remark, that this little paper describes events of actual occurrence.

HOME.

"Home! thy joy
Joys no stranger heart can tell."

What a charm rests upon the endearing name—My Home! Consecrated by domestic love, that golden key of earthly happiness. Without this, home would be like a temple stripped of its garlands; there a father welcomes—with fond affection—a brother's kind sympathies comfort in the hour of distress, and assist in every trial; there a pious mother first taught the infant lips to lisp the name of Jesus; and there a loved sister dwells, the companion of early days.

Truly if there is aught that is lovely here below, it is Home, sweet home. It is like the oasis of the desert. The passing of our days may be painful, our path may be chequered with sorow and care, unkindness and frowns may wither the joyousness of the heart, efface the happy smiles from the brow, and bedew life's way with tears,—Yet when the memory hovers over the past, there is no place upon which it delights to linger, as the loved scenes of childhood's home. It is the polar star of existence. What cheers the mariner far away from his native land in a foreign port; or, tossed upon the bounding billows; as he paces the deck at midnight alone, what thoughts fill his breast? He is thinking of the loved ones far away at his own happy cottage; in his mind's eye he sees the smiling group seated around the cheerful fireside. In imagination he hears them uniting their voices in singing the sweet songs which he loves.—He is anticipating the hour when he shall return to his native land, to greet those absent ones, so dear to his heart.

Why rests that deep shade of sadness upon the stranger's brow as he seats himself amid the family circle? He is surrounded by all the luxuries that wealth can afford; happy faces gather around him, and strive in vain to win a smile. Ah! he is thinking of his own sweet home, of the loved ones assembled within his own cheerful cot.

Why those tears which steal down the cheeks of that young and lovely girl, as she mingles in the social circle! Ah! she is an orphan; she too once had a happy home; but that house is now forsaken and desolate; its loved ones are now sleeping in the cold and silent tomb,—that gentle mother who watched over her in infancy, and hushed her to sleep with a soft lullaby, a mother only can sing; who in girlhood days taught her of the Saviour, and tuned her youthful voice to sing praises to his name,—has gone to the mansions of joy above, and is mingling her songs and tuning her golden harp with bright angels in Heaven. Poor one! She is now left to tread the thorny path of life, a lonely, homeless wanderer.

Thus it is in this changing world. The objects most dear, are snatched away. We are deprived of the friends whom most we love, and our cherished home is rendered drear and desolate. Passing away is engraven on all things earthly. But there is a home that knows no changes, where separations never take place, where the sorrowing ones of this world may obtain relief for all their griefs and where the sighs and tears of earth, are exchanged for unending songs of joy. That home is found in Heaven.

In the shadowy past, there is one sweet reminiscence which the storms of life can never wither,—it is the recollection of home—of childhood's home. In the visioned future—there is one bright star whose lustre never fades; it is the hope of home—of a heavenly home.—Musical Visiter.

A FATHER'S GRIEF.

"Bring me a Father that so loved his child,
Whose joy of her is overwhelmed like mine,
And bid him speak of patience;
Measure his woe, the length and breadth of mine,
And let it answer every strain for strain;
As thus for thus, and such a grief for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape and form:
If such a one will smile, and stroke his beard;
Cry—sorrow, wag, and hem, when he should groan:
Patch grief with proverbs; make misfortune drunk
With candle-wasters; bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience.
But there is no such man; for, brother, men
Can counsel, and speak comfort to that grief
Which they themselves feel not; but tasting it,
Their counsel turns to passion, which before
Would give preceptial medicine to rage,
Fetter strong madness in a silken thread,
Charm ache with air, and agony with words."

REVENUES OF ROYALTY.

A correspondent of the N. Y. Observer gives the following account of the wealth of the royal family of France:—

The amount of the revenues of the royal family has been calculated, and it would seem, indeed, that it ought to be enough. First, the king receives yearly twelve millions of francs for his civil list. Then, the young Count de Paris, heir of the crown, receives a million. Besides, the state domains yield four to five millions, which go into the coffers of Louis Philip. Further, the private fortune of the king and his sons is about a hundred millions, and must produce at least three millions yearly. This is not all. The duke d'Aumale, son of Louis Philip, inherits from the duke de Bourbon a sum of eighty millions, and the princess Adelaide, the king's sister, possesses also ninety millions. Surely here are millions enough, and Louis Philip is not yet satisfied! And he asks for dowries in the Moniteur for all the princes and princesses of his house! It would not seem probable that this request should find favor among the tax-payers, who do not all own their millions.

'I have debts,' says Louis Philip, 'and the dignity of the throne requires that I should pay my creditors.' No doubt, only explain to us how, with so much revenue, you can have debts; this is the true question. Many suppose that the king, in his fatherly foresight, has placed large sums in foreign banks. If his family is one day driven from France, which is not impossible after so many other examples, he desires that his sons may not be forced, as he was, to resort to teaching for a livelihood. This is wise; no one will blame Louis Philip for taking some precautions for the welfare of his children; but it does not follow that he must exhaust the public treasury to increase the incomes of the royal family.

THE MISSIONARY AND THE PLANTER.

The Rev. Robert Young, Missionary in the West Indies, tells the following story:

When I was in the interior of the country, in my former residence in the island, I was waited upon by a white planter, who requested me to go to his estate to teach his negroes morality and industry. I accordingly went, and about 300 were at once made to assemble in his large hall. I commenced religious worship, and took my stand behind his table. I gave out a hymn, and he assisted me in singing it; and after prayer I gave out a text, which led me to speak against Sabbath-breaking, and another evil very prevalent in that country—two sins of which mine host was notoriously guilty. I perceived that the word was not very acceptable. He evidently writhed under the statements I made; he seemed, by his look, to say, "You are traveling beyond your record." But I had possession, and I determined to keep it. As soon as I had finished, he rose from his seat, under the influence of great excitement, and said, "I don't believe that. Now stop, my negroes. I brought him here to teach morality and industry—that is, that you are not to steal from your owner, nor to be idle while you are at work; but instead of that, he has been finding fault with me, which, to say the least, is very ungentlemanly conduct." "Now," said he, "I will expose the fallacy of all that he has said. He has told you it is wrong to violate the Sabbath; but he must have forgotten that the law respecting the Sabbath was given some thousands of years before the West India islands were discovered, and therefore it could have no adaptation to that part of the world. And, as regards the other crime of which he has said so much, I, for one, wish you could read your Bibles; for you will find it stated there, that Abraham patronized the very thing that Mr. Young has condemned." And thus, by the most shameful perversion of the Scriptures, he went on to defend his views, and sat down much elated with his performance. I rose, and replied, and went further into the subject than I had done before; he rose and replied, and I rose and replied, and we kept up the discussion for two or three hours, to the no small amusement of the negroes, who could no longer subdue their risible powers, but departed with a loud laugh, exclaiming, "Ah! Massa, Parson have been too many for Buckra."

But, hear the sequel. Before I left that country, I saw this same proud planter a humble penitent at the feet of Jesus, putting his confidence alone in that blood which cleanseth from all sin. On my recent visit to the island, I waited upon him, and was delighted to see him. He expressed himself in a way that I cannot here describe; he was walking in the truth, and adorning the doctrine of God his Saviour in all things.

THE SECRET.

'Mother,' said a girl of ten years of age, 'I want to know the secret of your going away alone every night and morning.'

'Why, my dear?'

'Because I have always noticed that when you come back you appear to be more happy than usual.'

'Well, suppose I go to see a friend I love very much, and that after seeing him, and conversing with him, I am more happy than before, why should you wish to know anything about it?'

'Because I wish to do as you do, that I may be happy also.'

'Well, my child, when I leave you in the morning and evening, it is to commune with the Saviour. I go to pray to him—I ask him for his grace to make me happy and holy—I ask him to assist me in all the duties of the day, and especially to keep me from committing any sin against him—and above all, I ask him to have mercy on you, and save you from the misery of those who sin against him.'

'O, that is the secret,' said the child; 'then I must go with you.' [Watchtower.

EXTRAORDINARY FLIGHT OF BIRDS.—A correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says;—"On Friday evening, as the sun was setting, I was standing upon Brooklyn Heights, admiring the beauty of the solar orb, when I discovered the air filled with birds passing due north. These birds continued to pass me for fifteen minutes; and allowing the speed of their flight to have been sixty miles per hour, which is a low estimate, the flock must have extended over a surface of fifteen miles. These birds resembled the sand hill swallows—those nearest to me were probably 200 feet distant; they were not in close order, as pigeons fly, but each bird had a wide margin between itself and its nearest companion. The wind was blowing strong from the north-east, and these birds may have gone to select an inland route to a southern destination, to avoid the risk of being blown out to sea, or they may be bound for a general rendezvous, preparatory to a final departure for the season."

BLACKS IN OFFICE.—The Chief Justice of Dominica, Glanville, is a mulatto; Sharp, the Attorney General for Barbadoes, is a mulatto; Garroway, judge of the court of appeals in Barbadoes, is a mulatto; the governor of Nevis is a mulatto; thirty-two editors of newspapers in the British West India colonies are negroes and mulattoes; twenty-one magistrates are mulattoes; in all the legislative councils and houses of representatives there are no less than seventy-two mulattoes and two negroes making laws for their former masters—the whites. Two-thirds of the army or garrison in those colonies are already composed of African soldiers, commanded by white officers. The church is also abundantly supplied with black and mulatto clergymen; the jurymen are almost wholly composed of negroes and mulattoes.

[Da Costa's "Facts for the People."

IMPROVEMENTS IN CLOCKS.—A new principle in clock making we have seen announced, by which clocks are made to run for a year or more without winding up. They are represented as simple in construction, easily adjusted and regulated, and may be fitted up in any style required. For banks, churches, and other public buildings, they will be very desirable. One that will run four years, without winding up, it is said, is about to be presented to the next President—so that he may be reminded that the time for its being wound up is also the period for the winding up of his arduous duties. [Albany Advertiser.

RELATIVE PROFITS OF FREE AND SLAVE LABOR.—Dr. Beekman related the following history in illustration of this point. During the period in which slavery was tolerated in this State, a gentleman owned a farm in Kinderhook consisting of 750 acres, in the cultivation of which he employed ten slaves. The products of the farm were always insufficient to support the family and carry on the farm, and had it not been for the blacksmithing, which was carried on by the owner of the farm, (but with a set of hands kept expressly for the purpose,) he could not have made a living. When the gentleman died, the farm was divided into three parts, among the heirs. In the mean time slavery, in this State was abolished. The farms were carried on by hired labor; the owners raised larger families than their father—educated them better—lived better—and each, from one-third of the original farm, accumulated a handsome fortune.

[Albany Cultivator.

INTERESTING FACTS IN BRIEF.—Out of every thousand men, twenty of them die annually.

The number of inhabitants of a city or county is renewed every thirty years.

The number of old men who die in cold weather, is to the number of those who die in warm weather, seven to four.

The men able to bear arms form a fourth of the inhabitants of a country.

The proportion between the deaths of women and that of men, is one hundred to one hundred and eight. The probable duration of female lives is sixty; but after that period the calculation is more favorable to them than men.

One half of those who are born die before they attain the age of seventeen.

Among 3,125 who die, it appears by the registers that there is only one person of one hundred years of age.

More old men are found in elevated situations than in valleys and plains.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK

Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Bolivar—Rowse Babcock
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sobeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders
Mystic Bridge—T S Greenman

RHODE ISLAND

Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT

Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson

NEW JERSEY

Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA

Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA

Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.

Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN

Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN

Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA

Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS

Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅝ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1½	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Orford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc, Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co, U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 35, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff, 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1,

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson. Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech, of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38. West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Paila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatars, Taylorsville Del, Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10, Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20 Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 80, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem. Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Co. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Piatt & Co.'s, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 88.

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be required if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and that subscribers will endeavor to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER.

"THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD."

PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, OCTOBER 3, 1844. NO. 15.

Biographical.

FRANCIS BAMPFIELD.

[Continued.]

The occasion of Mr. Bampfield's "coming to the knowledge of the weekly Sabbath," was as follows: During his imprisonment at Dorchester, the subject of the Sabbath, and particularly the question which day of the week ought to be observed, was much discussed in that vicinity. In the year 1665, a brother in the country wrote to inquire his opinion, whether the first or seventh day was the true weekly Sabbath. This letter was laid aside at the time, and remained unanswered until a second letter called his attention to the subject. He determined not to reply, until he had taken time to investigate, and satisfy his own mind. He immediately commenced the investigation, and was surprised to find how much importance was attached to the institution in the Old Testament. But when he examined the New Testament, and found there no explicit authority for the change of the day; that Christ and the Apostles uniformly observed the seventh day; and that obedience to God's laws is made the test of love to him—he was overwhelmed with astonishment that the subject had never taken hold of his mind before, and was driven to the conclusion, that the observance of the seventh day was still obligatory. He was at that time a prisoner; and when he announced his conclusion, both friends and foes rose against him. He feared that his past labors and future usefulness would suffer from it. Yet, he says, "Christ still held me to my former terms of bringing all to an whole Christ, and his whole Word; and suitably the good Spirit framed my heart to this holy resolve, 'Duty is mine; the issues and success of things are the Lord's, and do belong to him.'"

For some time before his change of opinion was announced, Mr. Bampfield observed the Sabbath alone in prison, but with great difficulty and sore trials. At length he imparted his views to one and another privately, until four or five fellow-prisoners were gained over; then more boldly; which being known, two ministers came to him on the afternoon of the sixth day, beseeching him to forbear keeping the Sabbath, if only for the next day, that they might more fully consult of the matter. His answer was, "In the strength of the Lord, No. Duty is as clear as the light to me through the whole Scripture, and if I should put away this statute of Jehovah, though but for one day, I know not but that the Holy Spirit's quickenings and comfortings may be withdrawn. From this time, though sufferings for Christ came on, yet consolations by Christ did abound, and the Scriptures did look with a clear face; such is also the experience of many others who are upright-hearted walkers with Christ, and thorough followers of Christ in this way of his command." The very next day, therefore, he celebrated as the weekly Sabbath, publicly declaring for it from the words of John 18: 37—"To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice." After that time, he never met with any objection which could move him, but all wrought for his fuller confirmation and establishment.

While a prisoner at Dorchester, Mr. B.'s views of baptism likewise underwent a change. He became convinced that immersion was the original and true mode; and although unable to attend to it himself, he uniformly instructed others to receive it in that way. His opinion concerning the administration of the ordinance was somewhat peculiar. Having concluded from his study of the Scriptures, that an ordained preacher was not at all indispensable; and having been before quite "taken off from men," and had much evidence of acceptance with Christ; "he, with one more, traveled from London to Salisbury, where, about the middle of the day, in the broad river of that town, which runs with living water, he received his being baptized; and so having passed under the water, he baptized another."

About the time that this took place, his marriage created some noise. It seems that during his imprisonment, a pious lady had ministered to his necessities, and to those of other ministers who were confined with him. This she continued until his release. Afterwards, needing a help, he married her; whereupon a great cry was raised, that he had married a servant, without portion, birth, or other advantages. In his vindication of himself, he referred to his former gratuitous labors as proof that he was never "greedy after filthy lucre;" and contends that such is the superiority of grace and fitness over birth and dowry, that he ought rather to be commended than blamed.

After his release from prison he came to London, where his liberty in preaching the Gospel continued, like his former imprisonment, nearly ten years, according to Psalm 90: 15—"Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, and the years wherein we have seen evil." His labors were at first in the vicinity of Bethnal Green, in the east of London, where a company of brethren, who were not satisfied to join either of the two Sabbath-keeping churches then existing, requested him to take the oversight of them, and administer the Lord's Supper, which he did "in his own hired house," in which they were accustomed to assemble. He ministered to them for nearly a year; at the end of which time they determined to form a church. On the 5th of March, 1676, they passed into a church state, "on these two great principles, viz: owning and professing Jesus Christ to be the one and only Lord over our consciences and law-giver to our souls; and the Holy Scriptures of truth to be our one and our only rule of faith, worship, and life."*

Mr. Bampfield continued to labor as pastor of the church which he had gathered and organized, until his imprisonment in Newgate. But his attention was not confined to that congregation alone. Such was his care for all the churches, that he planned and executed several important enterprises for their benefit.

The first was a special mission to the Sabbath-keeping churches in Wiltshire, Hampshire, Dorsetshire, Gloucestershire, and Berkshire, to which he was recommended by his church, and "which was prospered with desired success; the report whereof, at his return, caused joy to all the brethren and sisters in fellowship."

Another plan for their benefit is developed in a letter which he wrote, and which was sent out with the approval of his church, "to all the churches of seventh-day-Sabbath observers, who keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus." In this letter, after expressing his thankfulness to God, and his belief that a return to the Sabbath must precede the latter-day glory, he makes the following proposition: "That by messengers from every Sabbath-keeping church in England, or by letters and messages from any such churches or brethren in Holland, New England, or elsewhere, we may meet, if our Lord will, once every year, at London or elsewhere, to keep days of fasting or thanksgiving together; by these means to prevail with the Father for larger outpourings of his Spirit upon ourselves, for his special presence of grace with us, assisting us in all church administrations; so that thereby there may be begotten a better understanding among us; and that then and there we may consult how, by a common stock, to promote any good work, for the maintenance of any church officers, for the training up of hopeful young men in the knowledge of the original tongue and other Scripture learning, and for the procuring of a more exact literal translation of the Old and New Testament into our mother tongue, for the religious education of children, for the relieving of the poor, and other good works; also, to inquire what may be our duty towards the two and the ten tribes of Judah and of Israel, to help forward their conversion; to inquire what the Spirit has to say to our churches and others in this great providential day, and such like public-spirited inquiries." He declared himself ready and anxious to join in carrying out this plan.

In addition to this, Mr. Bampfield drew up a petition to the King, in substance, that "he would make the law of God the law of the land." A second similar petition was afterwards presented to the King; and a third to the then Mayor of London. Indeed, such was his desire for the welfare of the churches and the cause, that he spent his whole time and income in labors which he judged adapted to build them up. Even the books which he wrote were designed expressly for this object, although they contain much of universal interest.

[To be continued.]

---

* From this event dates the "Cripplegate Sabbatarian Church," the rise and early history of which was so intimately connected with the labors of Francis Bampfield, that we will in this connection give a hasty sketch of it. It assembled for divine worship first at Devonshire square, and afterwards at Pinner's Hall, at which place Mr. Bampfield continued to preach until his imprisonment in Newgate, in 1683, where he died. After this event, the church dispersed, until Oct. 1686, when, the times having become more favorable, they again united in church fellowship, and invited Mr. Edward Stennett, then of Wallingford, to take the oversight of them. He accepted the call; but finding it impossible to discharge his duties both at Wallingford and London, he continued their pastor only a short time. In 1690, his son, the distinguished Mr. Joseph Stennett, accepted the pastoral office, which he continued to discharge with great fidelity until his death in 1713. From this time until 1727, there was a vacancy, and the congregation met with the Mill Yard Church. December 27, 1727, "the church gave itself to the pastoral care of Edmund Townsend," who continued until his death in 1765. Mr. Thomas Whitewood succeeded him, but only preached three times before he was removed by death. For nearly twenty years after the death of Mr. Whitewood, Dr. Samuel Stennett administered the ordinances for the church, and preached in the morning of the Sabbath; the afternoon services being conducted by four Baptist ministers in rotation. In 1785 Mr. Robert Burnside was called to the pastoral care of the church, which he continued until his death in 1826. Mr. John Brittain Shenston was his successor, who died in May last.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

REVIEW OF A SERMON—THE DOCTORS AND THE FATHERS.

We have recently met with a pamphlet of sixteen pages, entitled, "The Lord's Day, or the first day of the week proved to be the Christian Sabbath, in a Sermon in the Methodist Protestant Church, Washington Valley, N. J., March 3d, and at New Market April 28th, 1844. By Rev. Dr. Blackmore." The Doctor has chosen for a motto, on his title-page, a very convenient passage of Scripture, for an invitation to a review of his work, which we cheerfully accept, viz.: "He that is first in his own cause seemeth just; but his neighbor cometh and searcheth him out."

The Doctor's text is Rev. 1: 10, "The Lord's Day." He sagely says, "It is evident that by the Lord's day is meant the Christian Sabbath—the first day of the week;" and because he could not find a single scriptural evidence that any besides such uninspired men as Doctors ever meant so, he has mentioned Dr. Ignatius, Dr. Justin Martyr, Dr. Turtullian, and Dr. Origen, as giving it the same appellation in their writings. He neglects to tell his hearers, that besides and before putting this honor upon the first day of the week, as Dominicus Dies, these Drs. always sabbatized on the seventh day of the week. And then, as the Doctor preached, we suppose, for the especial benefit of Sabbatarians, he ought to have known that, following our Jewish Lord and Master, we call no man master or father upon earth; so that a thousand such testimonies would weigh nothing with us against the law of God.

But we are willing to give honor to whom honor is due; and must therefore observe, that under the next two heads of his sermon, Dr. Blackmore gives some appropriate and striking extracts from Dr. Clarke, to prove that God at the close of creation blessed and sanctified a Sabbath, and that it was perpetuated through the subsequent ages, until it was incorporated into the moral code pronounced upon Mount Sinai, and written with the finger of God; and he very significantly asks, "Seeing there must be a particular time for a Sabbath, what day so suitable as that which God had sanctified and set apart for sacred purposes?" But then, in his third division of the sermon, he says, "Although the Sabbath was thus instituted and perpetuated, the time has undergone some alteration with the introduction of Christianity." In the absence of a single passage of Scripture to prove it, the Doctor, on the strength of his pretences, says, "Christ instructed his disciples how to change the seventh day Sabbath into the Lord's day, leaving them to make it known to mankind by their example after his ascension." But this last position being more than the Doctor had abilities to maintain alone, he draws largely upon the words of the distinguished Bishop Horsley (another D.,) and then quotes Mr. Parkinson's Letters, more "clearly to express the ideas he wished to advance upon this part of the subject." And further to prove the reality of this pretended change, he quotes largely from Wilson's two Sermons, who again quotes Bishop Andrews, who quotes the Christian fathers to the time of Eusebius and St. Athanasius; then our author brings up the rear of these witnesses by quoting Dr. Mosheim's account of the practices of all the churches who have been corrupted by the "man of sin;" and "lastly, the usefulness with which the observance of the Lord's day has been attended."

Now, in all this there is an entire disregard of the reason which Infinite Wisdom has assigned in the law for the sanctification of God's holy Sabbath, and a fond leaning to far-fetched inferences, and very doubtful human testimonies. Is this becoming an enlightened Christian, with his Bible in his hand? Would not the same course of reasoning, if followed out, conduct us back to the observance of all the holy days noted in a popish calendar? We do long for the time to come when Christians will, in faith and practice, abide by the law and testimony of the living God, and no more rake from their depositories the weaknesses and discrepancies of the departed fathers.

But that the Doctor and his Sunday-keeping friends may know how their credulity is sometimes imposed upon by Doctors of Divinity, under pretence of giving the testimony of the fathers, I will transcribe for their special benefit, what is said of the testimony of Ignatius in an old book written by Theophilus Brabourne a minister of the Church of England, and dedicated to Charles I. more than two hundred years ago:

"Ignatius, who lived about a hundred years after Christ, saith, 'Let us not keep the Sabbath day in the Jewish manner, pleasing ourselves, with a rest or idleness; for the Scripture saith, he that will not labor, let him not eat. But let every one of us keep the Sabbath day spiritually; rejoicing in the meditation of the law; not in a remissness or idleness of the body, but in an admiration of the workmanship of God; not rejoicing in dancing, nor uncivil shoutings. And after the Sabbath day, let every one that loveth Christ, celebrate the Lord's day, being the queen of days.' (Ignatius, in his Epistle to the Magnesians.) In this exhortation of Ignatius, we may note, that he is speaking both of the Sabbath day, and also of the Lord's day, and insinuates a plain difference betwixt them, as touching their estimation; for the Lord's day he counteth as the queen of days, and so leaveth a place for the Sabbath day, to be in account as the king of days; yea, speaking of the Sabbath day, he useth the word sabbatize; but speaking of the Lord's day, he useth the word celebrate."

In this extract, it is very plain that Ignatius complained that the Jews of his time did not honor the Sabbath day as they ought to do, and as he exhorts his brethren of the Magnesians to do; and that he regards the Sabbath as a holy day of divine appointment, but the Lord's day of another consideration—a celebration of the resurrection of Christ. It was this marrying, by the old fathers, of the illegitimate human days and institutions to the days and institutions of the divine law, that produced the giant corruptions of succeeding times; and every Christian ought now to abhor and put away from him such unlawful alliances.

S. D.

THE JEW AND THE LAW.

The last number of "the Occident and American Jewish Advocate," a monthly journal devoted to the interests of the Jews, has a sermon on the Revelation on Horeb, full of exhortations to remember the law of the Lord. The following extract, which we take from near the close of the sermon, will enable our readers to judge of its spirit:

'Do not, above all, be ashamed of being Israelites; let the world know, and particularly your proselyting friends, that you are proud of your faith, that you glory in your birthright, that you find the highest consolation in all circumstances of life in the law which Moses received on Horeb. For what have the heathens, Mahomedans and Nazarenes to offer which this law does not contain? Let us ask the latter especially, what change has come over the world that our law should not be true as it was on the day of the descent on Horeb? that should make it inferior to their system, every word of which is borrowed from the superabundant spiritual wealth of ours? —Yes! what have they to offer! The law says, "God is no man that He should deceive;" no, say they, He has cast you off, you are no longer his people; as though the Holy One could promise a word and not fulfil it. The law says, "Ye shall not make unto you the image of any thing to bow down before it;" no, say they, emblems are permitted to remind us of the unseen glory. The law says, "Remember the Sabbath to keep it holy;" no, say they, the Sabbath is a Jewish ceremony, we will keep in its stead the first day of the week. To be brief, they claim contradictions to the law as a part of religion, and they bid us to place our hopes of salvation upon a being of whom the law does not speak, whilst on the contrary it forbids us to worship aught save the great Unseen that spoke on Horeb from amidst the fire. And you gentiles expect to lead us astray by such appeals? Can you imagine that the truth of the Lord is so much forgotten that we could doubt of his saving power, his mercy, his unwavering faithfulness?'

A NEGRO BOY'S PRAYER.

Here is a beautiful instance of child-like confidence in God. Those who please may smile at the idea that this boy's prayer had any connection with the result, but the story is a fine one, as we find it in a speech recently delivered in London, by Rev. J. C. Brown, a young missionary about to sail in the "John Williams," for the South Seas.

A boy who had been liberated from a captured slave vessel was landed at Sierra Leone, and placed under the care of a schoolmaster named Thompson. On one occasion, the boys not being in school, and the door being shut, Mr. Thompson, on passing, heard a murmuring; he listened and discovered that this boy was engaged in prayer. His petitions were to the following effect:

"My Lord Jesus, me tank thee that wicked man come and catch me; and that good King George's big ship come and catch wicked man's ship, and bring me here, and Massa Thompson teach me read, and teach me know thee. Me one very great favor to ask; send more wicked man catch father and mother, and send good King George's big ship, catch wicked man's ship, and bring father and mother here, and Massa Thompson teach them read, and teach them know thee; and we all go to heaven together."

Some might say, what a prayer! The boy told what he wanted, and in the words that his wants suggested. Mr. Thompson then went and spoke to him, and asked him whether he thought Jesus Christ would hear such a prayer. To which he replied that he (Mr. T.) had said Christ would hear all prayer. In the evening of that day, Mr. Thompson was walking on the beach, and there saw little Tom. On asking him what he was doing, he replied he had come to see whether Christ had heard his prayer. He continued frequently to visit the beach, and one evening returned dancing and clapping his hands. Mr. Thompson inquired the reason. He replied,—"Prayer answered; father and mother come,"—and dragging Mr. Thompson to the beach, he pointed out two aged negroes who had just been saved from a slaver by a man of war—his own parents. Thus Tom exemplified not only the spirit of real prayer, but showed a waiting spirit, anticipating the reception of the blessing asked.

CHAPTER ON BELLS.

It is said that Bells had their origin in China: and like the ancient gong, (an instrument made of brass, of a circular form, which the Asiatics strike with a wooden mallet,) are principally made of copper, richly ornamented with inscriptions inside and out. It appears, that the use they made of them was to dispel and clear the air of evil spirits, and for this purpose they were made of an enormous size. The Russians introduced them into their country, in the tenth century, and their famous bell at Moscow, which all my readers have heard of, weighed 43,000 pounds, and when it was put in motion would agitate the air of the surrounding country for forty miles. It was their belief in their efficacy, which brought them to England soon after the conquest; and, from our old records, we learn that the tolling of a bell kept the spirits of darkness from assaulting believers; it dispelled thunder, and prevented their molesting either the congregation or the church. Hence the bells were rung with great ardor and devotion in the time of storms.

To ensure their valuable services, many persons in the dark ages were induced to bequeath property for the support of favorite bells, which were rung at their funerals to the discomfiture of the arch fiend, whose attempts to get possession of the deceased were paralyzed by the hollow sound.

Bells are heard to the greatest advantage early in the morning, when the air is still, and the ear has been refreshed by rest.

The Hollanders exhibit the most enthusiastic fondness for bells. Every church and public building is hung round with them in endless variety; and, as music seems to be the national taste, they are never left at rest. They are kept striking and chiming every quarter of an hour, the day through, but this is not enough. On the Stadthouse, a performer is stationed, to play to the market people a superior sort of bell music upon the carillons, (little bells.) This is done by a contrivance similar to the keys of a piano forte, which the carilloneur strikes with all his might, though a Herculean task, often with science and dexterity.

In Amsterdam, it is thought, not less than a thousand bells are kept constantly ringing, which create such a incessant jingle, as to be intolerable to strangers, and enough to distract the ears of any one but those of a Dutchman.

The days of prejudice and ignorance are now past, and bells are no longer used for the purpose of craft, or regarded [illegible] Though introduced under the frauds of religion, they remain a harmless relic of superstition and folly; and the same sounds which filled the peasant with fear in an age of darkness, now form the pious and mirthful strains of an enlightened community.

[Music of Nature.

AFFLICTIONS.

A Christian, for the sweet fruit he bears God and man, is compared to the noblest of all plants, the vine. Now the most generous vine, if it be not pruned, runs out into many superfluous stems, and grows at last weak and fruitless; so doth the best man, if he be not cut short of his desires, and pruned with afflictions. If it be painful to bleed, it is worse to wither. Let me be pruned, that I may grow, rather than cut up to burn.

[Bp. Hall.

RELIGIOUS DUTIES.

The Christian ought to examine what operation, what influence his religious performances have upon him. Prayer, hearing, reading, and such like duties, do naturally tend to enlighten the mind, purify the heart, increase our love, strengthen our faith, and confirm our hope; and therefore where this is not the effect of them, we may conclude that they are not discharged in that manner, and with that sincerity they ought.

[Lucas.

A VERY FAIR HIT.

A collector of church rates in England, called upon a Quaker who kept a dry goods store for the usual sum.

"Friend, is it right that I should pay, when I never attend the established church?"

"The church is open to all," answered the collector, "and you might have attended if you had a mind to."

The Quaker paid the money, and the next day sent the collector a bill of broadcloth. The man came immediately, and in a great passion asked the meaning of it, declaring that he never had a single article from his store.

"Oh!" said the Quaker, rubbing his hands, "the store was open for thee, and thou mightest have had the cloth, if thou hadst a mind!"

VALUE OF A LIBRARY.

The late Prof. Heyne, of Gottingen, when asked by an agent of the government, what was the most secure and certain means of perpetuating the usefulness and fame of a University, replied instantaneously, "A Library—a large and complete Library. Professors and teachers die; patrons die; protecting, helping governments die; for all these are made up and consist of dying men. But a library never dies. It is there when teachers, professors, and patrons are in their graves. It speaks when they are silent. And so long as it is ample, and meets all the wants of students and authors, it will command a large retinue of attendants at the University."

A Dangerous Experiment.—A person who suspected that a minister of his acquaintance was not truly a Calvinist, went to him and said, "Sir, I am told that you are against the perseverance of the saints." "Not I, indeed," answered he, "it is the perseverance of sinners that I oppose." "But that is not a satisfactory answer, sir—Do you think that a child of God cannot fall very low, and yet be restored?" He replied, "I think it will be very dangerous to make the experiment."

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, OCT. 3, 1844.

CHRISTIANITY AND MISSIONS.

The early church was eminently a missionary church. Jesus Christ, its founder, had set the example of going about to do good. When he sent abroad his disciples, he sent them in the character of missionaries. When his followers at a later period were driven from one city to another, they went as missionaries. This was felt to be their first and chief work. Whatever other interests they had were all made subservient to this. And when success attended their labors for this object the announcement of it was always received with joy.

Now the early church was designed as a pattern, in this respect, for all succeeding times. It had received the injunction directly from the Savior, to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Hence its history was the best commentary upon the duty enjoined in that command. But is the church now imitating the example and copying the pattern which has been set? Is the work of making known the truth felt to be the first and chief work? We fear not. Indeed, it is painfully certain, that her own adornment and popularity engrosses more attention than does the salvation of the ignorant and perishing abroad. The result is seen in a low state of piety, conformity to the world, and the absence of many of the higher excellencies of the Christian character.

Experience has shown, that to engage earnestly in missionary labors is the church's best protection against error and formality, and the best pledge of inward health and outward success. It is with the church, as it is with the mind of an individual; if the attention be wholly turned upon itself, the result will be unhealthy action; if it be extended to others, a field will be opened for its exercise, and growth will be the result. Multiplied are the reciprocal benefits which come from missionary labor. It calls into exercise the best abilities and the best feelings; it enlarges the heart, and increases all the capacities for enjoyment; it prevents discord and petty jealousies, by furnishing a noble object of common interest. It blesses all—those who perform the labor, as well as those who are the objects of it.

With such views of the duty and the benefits of engaging in missionary labors, who can fail to feel an interest in the work? We believe that no circumstances can justify the Christian in overlooking it. Though personal and pressing calls may not be made upon him for contributions, he ought, as a matter of duty, to lay by him in store for the object as God has prospered him. The adoption of this course among Christians, would obviate the necessity for many expensive agencies and prevent many of the failures from a want of means. If each believer in Christ felt himself responsible to do something in this work, and each Christian church regarded itself as a missionary society for this purpose, there would be but little difficulty in carrying it out. The churches themselves would be revived, the destitute would be provided for, and the spirit of Christianity would be beautifully exemplified.

NOT TO CONDEMN, BUT TO SAVE.

Christ came into the world for the express purpose of saving sinners. This is the crowning doctrine of the Gospel. Though we had courted and merited destruction; though we were already under condemnation; though nothing less than his death could make atonement for sin; yet he did not hesitate, but freely gave himself a ransom for us. An evil and bitter thing must sin be, which ruins men and requires the death of Christ. Holy and righteous must be the law, which could only be magnified and made honorable by such means. But the death of Christ does not save men in their sins. It provides a way, opens a door of hope, and bids us look and live.

SUNDAY ON THE CONTINENT.

The following extracts are taken from a letter of an American clergyman traveling in Europe. They describe a state of things which results naturally from denying the authority of the fourth commandment. Just so far as men depart from that, they expose themselves to similar consequences. Safety can be found only by adhering to the commandment of God. We copy from the "Churchman."

"Our first Sunday in Europe we passed at Marseilles in the south of France. It was a Roman Fete Day, and the scene strongly reminded us of the anniversary of our national Independence at home. The morning was ushered in with the ringing of bells—the roar of cannon—martial music and military parades. Innumerable flags and banners were suspended across the streets—waving from the tops of the public buildings and from the shipping in the harbor—the streets crowded with citizens and the rural population from the country around. Places of amusement and carnal indulgence presented unusual attractions, inviting the multitude to dissipation, gaity and pleasure, while the religious processions and the parading a full image of the Virgin through the streets, to receive the oblations of the faithful, in gifts of money and presents to 'Our Lady,' did little I fear towards sanctifying that day; and each succeeding Sunday until we joyfully landed upon the shores of England witnessed a repetition of the spirit at least of the above.

"During our stay in the capitol of his Holiness, the drawing of a lottery took place on a Sunday afternoon, attended by fifteen or twenty thousand of the citizens, and were kept in order by a company of the Pope's soldiers. At Paris Sunday seems observed only by an increase of business and gaity. Work and traffic of all kinds proceeds as upon any other day, interrupted only by an excess of pleasure—where the folly of one hour serves only to introduce the folly of the next; and every where we went upon the continent theatres and other places of amusement were more abundant than on any other day, and nothing appears to show that the day is sanctified unto the Lord as a day of holiness and rest."

PERSECUTION IN FRANCE.

A remarkable instance of persecution for conscience's sake has been recently developed in France. It seems that some time ago M. Maurette, a Catholic priest, was brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, and thereupon abandoned the church in which he had been brought up. He soon after published a statement of his reasons for adopting the Protestant faith, and exposed some of the Romish superstitions. For this he was condemned to a year's imprisonment, and a fine of 600 francs, as being guilty of insulting and deriding a religion, the establishment of which is legally recognized in France. An appeal was made to a higher court, where the decision was confirmed. The editor of a French paper, in announcing the decision, says: "We have been struck by a sort of stupor, on learning that in France, in 1844, a man, honorable, and honored by all that know him—a man, to whose excellent conduct, charity, disinterestedness, humanity, and moderation, public testimony has been borne by those who sympathize not with his new faith, but who have seen his labors in the parish of which he was curate, that such a man has been condemned to imprisonment for a year in company with robbers, because he has ventured to publish the reasons that lead him to forsake the Pope and embrace the gospel."

KEEPING THE SABBATH.

Mr. Editor—I beg leave to inquire of those Seventh-day Baptists, who profess to take the fourth commandment as their rule of conduct, upon what Scriptural authority they travel with their horses and carriages considerable distances, or even at all, to meetings on the Lord's Sabbath?

ALPHA.

Sweedesboro, N. J.

Although this inquiry is not directed particularly to us, we will venture to say a few words in reply to it. In doing so, we shall speak as to a candid inquirer after truth, and not as to one who raises a supposed difficulty for the mere sake of objecting. To such, this is our answer:

1. The fourth commandment says, "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." The word here translated work, generally refers to trade, art, or occupation. From this we suppose that the commandment forbids the pursuit of our ordinary callings which are proper on other days, and requires us to make the day one of rest to the Lord; but does not require that we should cease from all action, and shut ourselves up in some corner.

2. We find that among the Israelites the services of the temple were performed without profaning the Sabbath, such as preparing the sacrifices, offering a double portion, changing the shew bread, &c. A holy convocation was likewise held. From this we learn that the Sabbath had its duties, that these required active service, and included assembling.

3. Our Saviour was accustomed to attend upon places of worship, to travel at some times in reaching them, to heal the sick, and do works of mercy, upon the Sabbath, which course he vindicated as no breach of the Sabbath, but as consistent with its proper keeping. His example was imitated by his Apostles. Hence we infer, that to neglect these duties, under whatever pretence, would be breaking rather than keeping the Sabbath.

4. Granting that the rest of the Sabbath does not exclude, but rather includes, assembling at the place of worship, the only remaining question is, whether we shall go there on foot, or with horses and carriages. We believe, in the light of the Scripture facts to which we have referred, that either would be consistent with the spirit and letter of the fourth commandment. No doubt men may break the Sabbath by driving or walking so far to meeting, as to make the day one of labor, rather than rest. Nevertheless, we must think that in such case the sin would not be in traveling with horses and carriages.

THE QUESTION SETTLED.

We have before us several religious papers containing lengthy articles on the subject of the Sabbath, and giving a variety of conflicting theories. We will give a hasty notice of some of them for the benefit of those who think the question to be too well settled to need discussion.

1. The first that comes under our eye is the "Western Baptist," published at Buchanan, Va. In a communication two-and-a-half columns long, a correspondent attempts to show that the Sabbath was done away at the death of Christ; that the notion of a change of the day is from the priests; and that the "Lord's day," so-called, is altogether a different institution from the Sabbath. The following extracts will serve to show the writer's opinions of the difference between the two days:

"In the next place we promised to contrast this with what the priests say. I suppose we are aware that they have ascended the throne, and undertaken to legislate for God. We know that they have presumed to form governments, give laws, and alter times and days. They have also published an edict, declaring that the seventh day of the week, or Sabbath, is changed to the first day. Now I ask, in all sincerity, where is the chapter or verse in all God's word, that says the Sabbath is changed? They could with as much propriety change the day of American independence from the 4th of July to the 1st of August, as to change the day that God has said is the Sabbath, to the first day of the week. Do we not all know that no commemorative day can be changed? All God's universe cannot change the Sabbath from the seventh to the first day, unless God was to undo the work of creation, do it over again, rest on the first day, and give a command to that effect.

"We will now approach the first day of the week. This day is not in a single instance in all God's Word called the Sabbath day. This is enough to deter any but a would-be God, from calling it so. But those characters must figure God's arrangement, add, abolish, name, and alter as they think best. These two days are different in their commemorative objects, different in design, and different in name and time."

From such considerations as these, the writer concludes, that if there be any Sabbath it is the seventh day. But as almost all deny the [illegible] of this day, he saves himself from the charge of inconsistency by denying the authority of the Sabbath entirely.

2. The next paper we take up is "The Perfectionist," from Putney, Vt. It contains an account of the Saratoga Convention, accompanied by comments designed to show that Sunday, or "Dr. Bound's day," should be placed "in the same category with Ash-Wednesday and Good-Friday."

To these we might add extracts from other papers, from the Vermont Observer, the Primitive Christian, the Rose, etc., each giving expression to opinions different from the other, and all combining to show that the question, which day ought to be observed and how it ought to be observed, is far from being settled. If professed Sabbath reformers will shut their eyes against these things, they must expect to meet the consequences.

WHERE IS DR. EDWARDS?—A late New Orleans paper represents a state of things in that city which shows the friends of the Sabbath, and of good order, that their work is not yet completed. "While waiting," says the editor, "at the depot of the Pontchartrain Railroad on Sunday last, a little after noon, we could hear the keeper of a keeno table rolling his box and calling out his game; proclaiming, in fact, and in utter contempt of every religious and moral feeling, that all who wished to indulge in the sordid vice of gambling had an opportunity of gratifying their base passion, and of luring others to do likewise."

[New York Evangelist.

We can tell the Evangelist where Dr. Edwards is. He is attending Conventions among the "friends of the Lord's day." He is the last man to vindicate its claims among those who deny its authority or neglect its duties. With such errorists he has no fellowship—not he. Who ever heard of his admonishing or instructing such persons? It would lower his dignity and endanger his self-complacency. Besides, he might be pressed with the unwelcome suggestion and inquiry, 'The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God—do you keep it, Doctor?'

DEATH OF DR. CARSON.

Some of our readers may have seen a work on the "Mode and Subjects of Baptism," recently published, embodying the results of much research and reflection. It was written by Rev. Dr. Carson, of England, and is regarded by the Baptists as a most valuable contribution to their standard publications. A correspondent of the Baptist Advocate gives the following account of the sudden and melancholy death of this eminent scholar.

"It appears that on the 16th of August, he reached the quay at Liverpool to embark for Belfast; and while walking leisurely upon the wharf, he pulled out his watch to ascertain how long a time would elapse before the steamer would leave the harbor. While in the act of looking at the time piece, he approached too near the edge, and was in a moment precipitated from a height of nine feet into the tide. A small boat from the quay immediately proceeded to his rescue, and as he rose to the surface, he was caught and placed in safety in it. He was found, however, to be much exhausted from the shock, a dislocation of the shoulder occasioning him much pain. This being speedily adjusted, he was placed in his berth, and the vessel set sail. On reaching Belfast, he was conveyed to the residence of the Rev. Mr. Wilson, the Baptist clergyman of the place, in a state of extreme debility. Symptoms of a congestion of blood upon the lungs soon appeared; and although attended by his son, Dr. Carson, and other eminent men, in a few hours he ceased to be an inhabitant of this world of sorrow and of sin. His age was sixty-eight."

DIVISION OF THE METHODIST CHURCH.—Since the action of the Methodist Conference in the case of the slave-holding Bishop, the Methodist papers have been filled with articles about the division of the church. It has probably led to ten times as much discussion on the subject of slavery, as would have been secured without that action. But, strange as it may seem, after all the bluster on both sides, no body seems ready to draw the dividing line. Many at the South seem afraid of being left alone, while many at the North seem equally afraid of leaving them alone. In such circumstances, the question of division will be a most difficult one—not to be settled without much sacrifice of feeling.

"A PROPOSITION."—This is the title of an article in the Biblical Recorder, stating that applications have recently been made to the Home Mission Board, which will make it necessary for the Board to speak out on the subject of slavery. The proposition is, that the question of slavery be fully and fairly discussed by three northern and three southern men, and that the discussion be printed and circulated. The proposition finds favor with the editor of the Baptist Advocate; but we doubt whether it would have much to do with the Board's action.

DEATH.—We learn that Mr. Daniel, who has labored in Ceylon for the last fourteen years, in connection with the English Baptist mission, has been removed by death. His illness was of short duration; the loss will be deeply felt.

For the Recorder.

MISSIONARY NOTICE.

The American Seventh-day Baptist Missionary Society met at Verona, Sept. 12, 1844; W. B. Maxson presiding. The Treasurer's Report was presented; and the General Agent made a statement of the condition of the Society's affairs. Hereupon Joshua B. Maxson, Geo. P. Maxson, and Truman Saunders, were appointed a committee to devise and present a plan for liquidating the debts of the Society; after which, the Society adjourned to the call of the President.

The Society met again Sept. 13, when the Committee before named made the following report:

1. They recommend that one more effort be made to collect the dues of the Society, and that further contributions be solicited. 2. That the Standing Fund be called in. 3. That whereas the Society is indebted beyond its available funds, and cannot honorably dissolve until provision has been made for liquidating its debts, they recommend that the stockholders of the standing fund be requested to consent to a dividend of the joint stock for the canceling of the obligations of the Society, which, in the opinion of the Committee, will not exceed twenty-five per cent. 4. That the remainder of the standing fund be paid back to the original donors. 5. That after all the audited demands have been thus liquidated, and the remainder of the fund paid back, the Society dissolve. 6. That S. S. Griswold be an agent to carry out this plan.

The report was adopted.

At a subsequent meeting, Sept. 15, the officers of last year were re-elected, an order on the Treasurer for sixty dollars was given to S. S. Griswold, and the publication of the Minutes in the Sabbath Recorder was requested.

W. B. MAXSON, President.

To the Members of the S. D. B. Missionary Society:

By request of the Society I make the following suggestions relative to its concerns:

It is well known that for some time past the expediency of a standing fund, as a means of carrying on our benevolent operations, has been questioned. A misunderstanding concerning the management of the business, on the part of those who have given their notes of life-membership, has also produced some disaffection towards the society, which has hindered its operations. These considerations, together with the fact that a new organization, called the Missionary Association, has already commenced operations, and promises greater usefulness as a medium through which we can carry on our benevolent designs, have led this society to adopt the report of the committee on Ways and Means as presenting the best course to pursue.

As much interest on the notes of life-membership is still in arrears, and as the society has incurred obligations upon the strength of this interest, it is but just to expect that the arrearges will be immediately paid up, except in cases of actual inability; this is therefore expected by the society. If any of the stockholders are unwilling to have a dividend made according to the report of the committee, the agent requests to be notified before the first day of January, 1845. The plan of the society, at its session in 1843, failed from the neglect of those who should have paid their dues in Jan. 1844. Hence the necessity of promptness in this case. Those who have any of the standing fund in their keeping, are requested to hold themselves in readiness to refund the same when called for, which will probably be by the first of Jan. 1845. Each local agent is requested to transmit to me a list of the names of those who have given their notes of life-membership, together with the amount of interest due on each note; also, an account of all moneys loaned in his vicinity, with the amount of interest due thereon, previous to the first of Jan. 1845. Persons having claims against the society are also requested to forward the same to me previous to the first of Jan. 1845.

Finally, unless each and every stockholder consents to the above-mentioned division to pay off the society's obligations, it will still hang as an incubus upon us to hinder our future usefulness.

Address, Little Genesee, Allegany Co., N. Y.

SHERMAN S. GRISWOLD, Agent.

WORK OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN SYRIA.—While the Spirit of God is apparently withheld from most of the American churches, there have been cheering indications of His presence in three fields in Syria, occupied by the missionaries of the American Board, viz., among the Armenians of Constantinople, the Nestorians, and the Arabs of Beirut and Mount Lebanon. The hand of God in the East may prove a signal, calling the churches in this Western world to prayer and effort for the extension of the kingdom of Christ.

"WORSE BOOKS THAN THE BIBLE."—The Pope, in his late bull, speaking of the efforts made to send the Bible into Italy, uses the following language:

"This society strains every nerve to introduce among them, by means of individuals collected from all parts, corrupt and vulgar Bibles, and to scatter them secretly amongst the faithful. At the same time their intention is to disseminate worse books still, or Tracts designed to withdraw from the minds of their readers all respect for the Church and the Holy See."

"Worse books than the Bible! (says a London paper.) So then the Bible, in the language of the people among whom it is circulated, is, by a solemn decree of Gregory XVI, pronounced to be a bad book!"

THE BAPTIST CHURCH AT COPENHAGEN.—We gave an account of Mr. Mœnster's imprisonment some time ago. Late information says: "During Mr. Mœnster's imprisonment, the church at Copenhagen, which now consists of about 300 members, is sadly harrassed, meeting for worship on commons in the vicinity of the city, and even here they are pursued and dispersed by the police. They however remain steadfast, and by their meek and quiet deportment, have created much sympathy from all parties."

MOURNFUL.—A letter from the Bahamas, written to Rev. Mr. Knibb in Jamaica, says:—"You will be pained to learn that the 'Colonial Church Union of Jamaica' has extended itself to these once peaceful shores, and that we are afflicted by seeing our poor, dear people, hated, scorned, fined, whipped, and imprisoned, for no other reason whatever than that they are Baptists."

"CAN'T BE RELIGIOUS ANY MORE TILL AFTER THE ELECTION."—In an article under this head the Oberlin Evangelist says: "Certainly not, unless you intend a most sacred regard to your conscience and the will of God, in casting your vote, and in your conduct prior to that event. Nor without the deepest repentance can you be more religious after the election, unless your 'eye has been single' up to that time."

ANTI-SLAVERY CONVENTION.—The N. Y. State Anti-Slavery Society held its ninth annual meeting in Utica, Sept. 19. It was attended by a large concourse of intelligent and enthusiastic citizens; and addressed in a spirited manner by several distinguished philanthropists.

A CONGREGATION OF MINISTERS.—It is stated that there were a thousand ministers present at the late Missionary Meeting in Worcester—the largest number ever convened in this country.

REVIVAL.—The Village Watchman, published at Waynesburg, Pa., says that a protracted meeting has recently been held in that vicinity, which resulted in the professed conversion and baptism of about 70 persons.

ABNER KNEELAND, for a long time editor of the "Investigator" at Boston, died at Salubria, Iowa, on the 27th of last August.

DEATH OF MR. SHIPHERD.—The Rev. JOHN J. SHIPHERD, the well known projector and founder of the Oberlin Institute and Colony, and formerly pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Elyria, died at Walton, Michigan, on the 16th inst., aged 42 years.

Gov. Hammond of S. C., has appointed Thursday, the 3d day of October, as a day of Thanksgiving, Humiliation and Prayer, throughout the State.

"The bishops, in theory, are indeed the governors of the church. In practical effect, however, on the minds of the majority, the editorial chair stands far above them."

WHISKY.—The distilleries of this city and Brooklyn now make about 25,000 gallons per day and consume about 8000 bushels of grain, two-thirds corn and one-third rye.

A very severe storm commenced in New York about mid-day on Saturday. The wind at first was from the north-east, but about noon on Sunday it chopped round to the south-west, blowing with great fury, while the rain fell during some of the time in torrents. The tide in Harlem river rose higher than ever before known, everflowing the bridge, and washing away some parts of the embankment. Several fine trees in the city and several chimneys were blown down, and considerable injury was done in the harbor.

A writer from Philadelphia gives the following account of the storm there:—

"We were visited yesterday morning with a steady rain which has continued up to the hour of closing, with but the slightest intermission. It will no doubt be productive of great benefit to the country, but here it has done considerable damage, by the filling of cellars, &c. in various parts of the City and District. Washington Square has suffered materially. Two large willow trees are blown down, one of them having been torn up by the roots. Several vessels have also sustained damage."

SABBATH ACCIDENTS.

STORM AND LOSS OF LIFE.—On Saturday afternoon the city of Montreal was suddenly visited by squall from the North and West, resembling in fury a tropical tornado. The morning had been oppressively hot, and about the time we mention a gathering of dense clouds, preceded by a slight fall in the barometer, took place, and there was a general expectation of a heavy thunder storm. Suddenly, however, a gust of wind arose with such violence as in a few moments to elevate the whole dust of the city, and to suspend it like a funeral pall, and darken the whole atmosphere until it floated away.

The river was of course a perfect sheet of foam, and some trifling damage was done in the harbor by vessels straining their moorings.—The course of the storm being nearly on the line of the river, it was felt for some distance to the North. We learn that the Souter Johnney, which arrived here yesterday at noon from Quebec, saw one schooner on her road which had lost her mast, and another which had her sail blown away.—We fear that we shall shortly have intelligence of many calamities.

It is our painful duty to relate, that during the height of the squall a melancholy catastrophe occurred on the river. Mr. Cooke, the writing master of the High School of Montreal, in company with two brothers of the name of Dean, lately from England, and a gentleman named Wilkinson, were on their way to Sorel, on a voyage of pleasure. When opposite Point au Tremble they were overtaken by the full fury of the squall, their canoe was upset, and melancholy to record, all sunk to rise no more. A person who was in a canoe about ten yards behind them, and who narrowly escaped the same fate, relates that their canoe was whirled twice round, and immediately overturned, and that not one of the party ever appeared on the surface.

ACCIDENT.—A sad accident occurred at Cheetowago, Erie Co., N. Y., on Saturday, the 28th of Sept. "The accident happened at a Loco-Foco gathering, which had been called for the purpose of raising a hickory pole, when some of the tackling gave way, by which the tree fell and killed Major Geo. Zahm, editor of the German paper in Buffalo, and Mr. Chas. Esslinger, a jeweller, also of that city, besides breaking both legs of a Mr. Peter Smith, and inflicting serious injuries to a fourth person."

The steamer H. S. Thibodeaux sunk near the mouth of the Kentucky River, on Saturday last, while on her passage from New-Orleans to Cincinnati. She had considerable of a cargo of merchandise to different consignees in that City. She only sank to her cabin floor, and probably will not be a total loss. She was partly insured.

General Intelligence.

FROM MEXICO.—The New Orleans papers of Sept. 19th, contain very late and somewhat important intelligence from Mexico.

The most important news is that the town of Metamoras has been destroyed by a hurricane. It occurred on the night of the 4th ult. and was more tremendous in its effects than the hurricanes of '35 and '37. More than two-thirds of the houses of the city were prostrated, and the remainder were more or less injured.

The correspondent of El Censor de Vera Cruz estimates the whole loss at above two hundred souls. The direst destruction, however, so far as we can learn, was at the two mouths of the Rio Grande, some thirty miles below the city of Metamoras. Here scarcely any were saved.

The most active measures were taken at once for the relief of the sufferers, and a general subscription was about to be opened for the purpose.

The Picayune of the 20th says: The greatest destruction occurred in the mouth of the Rio Grande. This river debouches by the Boca del Rio and Boca Chica; at each of these there were settlements, and as one paper informs us, over three hundred inhabitants.

Both were entirely submerged. A letter dated August 9th, states that the remains of sixty-four people who perished at the Boca del Rio had already been found and interred, and that it was ascertained that as many as twenty seven were destroyed at the other mouth of the river.

It is presumed that many more have perished whose names were unknown. The Mexican papers are full of details showing of how frightful a nature was this catastrophe.

It is reported, verbally, and by private letters, that active measures are in progress, both to collect men and prepare them for the campaign. Desertions, it is added, are scarcely less numerous than recruits.

We hear nothing farther, by this arrival, of the "advance army of 10,000," which it was before reported had marched toward the Rio Grande.

THE POTATOE CROP.—The following extracts we copy from the North American:

The potatoe crop in this state is ruined. The Shakers, who engaged to deliver fifteen thousand bushels here, have given notice of inability to furnish a single bushel, and will hardly have enough for their community, offering to the "world's people" the whole crop if they would dig it. The only section from which no complaint is made is Maine, but it is hardly possible that even there the crop has escaped the disease.

CATSKILL, September.—The potatoes are all perishing about us, and indeed all through this part of the state, in the ground and out of it. In some instances, after being dug and put into barrels in the cellar in perfect order, they have been found in three days so offensive, as to render it necessary to throw them away. This will prove a great public calamity, so important is the potatoe crop to all.

HOMER, Sep. 16.—The only essential crop that has failed is the potatoe; that has suffered amazingly from the gangrene. If a quarter of a crop should be realized, it will be more than I anticipate.

CLEAVELAND, OHIO, Sep. 20.—The potatoe crop in this section, which a few weeks since promised to be a very large one, we learn from our agricultural friends is much injured by diseased potatoes. We are informed that in some instances diseased potatoes have proved fatal to swine fed with them.

The New Haven Herald says:

We have been told that in one town in this county the effluvium exhaled from an undug potatoe field was as offensive as whitefish, and that this is the case at Horse Neck, &c. That at Colchester men could scarcely be hired at two dollars per day to remove these putrifying articles from cellars, and in some places farmers had ploughed them in deep to get rid of them.

NEWS FROM THE OREGON EMIGRANTS.—Five men arrived at Independence, Missouri, in the beginning of this month, bringing intelligence from the emigrants who left last Spring for Oregon. These men are direct from Fort Laramie, distant about eight hundred miles from Independence. They state that the last of the emigrants left Fort Laramie on the 3d of August, and expected to reach their place of destination about the first of October. The emigrants had plenty of Bacon, but were badly off for Flour and Bread-stuffs, and it is feared, had nothing like a supply to carry them through. Although there was plenty of flour at the Fort, the price being forty dollars per barrel, and only to be had for cash, they could not procure it. Sugar and coffee were also quite scarce with them. Their teams were jaded and weak, and their cattle generally in a bad condition. It rained incessantly during the first two months of their journey, so that all the water courses were unusually high. They complained greatly of the hardships and fatigues of the trip, but enjoyed good health, and had lost only one man by death. They had divided and formed themselves into several parties, owing to dissensions which had taken place in the company. It was thought that they would reach Buffalo in five or six days after leaving Fort Laramie, where they hoped to lay in a sufficient supply of provisions to subsist them till they arrived at their destination. Fears were entertained of their being harassed by the Sioux Indians, whose Chief had despatched a large war party for the purpose of attacking them; but the only danger they apprehended in the event of such an assault was the loss of cattle.

REGISTRATION OF THE INDIANS.—Mackinac, the kingly isle of our Mediterraneans, has recently been literally encompassed by savages. Some 3500 of the different bands of the Chippewas assembled there to receive their annual stipend from the General Government, and their lodges and bark canoes arranged along the silvery beach presented a fine view of an extensive Indian encampment. Previous to receiving the payment a registration of the numerous families of the tribe takes place, and a correspondent of the Chicago Journal thus notices the registration at Mackinac:

In the registration of the Indians, it is an object for them to make their families as numerous as possible, being paid per capita.—Barefaced falsehood and every species of cunning were resorted to to enable them to count. Children were lent and borrowed—accomplices corroborated each other's statements, and endorsed each other's falsities—but all to very little effect. The very efficient officer of the Government in almost every instance detected the deceit and discovered the truth. A smile from the whole assembly greeted a failure in any of these attempts at deception.

A group, consisting of a slender youth of fourteen, a woman of mature years, and a number of grave, noble-looking old men, attracted my attention. On inquiry I found them the hereditary chieftain of the tribe, with his mother and privy councillors. A strong leaven of cunning destroyed in the young chieftain an otherwise fine countenance; the queen mother bore the impress of high rank in the perfectly negligee arrangement of her costume, which scarce protected her from the vulgar gaze. But the old braves, who composed the council, would have graced any court in Christendom. One, the prime minister, the Nestor of the group, was a magnificent fellow—about three score years and ten, erect, commanding, with eye undimmed and countenance denoting intellect and energy; he seemed the last remnant of the nobility of his race. An instance of the arrogance of the young chieftain, perfectly characteristic of the savage, occurred in the evening. He bought a barrel of flour, beckoned three or four stout fellows to roll it to his tent, and strutted beside them with folded arms, with all the pride of the Cæsars.

[Cleveland Herald.

MORMON NEWS.—We learn from the Warsaw Signal that Lyman Wright, one of the leaders of the Mormons, has left Nauvoo for the pine region of the Wisconsin, with about two hundred followers, comprising the most reckless of the Mormon community.

Sidney Rigdon is said to have left for Pittsburg, and it is added that a large number of the English will soon follow him.

Dissensions are said to exist among the Mormon leaders. Mrs. Smith, the widow of Joseph Smith, is accused of withholding the transfer of property belonging to the Church, held in Joseph Smith's name. There was a rumor that she had purchased property at Hampton, where Law, and the seceders reside.

Brigham Young lately preached a sermon in Nauvoo, in which he is said to have avowed the spiritual wife doctrine—a matter which had been charged upon and denied by them.

The temple is going ahead with astonishing rapidity, a great portion of the population being employed upon it. The leaders prophesy the reappearance of Jo., to consecrate and dedicate it to the Lord, and to hasten this event, the poor fanatics are exerting themselves to the utmost.

Many persons are leaving Nauvoo, and others would leave if they could dispose of their property. At a meeting of Mormons in the Bear Creek settlement, week before last, they resolved to quit the country.

ACCIDENT TO JOHN QUINCY ADAMS AND HIS LADY.—The True Sun says, Mr. Adams and his lady were both considerably injured a few days since at the City Ferry, by falling between the dock and a pier, while on a journey from Washington to Quincy. Mr. Adams says his injuries have "nearly laid him up, and will confine him for several weeks." It is stated that the escape of both Mr. and Mrs. A. was a very narrow one.

IMPORTANT DECISION ON THE NATURALIZATION LAW.—The Judges of Maryland have decided that, no matter under which law of the U. S. Congress, or at what period, if the parents are naturalized, the children, if then under age, at once, and by virtue of the naturalization act, of Congress of the 14th of April, 1802, and especially of the 4th section of that act, are made citizens. Reverdy Johnson says: "I repeat, then, as my decided opinion, that the construction I give the law (as stated) is the correct one, and I know that such has been, and is, the interpretation given to it by all the Courts in Baltimore, Federal as well as state." Judge Marshall of the Frederick County Court concurs in the views expressed by Mr. Johnson. Mr. Johnson is one of the ablest lawyers in the Union.

MANUFACTURING ESTABLISHMENTS AT SALISBURY AND AMESBURY, MASS.—The Flannel Manufacturing Company in Amesbury, went into operation in 1822. The capital stock is $150,000. The number of persons employed is about 90 males and 85 females. The pay-roll amounts to about $4,000 per month, and 15,000 yards of cloth are produced weekly.

The Salisbury Manufacturing Company went into operation the same year as the above. The capital stock is $300,000. There are three Mills containing 9,300 spindles, 210 looms, 31 sets of cards, employing 150 males and 180 females. The pay-roll is $7,000 per month, and 40,000 yard of cloth are made weekly.

AFFRAY AND DEATH.—A fight occurred between W. W. Rives and Charles Tait, in Wilcox Co. Ala. on the 14th, in which Rives was mortally wounded. Tait made his escape Eastward. This brutal butchery is thus commented on by the Cahawba Gazette:

"This affair would be revolting enough to nature, even were it entirely disconnected with all the circumstances connected with it. So far as we have been able to learn, they were briefly these: Mr. Rives was engaged to be married to Miss Sarah Tait, daughter of Capt. J. A. Tait, and sister to Dr. Charles Tait; the consent of all the family except perhaps Dr. Tait, had been given, and the father had given Rives a certificate to obtain—which he did—the marriage license. The marriage was to take place at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning.

Accordingly on that morning Mr. Rives, accompanied by one or two friends, went to Capt. Tait,s to have the marraige ceremoney performed. On arriving at or near the door of Captain Tait's dwelling, he and his friends were met by Dr. Tait, and after passing friendly salutations, the friends of Rives were invited to pass into the house, and Rives requested to step aside that he, the said Tait, might speak a few words with him. After stepping aside a short distance, Tait commenced an assault on Rives with a cane, which Rives soon wrested from him, when he drew forth a revolving pistol and shot Rives in the lower part of the stomach, from which wound Rives died on Monday morning.

We learn that after Rives had been carried into the house the marriage ceremony was performed.

USE OF THE AMERICAN FLAG IN THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.—Extract of a letter, written by a respectable American shipmaster, and dated Zanzibar, January 29, 1844:—"I arrived here December 19th, after a very tedious passage along the coast, stopping at Delagoa Bay, Quilimane, Mozambique, Ebo, and Majunga. The first four ports are Portuguese, and formerly slave marts. At present the trade is carried on to some extent, although the English are doing all in their power to prevent it; but since the right of visit is not allowed by America, much abuse is made of the American flag in the traffic. Indeed, the Portuguese tell me they have no fear of detection when once on the ocean. For instance, I met a master of a Portuguese vessel, fitted as a whaler, with boats, &c. He left the coast a few days after my last voyage, with 1,100 slaves. When off the Cape of Good Hope, he met the English admiral, in a frigate, who pursued him. He accordingly hoisted American colors. The frigate hailed him, but a few yards distant; all he could say in English was 'Fish,' which satisfied the English admiral, who bore up, wished him a pleasant passage—the ladies on board the frigate waving their handkerchiefs as a parting salute. The slaver went on his way rejoicing, and landed on the Brazil coast 1035 slaves, making an enormous profit on the speculation."

[English paper.

EARTHQUAKE IN LIVINGSTON CO.—A correspondent of the Courier states that a violent shock of an earthquake was felt in the neighborhood of Lima, Livingston Co., on Thursday evening of last week. At Avon it was quite severe. It was accompanied by an explosion, like a very heavy clap of very distant thunder, though the night was perfectly cloudless and the air extremely mild and quiet. The windows of the houses were shaken violently, and several persons who had retired (it being about 10 o'clock) leaped from their beds and went into the street to seek the cause of their alarm. At Caledonia, 15 or 20 miles west, windows and tables were severely jarred, and in one instance a candle was thrown from its candlestick, and loose panes of glass were shaken from the window. The explosion lasted for nearly a minute—quite fifty seconds.

EARTHQUAKE AT TRINIDAD.—By the schooner Sarah, at Baltimore on Friday from St. Thomas, Sept. 11, we learn that on the 30th August, about 3 o'clock, A. M. the inhabitants of Trinidad were roused from sleep by the shock of an earthquake, the violence of which far exceeded that of any other they have ever experienced, except the one of 1825. Great fears were entertained for the safety of the town, but no material damage was sustained. The deepest anxiety was manifested on behalf of the adjacent Islands, from neither of which had any positive information been obtained up to the time of the Sarah's leaving on the 3d inst.

EXTRAORDINARY CIRCUMSTANCE.—A daughter of Mr. Ephraim B. Irish, of this place, aged about 12 years, who has been subject for the last 18 months to spasmodic complaints, has had, within a few days, ten pins and needles taken out at different times from one of her heels, and it is supposed some yet remain. She has no knowledge of the manner in which the pins and needles came there. It is supposed she must have swallowed them while unconscious of the act.

[Newport (R. I.) Mercury.

THE POTATO CROP.—The Philadelphia Chronicle says: We mentioned, a day or two ago, the apprehended deficiency of the potato crop, owing to disease of the plant. Few of our readers, however, are probably aware of the enormous growth of potatoes in this country, or of the serious loss—pecuniary or otherwise—that would result from a general failure thereof. According to the census of '40, the potato crop of the United States exceeded one hundred and eight million bushels—equal in value, at twenty-five cents a bushel, to $27,000,000. Of this quantity, there were produced in

New York,	30,123,614 bushels.
Maine,	10.395,280 "
Pennsylvania,	9,535,673 "
Vermont,	8,869,751 "
New Hampshire,	6,206,606 "

MULBERRY PAPER.—We have received from Dr. D. Stebbins three samples of writing paper, manufactured from the bark of a mulberry tree. The first experiment produced a very dark colored, but smooth paper; the last is very white, glossy and stout, but not quite free from spots. He hopes that at the fourth trial, which is about to be made, will be produced a sample of writing paper which will be equal in every respect to any in use, and made from the mulberry tree.

[Northampton Courier.

RAILROAD TO MOUNT SINAI!—The last steamer brings information that the important railroad from the Red Sea to the Nile is to be immediately prosecuted to completion. The line from the Nile by Cairo to Suez on the Red Sea, has been surveyed by Mr. Galloway. There is not the least difficulty on the whole route. The distance is 84 miles. The soil presents remarkable facilities for the cheap construction of the road bed, being composed of gravel or pebbles. For the first ten miles, being the valley of the Nile, the ascent is 570 feet above the water of that river. The line of the road is then very level; the summit, 54 miles from the Nile, is 900 feet above the Red Sea.

THE WEATHER.—On Saturday morning shortly after day light, we were again favored with another rain, which continued with slight intermission until Sunday morning, part of the time coming down "with a perfect rush," which will doubtless set the mills going in all the country round about. We also had a few slight sprinkles yesterday, which was a cold, raw, disagreeable day, rendering overcoats and hickory fires any thing but uncomfortable. Indeed we learn by passengers from Cumberland, that on Saturday night quite a heavy snow fell on the mountains, to the depth of near two inches.

[Balt. Sun.

INFLUX OF FOREIGNERS.—An article in the New York Journal of Commerce, based on statistical authorities, gives the whole number of foreigners arriving in our country in thirty-six years ending with 1816, as 220,000, averaging 6,111 per annum. During 15 years ending Jan. 1, 1844, there arrived in New York alone 684,469, averaging 45,631 per annum. During the first seven of these years the average was 38,966, and during the last eight years 54,137. In these 15 years the total immigration into the United States is estimated at 1,000,000, average 66,666 per annum, which is eleven times greater than the average of the thirty-six years ending in 1816.

U. S. GOVERNMENT EXPEDITION AMONG THE INDIANS.—A gentleman who left Fort Leavenworth on the 10th of last month, informs the Philadelphia Inquirer that preparations were then in progress among a body of five hundred U. S. dragoons, to march westward under the command of Major Clifton Wharton. The objects of the expedition are to endeavor to make peace between certain Indian tribes that have been a long time at war, to hold Councils with various tribes along the route, and to impress them with the necesity of preserving peace among each other. Also by the display of a considerable and well appointed force, to convince them of the ability of the United States to punish them for any aggression committed upon our citizens, while in the Indian country. An artist is to accompany the expedition, to take sketches of the Indian Councils, games, &c.

ACCIDENT TO OTTO MOTTY.—We learn from the Barre Gazette that while riding in the ring at Petersham, on Saturday, Otto Motty was thrown from his horse and severely injured. Some of his ribs were broken.

A LITTLE ARMY.—There recently died at Villa Clara, in Cuba, an old and esteemed Spaniard aged 80 years He had been married twice. He had 13 sons by his first wife, 10 of whom are now living and married. In addition he had 90 grandsons and 49 great grand children, making in all 149 individuals.

LAUNCH.—A beautiful steamer, called the Albemarle, was launched in fine style from the Novelty Iron Works, Sept. 22, between 8 and 9 o'clock. She is owned by Messrs. G. F. Anderson & Co., of this city, and is intended to run from Norfolk, Va., through the Dismal Swamp Canal, into North Carolina, carrying freight and passengers.

CHAIRS OF ANTIQUITY.—Deacon Abraham Capen, of Stoughton, has now in this city a couple of high back chairs, made in England, and brought over in the Mayflower, in 1620. One of these chairs formerly belonged to Elisha Bradford, grand-son of Governor Bradford, who was once its proprietor.

MAMMOTH APPLE.—The Philadelphia U. S. Gazette says that an apple has been raised by James Woodward, in Bridgewater, Bucks county, which may rank among the wonders of the day. It weighs twenty-six ounces, and is fifteen and a quarter inches in circumference.

ANTI-DICKENS.—Mr. Murray, in his work on America, declares that were he an American, he would be proud of his country; of its enterprise, its magnificence, its gigantic resources, rivers, forests and scenery, and still more proud of its widely diffused education and independence, and of the imperishable memory of its heroic founder.

James Cox, a notorious villain and a bigamist, has been arrested near Portsmouth, Va. He recently escaped from Richmond City Jail, where he was confined on a charge of having kidnapped and sold a free Negro.

The editor of the Cincinnati Advertiser says, "I am kowing of the fact in 1835, of senator Black of Mississippi, receiving, under frank, the Waverly novels, in 38 volumes, weighing at least 35 pounds, as public documents."

Letters from Oregon Territory announce the death of G. W. Le Breton, formerly of Newburyport. He was shot by an Indian, and died two days afterwards. The indian was immediately killed by a Mr. Winslow.

The steamship British Queen, which formerly ran between Liverpool and New York, and was afterward sold to the Belgian Government, is advertised to be sold by auction at Antwerp, without reserve.

The winter arrangement of the Boston and Providence Railroad, which began on Monday, is as follows: The night line will leave Boston via Stonington, daily, except Sundays, at 4 o'clock P. M. The morning line will leave Boston at 7 A. M. on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

The weather this morning was freezing cold, such as to put an end to vegetation in the open air for the present season. The trees are in the "sere and yellow leaf," but vegetable productions are beyond the reach of injury by the frost. Great-coats and coal fires are in demand.

[Bost. Transcript, Satuaday.

Mr. Philip Thomas, of Cumberland, R. I., and two of his hands, are reported to have died from eating diseased potatoes. We have heard none of the particulars.

[Prov. Transcript.

Gov. Shannon of Ohio, Minister Plenipotentiary to Mexico from the United States, arrived on 23d at Vera Cruz, and was received with every mark of kindness and consideration. During his journey to the city of Mexico, he was waylaid between Perote and Puebla, and his trunks completely rifled.

A Mr. Battle, of Shreveport, La. and one of his negroes were both killed in a well, a few days since—having gone down to remove some watermelon rinds that had been thrown in and were tainting the water.

The potato crop, which this year has been worthless in many places, is good on Long Island.

The Naval Court Martial in the case of the steam frigate Missouri is in session at Washington City. Some half-dozen witnesses have been examined.

MARRIED,

In Hopkinton, R. I., on the 21st ult., by Eld. Henry Clarke, Mr. CORYDON CLARKE, to Miss JULIA A. LANGWORTHY. Also, on the 22d ult., by the same, Mr. OLIVER LANGWORTHY, to Miss PHEBE C. LANGWORTHY, all of Hopkinton.

In Stonington, Ct., Sept. 28, by Rev. James D. Moore, Mr. THOMAS R. WELLS, of Kingston, R. I., to Mrs. ELIZABETH RHODES, of Stonington.

On the 30th ult., by Elder John Greene, HORACE GREENE to SALLY BLAKE, both of Richmond R. I.

☞ In our marriage list of last week, John G. Sisson should have been Joshua G. Sisson.

DIED,

At New Market, N. J., Sept. 21st, JONATHAN R. DUNHAM, aged 64 years. His death is much lamented by all his acquaintance. For twenty-two years, he had been an efficient member of the church, and his profession was honored by a pious deportment. In the church, in his family, and in all his relations in life, he was the Christian. One of his greatest enjoyments appeared to be in bearing burdens with his brethren. Not only the church of which he was a member, but the various benevolent institutions of the day, have enjoyed the fruits of this. As a man of business, his loss will be much lamented. Having been for years engaged in mechanical operations, he gave employment to many, who have depended upon the rewards of their labors, for the support of their families, and who testify of his uprightness and kindness. In the death of Brother Dunham, the church has lost one of its pillars, his family a kind and pious husband and father, and the neighborhood a valuable citizen. For three years he has suffered much affliction, and for months he has been anxiously waiting for his deliverance to come.

W. B. G.

On the 20th ult., Deacon ZACHEUS MAXSON, aged 88 years. He was a soldier in the revolutionary war, as well as a soldier of the cross; and he came to his grave like a shock of corn fully ripe.

In Hopkinton, R. I., in the 22d ult., after a very painful sickness, ANN, daughter of Deacon Simon Kenyon, in the 16th year of her age. The deceased was a member of the 3d Seventh-day Baptist church in Hopkinton. A large circle of relatives are left to mourn her early death, but not as those who mourn without hope.

LETTERS.

Sherman S. Griswold, William Henry Potter (thanks,) S. P. Stillman, Henry Clark, Horace S. Babcock, John Green.

RECEIPTS.

Scott.—Geo. W. Maxson, $2.
Westerly, R. I.—Henry Clark, $2.
Newport.—Erastus B. Stillman, $2.
Portersville, Ct.—William Henry Potter $2.
Amity.— D. B. Ovett, $1.

☞ We have been inquired of by several individuals, whether this office is responsible for moneys paid towards the fifth vol. of the Register. To such we wish to say that a list of names was published in No. 2 of the Recorder, including all who were reported to us as having paid in advance; for these we are responsible. Others without doubt will be satisfied by the former publisher.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The SABBATH TRACT SOCIETY publish the following SABBATH TRACTS, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 7.—Thirty-six Plain Questions, presenting the main points in the controversy; A Dialogue between a Minister of the Gospel and a Sabbatarian; Counterfeit Coin.

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as INSTITUTED IN PARADISE upon the SEVENTH or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the FIRST day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	½ to 1½
Other Safety Fund	½	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	¾	Salisbury Bank	2
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1½	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1½
Carlisle Bank	1½	South Carolina:	1½
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	2
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

Maine—Calais 10, Lafayette —, Portland City —, Mercantile 5, St. Croix —, Westbrook 3.

Bath, Castine, Citizens, Frankfort, Georgia Lumber Co. Globe Haliowell & Augusta, Kennebec, Oldtown, Oxford, Passamaquoddy, Saco, Stillwater Canal, Washington Co. Waterville, Winthrop, Wiscasset, Damariscotta, Agricultural—broken.

New Hampshire—Concord 6.

Hillsborough, Wolfsborough—broken.

Vermont—Bennington 90, Windsor —.

Agricultural, Commercial, Essex, Green Mountain, Jefferson Banking Co. Phenix—broken.

Massachusetts—Commonwealth 85, Middlesex 5, Newburyport 70, Norfolk 12½.

Berkshire, Chelsea, Essex of Salem, Farm. & Mech. of S. Adams, Farm. of Belchertown, Farm. of Boston, Farm. of Sandstone, Franklin, Fulton Grey Lock, Hampshire, Kiliby, Lafayette, Mendon, Nahant, Oriental, Phenix of Charlestown, Roxbury, Sutton, Winnisimet, Wiscasset—broken.

Rhode Island—Pascoag R. I. 10, Agricultural 10, Providence Co. 5.

Burrville, Eagle of Newport, Farm. Exchange, Farm. & Mech. Franklin, Providence, Scituate—broken.

Connecticut—Bridgeport Exchange Assoc. Bridgeport Manufacturing Co Commercial of Tolland, Derby, Eagle—broken.

New York City—Clinton 1, Washington 1.

Agency & Exch. Chartered, City Trust & Banking Co. Exchange, Franklin, Franklin Manufacturing Co. Lumber Association, Manhattan Assoc. Marble Manufacturing Co. Mech. Exch. Co. Manhattan Banking Co. N. Y. Foreign & Dom. Exch. Co. N. Y. Loan Co. N. Y. Banking Co. N. Y. City, North River Banking Co. U. S. Exch. Co.—broken.

New York State—Alleghany Co. 52 & 30, America of Buffalo 26, Binghamton 23 & 28, Cattaraugus Co. 17 & 25, Commerce of Buffalo 26, Commercial of Buffalo, 25, Commercial of Oswego 35, Clinton Co, 30, Erie Co. 30 & 42, Farm. of Seneca Co. 28, Lodi, 19 & 5, Lyons 30, Merch. Exch. of Buff. 21 & 37, Mech. of Buff, 39, Millers' of Clyde, 8, Olean 15 & 28, Oswego 15, Phenix of Buff. 29, State Bank N. Y. of Buff, 75, St. Lawrence 70 & 52 Tonawanda 40, U. S. Bank of Buff. 25, Union of Buff. 21, Watervliet 30, Western N. Y. 27, Hamilton 1.

[Where there are two prices in this list, the first is for Stock Security notes, and the second for Real Estate and Stock Security notes.]

City of Buffalo, Clinton Manufacturing Co. Columbia, Commerce of Buff. Exch. of Poughkeepsie, Greene Co. Hudson, Mech. & Traders', Oneida Co. Plattsburg, Washington & Warren, Buffalo—broken.

New Jersey—Franklin, Hoboken Banking Co. Jersey City, Manufacturers', Mech. of Paterson, Monmouth, Morris Canal & Banking Co. farm. & Mech. of New Brunswick, New Brunswick, N. J. Manufacturing & Banking Co. N. J. Protection & Lombard, Salem & Philadelphia Manufacturing Co. State Bank of Trenton, Washington Banking Co.—broken.

Pennsylvania—Berks Co. 75, Far. & Drovers' of Waynesburg 5, Girard 20, Lumberman's 90, Susquehanna 50, U. S. Bank 38, West Branch 15.

Agricultural, Alleghany, Beaver, City, Centre, Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. Farm. & Mech. N. Salem, do. Greencastle, do. Pittsburg, Farm. & Mech. Savings Inst. Harmony Inst. Huntington, Juniata, Lancaster Co. Loan Co. Manual Labor, Marietta & Susq. Trading Co. Merch. of Phila. Mech. Pittsburg, N. Salem, Northern, Northampton, N. Western, Penn. Savings, Penn. Agricul. & Manufac. Phila. Loan Co. do. Manufac. Co. do. Savings Inst. Potsdam Manufac. Co. Silver Lake, Southwark Savings, Southwark Savings, Southern Loan Co. Swatara, Taylorsville Del. Bridge Co. Towanda, Union Bk of Penn. Washington, Westmoreland, Wilkesbarre Bridge Co. Youghogany—broken.

Delaware—Laurel, Wilmington Loan Co.—broken.

Maryland—Baltimore & Ohio R. R. Co. 20, Franklin 10, Caroline, City, Cohen, Commercial of Balt. do. of Millington, Connacheague, Elkton, Farm. & Millers' Havre de Grace, Maryland, Planters' Bank of St. George's Co. Somerset & Worcester and branches, Susquehanna Bridge Co Susquehanna—broken.

District of Columbia—Alexandria, Franklin, Mechanics', Merchants' Bank of Columbia, Central—broken.

Georgia—Central 20, Central R. R. & Banking Co. 20

Augusta Bridge Co. Belfast Mining Co. Chattahoochie R. R. & Banking Co. Columbus, Darien and branches. Far. Bank of Chattahoochie, Hawkinsville, Macon, Merch. & Planters', Monroe R. R. & Banking Co. Ocmulgee, Phenix, Planters' & Mech. Western—broken.

Ohio—Comm. Bank of Lake Erie 35, Far. Bank of Canton 50, Hamilton 30, Lancaster 25, Miami Exx. Co. 50, Urbana Banking Co. 60.

Butler Co. Cincinnati, Circleville new, Cleveland Exch. Bank & Savings Inst. do. Salem, Far. & Mech. of Cincinnati, Galliopolis, German Bank of Wooster, Granville Alex'n Society, Hamilton Co. Hamilton & Rossville Manufac. Co. Jefferson, Kirtland Safety Soc. Lebanon & Miami Co. Mansfield, Manhattan, Mech. Savings Inst. Mech. & Traders', Monroe Falls Manufac. Co. Ohio R. R. Co. Orphan Inst. Owl Creek, Platt & Co's, Stark Co. Orphan Inst. Steubenville, Union Exch. Washington, West Union, Western Reserve Farm. Banking Co. Zanesville Canal & Manufac. Co.—broken.

Virginia—Virginia, Saline, Western Bank of Va. Monongahela Farmers' Co.—broken.

Indiana—all except State Bank and branches—broken.

Michigan—Michigan & Branch 50.

Miscellaneous.

WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

Say not that woman's voice
 Must stay its silvery note,
While the far hills and vales rejoice,
 And on each breeze doth float
Glad tidings from the field,
 Where 'Virtue' takes her stand
Against 'licentiousness' to wield
 The sword with fearless hand!

Let woman, too, rejoice,
 To see the foe recede;
And let her in the 'still small voice,'
 The cause of 'virtue' plead;
And while the thunder-tone
 Of eloquence is stirred,
Her whispered warning God may own—
 His voice through hers be heard.

Say not that woman's heart
 Its fullness must contain;
Nor from compassion's fount impart
 To other hearts again;
For since her sex hath shared
 The evils of the foe,
Let not her sympathy be spared
 Where yet is felt the blow.

Say not that woman's hand
 For 'virtue' hath no power—
That she must meek spectator stand
 In reformation's hour.
See how that gentle band
 Of sisters onward move—
How in one cause have heart and hand
 United works with love!

PROVISION FOR DISCHARGED CONVICTS.

The Newburyport Herald publishes the following petition to the Legislature of Massachusetts. It contains a plan for the prevention of crime, which at least deserves to be considered.

To the Senate and H. of Representatives of Massachusetts:

The undersigned, citizens of Massachusetts, perceiving and lamenting the failure of our present system of penal laws to do what they think might be done for the prevention of crime and the general welfare of the community, do respectfully ask your attention to the following preamble and petition:

Whereas, the punishment of crime has, by the experience of our own, and all preceding ages, been proved insufficient to deter men from its commission; and whereas the prevention of crime is an object most worthy to receive the attention and employ the resources of a wise and good Government; and whereas this object would seem most thoroughly and most satisfactorily effected by the reformation of criminals; and whereas it must be admitted that the discipline of our prisons and penitentiaries neither effect nor is well adapted to effect the reformation of those committed to them; and whereas the condition of convicts discharged from these institutions is beset with temptations and inducements to return to their vicious habits, and mournfully destitute of counterbalancing encouragements to commence a better course of life; and since a wise economy will rather employ its resources in changing bad men to good, than in merely punishing them while they remain bad; and since humanity and religion unite with the interests of political and social life to demand some attempt to amend society by reforming the most ignorant and vicious portion of it;

Therefore, we, the undersigned, do petition your honorable bodies to establish from the funds of the State an institution, suited to enable and encourage those who are discharged from our prisons, penitentiaries and houses of correction, to abandon their vicious courses, and commence forthwith the formation of a new character and the use of honest labor for their subsistence.

These unfortunate men and women are usually destitute of any honest occupation. It is the interest of State to supply them with employment.

They are invited with open arms by their former vicious companions, and urged with hearty sympathy and apparent kindness, to return to their former corrupt courses. It is the interest of the State to invite them as cordially, and with equal manifestations of sympathy and kindness, and not only invite, but enable them, to commence a better course of life.

So great is the repugnance manifested by respectable people to admit to their society or engage in their service the convicts discharged from our prisons, that these have often no alternative but to return to a vicious life, or to commence their honest course by deliberate deception relative to their past history and occupation. It is the interest of the State to release them from this false and most dangerous position, by providing them with means, both for present honest subsistence and for the formation of a new character.

Your petitioners believe that a large portion of the convicts who now go out from our prison to resume their vicious lives, and ultimately to return for a severer punishment, might be really reformed, saved, and made valuable members of society, by the adoption of such means as they propose.

They ask, therefore, that as the first experiment in an enterprise which they think so hopeful, you would forthwith establish an institution, and cause to be erected buildings, sufficient for the reception of sixty men and forty women, supplied with teachers and all needful facilties for instruction in agriculture, the mechanic arts, and the ordinary househould occupations, and with the necessary arrangements for food, clothing and shelter.

They ask that every convict discharged from our State Prison, or from any of our minor prisons, penitentiaries, or houses of correction, may be earnestly and cordially invited to enter this institution, and remain in it one year, receiving food, clothing, shelter and instruction, and giving his or her faithful labor for ten hours per day to such art, trade or employment as he or she may prefer, of those taught and practiced in the institution.

They ask, also, that a liberal provision may be made in this establishment of such books and periodical publications as are suited to increase the knowledge, enlarge the minds, and elevate the moral and religious principles of its inmates; and that their instruction in the fundamental principles of religion and mortality be farther provided for by the employment of suitable teachers, male and female.

Your petitioners believe that a year's probation, spent by the recipients of this benevolence in industry and sobriety, and the certificate of the superintendent, testifying to their good conduct during that period, would readily obtain them good situations and honest employment at the close of that time; they believe that such an offer would be thankfully embraced by the majority of convicts on their release from prison; they believe that a full and fair trial of its results would show good cause for the enlargement of this, or the formation of other similar institutions, and that as these establishments prospered, the calls for expenditure on prisons and almshouses would diminish; and they expect from such an arrangement incalculable advantages, to the malefactors, redeemed from sin and shame, to those in the community who now suffer from their misdeeds, and to the community itself, doubly blessed at a single operation by the removal of its vicious, and the increase of its virtuous, members.

And your petitioners will ever pray, &c.

HINTS ON THE EARLY CONVERSION OF CHILDREN.

The parental office is so important and difficult, that every well meant hint should be received with candor; and though none can lay down rules for others, which do not require modifying by individual circumstances, yet to direct the attention to the duties of parents, seldom fails to be beneficial. The early conversion of children is a subject of great practical importance, especially to mothers. The time of childhood is short, and a similar season can never return to the individual, in any course of after years. The impressions are often so strong, that they are probably never lost in their effects; every moment, therefore, should be urged on the parental mind, to defend from loss these precious moments; and no opiate should be offered, that may prevent the improvement of the treasure, of the worth of which the youthful possessor is entirely unconscious. If the human mind be capable of very early conversion, it is greatly to be desired, and earnestly to be prayed for. Let not any mother apprehend that her child is by this means (if the object be gained) fitted only for an early departure to glory; but rather let her hope, that the youthful convert is preparing to fulfil a long course of service in the church of Christ on earth, to which early purity of conduct may add consistency and cheerfulness of character, while it will also be the means of silencing gainsayers. Many eminent Christians have looked back on early convictions as special mercies. A mother may quickly be removed by death from her infant offspring. Will she not then desire to see them, at as tender an age as possible, included within the fold of Christ, enjoying the blessings of the covenant, embraced within His arms from whom no one shall pluck them?

It is not necessary that children should be made, by their religion, early professors, or youthful prodigies. A mother, deeply anxious for her child's early piety, should not talk of it to others, but like Mary, that beautiful pattern of female character, "keep all these things, and ponder them in her heart." Her desire should be, that religion should manifest itself in all the graces of the Christian character, in watchfulness, prayer, love to the Scriptures and God's house, subjugation of the passions, industry, obedience, and integrity; and that these qualities may be produced, not from parental authority only, or affection to herself, but by the influence of the Holy Spirit, and by the belief in an unseen God, and an ever-living Saviour. The expressions of this piety may be juvenile, the sins of the child, or the exercises of self-denial so small in the apprehension of an elder Christian as to create a smile, and the witnesses may be God and the parent only; but the principle will be as genuine, the influence on the heart as real, as that which has produced great acts of faith, of which the world have been the spectators.

Life has a commencement, though it is progressive in its developement, and this may be said of the life of the soul as well of the body. What is conversion in adults, but the work of the Holy Spirit when he enters the heart, and produces therein repentance for sin, and watchfulness against it, the belief that Christ has suffered the punishment of our guilt, and love to Him through whom these blessings are procured?

It may be said, that children have not an equal burden of actual guilt, or so enlarged a view of the requisitions of God's holy laws, as to display to them the need of a Saviour, yet there may be a deep sense of the weakness and incapacity of their nature to do any thing good of themselves, and though the review of the past may not be so extensive as with the adult, yet there may be a deep and vivid sense of broken resolutions, which will explain the Scripture account that they are by nature "children of wrath." What barriers do pride, unbelief, and familiarity with sin, present to the reception of the humbling truths of the gospel, and especially in reference to our fallen state by nature. And though it is not said that in the mind of a child these do not exist, yet they are not grown into such formidable obstructions.

The affections of children are warm and tender, and are soon won by the love of those around them. There is an exalted dignity, gentleness, and kindness, in the character of Jesus, as exhibited in the Gospel, that is particularly calculated to attract their love. Many a gifted Christian might be glad to share in the simple reliance, and heartfelt affection displayed in their expressions of love to their glorious Redeemer. "And Jesus saith unto them, yea, have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?" Matt. xxi. 16. Let but parents make the conversion of their young children the object of their fervent prayers, and try to instil gospel motives into their minds, and it may be that they will find, under God's blessing, a heaven-taught simplicity in their piety, greatly edifying and refreshing to their own hearts; they will see the force of our Saviour's exhortation, "Unless ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." The minds of the young may be much affected by visible objects, their memory may be treacherous, and their apprehension of future pleasure or evil comparatively weak and inefficacious. We may look with suspicion at their early commencement of piety, knowing their weakness, and the snares to which they will be exposed. These considerations should lead their instructers to exercise great delicacy and caution in allowing their religion to be expressed beyond the limits of the nursery, or their mother's apartment; but where is the grand receptacle to which the advanced Christian must resort in future need? All must ask for daily, hourly grace, and the child may drink freely from the fountain of life its daily cup, increasing in size with growing years, as well as the elder Christian his larger draught of grace. The Bible presents no limit of age at which piety may commence; let it not then be said, "Ye have not, because ye ask not." Blessed were those Hebrew mothers who brought their infant offspring to Christ, and drew forth that tender yet severe expostulation from the adorable Redeemer, "Suffer!—sufferthe little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH.

WHO WRITE OUR NOVELS?

I have thought it might be well to look a little at the character of the men who write the most popular novels of the day. I believe it is the professed design of most if not all these works to teach some excellent moral or system of morals; and, of course, we have a right to inquire and ought to know what is the standard of the morality of their writers. The streams that flow from a fountain show what the fountain is, and so does the character of the fountain determine with considerable certainty what will be the character of its streams. A man of loose morals is not the best teacher in the world to give moral lessons to our children, and never can be, till a poisoned spring can be made to yield pure and healthful water.

The most popular writer of modern romance is perhaps SIR EDWARD BULWER; certainly among novel readers of the highest degree of intellectual refinement, he is a very general favorite. Perhaps Dickens would dispute the palm with him; but, however this may be, we have no room for Dickens in this article. He shall be served when his turn comes. Bulwer is, unquestionably, the writer of the most fashionable romances of the day. His works are sought after with eagerness, and read with interest all over the country. A firm of professing Christians—one of the most extensive publishing houses in the country—have lent their influence in bringing before the American public the complete works of this author in a form so cheap, as to place them within the reach of almost every reader; and they may be found in thousands of virtuous families, and seem to be regarded by many Christian parents as innocent books for their children. Bulwer professes to be a moral teacher. Now, to say nothing of the morals of the heroes of his tales—to say nothing of the general moral influence of his works, judged of by themselves, let us ascertain from his character and habits how capable he is of teaching morality. After that, perhaps, we may determine whether it is best to send our children to school to him.

An accomplished female writer who has made Lady Bulwer a visit, and who learned from her many facts in relation to the novelist's character, gives a very dark picture of his morality. Before Lady Bulwer had been married a year, she had proofs too incontestible that her husband was a finished libertine. When their first child was born, he ordered it to be sent several miles from home to be nursed, declaring that children were his detestation. When the child was about six years old, he procured a governess, who assumed authority in the family, and offered the grossest indignity to Lady Bulwer. It was not long before the latter discovered that this base woman was one of her husband's victims. Lady Bulwer, when she could bear the insults of the governess no longer, insisted upon her discharge: and her brutal husband struck her a blow which felled her to the earth! She afterwards declared to him that herself or the governess must leave the house. "Very well," said Bulwer, with the most provoking coolness, "certainly, it shall be as you say. You shall leave—you shall pack off this very moment, and the governess shall remain." She seized her children, and poor and unprotected, left the door of the man who had sworn to support and cherish her; and this fiend, as he pushed her rudely from her home, observed with mock gallantry, "Permit me the pleasure, madam, of closing the door upon you!" It is unnecessary, and too revolting to detail the cruelties and indignities which this exiled woman suffered from her husband. Suffice it to add that when he banished her from his house, he said to her, "Madam, remember that you are fatherless and brotherless, and I will crush you to atoms;" and while he has continued to live with his paramour, he has to this day done all in his power to execute this inhuman threat with fidelity.

Christian parents! will you admit such a teacher of morals in your families? Can such an accomplished scholar in vice be a proper companion for your children? Will you, with this knowledge of his history, stop to debate the question whether he is a safe writer? These facts are well authenticated. They rest not alone on the testimony of the lady to whom we have alluded. They are matter of common animadversion by the British press.

EUGENE SUE is another of the most popular novelists of the present day. His "Mysteries of Paris" has produced a greater sensation among the readers of this species of fiction than anything of the kind which has appeared for years. Two rival editions have been published in this country; and of one of these editions nearly forty thousand have been sold by a single concern. The work we have not read, though the criticisms of the American press upon its morals are exceedingly severe. Its very name gives an idea of its character. The author introduces his readers to the haunts of crime that so abound in that pleasure-loving and voluptuous capital, and makes them familiar with scenes which virtue must blush to behold. It is not the book, however, but the man, that we have to do with at present.

Eugene Sue, the author of the "Mysteries of Paris," is represented by those who are acquainted with his character, as a libertine of the highest order, even for Paris; and that is saying a great deal. We are informed by credible men, that he is a seducer of female virtue, and an open and reckless debauchee. Hear the testimony of N. P. Willis respecting him: "When I visited him ten years ago, he was an elegant voluptuary of the first water. He is by this time sloped from his meridian, and apparently turning his experience into commodity." So it would seem; for while the "Mysteries of Paris" were in course of publication, the police of that city arrested the author, on the ground, that the scenes of that book were too licentious for Frenchmen; and the last arrival from Europe brings the intelligence, that for the same reason it had been prohibited in Vienna, by municipal authority.

Such is the character of two of our most popular novelists. Be their society and standing in life what they may—though they may be courted and caressed in circles of refinement—though men of high reputation as disciple of Christ act as godfathers to their miserable literary progeny, and send them into every city, and hamlet, and town, throughout the country, to inflict a curse a hundred fold worse than the plagues of Egypt—this is their character, and this their manner of life.

"Oh come not ye near innocence and truth,
Ye worms that eat into the bud of youth."

Fathers! mothers! will you allow the moral characters of your sons and your daughters to be developed under such an influence? Will you allow them to breathe an atmosphere exhaled by such monsters in human form?

F. C. W.

HOW TO TREAT A WIFE.

First get a wife. Secondly, be patient.—You may have great trials and perplexities in your business with the world; but do not therefore carry to your home a clouded or contracted brow. Your wife may have had trials, which, though of less magnitude, may have been as hard to bear. Do not increase her difficulties. A kind conciliating word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. You encounter your difficulties in the open air, fanned by heaven's cool breezes, but your wife is often shut in from these healthful influences, and her health fails, and her spirits lose their elasticity. But, oh! bear with her; she has trials and sorrows to which you are a stranger, but which your tenderness can deprive of all their anguish. Notice kindly her little attentions and efforts to promote your comfort. Do not take them all as a matter of course, and pass them by, at the same time being very sure to observe any omission of what you may consider her duty to you.—Do not treat her with indifference, if you would not scar and palsy her heart, which, watered by gentleness and kindness, would, to the latest day of your existence throb with sincere and constant affection.

Sometimes yield your wishes to hers. She has preferences as strong as you, and it may be just as trying to her to yield her choice as to you. Do you find it hard to yield sometimes? Think you it is not difficult for her to give up always? If you never yield to her wishes, there is danger that she will think that you are selfish, and care only for yourself, and with such feelings she cannot love you as she might.

Again, show yourself manly, so that your wife can look up to you, and feel that you will act nobly, and that she can confide in your judgment.

CONVERSION OF A JEW.—A very pleasing incident has been related to us concerning the conversion of a Jew to the Christian faith. The name of the convert is Israel Boothrod. He is a young man of pleasing manners, and apparently fine talents, a native of London, England, where his parents and other relatives reside. He has been in this country but a short time. Before he left home, his grandfather, who is a Jewish high priest, enjoined upon him in the most solemn manner, never to read the New Testament, or believe in Jesus of Nazareth as the Messiah. At Liverpool he became acquainted with a Christian lady who took an interest in his welfare, and urged upon him to read the New Testament. He refussd; but she, without his knowledge, placed the forbidden book in his trunk. Finding it on shipboard, he could not restrain his curiosity, and read it through twice carefully, but still regarded it as fictitious, and its divine Author an imposter.

How he came into this region we did not learn; but last week he went to a camp meeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church, near Beaver, and while attending in a listless manner to the preaching of the gospel, his mind was suddenly arrested by the words of the preacher, and he began to inquire in his own mind, "what if all this is true?" His feelings became so excited that he attempted to leave the ground, but on second thought concluded it was not fair to reject the testimony of the preacher without a hearing. He returned and listened, and after the discourse was over retired to the woods under great agitation of mind, and began to pray to the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob—the God of his fathers—to show him whether Shiloh had come, and whether Jesus Christ was the Messiah. His anxiety increasing, he returned to the meeting, and earnestly sought salvation in the name of Jesus Christ, as the only true Messiah, who had already come into the world. His petition was attended with success. He found peace in believing. His exclamations, on being enabled fully to confide in a crucified and risen Savior, were, "the Shiloh has come! the Shiloh has come!"

On Monday last he attended a Methodist Camp Meeting, near this city, and took upon himself the profession of Christianity in the ordinance of baptism. Previous to the ceremony, in the presence of the assembled congregation, he gave an account of his early life and Christian experience, and in a most affecting manner professed his faith in Christ, when the holy rite was performed in the name of the adorable and ever blessed Trinity, his joy was so great in the confident belief and trust in a Messiah already come, that he sunk to the ground under overpowering emotions.

His parents are said to be very respectable and wealthy, and it is supposed that his profession of Christianity will seriously affect his future worldly prospects. May we not hope that he will be instrumental under Divine Providence in leading many of his erring race to a full belief in the only Messiah who will ever bless our world—the only Star of Hope ever to arise over the mourning and desolate tents of Jacob?—Pittsburgh Gaz.

THE OSSIFIED MAN OF DUBLIN.

A writer in the Christian Advocate, under the head of "Transatlantic Recollections," speaking of the Museum at Dublin, remarks:—"What calls and rivets the attention of every visitor, whether scientific or otherwise, is the celebrated skeleton of an ossified man; it is said to be the only instance of entire ossification ever known. It is the skeleton of a young man named Clark, who was of large frame and strong constitution. Falling asleep in the open air, during a state of perspiration, he caught a severe cold, at which time, it is supposed, ossification commenced, and continued to progress for many years by slow degrees, till finally he was all bone, except skin, eyes and entrails. For a length of time before his death his joints grew together so that he could not move; and thus did death in this horrible and terrific form, creep over him by slow degrees, until at length his sight departed, his tongue became stiff and useless, his teeth grew together in one solid mass of bone, so that to prolong his miserable existence, an aperture had been broken through which to pour nutriment."

BATHING.—Winslow, an able writer on the diseases of the mind and body, is a great advocate of bathing. The state of the mind, says he, is closely dependent upon the condition of the cutaneous secretion. I would advise those who are subject to mental depression, hypocondriacism, vapors, ennui, or by whatever term it may be designated, to try the effect of bathing. I feel assured that in many cases, violent attacks of insanity may be warded off by the use the warm or cold bath. In cerebral irritation, evidently the result of vascular excitement, bathing the head every morning with cold water, or vinegar and water will be found highly advisable.

"Cheap literature, means publishing cock and bull stories at a shilling a-piece, badly printed, on worse paper, instead of paying seventy-five cents or a dollar, as we used to do, for a volume of a classical author, got up in a respectable style both for reading and preservation. I maintain that, all things considered, these cheap publications are the dearest that ever were palmed on the credulity of mankind."

INTERESTING.—Dr. Lambert states that three-fifths of the sustenance we swallow, passes through the skin. According to this, one's complexion is, in a measure, under his own control, for what passes through the cuticle must certainly affect its condition and color. This subject is worthy of much consideration. The learned lecturer also states that those who perform on wind instruments discharge their superfluous contents by blowing, and glass blowers, require much more food than individuals of other habits.

GROSS INHUMANITY.—On Saturday of last week a German named Monk, from Herkimer County in this State, appeared at the State Prison in Sing Sing, and presented a pardon for his daughter, Catherine Monk, who had been imprisoned upwards of two years, on a charge of larceny. On examining the pardon, it was found to be dated September 24th, 1842, having been granted by Governor Seward, on the representation of the Judge and the Jurors, before whom she was convicted, as she was almost an idiot. This pardon the unfeeling father had actually kept back for two years, and probably would not have used it at all but for the fact of Mrs. Farnham, the matron of the prison, writing to him that his daughter's term was nearly out, and stating that some one ought to come and take care of her, as she was unable to provide for herself. She had only eleven days to serve when the pardon was presented, and the affectionate father has by this means had his idiot daughter supported by the State, instead of providing for her himself, as he must have done, if he had presented the pardon when granted. We challenge the annals of prison statistics to produce a parallel case.

[Courier & Enquirer.

MORMON NEWS.—The last Nauvoo Neighbor says that the hand of fellowship has been withdrawn from Elders Rigdon, James Emmit, and Zachariah Wilson. The Warsaw Signal says it was rumored, that on Saturday week last, nineteen of the leading Mormons were ejected from the church, among them, John A. Forge and Emma Smith. The Temple is still going ahead, the third teir of windows being ready to receive their caps. Above them is to be a belt of coarse stone, and then six feet of plain cut stone work will finish the walls.

The Signal says that twenty-five Mormon families have left Bear Creek, taking with them several horses valued at $700 and many head of cattle, which they had stolen; they had gone to Nauvoo. The Mormons were also leaving Morley's settlement.

Serious dissensions are said to exist in the church. Rigdon has about 400 followers, who admit his claim to the leadership, and deny the right of the twelve to govern; of this number are Edward Hawley and Robert Price.

John P. Green, Marshal of Nauvoo, died last week. [St. Louis Repub. Sept. 16.

DEATH OF MADAME SANTA ANA.—The New Orleans Courier of the 16th confirms the news of the death of Madame Lopez Santa Ana, wife of the President of Mexico, on the 22d ultimo, of a breast complaint. Her remains, in compliance with her dying wishes, were taken to Alvarado, the place of her birth, for interment. The authorities and people of Vera Cruz were waiting to bestow on her corpse, which was to arrive there on the 9th inst., the honors due to her rank.

ALFRED ACADEMY AND TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

THIS Institution has a pleasant and quiet location, thirteen miles south-east of Angelica, and six miles south of Almond, Allegany Co., N. Y. The fall term will open on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 14th, under the care of W. C. KENYON, as Principal, and Miss CAROLINE B. MAXSON, as Preceptress, aided by able and experienced assistants.

Teachers' Classes will be exercised in teaching, under the immediate supervision of their respective instructors, combining every facility of a Normal School, without its usual disadvantages. Within the past year, more than one hundred and fifty students of the institution have been employed as teachers in this and the adjacent counties—a number much larger than from any other institution in the State.

Students are prepared for entering any class in College. Ample advantages are also secured to those pursuing Modern Languages and the Fine Arts. The institution is liberally endowed and supplied with a choice and valuable library, and apparatus sufficiently extensive to illustrate every department of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry. It has also well selected cabinets of Geological, Mineralogical and Conchological specimens.

The plan of instruction aims at the development of the moral, intellectual and physical powers of students, so as to render them thorough, accurate, and practical scholars.

Lectures on Chemistry, accompanied by a full course of experiments, will commence with the second week of the fall term, and continue daily to its close. During the fall and winter terms, daily lectures will be given on School Teaching. Lectures on Natural Philosophy, Astronomy, and Physiology, illustrated by experiments, will be given each term of the year.

TUITION, per term of fifteen weeks, from $3,50 to $5. Board per week, in private families, $1. The entire expense of the academic year, including tuition, board, washing, light, and fuel, need not exceed $60. No extra charges incurred.

SAMUEL RUSSEL,
President of the Board of Trustees.

LOCAL AGENTS FOR THE RECORDER.

NEW YORK

Adams—Charles Potter
" A G Green
Alfred—James R Irish
" Maxson Green
" Samuel Russell, p.m.
Berlin—John Whitford
Brookfield—Andrew Babcock
" Giles M Langworthy
Clear Creek—Abel Saunders
DeRuyter—B G Stillman
Durhamville—Joseph Potter
Edmeston—Ephraim Maxson
East Rodman—Chester Green
Friendship—Zuriel Campbell
Genesee—S S Griswold
Hounsfield—Wm Green
Independence—John P Livermore
Lincklaen—Sebeus M Burdick
Leonardsville—Wm B Maxson
" Dennis Hardin
Newport—Abel Stillman
New London—Charles M Lewis
Otselic—Joshua Clark
Petersburg—Geo Crandall
Preston—Clark Rogers
Persia—Elbridge Eddy
Pitcairn—Geo P Burdick
Scott—H C Hubbard
South Branch—R T Green
Unadilla Forks—Wm Utter
Watson—Ezra Whitford
West Clarksville—Clark Saunders

RHODE ISLAND

Westerly—Alex Campbell
" S P Stillman
Hopkinton—Joseph Spicer, jr
" A B Burdick

CONNECTICUT

Waterford—L T Rogers
" Wm Maxson
Mystic Bridge—G Greenman

NEW JERSEY

Plainfield—T S Alberti
New Market—W B Gillett
Shiloh—Isaac D Titsworth
Salem—David Clawson

PENNSYLVANIA

Meadville—Lewis Dunham
New Geneva—B F Bond
Coudersport—J A R Greenman
" Rowse Babcock
Clifford—Zebediah Burdick
Sharon Centre—Isaac W Jones

VIRGINIA

Lost Creek—Levi H Bond
Elk Creek—Thos B Bond
New Salem—Jepthah F Randolph
Lewisport—Joseph Jeffrey
Lowther's Run—Asa Bee

OHIO.

Bloomfield—Charles Clark
Northampton—Simeon Babcock, B C Church
Port Jefferson—Lewis A Davis
Jackson—Davis Loofbourrow
Kingsville—Julius M Todd

MICHIGAN

Oporto—Job Tyler
Tallmadge—Bethuel Church

WISKONSAN

Milton, Rock Co.—Joseph Goodrich P M, Stillman Coon

IOWA

Fredonia, Louisa Co—M Wheelock

ILLINOIS

Trivolia, Peoria Co—James Dunham

NEW YORK PRICES CURRENT.

(Corrected weekly.)

ASHES.
Pot, first sort	a 4 18
Pearl	a 4 43
BARK.
Quercitron, ton	24 50a25 00
BEESWAX.
Cuba white, lb	— a 48
American yellow	29 a 30
BOTTLES.
Bristol porter, gr	8 50a9 00
Wines	7 00a8 50
BRISTLES.
Petersb'g, 1st sort	1 06a1 10
CANDLES.
Mould, tallow lb	9 a 12
Sperm, east and city	29 a 31
Do Patent	— a 38
COAL.
Liv'pool, chal.	8 00 a 9 25
Newcastle	7 50 a 8 50
Anth. 2000 lbs	4 75 a 5 75
COFFEE.
Java	9 a 10
Sumatra	6¾ a 7
Laguira	7 a 7½
Cuba	6½a 7½
Brazil	6½a 7½
St. Domingo	5¼a 5¾
COTTON.
New Orleans	5 a9¾
Alabama	5¾a 10
Upland, good and fine	8½a 8¾
DOMESTICS
Shirtings brown ¾	5 a 6½
Do do ⅞	6 a 7
Do bleached	7 a 9
Do S.I do	7 a 11
Sheetings b'wn 4-4	7 a 9
Do do 5-4	10 a 12½
Do bleached 4-4	7 a 12
Do do 5-4	12 a 15
Calicoes, blue	7 a 12
Do fancy	6 a 14
Plaids	— a —
Stripes, fast colors	— a —
Satinets	45 a 75
Checks 4-4	8 a 12
Cotton-yarn, 5-13	16 a 18
Do 14-19	— a 20
Do 20-23	21 a 22
DRUGS AND DYES.
Aloes, lb	9 a 9½
Alum	3½a 4
Arrowroot, Berm	30 a 35
Brimstone, flor sul.	2¾a 3
Borax	16 a 16½
Camphor, ref	62½a 65
Cream of Tartar	14¼a 14½
Cochineal	1 40 a 1 50
Copperas	1½a 1¾
Flor Chamomile	16 a 18
Ginseng	30 a 33
Gum Myrh	12½a 15
Gum Shellac	8 a 16
Do copal, washed	35 a 42
Do Arabac	22 a 35
Jalap	60 a 65
Madder	12 @ 19
Magnesia, calc	55 @ 60
Oil Castor, gall	90 @
Oil, Anis	1 70 @
Oil Pepperm't, lb	3 00 @ 3 50
Opium Turkey	2 75 @ 3 25
Rhubarb, E I	35 @ 65
Sal Aeratus	4¾@
Sarsap'illa, Hon	26 @ 30
Snakeroot, Va	15 @ 16
Senna, E I	7½@ 10
Sugar Lead	10 @ 13
Sul Quinine, oz	3 50 @ 4 00
Tartaric Acid, lb	38 @ 40
Verdigris	21 @ 22
Vitriol, blue	8 @ 8
DYEWOODS
Brazilletto, ton	27 50 @30 00
Camwood	25 00 @75 00
Fustic, Cuba	26 00 @28 00
Do Tampico	18 00 @19 00
Logwood, Cpy	27 00 @28 00
FEATHERS
Foreign, lb	16 @ 24½
American, Live	30 @ 33
FISH
Dry Cod, cwt	2 25 @ 2 37
Dry scale	1 25 @ 1 50
Pickled Cod, bbl	4 00 @ 4 25
Pickled Salmon tc	15 00 @
moked Salmon lb	9 @ 10
Mackerel, 1 bbl	9 75 @10 00
No 2 bbl	7 75 @ 8 25
No 3 bbl	5 50 @ 6 00
Shad, Ct hf bl	5 87 @ 6 50
Bucksp't do	6 00 @ 7 00
Mass do	@
Hering, pick'd	3 50 @ 3 62
Do scale box	50 @
Do No 1	30 @
Do No 2	20 @
FLAX
Russia, lb	8 @ 11
American	8 @ 8½
FRUIT
Raisnis, Sun csk	7 62@7 75
Do bunch box	2 30@2 25
Currants, Zante lb	@ 8½
Citron Genoa	15@ 16
Almonds soft sh'll	15@ 16
Do shelled	17@ 17½
Figs Smyrna	9@ 11
Prunes Bordeaux	8@ 14
FLOUR AND MEAL.
Genesee	4 50 @ 4 25
Troy	4 43 @ 4 50
Ohio, via Canal	5 00 @ 5 00
Michigan	4 25 a 4 31
Philadelphia	4 31 a
Baltimore	4 25 @
Richm'd c mills	5 68 @ 5 75
Brandywine	4 50 @
Rye flour	2 75 @ 3 12½
Indian Meal	2 50 @ 2 62
Do per hhd	11 87 @12 00
GRAIN.
Wheat W & N Y	85 @ 92
Do South new	85 @
Rye, Northern	68 @
Corn N & Jersey	50 @ 54
Southern	48 @ 47
Barley N.R

Oats, Northern	29 @ 30
Do Southern	26 @ 27
HEMP.
Russia, ton,	170 a 180
Manilla	140 a 142½
Amer dew rot	90 a 100
Do water rot	120 a 170
HIDES.
B.A. & Rio Grand, lb	12 a 13
Calcutta, dry	65 a 75
HOPS.
First sort 1842, lb	7 a 8
HORNS.
Ox, hundred	5 20 a 8 25
Cow	1 00 a 2 00
IRON.
Pig, Eng. & Sc.	35 00a — —
Do Amer	27 50a 30 00
Bar do rolled	80 00a — —
Do Russ PSI	100 00a 102 50
Do do new do	— —a 75 00
Do Swedes	75 00a 80 00
Do Eng com.	62 50a 65 00
Do do refined	80 00a — —
Sheet E & Am lb	5¼a 5¾
Hoop do cwt	5 00a 5 50
LEAD.
Pig, 100 lbs	3 35@ 3 40
Bar, lb	4@ 4¼
Sheet	4½@ —
LEATHER (Sole.)
Oak, lb	19 @ 24
Hemlock, light	16½@ 17
Middle	16 @ —
Heavy	13½@ 14½
Damaged	12¾@ 13½
LUMBER.
Boards N R [M ft	30 00 @35 00
Do Albany, piece	7 @ 17
Plank, Gal [pine, M ft	20 00@25 00
Scantling pine	14 00@15 00
Do oak	30 @ 35
Timber, oak, cu ft	25@ 37
Do Ga yel pine	35@ 40
Shingles, cy M	11 00@14 00
Staves, w o pipe M	50 00@53 00
Do do bbl	28 00@30 00
Do r oak hhd	25 00@26 00
Heading, w o	40 00@45 00
Hoops	25 00@30 00
MOLASSES.
New Orleans, gall	28@31
St Croix	30@31
Trinadad, Cuba	28@29
Havana & Mat'nzas	25@26
NAILS.
Cut, 4d a 40d	4¼@ 4½
(3d 1c and 2d 2c more)
Wrought 6d a 20d	10 @ 12½
Horseshoes, No 7a9	10 @ 29
NAVAL STORES.
Tar bbl	1 43 @ 1 50
Pitch	1 12½@ 1 25
Rosin	62½@ 80
Turpt W'ton sft	2 50 @ 2 62½
Spirits Turp gall	32 @ 34
OILS.
Olive gall	93 @ 95
Linseed, Amer	73 @ 75
Whale	35 @ 50
Sperm, fall	90 @ —
Do winter	95 @ 97
PROVISIONS.
Beef mess bbl	5 00 @ 5 50
Do prime	3 00 @ 3 50
Pork mess bbl	9 25 @ 9 75
Do prime	7 50 @
Butter, prime	12½@ 14
Do order to good	8 @ 10
Hog's lard	5½ a 6
Cheese, Am lb	3 a 5¼
Hams smoked	4 a 7
RAGS.
Leghorn	4½ a 7
Trieste	5 7¼
RICE.
100 lbs	2 75 a 3 25
SEEDS.
Clover lb	7 a 8
Timothy, 7 bu	11 00 a14 00
Flax, rough	8 50 a 9 00
Do clean
STEEL.
German lb	10¼ a 13
English hoop L	13 a 13
Trieste in boxes	6½a
American	5 a
Spring	5¾a 6
SUGARS.
St Croix lb	7½a 9
New Orleans	6 a 7
Cuba, muscovado	6 a 7
Porto Rico	7 a 7½
Havana white	8½a 9½
Do Brown	6⅝a 8¾
Loaf	11 a 11½
SALT.
Turks Isl bush	28a
Liverpool, ground	a
Do do sack	1 10
Do do fine	1 35 a1 42
SOAP.
N. York brown lb	3½ a 7
Castile	9½ a 9¼
SPICES.
Cassia lb	17⅜a 17¾
Cloves	26 a 27
Ginger, race	6¼a 6⅜
Nutmegs No 1,	1 10 a
Pepper, Sumatra	11 a
Pimento, Jamaica	14 a15
TALLOW.
American	6½ a 7¾
TEAS.
Imperial lb	40 a 95
Gunpowder	40 a 96
Hyson	30 a 90
Young Hyson	35 a 87
Hyson skin	20 a 53½
Souchong	21½a 57
TIN.
Block, S. Am. lb	a
I Do E. India	16 a 17
n plates ⅓ X box	9 00 a
WOOL.
Am. Sax. fleece, lb	45 a 47
Do merino	40 a 42
Pulled superfine	[illegible]
No. 1	[illegible]
No. 2	25 a 28

The Sabbath Recorder,

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY AT

NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET, NEW YORK.

TERMS.

$2,50 per year, when payment is delayed six months, at which time all subscriptions will be considered as due, and bills forwarded accordingly.

$2,00 per year will be received if paid strictly in advance.

☞ It is earnestly hoped that the friends of this enterprise will make vigorous efforts to extend the circulation as far as possible, and to induce those who subscribe to pay in advance. We are confident that the "cash system" will be found in the end to be best for all concerned.

☞ Postmasters are authorized by law to send money and names of subscribers, as well as change of residence, to the publisher of a paper free of expense, and they will in most cases cheerfully do it.

☞ Payments received will be acknowledged in the paper, and by a receipt enclosed in the same.

☞ Communications, orders, and remittances, should be directed (post paid) to GEO. B. UTTER, No. 9 Spruce Street, New York.

PROPOSITIONS.

1. Any person sending us four new subscribers, with the pay for them, shall have a fifth copy sent gratis to the person and place as he may direct.

2. Any person who will interest himself to obtain new subscribers and collect the pay for the same, shall be entitled to a commission of twenty per cent.

TOBITT'S PRINT, 9 SPRUCE-ST.

The Sabbath Recorder.

EDITED BY GEORGE B. UTTER. "THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SABBATH OF THE LORD THY GOD." PUBLISHED AT NO. 9 SPRUCE STREET.

VOL. I. NEW-YORK, FIFTH DAY, OCTOBER 10, 1844. NO. 16.

Biographical.

FRANCIS BAMPFIELD.

[Continued.]

In the year 1680, the church gathered by Mr. Bampfield wished to obtain a more public place in which to hold its meetings. But there was a difference of opinion, whether it should be at Great Morefields, Spitalfields, or Pinner's Hall. This difference of opinion seems to have arisen from the fact, that the confidence of some inclined them to take a noted public place, while the timidity of others inclined them to secure a more quiet retreat. It was at length agreed, however, to decide the question by lot; and that they might not limit the ALL-FREE AGENT to either of the three places named, they put in a fourth. The lot was cast; and "when it spake PINNER'S HALL, we all rejoiced that our Lord Jesus Christ had so far honored us as to instruct us to one of the most open noted places in all London."

Accordingly, they at once engaged Pinner's Hall, in Broad street, and met there the next Sabbath, when a discourse was preached from the text, Zechariah 6: 9—15. In that place they continued to worship for about two years and a half, during which time the Lord greatly blessed them, so that a large number of young people were drawn in to hear, became great admirers of Mr. Bampfield, and united with the church. This so enraged the grand enemy of mankind, that he smote the under-shepherd, threw him into prison, and for a time scattered the flock. A full account of the transaction is given by Mr. Bampfield himself; and from it we will collect the principal facts, in order to introduce our readers to the spirit of the examinations and trials of that day:—

On Sabbath, the 17th day of the 12th month, 1682, the church assembled at Pinner's Hall at the usual hour. While Mr. Bampfield was engaged in reading Isaiah 63: 19—"We are thine; thou never bearest rule over them; they were not called by thy name"—a constable and several other officers came in, and commanded him in the King's name to come down. He replied, that he was discharging his office in the name of the King of kings, and could not. "But we have a warrant from the Lord-Mayor to interrupt you." His answer was, "I have a warrant from Jesus Christ, who is Lord Maximus, to go on." He went on reading that verse, while the under-officer was pulling him down.

From this place he was taken, with six others, to the Lord Mayor's office. The following is Mr. Bampfield's account of what took place at the office. "The Mayor demanded of the constable for what cause he had brought me before him. The constable answered, that they took us at a meeting, and that I would not give off when he commanded me to do so. The Lord Mayor then applied himself to me, saying that we, and such as we, would bring in Popery. I replied, that we were more Christians, and more against Popery, than those who so wrongfully accused us; for we owned Christ for our one and our only Lord over our consciences and Lawgiver to our souls, and the Scriptures of truth for our one and our only rule of faith, worship, and life. We declared against Popery, as being against God, against Christ, against Christianity, against the word of Christ, against the laws of Christ, against humanity. 'You speak great words for yourselves,' said the Mayor. 'We are ready to prove all this to any of your chaplains, or to any other persons, if we are called unto it.' 'Who shall be judge?' inquired the Mayor; to which I replied, 'We will refer the determination of it to your own conscience, if you will give us a fair hearing.' 'What calling or profession are you of?' asked the Mayor. 'I am a minister of the Gospel,' was the reply; 'and this also I am ready to prove, if any question my call.' The Mayor said, 'It is under a pretence of such private conventicles, that all the popish plots are hatched and carried on.' I replied, 'Our assemblings are in one of the most open public places in all London for such meetings, where both doors stand wide open for such to come in as will; and so it used to be at my private dwelling.' 'Do you keep Saturday Sabbath?' asked the Mayor. 'I observe the seventh day as the weekly Sabbath day.' One who stood next to the Mayor inquired, 'Do you keep the Sunday?' 'There is but one day in the week that is the weekly Sabbath day,' was the reply. 'You break the King's laws,' said the Mayor. 'We observe, keep, and obey, the Scripture laws of King Jesus, who is King of kings and Lord of lords.' Upon this I was bid to stand or sit by."

After Mr. Bampfield was disposed of, four others were examined, who agreed in the same testimony, declaring that there was scarcely any other congregation in London which brought in a fuller testimony against Popery. These were discharged after the examination; several of the friends, however, were fined £10 a man. Soon afterwards, Mr. B. was likewise permitted to return to his own house.

In the afternoon of the same day, at the usual hour, the brethren came to Pinner's Hall, unlocked the door, and went in. But the officers being on the watch, came and shut the door against such as had not entered, pulled Mr. B. out of the pulpit, and after much discussion turned all into the street. They went immediately to Mr. Bampfield's house, however, where they spent the time in reading, expounding the Scriptures, and praying, until towards evening, when each retired peaceably to his own house.

On the next Sabbath day, being the 24th day of the 12th month, they came to Pinner's Hall as usual. The front door was found locked, but they entered through a side door. While Mr. Bampfield was praying, another constable and another set of officers came into the place, pulled him down, and led him away towards the Court of Sessions, where the Mayor then was. As they marched him along the street, a gazing-stock to the assembled crowd, he carried his Bible open before him. Various were the remarks which were drawn forth as he passed. Some said he was a Christian Jew; others said, "See, how like an old martyr he goes, with his Bible in his hands." At one place in their way, a large number had collected, some of whom singled out one of the constables, called him an "Informer," and pelted him with stones and dirt.

At the Court of Sessions he was taken into an upper room, from which an attempt was made to exclude all his friends. But he claimed that courts of justice should be open, and some were therefore admitted. While waiting there for his turn to come into court, when the constable told for what he was brought in, one man said that his praying was prating. To him Mr. Bampfield administered a most severe rebuke, admonishing him to repent of his sin in so doing, while mercy was yet to be obtained.

At length he was brought into the Court, where he was charged with breaking the King's laws, endeavoring to bring in Popery, and kindred crimes. But he, holding forth his Bible, said it was a maxim of the country, that God's law was the law of the land; and if so, he was ready to defend himself. He declared earnestly against Popery, and was permitted to state fully his views in regard to it. They then asked him if he would take the oath of allegiance. To this he answered, that his liberty was taken from him for another cause, which was preaching and praying according to the dictates of his own conscience, and when that was settled, he would consider of taking the oath. He was asked if he came from Oxford University; to which he replied, that he had spent eight years at Oxford, and had received two degrees from the University. He was again called upon to take the oath, which he told them he could not do, because an oath was "for confirmation," which was not true in this case. When told to take off his gloves, he refused, because the Court had no right to dictate in such matters. Mr. B. having a Bible in his hand, the clerk was told to read the oath, since his own Bible would be sufficient without touching theirs. Seeing that they were anxious by such means to secure their object, he laid his own Bible on the table. Upon this, concluding him resolute, he was delivered over to the jailor, who led him away to Newgate prison. The Lord was with him there, according to 1 Samuel 2: 30, "Them that honor me, I will honor."

Mr. Bampfield continued in prison, in company with several ministers of his former acquaintance, from the 24th day of the 12th month, 1682, until the 12th of the 8th month, 1683. On the latter day, he was brought before open [illegible]ions in the Old Baily, but was remanded [illegible] refusal to take the oath. On the 13th, he wa[illegible]ught in, but with like result. On the 17th of the 11th month, he was again brought in, when he was permitted to state at length the reasons for his former course, and for his refusal to take the oath. On the 28th of the same month, he was called up, in company with several others, to receive his sentence. Without being asked if he would then take the oath, and without being allowed to speak for himself, his sentence was pronounced; he was declared to be out of the protection of the King, his goods to be forfeited, and he to be imprisoned during life or the King's pleasure. As the officers led him away from the court, he said, "The righteous Lord loveth righteousness; the Lord be judge in this case."

Mr. Bampfield did not long survive his final imprisonment. His constitution had always been feeble; and the anxieties of his trial, together with the privations which he endured, brought on disease, of which he died in Newgate, on Sabbath day, February 15, 1684, at the age of sixty-eight years. A funeral sermon was preached on the occasion of his death, by Mr. Collins, one of his fellow-prisoners in Newgate; and his body was interred, amidst a large concourse of spectators, at the burial ground of the Baptist meeting house in Glass-house Yard, Goswell-st., London.

The Recorder.

For the Recorder.

THE PROPER OBSERVANCE OF THE SABBATH.

"The Sabbath was made for man." It is an appointment of the benevolent Creator. In his infinite wisdom, he saw that it was necessary for the race of man, in every age, and through every successive religious dispensation, to the end of time. The blessings resulting from a proper observance of the Sabbath are many and great. The sacred day was given to man as a season of rest, in which he is to lay aside the common avocations of life, and the cares connected therewith, and attend to his spiritual interests. To the Christian it is a joyful season, a foretaste of that "rest which remains for the people of God." The "preaching of the cross" on the Sabbath, enforced by the holy lives of Christians, is God's appointed means for the upbuilding of his cause, and the salvation of sinners.

Although the Sabbath is an appointment of heaven for man's benefit, yet if it be not kept according to the commandment, the blessings connected with its proper observance will not be enjoyed. And efforts put forth to convert men to the Sabbath, will, for the most part, be in vain, however conclusive our arguments may be, unless we ourselves strictly observe this sacred day.

The first thing necessary to a proper keeping of the Sabbath, is a right spirit in regard to it. We are to "call it a delight." (Isa. 58: 13.) It is truly delightful to the child of God, to dismiss worldly business and worldly cares, and to fix his thoughts without interruption on heavenly and divine things. Both the public and private duties of the Sabbath are to him pleasing and profitable. His heart is gladdened by every returning Sabbath. It is to him the best day of the week, emblem of the saint's everlasting rest. How different are the feelings of many persons, with regard to the Sabbath! To them it is a weariness. They long for its sacred hours to be gone, that they may engage in trading, or something else that will gratify their carnal feelings. Very many have no relish for the private duties of the Sabbath, and of course are seen rambling over the fields, observing the state of the crops, picking fruit, and visiting their neighbors. This they do, because they have no relish for reading the Bible, and other private duties of the Sabbath. Of such it cannot be said, "their delight is in the law of the Lord."

Again, we are not to "find our own pleasure on the Lord's holy day." Here those amusements that are proper on other days are forbidden on the Sabbath. Children ought especially to be kept from their plays, and taught to reverence the day. Visiting for pleasure is forbidden also. We may indeed visit the sick when our assistance is needed to alleviate their sufferings. But the sick ought not to be neglected on other days. There are those, however, who are so avaricious that they have no time to visit the sick on a week day, and therefore use up a part of the Lord's time for this purpose, and sometimes make this an excuse for not attending the house of God, when the true reason is, because they have no desire to worship God. In some places it is customary for numbers to meet on the Sabbath, at the house of a sick neighbor, to hold a conference for conversing on worldly topics. There are not a few, who uniformly spend this day in visiting kindred and friends, to talk of subjects as foreign to religion as thought can conceive. Reader, do you believe the Judge of all the earth will approve of such persons, when seated on the "greatwhite throne?"

Again, we are not to "do our own ways" upon the Sabbath. This forbids all secular labor, except works of mercy or real necessity. To feed our domestic animals is no violation of the Sabbath law, any more than to alleviate the sufferings of our fellow creatures. The conscientious Sabbath-keeper will do up his "chores" beforehand, and have every thing needful in readiness, so that when the Sabbath commences he may be ready to attend to its duties. Works which are necessary to be done on the Sabbath are fewer than is generally supposed. Not only trading and trafficking, but sitting down and looking over accounts is forbidden.

Children are to be restrained and forbidden to labor. "The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt do no work; thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter," is the language of the commandment. Some professed Sabbath-keepers are guilty of the inconsistency of sending their children to school on the Sabbath. Study and school exercises are the work of children when they attend school, and attendance upon them is manifestly a breach of the fourth commandment. It is the labor of the teacher to instruct, and of his pupils to learn; and if it be right to send children to school on the Sabbath, it is right to hire teachers to teach on that day, and consequently it is right for teachers to work when God hath said they shall not work. None can be excused by saying that they are unable to control their children at home. This shows them to be doubly guilty.

The fourth commandment forbids us to require the labor of others on the Sabbath. "Thy man-servant, thy maid-servant, and the stranger that is within thy gates," are mentioned. It forbids likewise the working of our domestic animals; "thine ox or thine ass." We may not let them out to others to work on that day. When we give our sanction to this labor, we acknowledge a principle which conflicts with the commandment. We are directed not to be partakers of other men's sins, nor to have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. Is there not danger of doing this by allowing our beasts to be used for business purposes on the Sabbath?

Traveling for business is also forbidden. Yet there are very many who think it no harm to spend a little part of the Sabbath in riding about to do some little business so as to save time. Many, also, when on a journey, are unwilling to rest on the Sabbath, because of the expense attending it, or because they are in a hurry to see their family or friends, or to attend to their business at home. Are these they that love Christ more than "father or mother, son or daughter, houses or lands?" Verily, if they loved Christ, they would keep his sayings.

The last thing forbidden on the Sabbath, which I shall mention, is worldly conversation. On this holy day we are not to "speak our own words." Exclusively worldly conversation is unbecoming on any day, but all worldly conversation is forbidden on the day of "sacred rest." Yet how generally is this forgotten! In many families, it is difficult to tell, by the conversation, which is the Sabbath day! How many, as they go to the house of worship in company with friends and neighbors, instead of preparing their minds for the solemn worship of God, spend the time in conversing about the crops, their bargains, law-suits, business of various kinds, and politics, until they arrive at the meeting-house; and then frequently they stop at the door, and pursue the same theme of conversation till meeting begins! They stay and hear the discourse without much interest, having no heart to engage in prayer or praise—and as soon as they leave the door they commence in the old strain, and go home "barren and unfruitful in the knowledge of the Lord." Such persons may indeed rest their bodies on the Sabbath, but they find no rest to their souls. They reap no spiritual benefit from their privileges. Many of them suppose that they are good Sabbath-keepers; yet if they would study the Bible, they would find themselves guilty of desecrating and wasting holy, precious Sabbaths. If it be wrong to "speak our own words" on the Sabbath, it is also wrong to read secular books or newspapers on that day.

We turn now from contemplating what is forbidden on the Sabbath, to contemplate its appropriate duties.

Spiritual meditation is one of these duties. We may think on the character, perfections, and works of God, and have his "comforts delight our souls." We may meditate on the works of creation, and behold in them the wisdom, power, and goodness of God. It is appropriate also to the sacred season, to meditate upon his providences, his wondrous grace in devising a way to save rebellious man, and that rest which he has "prepared for them that love him."

Self-examination is another duty appropriate to the Sabbath. We are commanded to "examine ourselves whether we be in the faith;" and while the heart is deceitful, and we are in danger of being led away from the right path by slow degrees, it is highly important to attend to this duty often.

Much time should be appropriated to secret and family prayer, and reading the Scriptures, on this day. But especially should we attend public worship on it. "The seventh day is the Sabbath of rest, a holy convocation." (Lev. 23: 2.) The Apostle Paul exhorts us not to "forsake the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is." The Psalmist expresses his feelings on this subject in the following language: "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts. My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord. A day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather sit at the threshold of the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." We should go to the place of worship with a devotional frame of mind, praying for a blessing to attend the services, both to ourselves and others. We should join heartily in the songs of praise, and in the petitions offered to the throne of grace. We should hear as for eternity, with deep interest, with prayer, self-application, and a determination to be "doers of the word."

Thus attending to the duties of the Sabbath, "calling it a delight, the holy of the Lord, and honoring him, not doing our own ways, nor finding our own pleasures, nor speaking our own words," we shall enjoy the love of God shed abroad in our hearts, shall be successful in promoting the Sabbath cause, shall be abundantly useful in life, and finally spend an eternal Sabbath with the general assembly and church of the first born in heaven. Neglecting thus to keep the Sabbath holy, we shall be a disgrace to the cause of God, stumbling-blocks in the way of others, and finally, if we do not repent, inhabitants of that dark region to which Sabbath-breakers and all other impenitent persons will be eventually consigned.

C. A. O.

Ninth Month, 10th.

TO PREACH WELL, WE MUST LIVE WELL.

When a man delineates religion, not so much as the result of study and reasoning, as a matter of his own history; when he unfolds it with that inexpressible character of life and earnestness which accompany truths drawn from one's own bosom, he cannot be powerless. There is nothing vague and uncertain, nothing obscure or unintelligible in the speech of such an one. He presses earnestly towards his object. His heart's desire is that his hearers may be saved. The power of that inward emotion he cannot conceal. Chains cannot bind it. Mountains cannot bury it. It thaws through the most icy habits. It bursts from the lip. It speaks from the eye. It modulates the tone. It pervades the manner. It possesses and controls the whole man. He is seen to be in earnest; he convinces; he persuades.

It is a most important service which religion has rendered not only to the eloquence of the pulpit, but to every department of Christian literature, by putting the faculties under the pressure and power of a grand motive. The heart of man must be pressed and well-nigh crushed before it will give out its wine and its oil. "Woe to me," said Paul, "if I preach not the Gospel of Christ." He who would preach with force and effect, must subject himself to that religious sense of responsibility which is alone competent to bring into action every dormant faculty; and bear about him the solemn and weighty reflection that he watches for souls as one that must give an account. Whenever the heart and conscience exert their combined power in this direction, every talent will be employed: the whole man is urged to full and efficient action. Cast such a man into prison, and like Bunyan, "ingenious dreamer," will he describe the progress of the soul to God; confine him to a bed of sickness, and like Baxter will he sweetly muse and write of the rest of the saint in heaven; blind his eyes in total night, and "celestial light" will shine inward, enabling him, like glorious Milton, to > "See and tell

> Of things invisible to mortal sight."

Fetter him with chains, and in the very presence of kings and governors, he will, like Paul, reason about a judgment to come; nail him to the cross, his heart will still palpitate with inextinguishable love, and his latest breath will be spent, like his Master's, in praying and speaking for other's good.

[Watchtower.

ADAM BY THE BODY OF ABEL.

Translated from the German of Krummacher.

As Abel lay in his blood, and Adam stood over the body of his murdered son, weeping, a cherub from Paradise came to the father of our race, and stood by his side in silence; and his countenance was serious.

And Adam lifted up his eyes, and said, "Is this the image of the race that is to spring from my loins, and must the blood of brothers always flow by the hand of brothers, to defile the earth?" The cherub answered, "Thou hast said." "With what name then shall we call the awful deed?" With tears in his eyes, replied the heavenly one—"War." Then the father of men shuddered, and with a deep sigh, he said, "And must the noble and the good always fall by the base and the wicked?" The cherub was silent. But Adam continued his lamentation, and said, "What then is left to me in all my misery upon earth?" "To look towards heaven," replied the cherub; whereupon he suddenly vanished. But Adam stood till the setting of the sun, and as the stars appeared, he spread out his hands toward Orion and the Wain, and exclaimed, "Ye shining watchers, who stand before the portals of the sky, wherefore do ye walk your rounds in silence? If a mortal may hear the sound of your voice, O then speak to me from that land above, where dwells my beloved Abel?" And Adam fell on his face and prayed, and as he prayed, he heard in his heart a soft whisper, which said, "Behold! Abel thy son liveth." Then Adam went his way, comforted; and his soul was calm and full of sadness.

[Christian Observer.

THE LAW OF KINDNESS.

"In the tribe of Nedgde there was a mare of great reputation for beauty and swiftness, which a member of another tribe, named Daher, vehemently desired to possess. Having failed to obtain her by offering all he was worth, he proceeded to effect his object by stratagem. He disguised himself like a lame beggar, and waited by the side of the road, knowing that Nabee, the owner of the mare, would soon pass. As soon as Nabee appeared, Daher cried in a feeble voice, 'I am a poor stranger; for three days I have been unable to stir from this place to get food; help me, and God will reward you.' Nabee offered to carry him home; but Daher said, 'I am not able to rise; I have not strength.' Nabee generously dismounted, brought his mare near, and helped the beggar to mount her. The moment he was mounted, Daher touched her with his heel and started, saying, 'It is I, Daher, who have got her, and am carrying her off.' Nabee called upon him to stop, which he did. Nabee then said, 'Thou hast my mare; since it pleases God, I wish thee success; but I conjure thee tell no one how thou hast obtained her.' 'Why not?' said Daher. 'Because some one really ill might remain without aid; you would be the cause why no one would perform an act of charity more, from the fear of being duped as I have been.' This discriminating kindness subdued Daher; he immediately dismounted, and returned the mare to Nabee; and when they parted, they parted sworn friends.

[Lamartine.

IMPERFECT IN ORIGINAL

The Sabbath Recorder.

NEW YORK, OCT. 10, 1844.

AGGRESSIVE WORK OF THE CHURCH.

Few will deny, that the church is bound to put forth efforts for the enlargement of her borders, and the spread of the truth. Yet there are many churches in which no disposition is seen to engage in this work, but in which the main desire appears to be, to maintain their present standing, and to continue in what is called "the good old way." This condition is for several reasons a dangerous one. It implies a neglect of the positive duties enjoined by the commands to "preach the gospel to every creature," and not to "suffer sin upon a brother." It implies an unjustifiable carelessness about the truth, and often leads to entire neglect of it. It prevents the church from exhibiting a light to the world, or exerting a saving influence upon it. It exposes her members to the displeasure of God, who has pronounced the worst evils against such as are at ease in Zion, and who has threatened to spue out of his mouth such as are neither cold nor hot. There is no neutral ground in the warfare between truth and error—between those who serve God and those who serve him not. To refuse to engage in the strife for Christ and the truth, is to rank ourselves among those who are against him.

But many professed followers of Christ, while they will allow that it is dangerous to neglect active labors to promote his cause, yet have objections in their minds which prevent their engaging earnestly in such labors. Let us look at some of these.

1. It is said, that our religious opinions and feelings are known, and there is therefore no need of urging them upon the attention of others. This objection is raised alike against efforts to awaken in the mind of the sinner a sense of his danger, and efforts to make known any truth by which a believer may be distinguished from his brethren. But those who raise the objection seem to forget, that it is by "line upon line, and precept upon precept," that truth has always been taught with effect. The Israelites were directed to teach their children when sitting in their houses, walking by the way, lying down, or rising up. So should it be with the Christian. His interest in whatever he receives as the truth of God, should be such as to prompt him constantly, both by his words and his actions, to instruct and admonish others. When he professes to hold truths of which he cannot speak in this way, we must fear that he does not really believe them, or that his practice is so contradictory that he dare not avow them.

2. It is feared, that no good will result from the effort. This is an easy way to dispose of what is felt to be an unpleasant duty; and it is very likely that the probabilities of good result will be greatly diminished by the presence of such fears. But how do you know that it will do no good? Here is a passage of Scripture designed for the encouragement or admonition of just such objectors, which they would do well to lay to heart:—"In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand; for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether they both shall be alike good." It is written again, "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy." With such promises before us, how can we hesitate from a fear that our labors will be fruitless in the Lord? Besides, we do not believe it to be the business of a Christian thus to deliberate with manifest duty, and then do or not do, according to the rising or falling of his hopes. It is always safe to obey the calls of duty, and always unsafe to refuse to obey. The consequences, it is not possible for us fully to estimate in most cases. We know of no better conclusion in regard to such a matter than this of an old divine, which deserves to be written in letters of gold:—"Duty is mine; the issues and success of things are the Lord's, and do belong to him."

3. The last objection to which we shall refer, is, that we are scarcely able to keep up the religious arrangements in our own societies—much less to labor for the advancement of the truth among others. Now, we do not believe that a single religious society can be named, which has found it more difficult to maintain its own arrangements, because of its labors for the benefit of others. On the other hand, we do know of societies in which these arrangements have been maintained with greater ease as the result of efforts to make known the truth abroad. Instead, therefore, of finding here an objection to engaging in the aggressive work of the church, we should find a strong argument for it. And in view of these considerations, our advice to feeble churches and societies, even though needing the help of others, would be, to think with sympathy of the wants of those around them, and sometimes to contribute to make known the truth abroad. We apprehend that this course would greatly promote their own interests, and help to develop and strengthen whatever is good in them.

The church of Christ is represented as a militant church—a church in a state of conflict. It becomes a triumphant church only when its members, having done their work, are brought home to their reward. That is not a triumphant church which is satisfied with its present attainments, and glories in its great numbers and commanding influence. Nor is it properly a militant church. It is a voluntary association of aristocratic religionists—nothing else. The real church is to be found wherever Christian hearts unite to promote the cause of Christ and truth. Such a body will always find aggressive work to do. Error and injustice, it will endeavor to bring to the light and remove. Whatsoever things are true, honest, and lovely, it will cherish. Whatsoever is opposed to these, it will reject and labor to destroy. This is its appropriate work; and only in faithfully doing it, is there safety and blessedness.

INSTITUTIONS FOR THE BLIND.

Blindness is most common in the equatorial regions, and decreases gradually as we recede from those regions. There are some tribes, among whom one blind person may be found to every four hundred. In Europe, however, there is only one to every fourteen hundred; and in the United States, one to every fifteen hundred and fifty. Almost every age has had its distinguished blind men; and some of their works will continue to be read with interest wherever genius is appreciated.

The first effort ever made to improve the condition of the blind was made in Japan, by means of academies for imparting oral instruction. But the means for carrying out this plan were not extensive, and the institutions became asylums rather than places for education. In 1782 an institution was opened for their benefit in France at Paris. Soon afterwards institutions were established at St. Petersburgh, at Berlin, and a number of places on the continent of Europe. Since then, they have been established at London, Liverpool, Dublin, Glasgow, and Edinburgh. That at Edinburgh is regarded as the model institution for the Old World. In our own country, the institutions at Boston and New York were first, dating from 1802. We have now six institutions, in which may be found about 300 scholars out of the 10,000 afflicted with blindness.

The institutions of this country differ from those of other countries, by being designed more for the education of the pupils than any others. The first work is to learn to read by the raised letters. Some blind persons will learn the letters in two or three hours, and learn to read in as many weeks. For this facility they are indebted to the fact, that their attention is undivided. The result of their education is, that they are enabled to spend their time pleasantly and profitably, and often become useful members of society. The whole Bible is now printed in raised letters for the blind, and can be obtained in nine volumes for about twenty dollars. There are also reading and spelling books, as well as works in the higher branches of education, adapted to their wants. By the use of these helps, they may receive a thorough education, and become fitted for every position in society. Thus have a few philanthropic men, by their zeal and perseverance, become strictly "eyes to the blind."

"GATHER UP THE FRAGMENTS."

We have lately fallen in with a fragment of an old book on the subject of the Sabbath, commencing with page 25 and ending with page 80. From the running-title we learn that it was "An Answer to Mr. Wadsworth;" but the name of its author, or the date of its publication, we are unable to learn. In the Mill Yard Church Records of 1720, mention is made of "Brother Smith's Book," fifty copies of which were sent to this country. This may possibly be a part of one of those copies. We will make some extracts from it, for the double purpose of showing how the discussion was carried on in former times, and asking any one who may have another copy of the work to give us information concerning it.

THE RESURRECTION.

"But suppose it were really true, that Christ did rise on the first day of the week, which is but conjecture at the best; and had rested on't, which he did not, but traveled fifteen miles; and it is more probable, that he did not rise that day; yet this would not make it a Sabbath day without a special positive command from God, in the Holy Scriptures, no more than God's resting on the seventh day would have made that a Sabbath day without any command for it, nor so much neither; for God rested on the seventh day, but Christ traveled the next day after, or on that day he rose from the dead, from Jerusalem to Emmaus and back again, which is computed to be fifteen miles; and I can tell you, notwithstanding your flourish, it is more plain that God rested on the seventh day, than that Christ rested on the first day. For the first is true according to the Scriptures, but the latter is false, and contrary thereunto. And so all that weighty and important matter, which you have so much declared with so much emphasis, vanishes like smoke." pp. 34, 35.

WILL-WORSHIP.

"Whatsoever is introduced into the worship and service of God, having no command for the observation of it in the Holy Scriptures, nor threatening for the neglect of it in the Holy Scriptures, nor promise in the performance of it in the Holy Scriptures, is will-worship and superstition.

"But the introducing of the observation of the first day of the week for a weekly Sabbath day, into the worship and service of God, has no command for it in the Holy Scriptures, nor threatening for the neglect of it in the Holy Scriptures, nor promise in the performance of it in the Holy Scriptures.

"Therefore, the introducing of the observation of the first day of the week for a weekly Sabbath day, into the worship and service of God, is will-worship and superstition." pp. 39, 40.

"UPON THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK."

Acts 20: 7, "And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow, and continued his speech until midnight." From which Scripture is affirmed by Mr. Wadsworth both precept and precedent for the keeping holy to God, (as the Christian Sabbath,) every first day of the week, as in page 24, 27. From whence I infer, if that in Acts 20: 7, were to be a precedent to after ages, yet was it no precedent for keeping Sabbath on that day, but the contrary; for the preaching and breaking bread there mentioned, were in the night; and it was either the night before the first day of the week, or the night after; but it was the night before the first day of the week, as I think is plain from other Scriptures, i. e. that the night before the day belongs to, and is part of the day, as appears from Gen. 1: 5, "And the evening and the morning were the first day." Further, the first day begins when the Sabbath ends; but the Sabbath ends soon after sunset, as appears from Mark 1: 31. Therefore the night preceding the day belongs to the day, and is part of it; which I might abundantly prove. But since Dr. Mather has acknowledged it, and fully proved it, in his Preface to his Sermon upon Isa. 65: 2, printed in 1712; therefore I take it for granted, (at least by you Presbyterians,) that the night on which Paul preached and broke bread, Acts 20: 7, was the night immediately after the Sabbath, and so part of the first day of the week; and then SEE WHAT A SABBATH YOU HAVE GOT, or what a precedent you have for a holy Sabbath; for at break of day Paul departed to go to Assos, as in the 11th and 13th verses, which is computed to be 36 miles. From whence it is more than manifest, if possible, that neither St. Paul, nor those Christians with whom Paul broke bread, did esteem that first day of the week for a holy Sabbath day.

"Secondly—But if it were the night after the first day of the week was ended, then it was the first of the second day of the week on which all that service of preaching and breaking bread was performed; and so you lose your precedent for Sunday-Sabbath-keeping, go how it will." p. 45.

THE MIDNIGHT CRY.

The new discovery of the Second Advent believers, which makes it morally certain to them that Christ will come on the tenth day of the seventh month, has probably unfitted their minds in a great measure for the consideration of the claims of the Sabbath upon their attention. The editor of the Midnight Cry, after a faint attempt to enlighten his readers in relation to the claims of the "Lord's Day," abandons the investigation with the following apology:

"We cannot afford more room for this subject now. We did not wish to grieve any dear brother or sister. We prize the Lord's day as a blessed privilege. We believe the constitution of man calls for a weekly rest from labor. We know the soul needs to be released from earthly cares, as often. The fourth commandment accords with the wants of all mankind. We consider the observance of the first day of the week as equally pleasing to God as the observance of the day preceding it, and we feel ourselves warranted in this belief, by the language of Paul, and the example of the early Christians. We are grieved by the horrible abuse of that day, and strive, by precept and example, to inculcate its entire consecration to God."

Thus a belief that "the observance of the first day of the week is EQUALLY PLEASING TO GOD as the observance of the day preceding it," is made an excuse for the future neglect of one of the most solemn appointments of Jehovah. God blessed the SEVENTH DAY and sanctified it, and has plainly said, "in IT thou shalt not do any work." Who are they that profess to love God, and will not keep his commandments? "This is the love of God, that ye KEEP HIS COMMANDMENTS." Are the believers in the speedy Second Advent those that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus? Are they REALLY PREPARED to meet Him, until they have, by conformity to the law of the Lord, laid down their weapons at the feet of Jesus, to follow him in his example of obedience? He taught on the SABBATH DAYS, as did the Apostles. But alas! the Man of Sin has changed times and laws, and the professed friends of Christ wear the mark of the Beast without compunction.

"Our besetting sin has been, a desire to please those around us, instead of inquiring simply what would the Lord have us to do." "In vain do ye worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." By whose commandment do ye observe the first day of the week? Is it of God or of men? When did God unsanctify the SEVENTH day? By abolishing the seventh-day Sabbath, which is the TYPE of everlasting rest, would not God also abolish the promise of the antitype, or rest itself? Blessed be God, "there REMAINETH a rest" to His people; by which we may know, that he hath not taken away the TYPE of this infinite blessing.

T.

ANNEXATION OF TEXAS.

The following is an extract from a sermon recently delivered by Rev. Orville Dewey, on "Slavery and the Annexation of Texas." The subject is so vitally connected with the well-being of our country, that it ought to be studied and understood by every citizen. We are glad to see it made a theme for calm discussion in the pulpit.

"All the horrors involved in the domestic slave-trade are certain to be extended and prolonged by the Annexation of Texas. Let me not be told that it is a rich country—a great acquisition; all this weighs nothing with me against the insuperable moral objection. If its plains were paved with gold, and its mountains were studed all over with diamond-rocks, I would not take it on the terms proposed. If it were the paradise of heaven, I would not take it on those terms!

"Nay, and if I thought it probable, as some believe, that the Annexation of Texas would shorten the term of slavery, I would not take it. To extend the system over new territories, is certainly a very strange way of shortening its reign; and this is far enough, we know, from the purpose of its leading projectors and advocates. The Texans themselves have declared in their Constitution, that slavery there shall never be abolished! There is such a thing, doubtless, as weakening a thing by diffusion; but I cannot see in slavery any such tendency. Let alone, it must die out of itself; its only chance of living is to take root in new and richer lands. Is not that the very argument of many of the advocates of Annexation? "Our prosperity is failing us; it must have another field." But even if I thought it might sooner die in that richer field, I would not consent to take it. I cannot do evil that good may come. I cannot espouse what is wrong, on any plea of expediency. I cannot espouse the system of human bondage, in order to gain relief from it. I cannot do wrong, in order to destroy wrong."

FAIR OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.

The Seventeenth Annual fair of the American Institute, opened in this city on Monday last. The general arrangement of the exhibition is allowed to be equal to that of any preceding anniversary. Indeed, it would be hardly possible to present in a more tasteful and ingenious manner, the numerous specimens of agricultural and mechanical industry which are here brought together. In the variety and number of articles exhibited, not less than in their happy arrangement, the former reputation of the Institute will be fully sustained. In some departments, former years will be outdone.

On Monday evening the throng of spectators was called to order by Gen. TALLMADGE, and addressed by Hon. LUTHER BRADISH, late Lt. Governor of New York. His address was an eloquent exposition of the policy of protecting and rewarding the productive industry of the country. It was warmly applauded by the multitude. The evening's entertainment was closed by a display of fireworks.

On Tuesday evening, JUNIUS SMITH read an able address on the leading features of Steam Navigation. The attendance was large, and the visitors were greatly interested.

MISSIONS IN INDIA.

We have published several accounts of the encouraging state of things in India. None, however, give a more glowing picture of the present condition of that country than the following, which was presented at a late extra meeting of the London Missionary Society:

"There is no country so open to the labors of the Christian Church as Continental India. England is not nearly so much at the disposal of the Christian minister to preach the Gospel where he pleases, and how he pleases, as is Continental India. I never entered a village of the Mysore country, or even an obscure hamlet, at which I could not at any time get up in the street, or stand against one of the temples, and find no other obstruction than the argument of a petulant Brahmin, to proclaiming as long as I pleased the truth of God. My station was sixty-one miles from any European residence. We were among the people without any protection or defence; and where, if they had been disposed, they might at any time have interfered with or suspended our missionary labors. If 20,000 British missionaries could be found, and transferred to India, they might at once obtain large and attentive congregations, and not a man amongst them who had ever heard the Gospel before."

EPISCOPAL MISSIONS.—The Episcopal Board of Missions held its third triennial meeting in Philadelphia on the 3d inst. An increase of its Missions in China was recommended in the Report; and the appointment of a bishop there and for Africa, was urged. By a letter read from the Archbishop of Canterbury, it seems that the Church of England is ready to co-operate with the Church of the U. States; and that £3,000 had been set aside for the establishment of a Bishop in the celestial Empire.

ANTI-MISSION CHURCHES.—A strange kind of churches, one would think; but they nevertheless exist. There are in Kentucky, connected with the Baptists, 204 churches, and 84 ministers, avowedly anti-mission. The whole number of their members is 7,877, or 38 members to a church. The average annual addition to them by baptism amounts to a fraction over two each. The number of these churches is said to be rapidly diminishing. Would it not be well for such churches as are practically opposed to missions to think of this?

PERSECUTION IN MADEIRA.—We noticed some time ago, that a woman had been condemned to death in the Island of Madeira for favoring Protestant doctrines. It is now thought that she will not be put to death, because this punishment is seldom inflicted in that island; but she will probably be sent to the coast of Africa to end her days. Another woman has since been condemned to imprisonment for six months, for having declared that she loved the saints in heaven, but not the images on earth, and would worship only God. Another has been beaten with such violence as to endanger her life. It is reported, that the civil authorities are in favor of these movements, and that threats are frequently made of their repetition.

BENEF[illegible] FREE PRESS.—Much is now said with ju[illegible] of the evils of the free press. It has its benefits likewise. One of close observation has said [illegible] it "impels the illiterate foreigners who swarm among us, and who never knew any thing in politics but submission to force, nor in religion but blind faith in the priesthood,—it impels them to learn to read, to learn to think, and often to learn to be good citizens and intelligent Christians."

JEWISH CHRONICLE.—We have received the fourth number of this monthly journal, published under the direction of the American Society for Meliorating the Condition of the Jews. It is edited with much care, and contains a variety of interesting articles concerning the Jews.

From this number of the Chronicle we learn that the Society's Board of Directors have invited Mr. John Neander, of Germany, to visit this country, and labor as a missionary to the Jews under their direction. They have also extended an invitation for the same purpose, to Mr. R. H. Herschell, who has lately returned from a tour for the benefit of the Jews, through different parts of the Continent of Europe.

CHARITIES.—It is stated that the religious charities of England during the year ending June 1, 1844, amounted to $3,450,000. If more of this had been expended in securing JUSTICE to the millions of suffering and oppressed poor, the CHARITY would have been much greater in our estimation.

A CARD.

The subscriber is anxious to collect all the facts or records to be obtained, which throw light upon the history and spirit of Sabbath-keepers both ancient and modern. He would therefore request any friends who may be able and disposed to aid in making such a collection, to forward him the information of which they are in possession. Copies of letters, extracts from church or family records, notices of books or pamphlets, copies of inscriptions on tomb stones, autographs, prints—indeed, anything calculated to assist one in judging of the characters of individuals, would be gratefully received. The loan of books, when the owner may wish to keep them under his control, or the plainest statement of facts, when one has little time to dress them up, will often be of great service. It is hoped that many will show their readiness to promote this object by furnishing what may be in their power. An opportunity to forward by some one visiting New York can generally be found. Address No. 9 Spruce street.

GEO. B. UTTER.

SELLING LIQUOR ON SUNDAY.—Our readers will remember, that some weeks since, warrants were issued against several keepers of large hotels in New York, who were brought to the police office, for selling liquor on Sunday. Until that time, the law had never been enforced, except against some of the small dealers. It was agreed that one case should be tried, and that the other defendants should abide by the decision. Justice Drinker has given his decision, overruling all the objections raised by the defendants, and fully sustaining the complaint. Hereafter, therefore, it will be a summary process to enforce the law in such cases.—We should be glad if the law and the decision reached farther, and would prevent the sale of liquid death on the Sabbath, as well as on Sunday.

SELLING A LICENSE AT THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.—On the Island of Maui only one license is granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors. This is sold at auction to the highest bidder. At a recent sale, it was purchased by a mercantile firm for the sole purpose of suppressing the traffic. They paid for it the sum of $1310; and would have paid $2,000, rather than that it should fall into the hands of those who would use it. Most of the difficulties with ships' crews at the island arise from drinking; and by this means they hope to prevent them.

AN EXPEDIENT.—The last expedient we have heard of to promote the temperance cause, is one adopted in Ireland. The repeal feeling is almost universal there, and it has led a large number to unite in a pledge of total abstinence from all excisable articles, especially from ardent spirits and tobacco. The plan is said to have originated with Father Mathew, who hoped by this means to bring into the temperance ranks some who would not take the pledge for its own sake. May they continue it long enough to become established in the good way.

DECISION.—It is much easier to endure the talk of a decided and radical errorist, than that of a man who has either a set of opinions for every man or no opinions at all. The one we respect for his zealous and candid defence of what he deems to be true; the other we despise for his servility, or pity for his ignorance.

END OF THE WORLD.—The believers in the speedy Second Advent of Christ seem to have taken a new start within a week or two past. It is said, that there never has been a time when the interest among them was so great, the confidence so entire, and the contributions so abundant. The consequence is, that the press is throwing off their publications as thick as autumn leaves, and distributors are to be met with in every direction. The time now fixed upon is the tenth day of the seventh month of the Jewish year, which they say occurs about the 22d of October.

PUBLIC EVENING LECTURES IN BOSTON.—We perceive that extensive arrangements have been made for furnishing Boston with this species of fashionable amusement and instruction. Among the Lecturers are representatives of almost every profession, as well as almost every shade of religious belief. The call for tickets, and the indications of prosperity in the Associations which issue them, are said to be unparalleled.

SUFFERING AND DEATH FROM HEAT.—So intense has been the heat in Africa during the past season, that several caravans have died from want of water and the impetuosity of the Gebli winds. Masters and servants, horses and cattle, were left dead on the road, presenting a scene which beggars description.

"TOO MUCH DEVIL."—A young gentleman who spent the last winter in Louisiana, tells the following:—In one family I observed a young slave whose bright and intelligent countenance attracted my attention and excited peculiar interest. And I remarked to one of the family, that I thought that slave could not be so stupid as the others, but his intelligence must render him more valuable than the other slaves. To this he replied, "Not so; he has too much devil in him to make him more valuable." I asked an explanation, and learned that "too much devil" in a slave, signifies a slave's love of freedom.

CHARLES T. TORREY.—We find in the Boston Morning Chronicle a long article from Mr. Torrey in justification of his recent attempt to break jail. This frank and manly statement of the case, ought to secure for him that sympathy which seems to have been somewhat checked by his attempt and failure.

THE GRAND LIGNE MISSION among the French Romanists in Canada, has five stations, three substations, twelve missionaries, and more than a hundred youth in different schools, some of whom are preparing to be missionary laborers. The first fruits of this mission promise a glorious harvest.

General Intelligence.

FIFTEEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

LIBERATION OF O'CONNELL—CLOSE OF THE WAR IN MOROCCO—VISIT OF THE QUEEN TO SCOTLAND.

The steamer Caledonia arrived at Boston since the publication of our last, bringing Liverpool dates to the 19th ult.

The most important item of news is the Liberation of O'Connell, by a decision of the House of Lords that his conviction was unfair and illegal. The announcement of his liberation, in such a way, will be received with joy by every lover of liberty. It seems that on the day that the last steamer left, the Judges had given their decision upon the law points, seven out of the nine deciding that although several counts in the indictment were informal or bad, yet that this did not vitiate the judgment. When the House of Lords met again on Wednesday, the discussion was confined to the law Peers. After considerable debate, the question was taken, and the judgment reversed by a majority of one of the law lords—three to two.

This result came upon every one so unexpectedly—the opinion of the majority of the judges delivered on the previous Monday against the traversers having been universally regarded as decisive of that question—that the world could not credit the announcement. The sensation which the news produced in London and the other large towns where it became known, has rarely been equaled in modern days.

The excitement in Dublin was intense. Great crowds had assembled on Kingstown pier. The packet arrived before 5 o'clock; some repeal agents on board, holding up white flags, inscribed, "Judgment reversed by the House of Lords—O'Connell is free!" The crowd hurraed—the news spread, and cheers reechoed throughout the city. Mr. O'Connell's rooms in Richmond Penitentiaay were at once invaded by a crowd of congratulators. He is said to have borne the intelligence "with the same calmness that it was manifest he would have shown had it been of an opposite nature." The Repeal Association held a special meeting to concert measures for giving eclat to the occasion; and it was resolved to escort Mr. O'Connell from jail in procession.

The order for the liberation of the traversers reached Dublin on Friday the 6th instant, on the evening of which O'Connell left the prison privately, accompanied by his sons, John and Daniel. The other traversers also left in the course of the day. O'Connell was soon recognized, and as he passed along a crowd collected and followed him, forming a great concourse when they reached Marion square. Having gained his home, he came out into the balcony and made a short speech, containing little besides an expression of thanks for the tranquillity which the people had maintained during his incarceration. On being dismissed, the crowd quietly dispersed.

Although the Liberator had left the prison on Friday evening, the good folks of Dublin were not to be disappointed of their procession; and that it might have all due effect, early on Saturday morning Mr. O'Connell went back to his prison. The procession was an immensely large one, which traversed a great part of Dublin and reached Mr. O'Connell's house near evening.

Having entered his own house, Mr. O'Connell mounted the balcony, and addressed the people. He began with—"This is a great day for Ireland—a day of justice! All that we ever desired was justice; and we have got an installment of it at any rate. The plans of the wicked and the conspiracy of the oppressor—the foul mis-management of the Jury-panel—the base conspiracy against the lives, the liberties, and the constitutional rights of the public—have all, blessed be God, been defeated. Justice has thus far been attained; and Ireland may, if she deserve it, be free. But do I doubt the people of Ireland deserving it? If I did, I would be the most stupid as well as the most base of mankind. How could I doubt them?"

On Sunday the liberation was celebrated by a high religious ceremony in the "Metropolitan Church." On the left side of the Sanctuary was a lofty throne, with crimson canopy; on which gorgeously robed and mitred, sat the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin. Beneath the pulpit were "chairs of state," on which sat Mr. O'Connell and his companions of "the Captivity." In that state was offered "pontificial high mass," with "a solemn Te Deum, in thanksgiving to Almighty God for the deliverance of the beloved Liberator of his country, and of his fellow-martyrs, from their unjust captivity."

On Monday Mr. O'Connell attended a meeting of the Repeal Association, where he was received with the greatest enthusiasm, peal upon peal of acclamation rising from the assembled multitude of old and young, rich and poor. After the first bursts of applause had subsided, Mr. O'Connell addressed the assembly in a lengthy speech, rehearsing the facts connected with his trial, and expressing his satisfaction in the result.

O'Connell, before he left the jail, gave instructions that all persons of good character, who were imprisoned by reason of not paying fines, should have the amount paid for them, so that they might be free.

The Queen's Visit to Scotland.—The Queen and Prince Albert left London on Monday, the 19th instant, for Dundee, in the steam yacht Prince Albert, accompanied by the leading members of the Court, where they arrived on Wednesday, and immediately proceeded to Blair Atholl. The Queen received a hearty cheer when she left the Thames, and an equally hearty greeting on her landing in Scotland.

FRANCE AND MOROCCO.

The war between France and Morocco is at an end. The Sultan has given way, and dreading the power he has provoked, sues for terms. The telegraphic despatches transmitted by the Prince de Joinville from Tangier on the 10th instant states that "The Moorish Government has demanded peace. The fleet arrived at Tangier this day. The Govenor of the town came on board to renew his demand. Our conditions have been signified and accepted, and the Treaty signed. During the day the Consulate General has been reestablished, and its flag saluted by the town. Orders to cease all hostilities, and to leave the Island of Mogador, will be dispatched this afternoon."

This intelligence, which has been most favorably received in France, has been also gratefully received in England, as it will prevent any possible chance of a collision between the two countries.

The Municipal Council of Toulon have made great preparations to receive the Prince de Joinville in triumph on his expected return to France; having voted 20,000 francs for the purpose, beside 500 francs to be given to the widow of each sailor from Toulon killed at Tangier or Mogador. The Prince is looked for in Paris about the 15th inst. There is a talk that he will be made Lord High Admiral of France; a post filled, in 1270, by Florent de Varennes, and last borne by the Duc D'Angouleme.

SPAIN.

Spain, according to some accounts, is threatened with another revolution. In one of the most important towns of Spain there is a regiment of 1,800 men, and in the provinces of which that town is the capital there are two battalions ready to turn their arms to Esparto's use; and agents are at work in the town of Navarre and the Basque Provinces.

EGYPT.

A letter from Alexandria, dated the 8th August, states the result of Mehemet Ali's late escapade; which now appears to have been by no means made for nothing—"A Council was held at Cairo, on the evening of the 5th instant, of all the Pachas, Beys, and men of influence in the country, to take into consideration the different reasons of complaint his Highness Mehemet Ali had to make against them; and they all acknowledged at once their guilt in not having duly made his Highness cognizant of their acts, and having done things without his authority; and they also represented their readiness to submit to any punishment which his Highness might be pleased to inflict upon them. Mehemet Ali left them to pass judgment on themselves, and withdrew; and the Council came to the determination, at the proposal of Ibrahim Pacha, the President, that he himself (Ibramim Pacha) should be deprived of one year's salary, and the other members of six months' salary. Mehemet Ali, however, found the award too great, and reduced the punishment to the loss of six months' salary to Ibrahim Pacha, and four months' salary to all the others. After this decision, Mehemet Ali seems to have been quite satisfied; and the profit that his Highness will make by it is calculated to amount to upwards of 250,000 dollars. His Highness then sent down instructions to Artin Bey, at Alexandria, to inform the five Consuls-General of his perfect re-establishment in health, his renouncement of going to Mecca, and his determination to direct affairs himself as hitherto. On the 6th, his Highness ordered his steamer to be in readiness to bring him down to Alexandria.

Advices from Alexandria of August 30, announce that Mehemet Ali contemplated an expedition against the Abyssinians, "to punish them," he said, "for their frequent inroads on the territory of Aleche."

CHINA.

By news from Canton to the 21st of June, it appears that Americans are in good repute there. The commercial interests of the United States in China are very great; and the Mission of Mr. Cushing is likely to do something in its favor. The populace, however, manifest much discontent at the presence of foreigners.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Christening of the Young Prince.—Lofty was the ceremonial, splendid the feast, in Windsor Castle, on the 6th instant, when Queen Victoria's second son was christened. He is called, "Alfred Ernest Alfred."

The Fees of Her Majesty's Accouchers.—The fee presented to Dr. Locock, first physician accoucher to the Queen, is, it is understood, upon the birth of a royal infant, £1000. Dr. Ferguson receives £500, and Sir James Clark the same amount. Mrs. Lilly, the Queen's monthly nurse, receives "for the month" £300. This amount is generally swelled to upwards of £600, the extras being derived from the handsome presents the nurse receives from each guest invited to the christening. The wet nurse is said to receive £100 per month for her services, beside the gratifying prospect of some portion of her family being provided for, either in the army or navy, or in some of the public offices.

The road between Rome and Naples is again infested by robbers; and two diligences have been recently attacked by them, travelers have been recently compelled to make the voyage by sea, in French steamers.

A war steamer, constructed of mahogany, and intended to be the largest in the world, is on the stocks, and will probably be launched in April next. She is to be called the Terrible.

At a meeting held in London on Wednesday, it was resolved to make an atmospheric railway from Portsmouth to London, joining the Croydon line eighteen miles from the metropolis.

The export of flour and wheat from Canada to England has greatly increased this year. To the 9th August last year, 50,000 barrels of flour, and 15,000 bushels of wheat were exported; this year, 307,000 barrels of flour and 237,000 bushels of wheat.

Surgical Cure for Consumption.—A physician at Darmstadt has discovered a surgical mode of curing consumption. The seat of the ulceration having been ascertained by means of the stethoscope, the matter is discharged outward by an incision being made in the cavity of the breast, penetrating the lungs. The cure is finally effected by medicine injected into the wound by a syringe.

General Tom Thumb.—This small personage, who has been and still is making a tour of the principal towns of England, is exciting the greatest interest wherever he goes. At present he is in Manchester, in the very heart of the spot "where merchants do most congregate"—the Exchange. Next week he appears in Liverpool, the first place in which he was exhibited before he became familiar with royalty.

The Steamer Kosciusko.—The New Haven papers gives the following particulars in relation to the narrow escape of the passengers by this steamer, which was overtaken by the late storm on Saturday night. About one-eighth of her freight was thrown overboard, valued at about $8,000. There were about 30 passengers on board, six of whom were ladies. One lady having twins was told she must not attempt to save her infants if the boat went to pieces and they were washed from her—but her reply was like that from any mother—"if my children drown I will perish in the attempt to save them." Some 10 tons of railroad nails were in the cabin, which operated as excellent ballast.

All on board abandoned the hope of getting on shore by means of the Kosciusko, after her fuel had been washed over and her fires put out. Accordingly preparation for a wreck was made. Ropes were lashed to the persons of all; cotton bales and other articles that would swim were prepared with ropes attached to them, and in this way the passengers and crew awaited their fate. The boat was now at the mercy of the waves, the water constantly dashing over her. Under these circumstances, a favorable change of wind occurred, and a final effort was made to get her to an anchorage, which barely succeeded. All the loose timber, some of the doors, and a part of the promenade deck, were put into the furnaces, and steam enough was raised to move the boat. In this way she was, with much difficulty, taken to an anchorage near Cape's Point, L. I., arriving there about 3 o'clock P. M. on Sunday. Capt. Lefevre went on shore in a small boat, but was unable to return till the next morning, on account of another change of wind, and the heavy sea. He lighted fires on shore, however, as a guide to those on board, in case the boat was wrecked.

More Difficulties about the Mormons.—The Nauvoo troubles seem not to be ended yet. Gov. Ford has lately called out some of the troops, with a determination to bring the murderers of the Smiths to trial. The troops were marched to Carthage, where writs were issued against T. C. Sharp, editor of the Warsaw Signal, and Col. Williams of the same place, both charged with participating in the murder of the Smiths. The Sheriff went to Warsaw to arrest Sharp, but he refused to surrender himself, and was sustained by the people. The Sheriff returned and reported his inability to arrest him, whereupon three hundred of the troops were ordered to march to Warsaw. They had not arrived at the last intelligence, but Sharp and Williams had escaped to the Missouri side of the river.

The Louisville Journal of the 3d instant, states that Gov. Ford had issued writs returnable at Nauvoo, for the apprehension of the whole guard that was placed over the Smiths, and that the greatest alarm existed in the town, persons flying hourly.

Capture of an American Vessel by an English Man-of-War Brig.—Many of the papers are publishing a long letter from Capt. P. C. Dumas, late master of the American brig Cyrus, describing the capture of his vessel by the British brig-of-war Albert, on the coast of Africa. It seems that on the 2d of June, the British brig was lying at anchor near Cobinda, and sent a boat alongside the Cyrus. After inquiring the name and port of the Cyrus, the officers of the boat came aboard, opened the hatches, examined the vessel, and asked for her papers. This being refused, the British officer, after much altercation, went below, where he was told the papers were in the captain's trunk, broke open the trunk, and took them out. Upon this the captain of the Cyrus demanded his papers, which were refused; whereupon he with his crew abandoned the vessel.

This is the account of the matter given by Capt. Dumas. He has since arrived in New York, on Sunday last, and confirms the statement above.

Wonderful Escape.—A few days ago a daughter of Aaron C. Ward, of Newark, N. J., about 8 years of age, while on a visit to the country, accidentally fell into a well about 25 feet deep. She was alone, and as she fell she caught the bucket, and held to it, by which her fall was broken. The water, as it happened, was only about three or four feet deep, and therefore not over her head. She immediately called for help, but she could make no one hear. She then undertook to climb up by the stones. When she had climbed a few feet she fell back into the water. Another attempt was equally unsuccessful, but the third time she reached almost to the top, and again fell back in the water, bruising herself considerably. At the next attempt, however, she succeeded, and the first intimation that the family had of her fearful escape was from her own lips.

From Lima.—On the 5th of July martial law was proclaimed at Callao, and in the whole province of Lima, by Don Dominge Elias, who was at the head of affairs. Gen. Castilla, with an army of 3000 men had approached within a few leagues of Lima. Negotiations were pending between Elias and Castilla, and hopes were entertained that an armistice would be agreeed upon.

From Rio Grande.—The news from Rio Grande is, that a war with Buenos Ayres is inevitable, and whether Brazil has declared war with Buenos Ayres or not I cannot tell, but that troops have been and are being banded and sent to the South, I know very well.

The Free Mails.—In a neighborhood on Long Island, not far from this city, the inhabitants have made frequent application to the Postmaster General for a daily mail, but no notice has been taken of their request. The convenience of establishing such a mail has been every thing that could be desired. A daily stage wagon, connected with the Long Island railroad, runs through every day, and the mail might be carried for a very moderate compensation.

Weary of fruitlessly calling upon the head of the post-office department, application was made to one of the anti-postmasters, in Wall street, who granted the request with the greatest readiness, and a daily express mail, established by private enterprise, now runs between that neighborhood and New York every day. [Eve Post.

Empty Jail.—The Grand Jury in Winnebago county, Ill., in a recent address to the court, state that the jail of that county is without a prisoner, and has had but one since January last.—They add, with truth, that this fact speaks eloquently for the character of that county, and for the love of morality, temperance, and good order, cherished by its people.

Mad Bull.—A mad bull escaped through Chatham and Nassau sts. N. Y., on Tuesday, oversetting two or three apple stands in his way, and running down a small boy, whose leg was slightly injured. He turned into William st. and was brought up at a coal yard and secured.

True bills have been returned by the grand jury of Philadelphia against John Taggert, for the murder of George Shiffler, during the Kensington riots, in May last; Samuel Vandergrise, for the murder of H. C. Troutman, of Germantown, in July; Andrew McClane, for the murder of John Guyer in July; Hy. Haughey, for participating in the murder of Joseph Rice. Peter Devlier, for riot and participating in the murder of George Shiffler.

A boy named William Piercy, aged eleven years, fell from the roof of his father's house in Washington city, on the 4th inst., and alighting on his feet, sustained but little injury. The distance he fell was nearly 40 feet!

The Spanish government require thirty millions of dollars to pay the government, which they find great difficulty in raising without oppressing the people, but the income of the Spanish clergy is seventy millions, all of which is exempt from taxation.

SUMMARY.

On Sunday afternoon last, the body of a man was found suspended from a tree in the woods on Weehawken Hill, about two miles from Hoboken, and in the vicinity of the supposed murder of Mary Rogers. It is thought the deed was committed a week ago. The person was about 20 years of age.

We learn that 200 men, women and children of the Mormon faith went up the Mississippi a few weeks since, to form a settlement near the mouth of Black river, and are soon to be followed by 600 more.

On the night of the 30th ult. a bold robbery was committed at Cincinnati. Two old men, who were sleeping in their berths on board of the Iron City, were relieved of a gold watch valued at two hundred dollars, a silver watch, and twenty-five dollars, all of which were about their persons.

During the blow on Wednesday the barge Sandusky which is employed in getting up the Erie, went ashore at Cattaraugus Creek, carrying with her the boiler, shaft and walking beam, successively raised from the wreck.

Mr. Cushing had an interview, on the 16th of June at Macao, with the imperial commissioner Keying, and the business of the mission there commenced. There is considerable sickness amongst the soldiers at Hong Kong, which is not by any means healthy, though we hope for an improvement on the last year's experience.

The firm of James Read & Co., of Boston, which stopped payment in March, 1842, owing $850,000, have since paid their creditors every cent of the amount. The firm took the benefit of the Bankrupt law.

Caleb Atkins, Esq. was killed at Columbia, Pa. on Wednesday, by the accidental discarge of his fowling piece, as he was stepping into a boat.

I. T. Hough, tailor and draper Fifth street, below Market, Philadelphia, has closed his store, and placed the following inscription on his shutters:

o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o This shop is closed in honor o o of the King of Kings, o o Who will appear about the o o 22d of October. o
o Get ready, friends, to crown o o him Lord of all. o
o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o o

Major Popham, in the 93rd year of his age, is the President of the Cincinnati Society of New York. He has been connected with the Society for more than 60 years.

An accident occurred on the Harlem Railroad on Monday. As the train was passing over the river, the locomotive and tender ran off the track into the river—no lives lost.

Charles Edwards, of Northampton, Mass., an express rider, was recently held to bail for taking a sealed letter.

The Prussian government, in order to avoid accidents on Railroads, has founded at Berlin a school specially designed to teach the art of managing Locomotives. This idea has attracted considerable attention among scientific men.

Cassius M. Clay and Gerrit Smith are to hold a personal controversy at Syracuse, time yet to be appointed, on the question whether Henry Clay or James G. Birney is best entitled to the votes of abolitionists. [Com. Adv.

Mr. Devore, a minister of the Gospel, was murdered in the Choctaw Nation on the 6th ult. He had been on a visit to Texas, and was returning to his home in Missouri. He had with him $250 in money, which was all stolen from him with the exception of $60, supposed to have been overlooked by the assassins.

The amount of Treasury Notes outstanding on the 1st of October, 1844, was $1,940,707 17.

The village of Yonkers was visited by a very destructive fire on Sunday morning, which destroyed two factories and a large flouring or grist mill. Loss about $15,000.

Snow fell to the depth of several inches in Butler, Pa. on the 29th ult.

The loss by the late fire in Guadaloupe is estimated at 5,000,000 francs.

The Evening Mirror says, that on Sunday morning last, about 7 o'clock, the laws were violated, and the public decorum outraged, by a prize-fight which took place on Thirty-Seventh street, between Fifth Avenue and the Bloomingdale Road, on the Corporation grounds. The parties were stripped to the buff, and surrounded by the noisy unruly crowd incident to such occasions. They fought thirty-seven rounds, and left the ground covered with blood and "glory."

A destructive fire occurred at Columbia, S. C., on the 29th ult., which destroyed property valued at $40,000.

The firm of Geo. Crocker & Co., of New Bedford, which suspended payment and assigned their property two years ago, have given notice that in consequence of success in business, they are ready to meet the deficit of said firm, principal and interest, amounting to $30,000.

MARRIED,

On the 12th ultimo, by Rev. Joshua Clark, Mr. Randolph Titsworth, of Metuchin, N. J., to Miss Lucinda L. Caldwell, of Pompey, N. Y.

At the First Christian Church in this city, on Sunday evening, the 6th instant, Mr. Charles C. Greenough, to Miss Sarah Ann Baker, all of New York.

LETTERS.

Dr. C. H. Stillman, Henry W. Clark; Postmasters at Oxford, Great Valley, Byron, Ia., East Rodman.

RECEIPTS.

Berlin—John Whitford, $2.
Oxford—Herman A. Hull, $2.
Great Valley—Charles Ward, $1.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

The Treasurer of the American Society for Meliorating the Condition of the Jews, gratefully acknowledges the receipt of the following donations to the funds of the Society:—

From Ladies' Jew's Society, Bristol, R. I., by Rev. Dr. Baird,	$20 00
Mrs. Staniels, by Rev. W. W. Everts,	5 00
E. Gunning and Andrew Gavin, 50 cents each.	1 00
R. D. Church, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, by Rev. G. H. Fisher,	1 00
Missionary Society of the Associate Reformed Church, (Rev. Dr. McCarrell's,) Newburgh,	50 00
Miss Stryker, by Mr. Mott,	5 00
Mrs. S. M. B., through Mr. A. Rook,	15 00
Coll. R. D. Church, Hyde Park, after lecture, by Rev. J. Lillie,	4 00
Coll. R. D. Church, Bloomingdale & Rosendale, do.	4 00
Coll. R. D. Church, Kingston, do. do.	15 00
Mrs. Stryker, Subscription to Jewish Chronicle for one year, (an English Sovereign,)	4 84
Subscriptions to Jewish Chronicle,	58 25
Don. &c., per S. Bonhomme, agent,	146 94
Subscriptions to Jewish Chronicle,	60 75
	$390 78

Thomas Bussing, Treas.

TRACTS RELATING TO THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath Tract Society publish the following Sabbath Tracts, at 15 pages for one cent.

No. 1—An Apology for introducing the Sabbath of the Fourth Commandment to the consideration of the Christian Public. 28 pages; Price single 3 cts.
No. 2—The Moral Nature and Scriptural Observance of the Sabbath Defended. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 3—Authority for the Change of the Day of the Sabbath. 28 pages; price 3 cts.
No. 4—The Sabbath and Lord's Day—A History of their observance in the Christian Church. 52 pages; price 6 cts.
No. 5—A Christian Caveat to the Old and New Sabbatarians.—[Containing some stirring extracts from an old author who wrote under that title.] 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 6.—Twenty Reasons for keeping holy, in each week the Seventh Day instead of the First Day. 4 pages; 1 ct.
No. 7.—Thirty-six Plain Questions, presenting the main points in the controversy; A Dialogue between a Minister of the Gospel and a Sabbatarian; Counterfeit Coin.

AN ADDRESS TO THE BAPTISTS OF THE UNITED STATES, from the Seventh day Baptist General Conference; wherein is shown the perpetual obligation upon Jew and Gentile to observe God's Holy Sabbath, as instituted in Paradise upon the Seventh or last day of each week; and the subsequent substitution of the first day is shown to be inconsistent with the institution, and subversive of the Bible as a perfect rule of faith.

Published at this office for the Conference, and for sale also by Leavitt, Trow & Co., 194 Broadway; Mark H. Newman, 199 Broadway, and E. Walker & Co. 114 Fulton street, ($3 per 100,) and at the bookstores generally price 6 cents.

BANK NOTE LIST.

Corrected Weekly.

CURRENT MONEY.

[Bills of all the Banks in the several States included in the Table of Current Money, (except those specified in the Table of Uncertain and Broken Banks,) generally pass in ordinary business, though charged by the Brokers in this city with the discount affixed to them.]

	disc.		disc.
New England:	¼	Monongahela Bank	2½
St. Albans, Vt.	1	York Bank	1½
Housatonic R. R. Ct.	par	Wyoming Bank	2½
New York:		Delaware:	½ to 1
City & most Riverbks	par	Maryland:	⅜ to 1¼
Other Safety Fund	½	Cumberland Bank	2
Do. Red Backs	½	Mineral Bank	2
New Jersey:	⅜	Salisbury Bank	3
Small notes West N.J.	¾	Dist. Columbia:	1
N. Hope Del. Bridge	1	Virginia:	1
Pennsylvania:	¼ to 1¼	N. W. Bank of Va.	2
Relief notes	3	North Carolina:	1¾
Carlisle Bank	1¾	South Carolina:	1¼
Chambersburg Bank	1½	Georgia:	1½
Franklin of Wash'ton	2	Planters Bk Savan'h	3
Gettysburg Bank	1½	Ohio:	2
Harrisburg Bank	1½	Indiana:
Lewiston Bank	2	State Bk & branches	2
Lancaster Co. Bank	1½	Kentucky:	2
Lebanon Bank	1½	Tennessee:	3
Miners' Bank	2	Canada:	3 to 4
Middletown Bank	1½	Michigan:	3

UNCURRENT MONEY.

